MISSING CALIFORNIA EVANGELIST FOUND

MRS. M'PHERSON COMES TO LIGHT IN CALUMET, ARIZ

Tells Dramatic Story Of Being Kidnaped; Is Missing Since May 18

By United Press. DOUGHLASS, Ariz., June 23.—Missing since May 18, when she was reported to have drowned in the surf in Ocean Park, Calif., Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson, noted Los Angeles evangelist, was brought to Calumet and placed in the Arizona hospital here today, from Mexico, where, according to her own dramatic story, she has been held a captive by American kidnapers.

Picked up exhausted by Arizona motorists, and brought from Triets, Mexico, Mrs. McPherson arrived here today in custody of Mexican police and was placed under care of the hospital authorities. This ends a most sensational case. Mrs. McPherson's followers kept a watch for several days on the seashore expecting to see her rise again. At one time it was thought that she was in the Northwest. A detective winded back to Los Angeles from whence she disappeared that she was seen in company with some man in a leading hotel. This was denied by the hotel. Her daughter had taken up the work, the organizer of the cult had begun and has carried it on.

LOS ANGELES FOLLOWERS HOLD REJOICING SERVICES

By United Press. LOS ANGELES, Calif., June 23.—A wave of rejoicing swept over Los Angeles Temple amid 250,000 members today when the report came from Douglas, Arizona, that their leader and idol, Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson had been found safe and alive.

The multitude who took part in the long and futile search for Mrs. McPherson at the beach on Ocean Park, where she was believed to have drowned five weeks ago, knelt in prayer and sang hymns of praise when they received the glad news of the street and in the yard of the tabernacle. The married and single men and women bowed their heads in humble supplication in the streets outside of the temple. Matrons and fathers knelt on the sidewalks fringing the grounds and voiced solemn prayer of gratitude.

GLENHEAD, L. I., June 23.—Servants started by pistol shot which they heard, in a country home here this evening, went to the room of their 26-year-old mistress, to find her dead, a bullet wound above her heart. In a chair a few feet away was the dead body of her 29-year-old husband, with a bullet in his breast. On the floor between them lay a 45-caliber revolver.

The room was in disorder and about the couple lay the evening clothes which had been laid out for a dinner party, which they were to attend that evening.

As Cloudburst Hit Illinois City

Rockford, Ill., looked like Venice after the cloudburst hit it. Great property damage was caused and business was suspended until the waters subsided. Above is shown part of the residential district, with the water nearly level with the first floors of the houses. Below is shown a downtown street. Arrow points to the top of a submerged automobile, abandoned when the cloudburst came.

EUCCHARISTIC CONGRESS IS NEARING CLOSE

CHICAGO, June 23.—The pilgrimage of 750,000 people to Mundelein, American Holy City, for Thursday's rounding out and concluding ceremonies of the Eucharistic Congress, began today.

Although services were held at Soldiers Field, in Chicago, during the morning, many of the faithful in Chicago, started their forty mile trip early in the morning to avoid traffic jams on the boulevards. A line of automobiles moved steadily all morning on the roads around Chicago. Some had arranged for camping in the scene of Thursday's demonstrations, and were equipped with cooking utensils.

The effect of the Holy Eucharist on education—mainly higher education—was the chief topic of discussion before the twenty-eighth international Eucharistic Congress today. Leaders in the Catholic educational world were among the 100,000 persons who gathered within Soldiers Field and heard three speakers discuss education and its relation with the Holy Eucharist. The crowd today had not diminished any from the original throng which gathered for the opening of the sessions Sunday.

His Eminence Dennis Cardinal Dougherty of Philadelphia presided at the Higher Education Day of the congress. Among the speakers were: The Most Rev. George Gauthier, Archbishop of Toronto, Montreal; Joseph Scott, a member of the order of Knights of St. Gregory, Los Angeles; His Eminence John Cardinal Czernecki, primate of Hungary.

HAGEN LEADS IN GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP TOURNAMENT

ANNE'S-ON-THE-SEA, England, June 23.—Walter Hagen, with a sensational score of 68 took the lead in the first day's play for the British open golf championship.

The American professional displayed that same round of golf in the medal play that he showed last week when he conquered Abe Mitchell, the British star, in a 72-hole match.

Busy

Dr. John McLean, at 77, found that his duties as pastor of the McLean mission in Winnipeg, Man., librarian of Wesley College and archivist of the Methodist Church in Canada, didn't keep him busy enough. So he began studying law, and has just won an LL. B. degree from the University of Manitoba.

Children Found Monahan Home In Hospital

The two unfortunate children found at the home of Howard and Babe Monahan recently in an alleged starving condition, under orders of County Attorney W. J. Barnes were placed in the City-County hospital, Ranger, last night.

