BEACH BEAUTIES AND THEIR SUITS; FASHIONS THIS YEAR

By HEDDA HOYT
(Fashion Editor of the United Press)

NEW YORK, July 2.—Sing a song of sixpence
Pocket full of rye
Five and twenty bathing girls
Basking near the sky
When the day was over
The girls began to squeal

Because the sun had baked them brown
And they began to peel!
Baking the epidermis under the hot sun's rays has lost it's charm to the Fashionables, who have found that sun-burned complexions require months off bleaching to restore them to pink and whiteness. Woman who favor the deep brown complexion for summer months are resorting to colored powders rather than to actual sunrays and even colored powders are only being used for beach purposes, as the flimsy evening gowns this season demand lovely complexities.

Beach parasols have never been so popular as they will be this year. Small cloche-shaped beach hats will be worn to ward off the sun and to keep one from getting wrinkles about the eyes—"sun squinting wrinkles," they are termed. Heavy powders are to be used for beach purposes. Shoulder capes will keep my lady's shoulders white and long-sleeved bathing suits are designed to prevent freckled arms.

Like Son, Like Father, in Maughan Family.

GEORGE E. MAUGHAN

"It used to be 'like father, like son,' but now it's 'like son, like father,'" declared George E. Maughan, 64, of Minneapolis, Minn., father of Lieutenant Russell Maughan, who flew from New York to San Francisco in 22 hours, as he stepped from the cockpit after taking his first airplane flight.

very expensive, but most of them give us the idea that we can cut off the lower part of last spring's frock and have a duplicate of these costly models.

Colored scarfs wound about the head are perhaps the most popular head-gear this season. The tight-fitting rubber cap is worn underneath this to keep the hair dry. One ties the scarf after the manner of the bandana, with a knot in front or with a knot at one side and with the ends hanging over the shoulder.

WHAT SAFETY CAMPAIGN DID IN ONE COUNTY

By United Press.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.—Westchester county, a populous section just north of New York city, has announced the result of a safety campaign during May, 1924. In the four months preceding May, the average monthly rate showed 18 persons a month killed by accident. This was reduced to eight in May. The number of serious injuries were reduced to less than one-third.

The 50,000 motor vehicle drivers, who are residents in the county, and the 40,000 drivers from other cities and states who pass through the county every day, as well as the 300,000 pedestrians, were reached through the visualization of the safety idea by means of the 10,000 posters bearing the slogan, "Don't Get Hurt," displayed on poster boards throughout the county, on the street cars, and on commercial vehicles which were constantly moving over the streets and highways. Each month these posters will be changed. The June poster bears the slogan, "The Reckless Driver Is a Criminal," the third will be, "The Jaywalker Is Taking a Shortcut to the Hospital," and the fourth, "Fools Used to Blow Out the Gas—Now They Step on it."

RULES ON HOW TO TREAT THE AMERICAN FLAG

There are right and wrong ways of using the American flag.

About a year ago an authentic code of etiquette in the use of the Stars and Stripes was drawn up by representatives of 68 organizations interested in the matter. Some of the regulations agreed on at that time and which all Americans should be well acquainted with, are summarized in a current issue of the Progressive Grocer. Here they are. Keep them handy for Flag day, the Fourth of July, and all other occasions when the flag may be used.

Do not use the flag as drapery in any form whatever. Use bunting of blue, white and red.

Over the middle of the street between buildings, the flag of the United States should be suspended vertically, with the union to the north in an east-and-west street or to the east in a north-and-south street.

Do not permit disrespect to be shown to the flag of the United States.

Do not dip the flag of the United States to any person or any thing.

Do not display the flag of the United States with the union down except as a signal of distress.

Do not place any other flag or pennant above or to the right of the flag of the United States.

Do not let the flag of the United States touch the ground or trail in the water.

Do not place any object or emblem of any kind on or above the flag of the United States.

Do not fasten the flag in such manner as will permit it to be easily torn.

