SAN FRANCISCO, April 11.—Hawaiians are abandoning the ukulele for the cocolele, according to tourists returning here from the islands. The cocolele is credited with being a real original Hawaiian instrument. It is strung like a ukulele but it is made of a coconut shell rather than fashioned of wood. The tone is somewhat deeper and different in quality.

Care Should Be Given Blind Babies As Soon As Possible

Laws that care for the blind in the State of Texas do not include the child from the day of blindness, though that be at birth.

A special budget should be provided for these children to give them the care, maintenance and education in kindergartens—hospitals and homes combined, provided for them. If the mother will realize that the baby needs immediate care, she will report her blind baby, that it may have the hospital care especially, before the little body becomes twisted and deformed.

The present budget does not provide for babies and young and backward children. One family in Marfa, Texas, has four blind children, all too young to attend the State school. Where are the other children who should be in school? Report such blind children to Mrs. H. Francis Baugh, Sunshine State Organizer in Blind Work, 4928 Live Oak, Dallas.

An effort is being made by the Texas ladies to make a census of the blind babies in the State—then the next step will be to appeal to the legislature to provide for their immediate care in any institution within or without the State equipped for them.

Other States pay $1.50 a day for each child so appointed, and it graduates when old enough, to the State schools or State classes for the blind, where it gets the higher education. Delay in sending the baby early often means its deterioration into a helpless and backward blind child.

Chevrolet Adds To Selling Force All Over Nation

During the last seven months the Chevrolet Motor Company added in southern territories. Almost the total selling force of the average motor car company is represented alone in the number of new dealers added to the Chevrolet organization. Demand for sales franchises demonstrates the decided favor accorded the new improved Chevrolet by the buying public throughout the country.

Smaller communities, with the augmented sales force afforded by the additional associate dealers, will be assured of adequate service close at hand, while the direct dealers, generally located at county seats, will be assured of a more thorough coverage of their outlying territory.

Typical of the increased buying power of the South are reports of new dealers from four of the larger representative branch offices. Atlanta, Ga., zone headquarters, reported 107 new dealers handling Chevrolet cars; Memphis, Tenn., 100 new dealers; Charlotte, N. C., 68 and New Orleans, 52 new dealers.

Minneapolis and Des Moines showed the largest number of new dealers acquired in the Northern areas.

Latex, the milky-white liquid that flows from the bark of a rubber tree, is the source of all rubber. The United States Rubber Company ships latex from its rubber plantations in the Far East to its tire factories. Special machinery treats tire cords in a latex bath and lays them side by side, producing Web Cord. See below.

A—Latex-treated Web Cord. Note how each cord lies smooth and parallel and absence of cross tie-threads.
B—The old-style cord structure with cross tie-threads and uneven position of cords. Compare with Web Cord.

Here are the Answers to your Questions about Latex-treated Web Cord

Q—What is Latex-treated Web Cord?
A—Web Cord is the special cord structure developed by this Company for Royal Cords and other United States Tires.

Q—How does Latex-treated Web Cord differ from the cord structure used in other makes of tires?
A—Each individual cord from which Web Cord is made is latex-treated by immersing the cords in a latex bath. The cords are then laid side by side and when the liquid dries they become webbed together by pure, natural rubber.

Q—Don't other manufacturers treat their cords?
A—Some do, but not in latex.

Q—What is the object of treating cords with latex?
A—All tire cords must be impregnated with rubber. Using latex impregnates the cords with rubber, without using chemicals.

Q—Why don't other manufacturers use the Latex Process?
A—The Latex Process was developed, patented and is owned by the United States Rubber Company.

Q—What are the advantages of Latex-treated Web Cord?
A—Greater flexibility, strength and longer life in cord fabric. The Latex Process surrounds and protects each cord with rubber and webs it to its neighboring cords with a flexible rubber coating. This does away with the necessity for cross tie-threads.

SEX PLAYS TRIUMPH OVER ART

By PAUL W. WHITE, United Press Staff Correspondent. NEW YORK, April 10.—Art is having a tough time around Forty-second street and Broadway.

The theatrical season is nearing its close and the number of artistic plays now on the stage is negligible, while the sexy dramas are turning them away.

Without attempting to draw any moral from this state of affairs one is reminded of the remark often made by critics of the present day theatre:

"If you give the public the better things, it will support them."

Truth of this comment seems doubtful in the light of box office records. No less than five separate organizations have been producing plays with art written in capital letters and the combined output of successful productions has reached just two.

The Theatre Guild found a revival of Shaw's "Arms and the Man" profitable and the Neighborhood's "Dybbuk" ran for months. Other plays by these organizations as well as those from the Provincetown, Stagers and Actors producing units have failed most miserably, however.

