BIBLE THOUGHT. God's Wonderful Love: For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.—John 3:16.

WAR PREPARATIONS. The Federal Council of Churches has obtained figures from the war department covering the past two years showing that the United States spent $554,372,018 for military affairs in 1924; Great Britain, $652,696,789; France $220,403,601.

While every nation broadcasts more or less "bunk" regarding professions of peace, every power in Europe and Asia is silently "preparing" by perfecting poison gases, air bombing fleets, submarines the Germans never dreamed of, and warships that make the so-called "modern" man-of-war look like a canal boat.

These underground conditions are largely responsible for the strenuous efforts to draw the United States into the league, or at least into a world court that has no laws or rules to pass upon—a court evidently designed to make its own laws and rules.

Historians have more than once indicated that wars have been precipitated for the purpose of killing off a part of the population when it becomes top-heavy or hard to handle. Perhaps history is to be repeated.

The lessons taught by the world war seem to have been useless; the lives sacrificed and the awful burden of debt on generations to come is a pitiable farce. The evidence indicates that perhaps after all, Germany, surrounded by such selfish, greedy, grasping narrow-minded politicians, was not altogether at fault for protecting herself. With Germany out of it, who will be blamed for the next war?

AMBITION PLUS PERFORMANCE Ambition, as a community, is for more industry, more capital, more trade, more population and more prosperity.

The average increase of the United States is 25 per cent every 10 years. Ambition is to keep up with the procession. If we fail to keep up with the average or stand still we are slipping.

But ambitions must be backed by performance. The unfulfilling formula for accomplishing these ambitions is to make the community attractive and keep it so.

Today city folks are flocking to the small and medium-sized towns where they find more joy in living. The automobile has brought the suburb to the door of the city.

Stimulate pride and patriotism, loyalty and good will within the community and make certain to provide all the essentials that make for moral and physical well-being of all who would come within. Good government, good schools and churches, pure water, clean streets, better roads, thriving merchants and industries, a progressive and loyal community spirit of true co-operation—all make a splendid inducement to folks looking for a real home.

HIS SECOND BIRTHDAY. The attainment of his second milestone in life was fittingly celebrated by Philip Stidham, Tuesday afternoon, at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Stidham, at the Tee Pee camp. Several very pleasant hours were spent playing games dear to the hearts of small children and the event culminated in the serving of just the kind of refreshments that small boys and girls adore.

CAFETERIA DINNER. Mrs. R. B. Campbell entertained a few friends last evening with a dinner served cafeteria style. The dining table instead of being laid as for a usual dinner, was laid a la cafeteria, each guest serving themselves. After dinner bridge was played, the high score ladies prize, a tea apron, went to Mrs. H. B. Wilson, and the high score gentlemen's prize, a bottle of bath salts, to John Blower. Those present were: Dr. Carl Wilson, Mrs. H. B. Wilson, Mrs.

LEGISLATURE RAISES OWN PAY 100 PER CENT. BUENOS AIRES—(By Mail, to the United Press.)—Annoyed by complaints of its inactivity the legislature of the province of Santiago del Estero, met and proceeded to business.

The first business taken up by the legislature was the salaries of its members, and such activity was shown that in a few days the salaries were increased just one hundred per cent.

Every deputy of that province is to have in future four hundred pesos per month, just what a British member of parliament is paid. KANSAS BANK ROBBED. By United Press. HONESTY MOST NECESSARY OF ALL VIRTUES

In Test Vote It Is Ranking Moral Quality for Men and Women.

AUSTIN, August 5.—Honesty is the moral quality ranked above all others that should be possessed by students, according to Dr. A. P. Brogan, associate professor of philosophy at the University of Texas, who has been gathering data for various ethical tests in order to determine by scientific methods just what are the morals of modern college students.

Among women gossip was listed among the most frequent form of misconduct, and drinking the least frequent. Smoking was given as the most frequent among men and stealing the least frequent.