Eastland doctors who had been watching the children for the past two weeks decided that they were making little progress toward recovery, and when one of the mites developed internal trouble yesterday afternoon a conference was held in the county attorney's office, which resulted in them being taken from the persons who had looked after the children since they were found in the Monahan home.

County Attorney Barnes stated that the Monahans had agreed to waive all claim to the children and that the county would look after them until they were strong and healthy enough to be placed out for adoption. It was further stated that no criminal charges would be filed against the Monahans who are now living in Eastland.

BYRD REPORTS AT CAPITAL TO RECEIVE MEDAL

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Lieut. Commander Richard E. Byrd today reported to his superiors and prepared to receive at their hands an award for his achievement as the first aviator to fly over the North Pole.

President Coolidge and Secretary of the Navy Willbur were to present Byrd with the Hubbard Gold Medal, Floyd Bennett, who accompanied Byrd on the flight, will likewise receive a gold medal. The presentations were arranged by the National Geographic Society.

It was the improved type of sun compass presented to Byrd by Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the National Geographic Society, which guided the daring pilot on his successful flight to the Pole and back from Spitzbergen. It likewise enabled him to determine his exact location at the pole.

The Hubbard Gold Medal has been awarded to four other men, and only two other Americans. Commander Robert E. Peary received it in 1906 following his discovery of the Pole and General Gortals was given it in 1914 by President Wilson. The last medal was awarded in 1913 to Wiljalmar Stefansson, while Sir Ernest Shackleton was honored by its presentation in 1910.

Commander Byrd will tell of his exploit at a gathering tonight which will include the President and members of his cabinet, prominent scientists, government officials and fellow officers.

ACCEPTS PLACE IN CABINET TO SAVE HIS LAND

Will Share Power With Briand in Tenth Effort Organize Government

PARIS, June 23.—Joseph Caillaux, convicted of trafficking with the enemy during the war, and the man who last year failed in his efforts to fund the $4,002,000,000 French war debt to the United States, today accepted the job of preventing national bankruptcy.

Caillaux accepted the ministry of finance in Aristide Briand's proposed cabinet, after twice refusing to participate in the cabinet.

It is understood that Briand was prepared to admit defeat in his efforts to form a tenth cabinet, when Caillaux arrived at the foreign office for one more conference which the premier designated. "I want all of the power," Caillaux said, after accepting the premiership, "but I see no difficulty in sharing the power with Briand."

M. Briand called M. Caillaux for a conference. This might have been in relation to the ministry of finance, but even if he were offered that post M. Caillaux would refuse unless given entire governmental responsibility and support.

The ministry as tentatively formed is as follows:

Treasurer and foreign affairs, M. Briand; justice, M. Poincare; finance, M. Dymmer; war, M. Painleve; marine, M. Leygues; interior, M. Durand; colonies, M. Perrier; public works, M. Laval, agriculture, M. Binet; commerce, M. Chaumet; instruction, M. Colrat; and labor, M. Dami-Vincent.

HAUGEN BILL NOW FACES DEFEAT

WASHINGTON, June 23.—The Haugen farm relief bill, according to a poll of the senate farm bloc, will be passed or defeated by a margin of one or two votes. The farmer senator at conference today decided that if the bill passed they will move to hold up adjournment of congress until the house reconsiders the measure.

Senator Gooding, republican, Idaho, member of the farm bloc, said after the conference, "If we can swing two or three votes to our side, between now and tomorrow when the bill comes to a vote, we shall win."

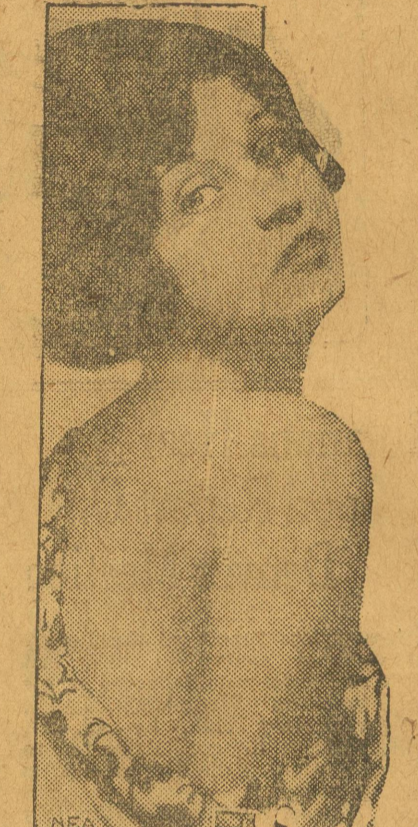

COSBY GETS GOOD WELL, DESDEMONA

A good showing of oil is reported from the T. N. T. No. 1, Cosby Oil & Gas company, seven miles south of Desdemona, when the well came in last night with a flow that filled up the hole. The amount of oil flowing at present has not been gauged and the company stated today that they would go down to the other sand at 3,115 feet.