Now take the other side of the picture:

Among the greatest successes of the year were Michael Arlen's "The Green Hat," together with "The Shanghai Gesture," "Cradle Snatchers" and "Lulu Belle." Arlen's play, in which a woman has an affair with virtually every man in Europe in order to prove her love for one man, has just closed after a long run while the others are still prospering tremendously.

Sex, whether delicate or blatant, is the motif of all these dramas. The scenes of "The Shanghai Gesture" are laid in a Chinese brothel, and the name of the leading character is "Mother Goddam." "Lulu Belle" concerns a Harlem Carmen of promiscuous affections. "Cradle Snatchers" depicts three married women seeking thrills from gigolos while their husbands are likewise engaged in dalliance.

Not all of the season's outstanding successes have centered on such nuances, but the ghost of Anthony Comstock seems to have been frightened permanently from the neighborhood of Times Square.

Where the blame—if there is to be any blame—must fall is in doubt.

New Film Sheik Is Endowed With Real Intelligence

By LINCOLN QUARBERG (United Press Staff Correspondent) HOLLYWOOD, Cal., April 10.—

A new brand of sheik—the intellectual lover—is supplanting the Latin or physical type on the screen, in the opinion of Marion Fairfax, foremost woman motion picture producer.

The Valentino mold of heart-crusher, as personified by Rudolph himself, and scores of imitators, of Latin or Spanish origin, is gradually being pushed into the realm of the discarded screen heroes, according to the feminine movie-maker.

"Look over the array of male stars who are in the ascendant today," said Miss Fairfax, in an interview today, "and you will find the mental type now dominating."

"Outstanding examples are Lewis Stone, Ronald Colman and John Gilbert."

The screen hero with sheer "sex appeal" is losing favor with the fans, contends the woman producer.

"It all goes to prove that, after all, women love the same thing—strength," she continued. "And of strength, mental virility is the strongest, because it dominates all others."

"Many women worship physical strength in a man. She may fear him, and at times hate him, yet she loves him."

"The girls and women who have been responsible for the popularity of the conventional film sheik love physical strength because of its aesthetic quality, which in the movies we call sex appeal."

"There is, too, a rarer type which loves the man for the sense of strength or rather protection, implied by his wealth or his willingness to provide for her. Psychoanalysts ascribe this to infantile cases."

"But the strongest of the strong is the mental type—the man with the strength of mind. He is the man who commands the world and commands the hearts of the majority of women."

"He is a quiet, reserved manner, but in his face is written a firmness and power that carries the conviction of ability to rise above storms and crises."