Do not drape the flag over the hood, top, sides or back of a vehicle, or a railroad train or boat. When the flag is displayed on a motor car, the staff should be affixed firmly to the chassis, or clamped to the radiator cap.

Do not display the flag on a float in a parade except from a staff.

Do not use the flag as a covering for a ceiling.

Do not use the flag as a portion of a costume or of an athletic uniform. Do not embroider it upon cushions or handkerchiefs or print it on paper napkins or boxes.

Do not put lettering of any kind upon the flag.

Do not use the flag in any form of advertising nor taster an advertisement sign to a pole from which the flag of the United States is flying.

Do not display, use or store the flag in such a manner as will permit it to be easily soiled or damaged.

When the flag of the United States is displayed in a manner other than by being flown from a staff it should be displayed flat, whether indoors or out. When displayed either horizontally or vertically against a wall, the union should be uppermost and to the flag's own right, i. e., to the observer's left.

When displayed in a window it should be displayed the same way that is, with the union or blue field to the left of the observer in the street.

When festoons, rosettes or drap-ings of blue, white and red are desired, bunting should be used, but never the flag.

These rules adopted by the conference have no official government sanction nevertheless they represent the authoritative opinion of the principal patriotic bodies of the United States and of army and navy experts.

Down in the Cellar

Sweet Pickled Pineapple

6 lbs. of pineapple
5 lbs. of Diamond Star Sugar
3 pts. of vinegar
1 tablespoon of whole cloves
3 inch stick of cinnamon
1 teaspoon of allspice

Peel and cut the pineapple into small pieces, removing the eyes; boil the sugar, vinegar and spices together for 15 minutes. Add the fruit and cook until tender and clear, but not broken. Lift out the pineapple and place it in jars and continue to cook the syrup down until thick; then pour it over fruit.

The spices should be tied in a cheese-cloth bag during the cooking. Canned pineapple may be used, in which instance less cooking will, of course, be required.

Bathing Suit Styles.

Several years ago Annette Kellerman appeared in a one-piece bathing suit and since then thousands of women harkened to the call of the "figure" and appeared in these snug-fitting garments. Figures became so plentiful that the beach censor couldn't add them. And what happened? Figures ceased to be an attraction. Today the fashionables let the others loll about with bare limbs and skin tights, while they themselves don bathing costumes which look like abbreviated street frocks, or sports costumes. Suits of silks and satins embroidered and trimmed exactly like the frocks of this season form the dressy type of bathing suit while long-sleeved, tailored types with Eaton collars and cuffs follow the sports lines.

A typical costume of the better class is made of navy blue taffeta with batteau neckline, long bodice and short skirt which is made plain in front and rear with full, shirred side panels. A bow of red ribbon begins at the front neckline and terminates in long ends which are finished with red tassels. The tiny bloomers which are concealed beneath the skirt are red.

Black bathing suits with front panels of vividly colored embroidery and with a huge bow on one hip are favored by many shops. Little shoulder pieces of self material in smart and huge rubberized scarfs with flower patterns are numerous. Except for the shortness of the skirt, the bathing suit varies slightly from the street frock, having all the accessories of the street frock; cloche-shaped hat, vivid scarf, parasol vanity bag, etc.

Question of Material.

Among the materials which are popular this season are taffetas, satins, cretonnes, gingham, jerseys and flannel. Cretonne appliques are used on plain materials to form border effects. Printed cretonnes form entire bathing suits. Gingham are used for the more youthful types in little dress effects and flannel favors the tailored mode.

A popular long-sleeved black satin costume is made in tunic style, with the bloomers showing beneath the skirt. White satin collar and cuffs are used on this model and a row of white pearl buttons extend down the front of the tunic. Other black satin garments are made in long-waisted effect with three-tiered skirts.

Spanish Bathing Costume.