MASKED RAIDERS BEAT MANAGER OF H. WURZBACH

SAN ANTONIO, June 23.—Two masked men stepped into the office of A. A. Luther, campaign manager of Representative Harry M. Wurzbach, and beat him into unconsciousness, late last night. This assault followed the meeting and action of the Bexar County Republican Executive Committee, at which Wurzbach was assessed $7,500 for the primary, three times the amount allowed him by law to spend.

The men demanded that Luther give them the records of the executive committee which were taken from Secretary W. K. Hanson, during the riot last Monday. Luther refused to open the safe where the records were kept.

Luther was revived, his head badly bruised and several cuts on his body. He said he was attacked by two masked men and pummeled into insensibility with a revolver and a milk bottle.

No Money Missing Considerable money lay in sight in his office safe which was open. Nothing had been disturbed or was missing.

The wounded man was alone in his office and did not notice any one enter, until confronted by the two men, one of whom he described as weighing about 200 pounds, the other considerably smaller.

Officers investigated and were told by nearby storekeepers that two men, thought to be negroes, were seen to enter the office a short time before the attack, and leave in a short time. Dr. Luther's office is on the street floor.

Dr. Luther was floor manager for the Wurzbach forces in the meeting Monday of the Bexar County Executive Committee and was the target for many verbal attacks, and received slight injuries in the fight that ensued.

A court fight to settle differences in the ranks of Bexar County Republicans is inevitable, Wurzbach said Tuesday night after A. R. Holzschuler, chairman of the county executive committee, called the body into a session and completed a schedule "interrupted" Monday when the committee requested the services of 14 officers to settle a riot.

RESOLUTIONS WILL TAKE UP TIME OF BODY

Next Convention City Will Be Selected At Session Held Tonight

AMARILLO, June 23.—With the selection of the 1927 convention city scheduled to be made at the special night session tonight, and the choice of a new manager expected at the meeting of the executive committee during the afternoon, the West Texas Chamber of Commerce visitors whiled away the forepart of the closing day with a program of pleasure.

Baseball, races and a barbecue put the convention host in a fine condition for the climax of the convention—choice of 1927 convention city. Dopesters today changed the line-up placing Wichita Falls and Lubbock as leading contestants for the next year's host.

It was pointed out that the balance of power lies in Fort Worth delegates who favor the northern towns over the "seniorita city."

The report of the resolutions committee and its findings will probably raise no issue, it was officially predicted. No definite action is demanded in any of the resolutions, except that pertaining to a special session of the legislature for enactment of road bond validation measures.

Homer D. Wade of Fort Worth is considered the most likely candidate to fill the place of manager of the Chamber of Commerce, recently resigned by Porter Whaley.

The post will probably be filled by the executive committee at the afternoon session today. High tribute was paid to potentialities of West Texas oil fields at a brief business session. W. S. Parish of Houston, president of the Humboldt Oil & Refining company, and A. P. Carrillo, consul-general of Mexico, pledged the efforts of the southern republic toward increasing friendship and relationship with the United States.

PROSSPEND HALF MILLION EVERY YEAR

WASHINGTON, June 23.—The National Anti-Saloon league now spends between $350,000 and $650,000 a year—an average of about one-half million dollars—to agitate prohibition, according to Wayne B. Wheeler, legislative agent of the league, told the senate primary investigating committee today. The funds were obtained by private subscription by various state organizations of the league.

Charges Against E. M. Dubose For Crimes Dismissed

SINTON, June 23.—After being held for two weeks on two charges, of conspiracy in connection with the murder and disappearance of Dr. J. A. Ramsey, E. M. Dubose was released Tuesday and the charges dismissed. No reasons were given.

Dubose is believed to be one of the principal witnesses for the state. At the examining trial of H. J. Leahy, Monday, Dubose was the only witness and only answered a few formal questions put to him by the county attorney, W. F. Vawter, who is conducting the case for the state.

No further clues as to the whereabouts of Dr. Ramsey had been uncovered, Sheriff Hunt announced.

THOUGHT FROM BIBLE
CONDITIONAL PROMISES—"If ye walk in my statutes, and keep my commandments, I will have respect unto you, and make you fruitful, and multiply you, and establish my covenant with you." Lev. 26:3, 9.
PRAYER—"What He says we will do; Where He sends we will go."

POLITICS AND POLITICIANS.
 Politics is the policy of the nation. Politicians are men and women who try to mold the policy of the nation, state, county and city. The great trouble with Texas as well as other states there are too many politicians. Statesmen are men who are skilled in public affairs and the art of government. Texas as well as the nation is badly in need of statesmen. Statesmen render service to their country, their state, their county and their city.