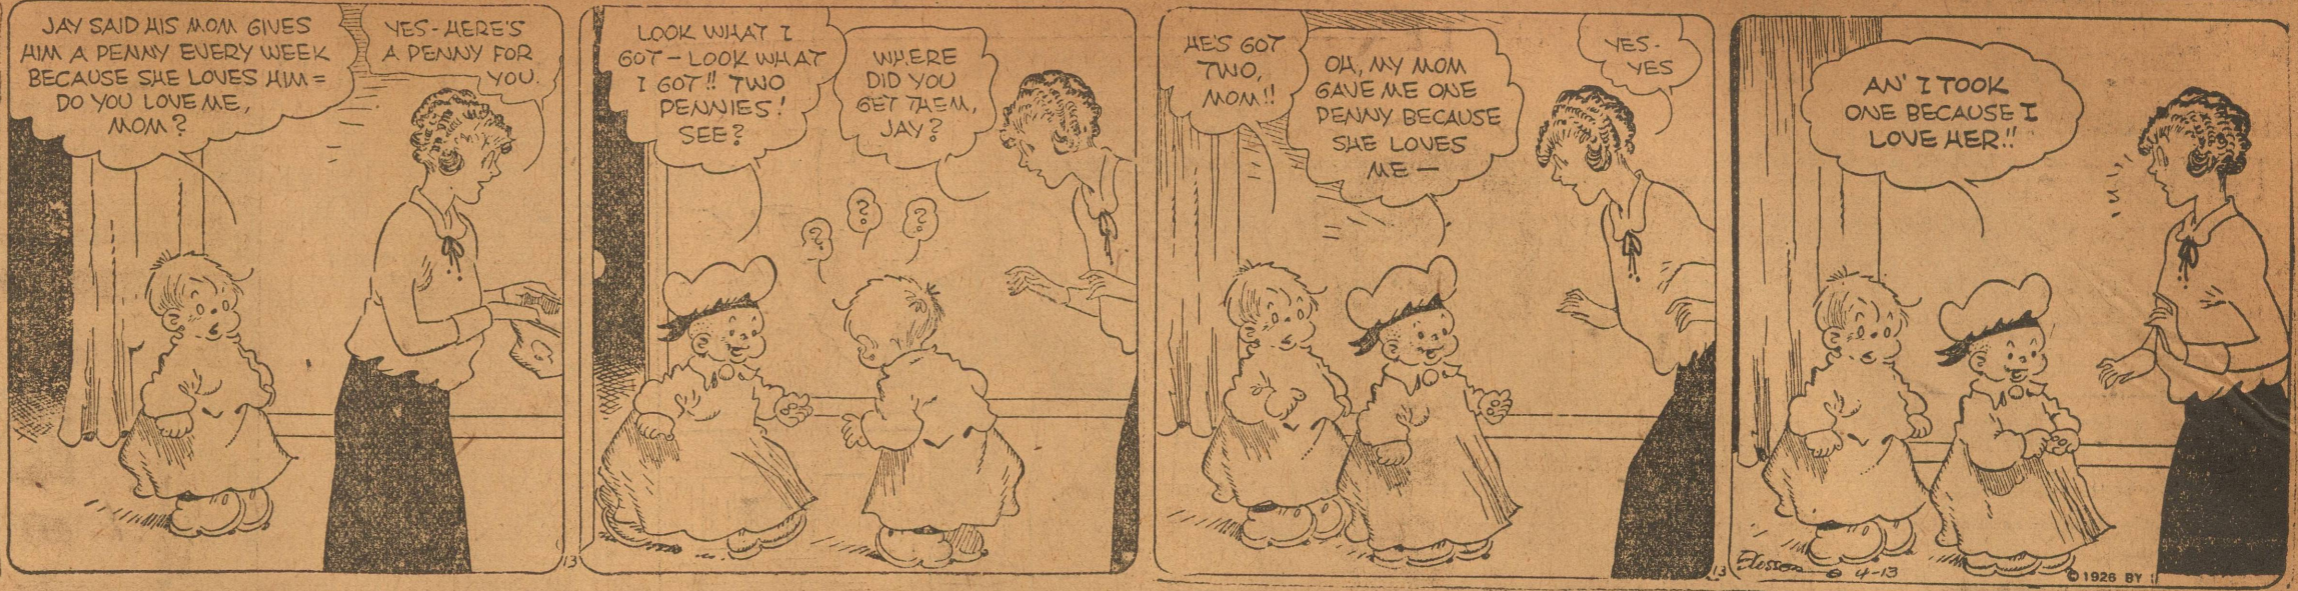

"He may have a fiery spirit—a spirited temperament belongs as much to the mental lover as the one whose fore-runner goes back to the days when men wooed with clubs."

Japanese Bar Movement To Control Birth

TOKYO.—Birth control is a subject that may be discussed in Japan so long as the English language is used, either spoken or written, but the heavy hand of the law descends the minute any birth control advocate drops into the vernacular.

The works of Margaret Sanger and Dr. Marie Stopes in English are to be found in all principal bookstores, but detectives raided the bookshops this week and confiscated about 1,000 printed translations of these works. Simultaneous police visits were made to various drugstores and drug and various articles were confiscated.

Eight Managers Expect Pennants

By BILL McKECHNIE, Manager of the Clampton Pittsburgh Pirates

With the exception of Waner and Kyne, who may break into the lineup, the Pirates will depend upon the same team that won last year. We feel, however, that it is an improved team, better for the experience and the confidence gained last year. We are not foolish enough to think that we will not have any opposition, as the Giants, Reds and Cardinals are stronger than they were last year. It's going to be a tight race and injuries may upset a lot of calculations because they can't always be avoided.

By STANLEY HARRIS, Manager of the Champion Washington Senators

The Senators are a stronger club as we start after what we hope will be our third pennant. Johnny Tobin as a lead-off batter and right fielder, will improve the team and Joe Bush will strengthen the pitching staff while Joe Harris ought to be a much better player as a result of an operation that restored the use of one of his eyes. Some critics have expressed the opinion that we are old and on the verge of collapse and that our veteran pitching staff will not hold up. I feel confident that Walter Johnson, Coveleskie, Bush and Reuther will have a winning season and I have faith in experienced pitchers who know what to do with the ball. We would be in a bad way if anything happened to Peck, but he seems to have recovered from a bad knee and even if he has to miss a few games, Buddy Myer will do in his place. I can't see where any other club in the league has been improved as much as we have.

By JOHN McGRAW, Manager of the New York Giants

Many of the critics are picking the Giants to win the National League pennant, and while I am satisfied with the club as it now stands, I have been in baseball too long not to know that championships are won on the field and not with a pad and pencil. I feel that the Giants are much stronger than they were last season because of a superior pitching staff. I never have had more or better looking prospects. Groh and Jackson also are in better physical condition and Young and Snyder looked during the spring training games as if they had recovered from the slump they were in last year. Injuries ruined the Giants last season but we are prepared this season with plenty of reserves. The Pirates, Cards and Reds will be dangerous, but I feel sure we are at least as strong as any club in the league and the players are in the best of shape to start the season.