Following the mode for Spanish shawls we see an occasional Spanish bathing costume which is made of crepe with huge floral designs embroidered throughout and with a fringe about the hem of the skirt.

Many of the new bathing suits are

Why Was Columbus Blond?

In the Answer Is the Story of Mankind's Long Journey

Was the "Garden of Eden" in Denmark?
 Where did man first get fire?
 How did the cave man really make love?
 Why did the Indians think Columbus a god?
 Did Darwin see the "Flying Dutchman"?

It's a long journey from the day, millions of years ago, when a brave savage first stole fire from the cracked rocks near a volcano, to the day, a week or so ago, when Congress passed a new immigration bill to encourage prospective citizens from Northern Europe and keep out the Japanese.

But there are really very few steps between the color of Columbus' hair and the new immigration regulations. And when you have answered satisfactorily why Columbus had fair hair and blue eyes, you will have the reason for the immigration law and the reason for a great many questions which are bothering the world today—including the Ku Klux, Mussolini in Italy, the Navy's fight to the North Pole, William Jennings Bryan's fight on evolution, the million-year old fossil eggs found in China, the superiority of the Nordic and the Virgin birth of Christ.

Why was Columbus blond? Because, says Johannes Jensen, the Danish novelist, Columbus was of Nordic ancestry. That is, the family of Columbus may have lived in Italy for many generations, but originally his forefathers came from Northern Europe. That is why, instead of being short and dark-skinned and black-eyed, Columbus was tall, fair, blue-eyed.

And in this the scientist agrees with the novelist. Professor Henry Fairfield Osborn of Columbia University and head of the American Museum of Natural History says "Columbus was clearly of Nordic ancestry," adding: "The Northern races include all those peoples who originally occupied the western plateau of Asia and traversed Northern Europe, certainly as early as 12,000 B. C. In the country which they occupied the conditions of life were hard and the struggle for existence was severe, increasing beyond the power of their own country to support them, they invaded the countries to the south, not only as conquerors but as contributors of strong moral and intellectual elements to more or less decadent civilizations."

This is why the color of Columbus' hair is so significant. The long journey of mankind, which began some fourteen thousand years ago, is still continuing. And to day's protests of the Italians against immigration restrictions—their claims for admission because Columbus discovered America—are met by the counter-claim, going back thousands of years, that Columbus did not belong to the same race as the Italians.

Why did Columbus set out on his voyage? To prove the world is round—but also, says Jensen, to seek the "Lost Country." Why did the ancestors of Columbus leave their homelands and sweep southward? To seek the "Lost Country."

And the "Lost Country" is simply the land of men's dreams, the Earthly Paradise, the beautiful land which has lived through the ages in the memory of the human race—for the race has a memory, too. It is this search for the "Lost Country" which is the story of "The Long Journey," written by Johannes Jensen. It is hailed as a great epic, because the novelist took as his character all mankind and as his setting the whole world and as the period all of history. And yet this book, which has stirred Europe, is not an outline or a record of dates, but fiction—a thrilling and fascinating tale in which facts become thrills and myths become realities.

mythology a godlike Thunderer and Father of Fire.

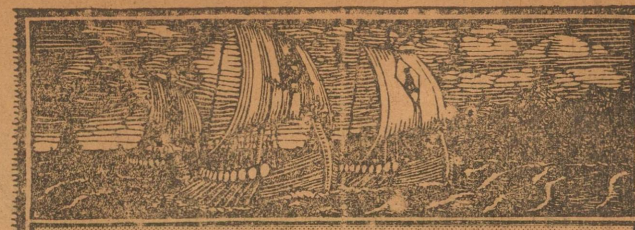

Fyr, a young man of the tribe, dares to climb up the sides of the volcano and light some twigs in a crack in the rocks, thus becoming the Prometheus of legend. The tribes of the Forest Folk are each under the complete domination of the Old Man of the Herd—the oldest and strongest of the men—whose word is law and to whom belong all the women of the tribe. As his tribe wanders on Fyr stays behind, singing at his daily tasks. His song on the mountain side attracts many women from the tribe, who come up one by one—until he has a tribe of his own.