The difference between a statesman and a politician, one renders service to the commonwealth and is unselfish, while the other uses a public office to fill his pocket with graft money.

The past years have developed the need of business acumen in government. The proletariat is beginning to see the need of a business administration in the affairs of government. People are beginning to see the need of running a government like a big business is managed.

Texas is badly in need of a business administration. There is hardly a county in Texas, and hardly a city but that needs the guiding hand of a real business man at its head. Where business methods have been inaugurated, results have been obtained.

Texas is one of the richest states in the union and yet there is always a deficit somewhere. Texas school fund should be the largest in the union, if not the largest, one of the largest, and yet on the campus of its state institutions of higher education may be found shacks, and the average per capita scholastic less than it should be.

This year ought to be a good time for the voters of the state to select men for their business ability to handle the affairs of the government. There is too much waste in managing the government of Texas as well as the nation.

Efficiency of an officer should count. The efficient business man usually takes with him into that office the same spirit that he used in building up a business. This thing of John Jones being a good fellow ought not to count when John is up for office unless John can show that he is efficient.

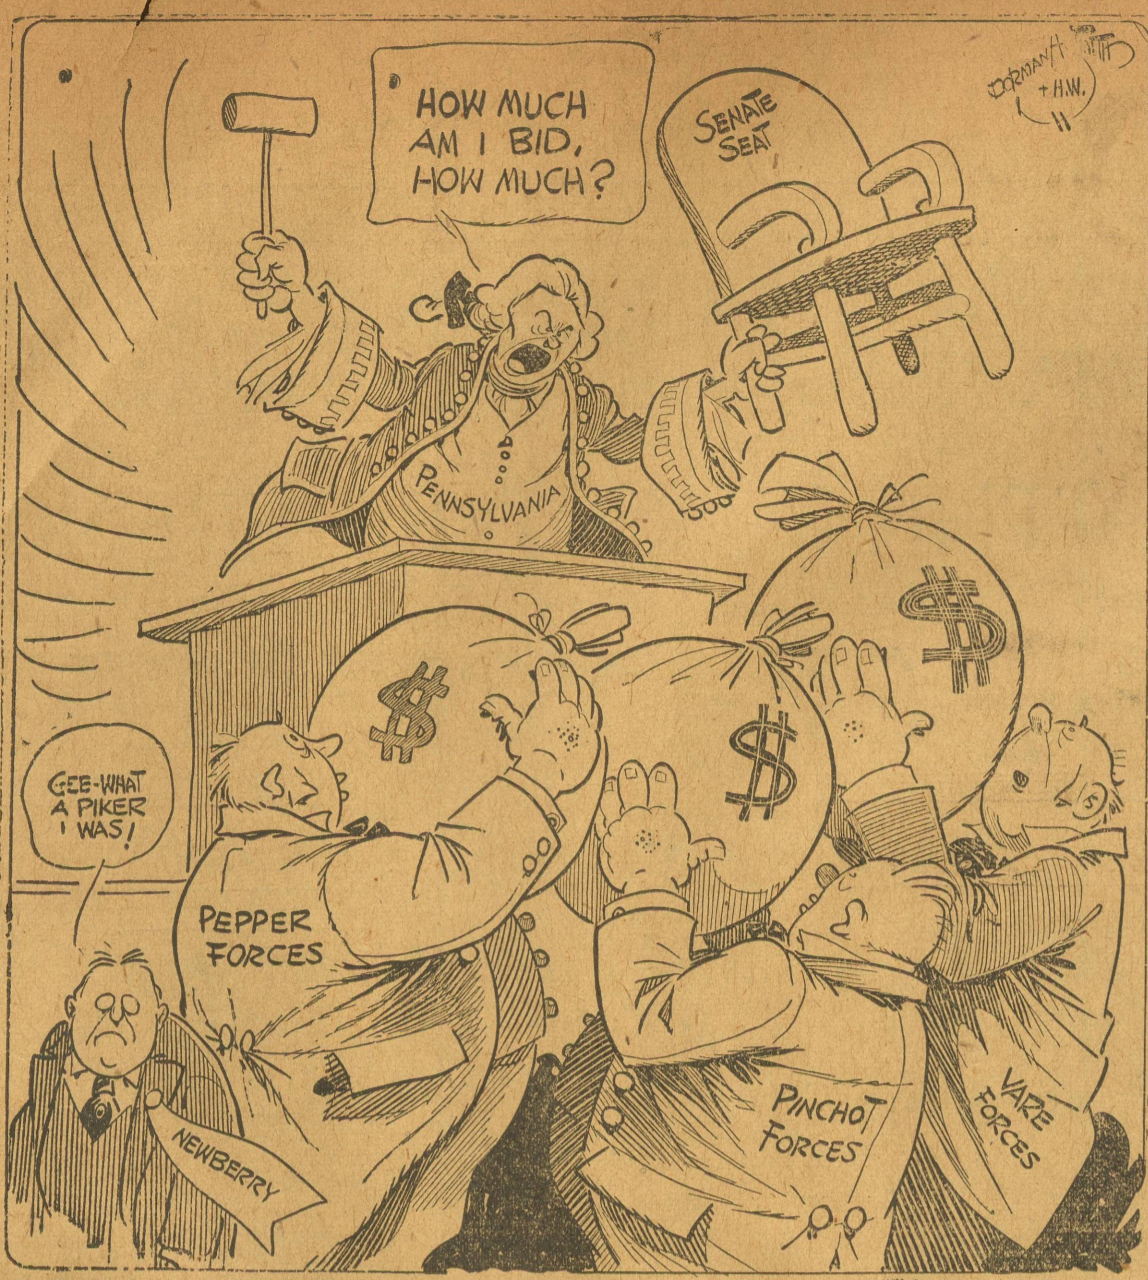

The budget system is an efficient one, and one that politicians steer clear of. The budget system has saved the national government large sums. The budget system where tried has proved good in city and county affairs. The budget system is an efficient system.

ARE YOU A DRONE OR A BUILDER.

There are usually three classes of citizens in every town, builders, drones and self satisfied folks. The builder is one who works from an unselfish viewpoint. The drone wants the other fellow to do the work while he reaps the benefit, and the third is the fellow that is satisfied and opposes progress.

What class do you belong to? Towns in the oil belt have come to the point where builders are needed. Opportunity is knocking at the door and seeks admission. The man who does more to injure his town than anything else is the selfish official that generally boosts the price of his property abnormally high as soon as he hears that an enterprise is seeking a location in the town. He may be a large property owner. He forgets that his making a sacrifice, if necessary, to get that enterprise here, will increase the value of his other holdings.