By ROGERS HORNSBY, Manager of the St. Louis Cardinals

If we get the pitching we have reason to expect, the St. Louis Cards ought to be in the race all the way with a good chance to win the pennant. The pitching staff ought to be better than it was last season with Bill Killifer around to do the coaching and the defense ought to be stronger. We have an infield as good as any in the league and there is no particular weakness in the outfield. We have plenty of hitting power. I hope to do my share with the stick and Bottomley ought to be even better as he hasn't reached his full development as a player.

By JACK HENDRICKS, Manager of the Cincinnati Reds

With last year's weakness at shortstop, first base and in the outfield corrected, our club is in better shape to make a night for the pennant. The operation which Luque had to undergo may not hurt him but it is hardly possible that we can work him as many times as we did last year. But the pitching staff may not be weakened because Carl Mays has come through in great shape and he ought to have a big season. Pete Donohue and Eppa Rixey, of course, are pitchers of established class and we know that they will deliver. We may be handicapped behind the bat until Hargrave recovers. The purchase of Wally Pipp from the Yankees removes a defensive weakness at first base that had bothered us for several years and he ought to add also to the offensive punch as he always has been a most dangerous batter. We are not claiming any pennants but we're warning that we'll be in there fighting all the way.

By CONNIE MACK, Manager of the Philadelphia Athletics

Last year I thought was going to be our year and the chances look even better this year. We were handicapped last year by injuries to Sam Gray and Joe Hauser and by a lack of experience that caused a young team to blow up late under the strain. Hauser ought to be able to play through this season and the whole team ought to be better for another year's experience. The boys found out last year that they were a good team and they know it now. Kid Gleason will be a lot of help as he certainly knows baseball and the boys like him. Gleason is bound to put spirit and fight in them and they lacked the final punch last season. I don't know of any team in the league that is any better and if we get the breaks we ought to win.

By GEORGE SISLER, Manager of the St. Louis Browns

Hopes of having a fine young pitching staff have made our club feel that it has a chance for the pennant and convinced us that we will at least be right in the fight all the way. We have a very strong infield, a great outfield, improved catching and pitching as promising as any manager could want. Williams and Jacobson are in much better physical shape and we know that they will play better than they did last year. With Wally Schang behind the bat we will have not only a fine mechanic but a smart catcher who ought to be a big help to the young pitchers. The American League race looks to be wide open and we certainly have a chance.

By MILLER HUGGINS, Manager of the New York Yankees

The Yankees are a much stronger club than they were last season and I feel sure that we will be a contender in the race. Babe Ruth is in much better shape. Lazzeri and Koenig have added to the offensive and defensive strength of the field and the pitchers look better than they have in three years. The team came along slowly in the training camp with the result that there were no injuries and all of the players are in shape for a quick start. Any team has a chance to win the pennant this year and we're certainly in the league.

Bryant Tosses Hat In Ring For Tax Assessor

George Bryant of Eastland, who two years ago, made the race for county tax assessor, has again announced his candidacy for that office subject to the action of the democratic primaries. Mr. Bryant made the race two years ago and received a very creditable vote during that race. He became well known over the county and made a large number of friends by the clean campaign he made for the office. He is a business man of Eastland and is a member of the Chamber of Commerce there and of the Retail Merchants Association. At the present time he is the manager of the Oilbelt Motor Company of Eastland but promises the voters that if elected he will give his entire time to the office. Mr. Bryant is well known in Gorman, having been a member of the Gorman band on many occasions when his services were rendered in a mighty pleasing manner. Mr. Bryant's announcement follows:

"I wish to take this opportunity to announce that I am again candidate for the office of tax assessor Eastland county. As many of you will remember, I ran for this office two years ago but it seems that my opponent caught me out of condition and shortwinded, and at the finish took me to an old fashioned country cleaning. This time, however, I am going into training and hope to be able to finish stronger as my opponent is running for a third term. But seriously speaking, friends and voters, I wish to thank each and every one for the support you gave me in the last race and to assure you that although I was defeated, it certainly warms the chockles of my heart when I think of the many friends and supporters I had in the last campaign, and as I am again asking you to elect me to the office of tax assessor, I respectfully solicit the vote of all of you who supported me before, and as many of you other good folks who did not, if you can consistently give me your vote and support and be honest with yourselves, your friends,

Miners Will Play Dynamos at Thurber Sunday Afternoon

Thurber will play its first game of the Oil Belt league season next Sunday when the Breckenridge Dynamos, leaders of the league, will invade Thurber. The Dynamos began their season Sunday with a win over Ranger while Thurber and Eastland, scheduled for a game, were compelled to remain idle due to wet grounds.

"Lefty" Graham, who struck out 11 Magnolias Sunday, will doubtless pitch for Breckenridge. As "Lefty" defeated Thurber, 6-1, in a practice game two weeks ago, the Miners have a little score to settle with him and they are out for vengeance. Hale, well known to fans throughout the oil belt, will probably be sent into the box by Manager Bechtel for Thurber.

