BIBLE THOUGHT. HOW TO GET ON.—Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find.—Matthew 7-7.

THE NEW ATTORNEY GENERAL.

One of the most unique figures in our governmental family since Lincoln is "Gary" Sargent, the new attorney general. At 16 he trudged three miles to the grade school at Plymouth, Vt., carrying a sack of crackers and a can of milk for his lunch. At 19 he attended the Black River academy, where 15 years later Calvin Coolidge was admitted. He graduated from Tufts college at Medford and became a lawyer. At college he was the giant of the football team, and today stands six feet three inches in height and weighs more than 250 pounds. He wears the lowest neckpiece that can be called a collar, drives the oldest-looking car in his county, and smokes a pipe.

Mr. Sargent is a fundamentalist in politics and a modernist in religion. He is a Unitarian. He is anti-suffrage, but Mrs. Sargent isn't. He is the Good Samaritan of his community. He sometimes carries a medicine kit in his lawyer's bag and visits the sick.

He is an antiquarian, a collector of pipes and clocks, and likes to hone razors, at which he has become more expert than many barbers. More than all else he enjoys "trouting." While he is jolly and enjoys a booming laugh, he is as firm in his convictions as the granite of his native hills. Calvin Coolidge came to know him well and they have a life-long attachment and admiration for each other. With such a man at the head of a department directing thousands of federal district attorneys throughout the nation, as well as all legal business of the Washington government, the people have reason to rest in the assurance that law and justice will not be abused, that nothing belonging to the government, anywhere, will be given away to anybody's friends—because he is a Vermonter.

NEWSPAPERS AND CRIME.

Mr. Herbert Swope, of the New York World, addressing the American Society of Newspaper Editors, defined the scope of journalism as "Life Reflected in Ink," and said that people "must partake of the ugliness as well as the beauty." It is true, nevertheless, that many managing editors permit and even encourage the printing of sordid sensational details of crime, to be circulated in the homes of their friends and neighbors, that, if appearing in a book on the family reading table, or the shelves of a school library, would call from these same editors a protest that would burn the binding and brand the authors as not fit for respectable association. Of course, times have changed since the days of Ben Franklin and Horace Greely—even the old Police Gazette has become passe—but that and results speak for themselves.

As a rule the press strives to serve their public with what it wants, but a line should be drawn somewhere. Newspapers are unquestionably educational to a large degree, and it cannot be claimed that the spreading out of all these wretched stories of crime is the sort of education needed. It should not be up to the public to show newspapers what they want—it has been repeatedly demonstrated in more ways than one during the last few years that newspapers have the power to show the people what they want.

PEOPLE WHO WERE ONCE GOOD LOOKING

A heartrending and yet interesting thing happened in a downtown store when a middle-aged lady got into a loud argument with a clerk. "I know what I want," she kept saying. "I have tried all those other things, but I know from what I saw it do for some friends of mine that it is Black and White Ointment which gets rid of these pimples and blotches. I was just as pretty as any girl when I was young, but I got careless and now I am in the fix you see."

MARY JANE'S MERRY JOURNEYS IN THE ENCHANTED FOREST

They all flapped their wings to show how much they liked it.

At the top of a beautiful cascade in the Enchanted Forest one afternoon Mary Jane saw a big white bird with a very long red-tipped beak alight on its nest in the rocks. Hung from its beak along its whole length was a deep pouch, and as Mary Jane clambered up to the top of the falls with her basket she saw it was the Pelicanus, which everybody knows means pelican, start feeding its babies in the nest. Out of its pouch the mother pelican had dumped a lot of fish, and picking them up with the tip of her bill was dropping them into the yawning mouths of her little ones.

"Hello, Mary Jane," said Mother Pelican, as the babies clacked a greeting with their beaks, "Will you have a bite to eat with us?"

"Have you any MARY JANE SYRUP," asked Mary Jane.

"Why no," said the pelicans all at once, "what is that?"

"I thought everybody knew what MARY JANE SYRUP is. It's the most delicious and healthful thing I know," said Mary Jane. "And you ought always to have it at home for yourself and your children. See, I brought you some with me."

So Mary Jane made some sandwiches of corn muffins with MARY JANE SYRUP in between and gave one to each of the baby pelicans and their mother. They all flapped their wings to show how much they liked it, and Mother Pelican told Mary Jane she would never thereafter be without Mary Jane Syrup for her family.

"That's a good idea," said Mary Jane. "You will see how strong and healthy they grow, and will soon be able to fish for themselves."