One town that was built on faith and by unselfish men is Wichita Falls. The oil belt towns need more men like R. Q. Lee, J. A. Kemp and Frank Kell, who do things and put the spirit of rendering service into the heart of the other fellow.

Rotarians Hear Good Report On Denver Meeting

A complete report of the Rotary international convention held last week at Denver was delivered at the noon luncheon Wednesday of the Ranger Rotary club, by W. W. Housewright, Ranger delegate to the convention. John Thurman, president, presided.

Mr. Housewright was particularly interested in the boys' movement, he said, and the following are some of his observations made by studying the boys engaged in assisting in the work of the organization at Denver. He advocated the organizing of such a body in Ranger and said:

"The first thing I said upon arriving in Denver, was to a Highlander boy. It was so impressed with these young boys from 9 to 13, dressed like army officers, stationed, it seemed, everywhere. I asked the first one I came to, 'Who are you, and what person or organization is sponsoring you?' I soon learned that Rotarian Mr. Olinger had organized these Highlander boys 10 years ago and now has 1,200 in the organization.

"These Highlander boys and something better than 2,000 Boy Scouts were stationed on the corners, in the convention halls, corridors, stadium, and in fact every place that a Rotarian might go—directing the visitors and furnishing information.

"If one of these boys caught your eye, he would salute and ask if there was any information he could furnish you, or something he could do for you.

Mr. Olinger was born and raised in Denver. When he was a boy, a business man took him into his confidence and was a big brother to him all through his boyhood days. When this man died, Mr. Olinger, realizing what a vital influence he had had over his life began the organization of the Highlanders."

It's a Cold World On Planet Mars, Say Scientists

By United Press.
LAWRENCE, Kan.—When we look at the planet Mars we see a dying world where the temperature at night at the equator is 348 degrees Fahrenheit below zero, according to Dr. Dinsmore Alter, head of the department of astronomy of the University of Kansas, here.

Although Dr. Alter does not say that life does not exist on Mars, the intense cold there is a factor against the presence of intelligent life.

At noon the temperature rises as high as 60 degrees above zero, he says. In his opinion the only possibility for the existence of life is a free-like, cold-blooded race of creatures who are able to freeze up at night and thaw out in the day and thus survive.

He says that at night on Mars the winter air at the poles freezes.

Wales Celebrates 32nd Birthday By Keeping Busy

LONDON, June 23.—The Prince of Wales reached the age of 32 today but paid scant attention to the event, being wholly absorbed in a round of official entertainments.