Ranger Panthers Reorganize Team; Starr Is Captain

The Ranger Panthers met last night and reorganized. Only a few of the former members belong. Sam Starr was elected captain and, with his knowledge of the game and the players, it is believed he will lead a winning team. Fifteen, all baseball players, comprise the club membership. The Panthers will play Olden and the Yellow Jackets Sunday, with the hope of capturing both games. The standing of the Panthers, as previously published, was incorrect, as the team that had played six games, winning three and losing three, was composed of both Yellow Jackets and Panthers. The Panthers' official season starts Sunday with the double-header.

and your convictions. I am entering this campaign wholly unsolicited by anyone and it is my intention to make an active canvass of the county at which time, I hope to have the pleasure of meeting as many of the voters personally as is humanly possible. In asking your consideration for the office to which I aspire, I wish to assure you that I would not do so if I did not feel confident I was thoroughly competent to fill same in a creditable manner, as I am a bookkeeper and a detail cost accountant, and have been actively connected with the commercial world since childhood. I have lived in your midst here in Eastland county, something like eight years, and in Texas for over twenty years, and cheerfully invite an investigation as to my honesty, character, etc. I have been with my present employers, the Oilbelt Motor Company, about four years and am now occupying a position of trust and cheerfully refer you to them or anyone who knows me. My candidacy is subject to the action of the democratic primaries and I again respectfully ask for your vote and consideration. GEORGE BRYANT.

Hydler Predicts A Banner Season For The Game

By JOHN A. HEYDLER, president of the National League. (Written for the United Press.)

Major league baseball has been in a flourishing condition for several years that the old stock predicts that this season will be bigger than ever. It can't be a much bigger season because the game already has been restricted only by the size of the hands but it is going to be a better season I believe because the competition is going to be much closer.

Practically every one of the clubs in our league has been improved since last year and there are at least four clubs that have the best chances to win the pennant. I don't believe anyone can do more than offer a guess which club of the Pittsburgh Pirates, New York Giants, Cincinnati Reds and St. Louis Cardinals will win the pennant. They are so closely grouped in strength and class that I wouldn't hazard a guess on the winner.

The Boston Braves and the Brooklyn Robins are out of the race and the Philadelphia club is improving slowly but surely.

Interest will be stimulated this season also by an unusually large number of fine ball players who have been brought up from the minor leagues and by the prospect for better pitching resulting from the change in the rules permitting pitchers to rub resin on their hands.

All of the National League club owners are preparing for a big season and if we are fortunate in getting some good early spring weather we expect some new attendance records for the season.

Our opinion is that we have enough rain in April without people trying to give picnics.

THESE NINE MAJOR LEAGUE MANAGERS HOPE TO WIN FIRST FLAG THIS SEASON

THESE nine baseball pilots are seeking their first major league flag. Some are hopeful this will be their year; others, less optimistic, are content to wait another season or while they build up their clubs.

Cobb, Fohl, Sisler and Collins represent the American League and Hendricks, Fletcher, Bancroft, Hornsby and McCarthy the National.

Cobb, Sisler, Collins, Bancroft and Hornsby are player-pilots. All are infielders but Cobb, McCarthy is the baby member of the group in point of service, having been named manager of the Cubs during the winter. Last year he led Louisville to the gonfalon in the American Association.

Hornsby gained the managerial job of the St. Louis Cardinals towards the middle of the 1925 chase. Collins was appointed White Sox chieftain a year ago, while Bancroft, Sisler and Hendricks took over the job of boss at the start of the 1924 season; Bancroft with the Braves, Sisler the Browns and Hendricks the Reds.

Fletcher was named manager of the Phillies in 1923 and Cobb, Detroit pilot, in 1921. Fohl took charge of the Boston Red Sox in 1924, after having managed the St. Louis Browns and Cleveland Indians.

Cobb has landed his Tygers as high up as second place, while in 1923 Fohl and his Browns came within a single game of tying the Yankees for the banner. Hornsby, Collins, Sisler and Bancroft all did well last season.

While the early dope doesn't favor any of these "non-pennant-winning" managers to come through this season, some of them are still hopeful of showing the way and thereby cap their initial flag as major league managers.

with him again.

And to her house comes Joie, invited there by Jimmie. A new Joie in a checkered suit, hideous paste diamonds, showy tie and a derby hat set at a rakish angle, a cigar in the side of his mouth—altogether a change for the worse from the sweet, handsome lad she had known and loved.

How her Jimmie shines beside him! How glad she is she followed the advice of her parents. Her dream is shattered, but there is peace and contentment in the thought she has Jimmie.

As Jimmie and Joie wander down the lane to the station, Joie casts aside the cigar and monstrous hat and the paste diamonds and again he is wandering in Memory Lane with Mary by his side. Because he loves her he has disillusioned her.

STARS PICK NATIONALS TO REPEAT IN 1926

By NEA Service.