In tests for double standards, gambling, swearing, drinking, vulgar talk, sex irregularity, Sabbath breaking, and stealing are named as more common practices among men than women. Selfishness, extravagance, snobbishness and gossiping were listed as being more common among women than men.

Other traits ranking high after honesty were sincerity, purity, reliability, and tolerance.

In order to conduct this test, Dr. Brogan had his students hand in ten characteristic which they considered most desirable in men and women. The result was about 165 words, many of them synonymous traits. These were eliminated, and the fifteen distinct good traits were listed in alphabetical order. Some 500 students of all classes were handed the slips, and told to rank the qualities in their idea of their desirability. In the results there was little difference made between those handed in by the men and women students.

Some differences were noticed between the order of ranking the traits by undergraduate and graduate students, Dr. Brogan stated.

Dr. Brogan intends to compare his results with those found in various northern universities, and after sufficient data is gathered, definite conclusions can be drawn, he said.

Rheumatism

"Yes! it's all gone."

DO NOT close your eyes and think that health, free motion and strength are gone from you forever! It is not so. You can get rid of your rheumatism by building up your blood power. It is a fact that rheumatism means "blood poverty." It is a fact with the increase of red cells in your blood, impurities are destroyed. It is a fact that S.S.S. will help Nature build these red-blood-cells! S.S.S. is one of the most powerful blood cleansers in existence. Its results in thousands of rheumatic cases have been nothing short of amazing! The medicinal ingredients of S.S.S. are purely vegetable. This is very important to remember! What can be more inspiring, more wonderful than to see the shackles of pain released from your struggling body, swellings, lingering pains, stiffness of joints and muscles all disappear; your stomach made strong; your face pink with the old sweetheart glow, your blood enriched and your checks more plump as they used to be. You can do it! Take S.S.S., the great destroyer of rheumatic impurities.

RANGER LIONS WIN GAME FROM EASTLAND LIONS

Rip Galloway Pitches Swift Balls. Return Game To Be Played.

Ranger Lions won a decisive victory of 7 to 1 over Eastland Tuesday afternoon at Eastland and avenged themselves for the defeat they suffered recently at Dublin. The score was exactly the same as when Eastland defeated Ranger at Dublin last month. The Ranger sluggers liked the offerings of pitcher Day, doing mound duty for Eastland, so well that they slugged in seven runs off of eight hits, four of the hits being for two bases.

The game makes the fourth win out of five games for Ranger and still Eastland demands another chance. A return game will be played in Ranger sometime next week, it was announced at the conclusion of yesterday's game.

"Rip" Galloway, premier hurler for the Ranger Lions, held Eastland to four scattered hits. Eastland's lone tally was presented to them on an error. The seventh inning proved to be the Waterloo for Eastland and 4 runs were made before the slugfest was stopped.

Score by innings: R H E
Eastland 0 0 0 1 0 4 0
Ranger 0 0 2 0 1 4 7 8
Eastland: Rogers lb; Kinnaid c; Coffie ss; Day p; Jones rf; Madden sb; Reentsma cf; DeLane lf; Fuller 3b; Froshlag pf.

Ranger: Newton fb; Galloway p; Craig 2b; Clark ss; Carroll cf; Larson 3b; Forrest rf; Murphy 1b; Little c; Kilpatrick 3b.

PIMLY FACED PEOPLE LEARNING NEW METHOD

It is simply a question of knowing what it takes to clear out those diseases of the skin, like bumps, blotches, pimples, rash, eczema, "breaking out," etc., and the makers of Black and White Ointment, and Black and White Soap seem to have just what the skin needs to get rid of them quickly. The fact that more than two million packages of them are sold every year proves how popular they are.

Black and White Ointment and Soap are economically priced, in liberal packages. The 50c size Ointment contains three times as much as the liberal 25c size. All dealers have both the Ointment and the Soap.

BOXING BOUTS ATTRACTS FANS TO NEW STADIUM

Carl Barnes Post of American Legion Plans Others At Two-Week Intervals.