In the morning he received the customary bouquet of flowers from his staff at St. James' Palace and at noon he lunched with the King and Queen at Buckingham Palace—a custom scrupulously observed by the children of the Royal Family. Tonight, accompanied by Prince Henry and the Princess Ingrid of Sweden, he is expected to "look in" at a big dinner dance in Belgravia where he will probably get a big shower of confetti. In all other respects his birthday will pass like other days.

However, the Empire will celebrate with gusto. Flags were flown on all government buildings throughout the United Kingdom, the Dominions and the Colonies, and at noon sharp the royal salute of twenty-one guns boomed out at naval and military stations.

Strawberry shortcake certainly is the berries.

Women are strange. Even though one in New York was single and out of debt she tried to poison herself.

Hicks Discusses Drug Convention Held In Dallas

A drastic effort to combat the sale of liquor and other intoxicating drink through the medium of prescriptions was the principal matter taken up at the convention of the Texas Druggists Association in Dallas last week, according to J. L. Hicks, prior of the Hicks Drug Store, Ranger.

Mr. Hicks said that the subject of the sale of liquor in drug stores was taken up in an extremely hostile attitude, members claiming that this should be handled by the government who should establish places for the sale of liquor and have complete control.

The association also decided to outlaw "fake" and refuse to sell it, while it was also advocated that all drug stores be owned by competent pharmacists. Cleanliness in drug stores and the dispensing of medicine was also widely discussed, he said.

Mr. Hicks said that there was over 2,000 members and their wives present at the convention while members from adjoining states were also represented.

Mr. Hicks said that when a man went to a doctor for a liquor prescription he lied to get the drink, and when the doctor wrote the prescription he also lied, while the druggist who supply the stuff completed the farce in lying when he sold the liquor. The Ranger man was the only delegate from this district, and said that one of the best talks of the convention was made by state Senator, J. D. Farnell of Wichita Falls.

Sledge Houston Homicide Trial Opens In Belton

BELTON, Texas, June 23.—The introductory testimony in the trial of Sledge Houston for the slaying of Carrett White, at Summersville, last Friday was expected to get under way during this afternoon.

Only one juror remained to be chosen when the panel examination opened this afternoon.

The state's attorneys were confident that the outstanding juror would be secured from approximately a dozen remaining jurors. The jury had been in selection since last Monday.

Ranger Lions Put Eastland Denizens In Their Place

Ranger man eating Lions chewed up the Eastland denizens in their ball game played at Nitro park yesterday, when the final tally sheet read something like a billiard score, Ranger plastering the Eastlanders for 14 runs, while Eastland chalked up five.

In the two games previously played by the clubs, Eastland has come out victorious and strutted their stuff with their tails straight in the air, but after the game last night they went home with their tails between their legs, players said.

New Invention By Spaniard Conquers Air

By United Press.

SOUTHAMPTON, England, June 23.—Man's conquest of the air was advanced with the successful flight of a hybrid contraption, part helicopter and part airplane which in recent tests, took off from Hamble field here, sped through the air at 70 miles an hour and then descended almost vertically to come to a dead stop as it touched the ground.

The machine was an auto-gyro, the creation of the Spanish inventor, Ciervas. The pilot was Capt. Frank Courtney, R. A. F.

The test flights are so successful that proponents of the auto-gyro predicted that they would bring a new era in flying. Ciervas' machine was constructed by the air ministry, whose experts already have tested all known forms of the helicopter and found them unsuitable to the purpose for which they were designed. That purpose is the development of a heavier-than-air flying machine which can move rapidly in the air and whose landing speed can be so reduced that it can alight in a confined space.

Courtney first took the auto-gyro to a height of 200 feet, completed a series of turns and descended almost vertically. The auto-gyro ran only five feet along the ground before it stopped. The landing speed was eight feet a second. On the second test the auto-gyro stopped as it touched the ground.

The pilot said the machine behaved perfectly in the air and that it was easier to handle than an airplane.

An auto-gyro looks like an airplane with the addition of a horizontal windmill above the wings.

French Now Bow To New Idols of The Sport World

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Sports Editor)
PARIS.—France used to have two great idols of sport—Georges Carpentier, war hero and the heavy-weight fighting champion of Europe and Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen, the world's woman tennis champion.

Now there is only one name the mention of which draws a salute on the boulevards, in the public drinking places or within the home and that is—Bere Lacoste, the young tennis player.

Jean Borotra, who swept over the American indoor tennis courts last winter with Lacoste is very popular but the French tennis critics feel that Borotra is in his prime now and that young Lacoste has the future before him and the hopes of restoring so much of the prestige that France lost through Carpentier and Mlle. Lenglen.

The French people feel, if the opinion of very many responsible sports coverers can be taken as an indication of public sentiment, that both Carpentier and Mlle. Lenglen have put selfish and commercial purposes above national allegiance.