NEW YORK, April 13.—Who will win the American League pennant in 1926?

That question was recently submitted to a vote of 100 veteran stars of the circuit presided over by Ban Johnson.

The consensus of the players is that Washington will repeat with the Athletics and Detroit as the strongest contenders.

The vote was very close, Washington enjoying only a six-vote margin over Connie Mack's club in first place votes. While the players respect the prowess of the Tygers, the opinion prevails that the club will be shy good pitching.

A majority of the Detroit votes rate the Tygers as certain to finish in third place.

Here is the way the American league clubs will finish if the vote of the 100 stars run true to form:

- 1—Washington Nationals.
- 2—Philadelphia Athletics.
- 3—Detroit Tygers.
- 4—St. Louis Browns.
- 5—Chicago White Sox.
- 6—New York Yankees.
- 7—Cleveland Indians.
- 8—Boston Red Sox.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Harry Morton, wealthy, unmarried, middle-aged and handsome, has maintained for 15 years a home in Crofton. Gossips never have learned anything about his past.

He also maintains an expensive apartment in Seranton, which he visits almost weekly.

His 16-year-old adopted daughter, Audrey, is madly in love with him. So is Nona, a Seranton girl, connected with the stage.

He tells Audrey he never can marry her. To divert her attention, he hires a young secretary, John Parrish. She detects his purpose. Then he sends for Nona to come to Crofton, having first sent her five thousand dollars with which to buy a piece of jewelry. She comes. Morton tells Audrey that he has made over to her, as his adopted child, half of all his wealth. Audrey learns of Nona's visit, and meets her. Morton and Nona contrive to leave Audrey alone in Nona's hotel room. She finds they have gone out together. Morton leaves Nona at the hotel elevator that night, but does not return home. He has taken Nona to the theater, and about the city, where his friends could see them. Audrey waits up all night for him, finally falling asleep in her chair. At seven o'clock she finds he has not returned home. Kneeling beside his bed, she cries, "She's got him!"

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

(The names and situations in this story are fictitious.)

CHAPTER XIV

Morton returned home, shortly after eight o'clock. Audrey was sitting on a stool in the hallway, her head leaning against the wall, and her hands clasped in her lap.

He took quick note of the tired circles about her eyes, and of her bloodless face, but he made no comment.

"Hello, dear," he said, stooping over and kissing her.

She looked up at him, her eyes wide and lusterless, and made an attempt to speak. Her throat refused to function, and she emitted only a little questioning sound.

Morton talked on, rapidly.

"Got shaved by a barber, who squirted violet water on me," he said, handing his coat and stick to the maid. "I think he must have put some stickum on my hair, too."

Walking up and down, he rubbed his hands together briskly. "Just about enough time to get a bath, change my linen, and go back downtown."

The girl had continued to stare at him, her face drawn. At last she managed to speak.

"Nona?" she said, hardly above a whisper.

Morton winced as he caught the agony in her voice, but he kept his tone cheerful and impersonal.

"I suppose Nona will be wondering what has become of us," he said. "We'd better be getting downtown as soon as we can."

She slowly arose to her feet, and moved toward him. Her step was that of one who has been very ill. She placed her hands on his shoulders, and looked questioning into his eyes. There was something wrong with the smile on his face; it seemed to be fixed there, almost against his will. He made a little gesture as if to take the girl in his arms. Then his hands dropped again.

"You're trying to fool me!" she said, standing motionless.

"Fool you?" he inquired. His voice was artificially alert. Like his smile, its brightness was unreal.

"You've never tried to fool me before," she went on. "Did you—were you—oh, daddy, daddy, daddy!"

Her voice trailed off, and she sank fainting to the floor.

It was a different Morton who stooped, picked her up, and ran with her to the kitchen. To the house maid who ran after him panic-stricken, he gave abrupt orders:

"Turn on the ice-water faucet. Fill that glass. When the water comes cold enough throw a glassful in her face."

Audrey's dress was open at the throat, but he pulled it wider.

"Damn!" he swore, half aloud. "Oh, you nearly brute! What in God's name have I done! Oh child! child! Child!"

He was rubbing her hands and wrists, and from time to time winking her eyes, tenderly, where the water that the maid had thrown remained in the girl's eyes.

When Audrey began to stir, he settled himself on the floor, and drew her head protectively into his lap, with his arm wrapped around the fair curls.

Nona was on her knees beside the girl in an instant. "Does it hurt you, too?" she cried. "Don't cry, little girl. I've cried, too; it doesn't do any good."

"I've got to go on with the thing. I've got to!" he groaned. "But God forgive me! Forgive me, dearest little child!"

Audrey had refused to go to bed, after she finally came out of her faint. She told Morton, listlessly, that she wanted to go downtown with him. While her maid was helping her to dress, Morton hurriedly changed his own clothes. His linen had been crinkled from use the day before, and there was a little streak of soil upon his collar.