Four interesting boxing bouts last night featured the opening of the new American Legion stadium in Ranger, a good audience attending. Threatening clouds probably kept away many, or the stadium would have been crowded. The Ranger

YOU CAN TELL WHEN A WOMAN LACKS ENERGY AND VITALITY

Dull Eyes, Sallow Complexion, Carelessness in Keeping Herself Looking Neat and Attractive Are Unmistakable Signs That She is Victim of Catarrh.

Catarrh of the generative organs—the disease which creeps on you unawares and shows itself in lack of appetite, loss of sleep, pains in the back and sides, cramping spells, irritability, and a seeming inability to regain weight and strength—has been proven to be the direct cause of the poor physical condition of many girls and women, commonly known as "female trouble." And the fact that no other medicine has been able to overcome this dread disease only emphasizes the reason for the phenomenal success of St. Joseph's G. F. P.

More and more women are finding that this medicine is making wonderful changes in their personal appearance, vitality and health, which they never dreamed were possible. The rapid spread of the fame of St. Joseph's G. F. P., the great and sudden growth in its sales since its introduction here, the tremendous and hearty interest shown by the women who are using it, by voluntarily praising its qualities, proves beyond the shadow of a doubt that its discoverers were right in their claim to have found the thing which overcomes and stamps out the malady which has been keeping women from enjoying in the fullest measure the pleasures of society and the blessings of motherhood.

At social gatherings between neighbors and among friends the wonderful effects gotten by using St. Joseph's G. F. P. is becoming the chief topic of conversation.

Women Now Depend on St. Joseph's G.F.P. To Restore Their Vitality hand played before the bouts and during the evening.

Through failure of several of the boxers to appear, the bouts were rearranged. An exhibition of game-ness by Dusty Cahill in the 10-round bout with Ralph Brady drew applause from the crowd who thoroughly appreciated the fight put up by a man outclassed by his opponent. Brady and Cahill fought nine rounds of their scheduled 10-round bout before Cahill was knocked groggy and his seconds refused to let him go back into the ring for the tenth round.

Danny Clark of Wichita Falls, scheduled to appear with Brady, did not put in his appearance and "Rusty" Cahill was shifted from his bout with Jennings of Oklahoma City to the main event with Ralph Brady. Cahill's place was taken by Mexican Joe, who gave the spectators a run for their money, he being fast on his feet. Jennings, in his eight-round bout with Mexican Joe, was unable to hit him effectively, fanning the air with nine-tenths of his blows until the sixth round of the bout ended by Jennings fouling and losing on the foul. The foul was declared unintentional and Jennings left the ring to the accompaniment of an ovation from the sport loving crowd. The two will be rematched at a later date.

Charlie Cahill and "Freckles" Peoples of Breckenridge staged a hugging match, combined with some sparring that lasted four rounds. Cahill took the place of McCleskey of by Beatrice Burton © 1925 M.E.A. SERVICE INC.

THE STORY SO FAR

Gloria Gordon, beautiful flapper, marries Dick Gregory, a struggling young lawyer. Gloria's idea of marriage is fun and fine clothes—and no work or children.

She has hysterics when Dick tells her she must do her own housework, so he borrows Maggie, his mother's maid, to teach Gloria to cook. She refuses to learn.

Gloria gives a very gay house warming, and invites Stanley Wayburn, an actor with whom she was once in love, as one of the guests.

Dick instantly suspects that Gloria is still in love with him, despite the fact that Wayburn devotes all his attention to Mrs. Myra Gail.

The wild party breaks up when Lola Hough "bawls out" Bill, her husband, for "petting" May Seymour, wife of Dr. John Seymour. Maggie, disgusted, quits her job.

Gloria hires Ranghild Swanson as housemaid, although Dick has told her they can't afford a servant. Then Gloria buys hundreds of dollars worth of clothes, and insists upon having a car of her own.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

Jim measured liquor from his flask into each of the tall glasses.

Glory looked doubtfully at her highball as she stirred it.

At last she set it down on the red lacquer smoking-stand that had been her Christmas present to Dick.

Oh, why were Jim and May there, with their drinks that she didn't want to take?