Same Old Chick

Here's the famous Chick Evans, who has won so many golfing medals he doesn't know what to do with them, as he appeared the other day upon returning to this country from England, where he competed in the British amateur championship. Evans failed to show his usual brand of golf, going out in one of the early rounds, but it didn't prevent him from flashing his famous Evans smile when this picture was taken.

champion now Francis Charles, and he is terrible compared to any number of second-class American heavyweights, but he is the toast of Paris instead of Carpentier. Carpentier probably could beat him with a couple of punches, but Carpentier will not fight in Paris or in London because the promoters in both cities, who are fortunate to get top prices of five or six dollars cannot pay the purses that Tex Rickard would give him for fighting in New York. And therein lies the reason for the loss of his popularity.

Taxi drivers, waiters in the restaurants, passengers in the wild driven buses and the zendarmes will tell you that Carpentier sold national honor for cash when he fought Jack Dempsey in Jersey City. They were of different mind before that memorable fight, it will be recalled, but they will tell you now that Carpentier knew he was too light for Dempsey, that he never felt he had a chance and that he dropped into the resin of the ring, with the color of France around his belt, only to get the francs that might settle all their troubles. They have been running benefit fights in Paris to restore the value of the franc and they ask—"Where is Carpentier now? Now here, helping the benefits but in New York fighting for plenty dollars."

on national popularity when she refused to play with the French team in the Olympic matches in 1924. The French teams in the other branches of Olympic sports were granted only a small chance for first honors and they didn't surprise but the French people counted the tennis championship as cinched and they get accordingly. But Suzanne refused to play and the American team scored a clean sweep.

Just recently Mlle. Lenglen refused again to play on the French team against the Americans in the international team matches. She said her physical condition was such that she could play only in the French national championships and the British championships at Wimbledon.

French tennis critics, with but one exception, charge that in adopting that schedule, Mlle. Lenglen was playing only to defend a championship that may be—and mostly likely is—of commercial asset to her.

The French people take pride, of course, in the possession of a tennis artist, but they feel that she ought to risk her reputation for France and they speak more kindly of Helen Will, who toured France and Italy all winter meeting any comers.

NEIGHBORS' WIVES

BEGIN HERE TODAY

John and Fay Milburn buy a home of their own shortly after their baby girl is born and the advertising agency in which John is partner and copy writer lands a new contract.

John, in love with his wife, but a romantic individual, is fascinated on meeting Nell Orme, of whom Pat Forbes, a friend of his, hints that she is having trouble with her husband.

Noel and Vera Boyd, a young married couple, give a party and Vera shows an interest in John which doesn't return, but which arouses Fay's jealousy. Noel Boyd later boasts of an arrangement with Vera whereby each leaves the other to do as he pleases.

Fay, with the baby, visits her parents, and during her absence John runs around with Pat Forbes, whose wild tendencies have aroused the suspicious of his wife.

Word begins to go around that John is being indiscreet. Nathaniel Graham, his partner, takes him to task for it, and John resorts to it.

John carries on a short but violent flirtation with Eleanor Mason, and drops her.

Paul Davidson, a lawyer and amateur actor, finds himself involved with a girl named Rita Johns and asks John to break it up. John reluctantly agrees, and is successful, but he learns from her something of the vindictiveness of thwarted women, for she lies about him to Davidson and only a sense of humor saves the two friends from becoming enemies.

Fay returns, and John, although a little worried about how she is going to take it, decides to tell her about some of his actions while she was away.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
(The names and situations in the story are fictitious.)

"You see," Fay laughed, "you'll have to get acquainted with her all over again. She'll be all right, though, in a few hours. I don't believe she slept very well on the train."

"Well," said John as he was driving them home, "did you miss me?"

For answer, Fay bent toward him and kissed his cheek. "You know I did, dear. The last few weeks dragged miserably. I was terribly homesick for you."

They chatted the rest of the way home, about their families, and Fay wanted to know what condition the house was in.

"First-rate," John answered. "I had a woman in Friday and Saturday cleaning up. It's as clean as a pin. You see, dear, I'm a model husband. No need to worry about me."

"I'll know better," said Fay, "when I see the house. What kind of time did you have while I was away?"

"Perfectly rotten, for the most part—I missed you so. I worked hard, and Pat Forbes and I got together and shared our misery for a while—but gosh! I'm glad to see you back again."

"I must order the marketing as soon as I get home," Fay said, relapsing into the familiar domestic routine. "Did you leave the order for the milk?"

"Yes, it was there on the doorstep when I got up. I put it in the ice box." He applied the brakes and the little car came to a jolting stop. "All out, he cried, "you're home again, Fay."

"Come here to me," he ordered when the front door had closed behind them, and he held out his arms. She walked into his embrace, and he held her that way for a long time.