Audrey ate a few mouthfuls of breakfast, half-heartedly. Morton himself scarcely was able to eat. He took his eyes fixed anxiously upon the girl, and his spirits rose as she moved more vigorously and certainly. He was very tender with her, as he took her arm, when they left the house, and helped her down the steps, and out to the waiting automobile. He held her hand, and patting it absently, from time to time, as they rode to his office.

"I'll be in here only a few moments," he said. "Do you want to wait?"

Audrey responded, almost without interest: "Is Nona up there?"

He quickly shook his head.

"I'll wait down here in the car," she told him.

He hurried inside, up the elevator, and into his office. Without talking off his coat and hat, he called Nona's hotel, and asked for her room. She answered sleepily.

"I'm coming over there with Audrey," he said. "Nona, the poor child, is ghastly tired, and in deep trouble."

"I'm sorry, Harry," said Nona. "Truly, I'm dreadfully sorry, is there anything I can do?"

"Nothing now," Morton told her, "except I want you to be kind to her."

When Morton and Audrey arrived at Nona's room, she was dressed, but her heavy eyes proclaimed that she had not yet shaken off her drowsiness. Audrey sank into a chair in the corner, and looked out the window, after Nona had greeted her.

Morton touched Nona on the arm. As she turned, he fixed his eye upon her as if to convey an unspoken message.

Audrey and I have to go back to Seranton tonight," he said, slowly. Audrey gave a little start. Nona nodded her head.

"I'm glad," she said. "You know, I'm afraid I'll lose my job in the show if I stay away too long. Can I go back tonight, too? Is it all right?"

Audrey spoke. "We'll go back together, you and I—and" she turned her eyes toward Morton—"and our sweetheart!"

She crumpled in her seat, and buried her face in her hands.

Nona was on her knees beside the girl in an instant. "Does it hurt you, too?" she cried. "Don't cry, little girl. I've cried, too; it doesn't do any good."

Audrey looked up, and put her hand on the other girl's arm.

"That's beautiful," she said.

Nona made silent inquiry of Morton if she should reply.

"He gave it to me—he made me a present of it only two or three days ago," Nona said.

Morton arose abruptly, and left the Pullman drawing room in which they were sitting. Audrey had snatched her hand away from the pin, as if it had stung her.

With a choked cry, the girl sank upon her knees, and laying her arms upon the coverlet, buried her head in her hands.

"My heart hurts me so," she said. "I'm afraid—I'm afraid I'm going to die."

Morton ran quickly to her, and put his arm about her. "Are you sick, dear?" he gasped.

She did not answer him, but kept her hand on Nona's arm.

"Nona, I've got to ask you," she went on. "Where were you—were you and he together last night?"

Her voice was imploring, as if it were raised in prayer.

Nona moved back. "Together?" Her astonishment was not to be doubted. "He left me at the elevator at eleven o'clock! He said he couldn't come upstairs, because everybody would know it!"

Audrey looked at Morton, and saw chagrined corroboration in his eyes.

"Oh!"

It was a sigh of thanksgiving.

Nona and Morton looked at one another, and then back at the girl. Some new force had come into Audrey; new life and strength. Color flowed into her pale cheeks, and with a little restless gesture, she moved her head away from Morton's arms.

"Forgive me!" she said to him. "I thought—something!"

Nona took the girl's hands, and lifted them, clasping them closely. Her large dark eyes were kind, and her lips were curved into a smile that was almost tender.

"You really and truly love him, too, don't you?" she said. "We both love him—and what's going to happen to us all?"

She dropped Audrey's hands, and turned to Morton. Emitting a little mirthless laugh, she touched him on the shoulder with her forefinger.

"Nona, and Lois, and Miss Morton here— heaven knows how many others—all after you! Poor man!"

It was not until they were on the train that night, on the way to Seranton, that Audrey first noticed the brilliant diamond and platinum pin that was on Nona's breast. She leaned over and touched it.

that adorned her own right hand. "I don't understand," she said, at last. "My whole life seems to have turned into a jumble. A week ago I was happy—maybe the happiest girl in the whole world. Now I'm only miserable." Her lips quivered, and a big tear stole down her cheek.

Nona patted her on the knee. "Don't cry, child," she advised.

"Don't you ever cry?" Audrey asked her, dabbing at her eyes with her little handkerchief.

"Lord, yes!" said Nona. "I've cried a lot, lately. It's all on account of Harry Morton, too."

She patted the other girl on the knee again, and sighed. "Two nights I lay awake without closing my eyes, because of him."

Audrey's tears had ceased, and she was regarding her companion soberly. "Are there other women in love with him, too?"

Nona gave a short laugh. "Almost every woman that knows him is crazy about him. I don't know why it is. He is handsome, and charming, and kind, and rich, but it isn't any one of those things, or all of them put together, that make women love a man. It's just something about him. I know I never was in love with anybody before—really in love."