Why weren't she and Stan there alone, as they had been alone yesterday afternoon?—There were a thousand torturing questions that she wanted to ask him.

And there was one thing she yearned to hear him say to her—"I love you." For he never had.

Jim stared at Gloria and her untasted highball.

"What's the matter, old girl?" he asked. "Got cold feet?"

Glory nodded.

"I'm afraid to drink since I passed out the other night after those cocktails," she said.

"Oh where do you get that sweet girl graduate stuff, Glory?" May asked bluntly. "Go on, take a drink. You can't be a crepe-hanger on your own party!"

"I should say not!" Stan nodded vigorously.

Glory lifted her glass.

"Well, here's to crime then!" she cried and sipped the pale amber fluid slowly.

Stan leaned over and touched his glass to hers.

"I drink to business trips—and to husbands who are away on them!" he said in a tone so low that May and Jim couldn't hear his words.

"The chaperones are going into the sunroom, so you won't have to whisper to each other. 'S not polite," Jim remarked in his loud, good-natured voice.

He picked up the plate of sandwiches and followed May out of the living room.

Stan looked at Glory with a question in his eyes.

"Chaperones?" he asked. "Explain yourself. Did you ask those two birds over here today to chaperone us?"

Glory shook her head gravely.

"No, not exactly," she said. "I mentioned to May that you were coming to see me this afternoon, and she invited herself and Jim over. Why—do you wish they weren't here?"

"I do," Stan replied shortly. He gazed thoughtfully into the fire.

Glory watched him. She had an almost unbearable desire to cross the room to him, and put her arm around him—to hold his dark head in the crook of it—to tell him how very much he meant to her.

Nervously she struck a match to a cigarette.

"Himm, I had a letter this morning that I certainly wasn't looking for," Stan said suddenly.

"From some chotek, I'll bet a dime," Glory answered.

Stan laughed.

"By Jove, you guessed right!" he said. "You're a fortune teller."

"I wish I really were. Then I'd know how you feel toward all these women who send you letters," Glory said bitterly. "How do you feel about Sonya Chotek, for instance?—do you think she's as nice as I am?"

"Oh, gosh, you have it all over her like a tent," Stan promptly answered. And, for the moment, Gloria's jealousy was appeased.

"By the way, did you find out for sure that your mother-in-law saw us yesterday in the car?" Stan asked presently.

"Did I find out, I'll tell the street I found out?" Glory answered. "The minute I came home Ranghild told me she wanted to talk to me—so I went over to see her, and she 'panned' me for half an hour about being a bad wife!"

"I should worry about anything she says!" she added. "I don't care what anybody says—or who sees us when we're together—Stan, I don't care about anything in the world except you!"

Glory knelt down on the floor beside Wayburn's chair. She looked up at him, breathlessly waiting for him to speak. But he said nothing.

"Stan, do you care for me at all?—I've just got to know!" Glory asked at last. Her face was hot with shame. She hid it in her hands.

Wayburn stood, and lifted her to her feet.

"That drink's going to your head a little, isn't it, Russett?" he asked. He pushed her gently back into her chair, and stood looking at her.

"Do you know you're the prettiest thing I ever saw in that blue-green dress you're wearing?" he asked.

"You look like the Lorelei. Remember the Lorelei in the old song?—Her hair was golden, like yours."

Wayburn walked over to the piano and lifted the lid of it. He sat down and struck a few chords.

Then he began to sing the Lorelei song between puffs at the cigarette that clung to his lower lip.

When he had finished May and Jim applauded loudly from the sunroom.

Wayburn came and sat on the arm of Glory's chair. There was a smile in his eyes as he looked at her.

"Little tiger-cat!" he said, "aren't you ashamed of yourself for being jealous of Sonya Chotek, or any other woman I happen to meet?—Don't think of the other women. Think of just you and me—today!"

He leaned closer. Glory shook her head.

"That's just the trouble. I think of tomorrow—and tomorrow," she said dismally. "I think of your going away soon, out on the road, where I won't be able to see you."