And then comes a vivid picture of an eruption of the volcano, when the tribes aroused by terror and the thought that Fyr had deceived them, sacrifice him to the flames.

Ages pass and the ice-sheet begins to descend over the land—the

The men of the Stone Age, seafarers who settle the Danish Islands, come next, and one of them, Norm Gest, is the hero of "The Cimbrians," the second volume of "The Long Journey." His childhood and his later adventures are so intimately described that it is hard to realize that he is a legendary figure, a minstrel who wanders over the earth through the ages.

The Cimbrians lived north of Jutland and were worshippers of a great bronze image of a bull, to which they made human sacrifices and which was tended by vestal virgins. The coming of Spring was celebrated by bonfires and bull-fights and the crowning of the

JOHANNES V. JENSEN
Whose "Long Journey" Is the Story of Mankind in Fiction

Columbus in turn became a legendary sun-god, Quetzalcoatl, the news of whom traveled inland to the great Aztec empire of Mexico. Here, in the shadow of Popocatepetl, the fiery mountain, dwelt the strange tribe which worshipped the cruel war god Huitzilopochtli with bloody sacrificial rites. When Cortes came they first thought he was Columbus—but they were soon disillusioned. The Aztecs were conquered—and they revolted—and, described in one of the most terrible scenes in fiction, they sacrificed thousands of the conquistadores to their gods at the temple where now stands the Cathedral of Mexico. And through it all we have the fierce passionate story of Malina, the Indian girl who betrayed her people for love of Cortes.

Christopher Columbus Sails to Find Paradise

Lombardy to Genoa on the coast. In Jensen's story he is descended from and named after St. Christopher, the giant ferryman who became a legendary figure. Christopher served God, by ferrying the migrating tribes across the river on their way south, and one night, the legend says, he carried the Christ child north—symbolizing the spread of Christianity.

Then the story moves to Patos on the midnight of August 4, 1492, when Columbus prayed in the church before setting sail. Never before has that historic voyage been so described—the admiral pacing the deck, the restless sailors, talk of mutiny, arguments, fears, storms, shooting stars—until Columbus finds Guanahani, instead of the Earthly Paradise he sought, and names it San Salvador.

The White God comes to the Indians, expecting to find them angels in Eden! Among the Indians there were legends of a white stranger who ages before had come in a ship—Norm Gest—and they thought, when Columbus landed, that he had returned.

May Queen of the Cimbrians

"Stranger Maid" or May Bride. Floods cause the Cimbrians to leave their land and travel south until they come into conflict with the Romans, who had begun to degenerate. Against the background of great battles there is the beautiful love story of Vedis, the Cimbrian priestess, and Cheiron, the Greek sculptor.

In this way Columbus' ancestors came to Italy. As explained in the third volume "Christopher Columbus," just published by Knopf, Columbus was of Lombard descent, his family having moved from

The Man Who Stole Fire

The "Garden of Eden" was not in Mesopotamia but in Denmark, says Jensen in "Fire and Ice," the first volume of "The Long Journey." At the dawn of history the Scandinavian countries were not bleak and cold—they had an almost tropical climate. Here man had his origin, coming "out of the primeval state together with the beasts, shared their life and became transformed with them." The Forest Folk, as Jensen calls these early men, lived in the shadow of Gunung Api, a great volcano, which becomes in winters get colder and longer, and finally the tribe moves farther south. One man stays, Carl, the One-Eyed. He is determined to fight the ice and he learns how to live through the coldest winters. To him comes Mam, a woman, and monogamy begins—and he becomes the Allfather of a new people, the Ice Folk, from whom are descended the Scandinavians. But the memory of the North before the Ice Age has lingered in the souls of men and has become the legend of Paradise, Lost Country.