Audrey leaned far forward, and looked intently into the other's face.

"I thought you and he were together last night," she said. "Tell me—please tell me, Nona! Just what is your relationship with him? Are you his—please tell me what you are to him?"

Bankhead Highway Resurfacing Work Completed East

Resurfacing of the Bankhead Highway east of Ranger to the Palo Pinto county line is virtually completed. The work will be finished today, the highway weather permitting. The highway has been resurfaced with amesite which engineers declare is as fine a road as can be found anywhere and is of a permanent type. The work was done by the Atex Construction Company, under the direction of the State Highway Department.

Work on the Bankhead Highway within the city limits has been completed with the exception of shoulders. The city will put on the gravel shoulders, states B. H. Pascoe, city engineer.

The machinery of the Atex will be moved west of Cisco and resurfacing the highway from Cisco on to the Callahan county line will be done. When this is completed, the Bankhead across the county will be as durable as any highway can be, it is declared.

Pimples Quickly Cleared Up
 So-called skin diseases are caused by poisons from the perspiration becoming congested in the tiny pores and glands of the skin because they can't get out. Unhealthy skin holds them back and you know what happens when you continue to let this condition exist. For this reason "skin lotions," etc., can't possibly help you any. You need what is known as Black and White Ointment, which heals the sores, builds up the tissue of the skin, makes it active, so it naturally expels all the acid poisons which the system must throw off through the pores. Then, pimples, blotches, "breaking out," eczema, etc., quickly disappear.
 Black and White Ointment is economically priced in generous packages. The 50c size contains three times as much as the 25c size. All dealers have Black and White Soap, too, so you can keep your face, neck, hands and arms lovely and clear.—Adv.

Ranger World War Veterans To Visit France

"Many veterans of the World War in Ranger are going to be disappointed in their expectation of going to France in 1927 with the American Legion unless they begin saving for the trip now," declared W. W. Housewright of the Citizens State Bank of Ranger named an official depository for an American Legion Savings Club by the France convention travel committee of the Legion.
 "Bowman Elder, of Indianapolis, chairman of the France convention committee of the Legion has issued a warning to the effect that delay and vacillation now are going to cost thousands of veterans their chance to go to France," Mr. Housewright said. He pointed out that though the rates provided for the trip, which will involve the transportation of 30,000 Legionnaires and Legion Auxiliary members to France, are extremely low, ranging from about $175 to a maximum of about $450; many Legionnaires who want to go will have to make a deliberate effort to save in order to have the necessary funds in September, 1927.
 "It is estimated that the entire trip can be made for as little as $300," Mr. Housewright stated. "This is a small amount but it is more than many Legionnaires will have unless they begin putting regular sums aside. That is why the Legion has authorized us to organize an American Legion Savings Club."
 The club, Mr. Housewright said, is so organized that members will obtain the maximum interest possible on their money. It will not be necessary, he said, for any Legionnaire to withdraw part of his savings to make the steamship reservation months in advance. Instead the bank will issue a certificate of transfer in the name of the France convention travel committee, transfer the amount necessary on the books of the bank, and continue paying the Legionnaire depository their full interest until the final withdrawal just prior to departure.

Where Else Would You Expect Such Service?

All day yesterday the child was ailing. It was evident something was wrong, yet you trusted to luck—or perhaps Providence—that it would soon be alright. It had some fever and did not eat its supper. Unusual! About nine o'clock it was very restless and you put it to bed telling it to get a good sleep and it would feel better in the morning.

It is now 2 a. m. Everyone in the house is sound asleep. Only an occasional car passing breaks the silence of the neighborhood. Something awakens you and you lay quietly for a few moments. Suddenly you realize that the little one is calling and you rush to the room to find it sitting up in bed. A chill grips you. You remember it was not well and you fear it is worse and you rush to the telephone and call your physician. And if you fail to get him you call another and urge him to come at once. He answers your call. Think of the service!

WHY SHOULD YOU EXPECT IT?

Nine out of ten night calls for physicians would be unnecessary if they were called when a need for their service was first shown.

You do not know of a single other instance—even an emergency—in which you would ask for and expect to receive prompt service in the dead of night. Does your physician answer because of the paltry few dollars he receives? No! His training of at least a score of years has taught him to go when and where he is needed. His ideals and his interest in humanity typify the very highest class of service.

Do you show your appreciation by paying him when he calls? You do not. At least not often, for your thoughts are on other things. And certainly he does not demand settlement then. But he does expect and has the right to demand that you do pay promptly the first of the following month and you violate every courtesy and principal of good business if you fail to pay or make arrangements to do so.

Treat your physician as you want him to treat you. Be prompt! If you are not, the word may be passed around among other physicians and your reputation for slow pay will eventually cause you to lose the chance for service from the reputable physicians of your community. Pay your doctor promptly.