Glory's voice dropped to a long sigh.

Stan put a piece of ice into his half-emptied glass.

"Oh, I'm not leaving town so soon as all that!" he remarked. "If that's what's worrying you!—There aren't very many new shows at this time of year, you know. I may be out of a job for months. And in the meantime, I'll probably stay right here, where I can see little Russett, every once in a while."

His hand stroked her hair.

"Glory!" May called. "Put on a record so we can dance, will you? Something peppy, please!"

Glory put a new jazz record on the phonograph. Stan swept her into his arms and they danced around the firelit room.

The music beat in the uneven rhythm of a jungle drum.

"Makes you think of tropic forests, and savages dancing around fires—that music, doesn't it?" Stan asked, his lips pressed to Glory's forehead.

"Do you like jazz?"

Glory's eyes were starry as she smiled up at him.

"Like any old kind of music when I'm dancing with you!" she said truthfully—and hated herself for saying it.

Stan should be the one to say nice things! And he wouldn't tell her that he loved her—even when she asked him to!

Glory wondered if he ever had really cared deeply for any woman. She doubted it.

Stan was the handsome, happy-go-lucky type of man that almost all women adore. There probably had never been any need for him to court women. They courted him—matinee idol that he was!

The walls of his dressing-room at the theatre had been covered with photographs of women. Pretty women, too!—Glory had seen them the day Stan had sent for her to come to him.

How she wished now that she had not gone to the theatre that day!

For the very sight of Stan, and the sound of his voice, had brought back to her all the longing for him that she had known in her old days of friendship with him—before she met Dick.

"Tell me about your friend May and this Carewe," Stan was saying in an undertone. "Isn't she married to the doctor who was at your party the other night?"

Glory nodded.

"She is—but he's awfully busy, so Jim beaus May around," she explained. "It's quite all right. They're just friends."

Wayburn smiled skeptically.

"Friend-of-the-family" stuff, eh?" he asked.

Glory didn't answer. She didn't like anyone to criticize May—not even Stan!—They danced on.

"There an automobile stopping outside your house," Stan said after a moment. "Are you expecting callers?"

"Heavens, no!" Glory cried. "Stop the music—It's probably Mother Gregory coming to find out what I'm doing while Dick's away! Somebody take the highball glasses out in the kitchen so she can't see them—quick!"

The door opened and Dick stepped into the room.

"Jiminy, here's the returned husband!" said May, absent-minded returning to Jim's lap.

"Well, where do we go from here?" she asked. "This party's all rain, from this point on. I can see that!"

Glory couldn't think. Her mind was utterly blank.

"Hello, Dick, old man!" Jim Carewe said heartily.

"Hello, Dick," May echoed. "We have been cheering up Glory in your absence."

"So I see." Dick's voice was cold and hard. His eyes traveled from Glory to Wayburn, smiling nonchalantly.

Dick's face was white. Glory was struck by his pallor. Even his lips were whitish gray. Beads of cold sweat were on his forehead.

"Dick, you're sick!" she exclaimed. She went to him and took his hand, it was cold and clammy.

Dick jerked his thumb in the direction of May and Jim.

"Get them out! Get rid of them!" he said, looking at Glory.

She held her hands out helplessly to May.

"May dear, I hope you realize that Dick isn't himself. He's sick," she said. "So just don't say anything, but go. . . and send Dr. John over here, will you, please? As soon as you get home?"

Dick walked passed her. He stood scowling and threatening, before Wayburn. The actor rose, and faced him.

"Well, what's your trouble?", Stan asked.

Glory rushed to him.

"Stan, please don't quarrel with him!" Can't you see how sick he is? . . . He doesn't know what he is doing," she pleaded.

Dick laughed contemptuously.

"Oh, I know what I'm doing all right," he said. "Don't worry about me. What I want to know is what this fellow is doing in my house! Who asked him to come here . . . you?"

He turned to Glory and seized her with one hand. His fingers hurt her flesh. She could feel that he trembled violently.