Air Mail Service Coast to Coast Is Inaugurated Today

By WILLIAM J. McEVoy, United Press Staff Correspondent.
 WASHINGTON—At dawn Tuesday July 1, an airplane, laden with mail, hopped up from the earth beside San Francisco bay, to wing its way toward the sunrise; four hours later, a similarly burdened flyer skimmed down a field on Long Island, rose to hover over Manhattan for a moment and fling itself headlong into the west.

Thus was inaugurated the first through, trans-continental coast-to-coast, continuous air mail service, for which the postoffice department has been priming and pointing for years.

Every day from today on, at 6 a. m. at San Francisco and 10 a. m. at New York, the air mail planes will take the air bearing the burden of communications destined from one coast to another. The air mail definitely is on.

Will Fly by Night.
 Night will hold no terrors for the air mail flyers, just as the pony express of years ago stopped not a bit for Indians, fires or floods. Night flying will be a considerable part of the new service for the schedule calls for 32 hours and 5 minutes of continuous flying on the eastbound mail, and 34 hours and 45 minutes on the westbound trip.

Gigantic beacons of hundreds of millions of candlepower casting their beams 100 to 150 miles have been installed at the principal night flight points while "safety zones" near to the twilight zone stations have been studded with smaller beacons. These are to guide flyers who may find darkness overtaking them some distance from the brilliantly lighted stations and need some guide to lead them to the landing field.

The departure hours at each end of the flight have been carefully chosen to meet the conditions of fog. The planes will start at 6 o'clock at San Francisco, because later in the morning, usually about 10, a thick blanket of fog drops down on the bay. The situation at New York is usually the contrary; the fog lies heavily over everything in the early morning until dispelled by the warmth of the sun.

Into Three Zones.
 The 2,600 mile span of the continent has been divided into three zones for the daily flight—New York to Chicago, Chicago to Cheyenne, Wyo., and Cheyenne to San Francisco.

Special air mail postage has been arranged for the service and stamps in denominations of 8, 16 and 24 cents have been printed and distributed to all postoffices along the route as well as the principal cities adjacent to the "air pathway."

An 8-cent stamp will carry an ounce letter anywhere within one of these zones, while it will require a 16-cent stamp to carry such a letter into the second zone, and a 24-cent stamp into the third zone.

Letters originated at, or destined to, points off the air route will not require additional postage. Air mail postage will be honored for travel by train as well as by air.

To expedite the gathering of air mail special boxes are being installed in the larger cities along the route.

No attempt will be made by postoffice "aces" to set speed records in dispatching mails across the continent.

DEFENSE OF NEW YORK

To the Editor:

I notice in yesterday's edition an article on the New York city of 1838, that has several erroneous statements in it. In the first place, it states that the city had no street cars. Now it so happens that just 65 years, to a day, before that article appeared in your paper, I was born in what is now the city, and was living at the date of the democratic convention, as a 9-year-old boy, at Broadway and Twenty-seventh street, and street cars were all the transportation the average man had. The elevated roads were being discussed and some dreamers even talked about going underground. New York was not a country village, even then. Certainly it had more than its share of dives and gambling halls, but they were no more characteristic of the general population's life, than were the bad men of the west, its founders and substantial citizens. The average New Yorker was provincial, is now, for that matter, but he was a good citizen. He brought his children up to the belief that ladies and gentlemen did not get intoxicated, swear in public nor gamble at cards; that Sunday school and church were for nice little boys and swimmers' holes and street lounging on Sunday for bad little boys. All his little boys were, however, not altogether nice little boys, and we, that is, they, would sometimes go to the public bath-houses early Sunday morning, to Sunday school and church later; eat dinner and go rowing in the afternoon. The average New York father and mother, tried hard to teach the youth that piloting law-breaking and rowdiness were not in his line; but there was plenty of all three going on, and they valiantly fought for decent living and decent politics. Those were reconstruction days, and, if you will look in your histories, it was New York's democracy, which first took up the battle for fair treatment of the south. It was in Tammany Hall, seat of democracy that has never been populist or "ismatic", that the convention of democrats, of a class that I still revere and whose teachings I have followed all my voting life, made these declarations: "The democratic party, in national convention assembled, reposing its trust in the intelligence, patriotism and discriminating justice of the people, standing upon the constitution as the foundation and limitation of the powers of the government, and the guarantee of the liberties of the citizen, do, with the return of peace demand:

1. Immediate restoration of all the states to their rights in the union under the constitution, and of civil government to the American people.
2. Amnesty for all past political offenses, and the regulation of the elective franchise in the states by their citizens."

Tammany Hall did what the rest of the people of the north failed to do, it voted the democratic ticket to a man. Mr. Bryan may hate Tammany; but it has been a bulwark of democracy during my entire memory, and I beat Mr. Bryan to it by a year.

Socially New York had to protect itself from an enormous influx of new rich, as it has today; and it has always clung to its own culture and its own views of what constituted refinement. General Roger A. Pryor, superbly elegant southern gentleman, was elected in his best circles; Col. John R. Fellows, confederate soldier from Arkansas, born "Yorker" before the war, partner of the late confederate Colonel Leake, of Dallas, returned to New York, where he was received at his true value socially, professionally and politically. Tammany Hall made him district attorney and congressman; and so it went. No; New York was not wholly given over to evil, and has never been and firmly do I believe, never will be. Such articles as the one I refer to give as false an impression of the New York of my childhood, as the hideous distortions of western life now so popular, give of the men and women who, in truth, created Texas. I will defy Mr. Bryan and any coterie of gentlemen he may name, to do what was done by the great convention at Washington, Texas, in 1836. In 17 working days, they adopted a declaration of independence, wrote a constitution for the republic and organized a provisional government and adjourned; and they used perfect English, no typists and no writing machines; also I will defy Mr. LaFollette or Mr. Coolidge, to draft from their followers a similar group. Incidentally, I will likewise defy either party, regardless of name or number, to write a more unequivocal platform than that of the democracy in 1836, or one that a good citizen could more readily subscribe to. No; New York was as forward looking, as truly progressive, then as it is now; but it did not believe in making a crazy quilt of the constitution then, and Tammany does not now. I sincerely hope

Voice Is Raised Against Whisky In the Argentine

By A. M. EASTERLING, United Press Staff Correspondent.
 BUENOS AIRES (By mail to United Press).—"Hard-lucker is de-bauching a great many people in this land, where prohibition has not yet been heard of, in the opinion of the president of the national department of health, who has asked the government for the creation of a special department within his department to deal with victims of alcohol.

With the exception of itinerant prohibitionists from the United States, who now and then ramble into Argentina and give out for publication a prediction that the republic will be dry by 2050, or a few hundred years later, this is about the first voice that has been raised in the wilderness of saloons, bars, grogeries, cafes, and other places where anything to drink may be had at any time of the day or night or any day of the week for a reasonable price. And even this mild statement by the president of the national health department caused a newspaper, one of the oldest and most conservative in the Argentine to break out with the following:

"Alcohol, as a stimulant, when taken to excess, acts as an aphrodisiac. Must it be controlled, fiscalized, abolished, or that? If so, then in the name of logic let the modern cinematograph, the novel, the theatre, all the arts, including painting and sculpture, be abolished for like alcohol and cantharides, they are all aphrodisiacs more or less pronounced in action. Abolish, whilst about it, the spring season, because it also stimulates the baser passions as well as the latent seeds and the dormant earth into action."

The only other notice taken of the statement was to use it as a text by the newspapers which discovered that a few dishonest barkeepers had made their dry by 2050, or a few hundred years later, this is about the first voice that has been raised in the wilderness of saloons, bars, grogeries, cafes, and other places where anything to drink may be had at any time of the day or night or any day