"Still love me?" he asked.

"Still love me?" he asked.

"You know I do," she answered, holding him tightly.

"Well then, I guess I can go back to the office."

When John had gone, Fay began to busy herself with the details of ordering groceries and meats and of picking up the other threads of housekeeping where she had left off. It was work, this business of running a household, but work that is quiet, home-loving Fay enjoyed.

She fed Judith and put her to bed, and when that young lady's nap was over Fay dressed her in her rompers and put her in the back yard sand-pit to play. She went through the house, casting a critical eye on furniture and woodwork for traces of dust, and smiled her satisfaction when she found none.

It was good, she thought, to be back with John, and to have his arms around her once more, and to feel his lips on hers. She was utterly contented.

Fay often had, very honestly, accused herself for finding fault with John and had sought to find the reason. It was not, she told herself, because she did not love him with all her heart, for she adored him completely, and her whole life was wrapped up in him and Judith.

Why, then, was it that John often complained that she picked quarrels with him? Because, she told herself, it was Fay's nature to be maternal, partly because John, boyish as he was, was the kind to bring out that very feminine trait in his wife. John needed to be mothered, and Fay knew it.

But if Fay gave unsparingly of her love, she demanded full measure in return. John often twitted her about her jealousy when she reproved him for showing some marked attention to another girl, but John was wrong—it was not jealousy. Rather it was that Fay, who had been brought up to regard marriage as something sacred and wonderful, demanded from her mate that he adhere as strictly and unyieldingly to his bargain as she did.

As she had told John once, in a fit of anger, "If I wanted to, I could flirt, too. I'm not exactly homely, you know. How would you like me to go around casting sheep's eyes at every good-looking man I meet?"

"John, were you really drunk? You know I think that's disgusting."

John had laughed. "Fay, you amuse me. If you feel like flouting, help yourself. But dear, you talk as if I were a little boy. Here we are married, and I love you with all my heart—I swear it. I'm not particularly interested in other women—really, Fay. It's just that I don't believe it's necessary to put on monastic robes to warn off other women that I'm married. See what I mean?"

"No, I don't," she said, tossing her head. And she didn't, either, didn't see his viewpoint at all.

"I sometimes wish," he said, "that we were inclined to be flirtatious, I'd bet I'd bet a little more tolerant than you are."

Fay smiled reminiscently as she recalled that conversation. It had been one of their bitterest quarrels, and for days she had stown him that she was still angry with him.

But now that she was back with him once more she thought only of one thing—of how much she loved him, and the memories of little misdemeanors on John's part seemed only to make him a little dearer to her. Strange—but true.

It was only fair to Fay, John was thinking as he drove home from the office, to tell Fay about some of the things that had happened during her absence. Besides—and here he was troubled a little that something else besides honesty might be prompting his frankness—someone, else might tell her first, and then she would be likely to misunderstand.

And so he decided to tell her first about seeing Dorothy Francis, and the decision was worrying him as she met him at the door with a clinging kiss.

CHAPTER XXXIII

Fay noticed that he seemed a little preoccupied during dinner and asked him what was worrying him.

"Nothing," John told her, and forced a cheerful smile. "Just busy, I guess."

"How are things coming along at the office, dear? You know, you never told me much about the business in your letters."

He shrugged. "About as well as you could expect, I guess. We've got another artist to give Briggs a lift."

"And Nat Graham? How is he these days?"

John frowned. "I don't know what's getting the matter with Nat. Doggins, it, he seems to get sourer every day. I sometimes think he's miscast as an advertising man. Not that he isn't a good one—but he would fit in much better, I believe, as a censor of public morals, or an agitator for the suppression of smoking, drinking and kindred vices."

"John, you mustn't talk that way about Nat Graham. After all, you are partners, you know."

have done it for worlds."

"I was so happy just a little while ago," she sobbed with a little catch in her voice, "and now you're spoiled it all. It meant so much to come back to you, and now you tell me—I shouldn't go on."

This was terribly disarming, John thought, far worse than being quarreled with.

"Let me explain," he said. "It will take a lot of understanding on your part to get me right on this, but I think you're capable of doing it. Kissing Dorothy Francis, Fay, wasn't cheating. You know Dot was a college sweetheart of mine—you've haven't you?—and somehow—oh, hang it, I can't say what I want to say at all. You remember how lonely we were both at Christmas, don't you? How we seemed to long for the old carefree days of childhood that can't return? Well, seeing Dorothy was just like bringing back the old carefree student days. And it was melancholy, Fay, melancholy as the devil. That's why I kissed her. That's all the justification I have for it, but somehow it was just like shaking her hand, for all of there was behind it."

He took her face in his hands and gently but firmly pulled her head around to face him. Then he kissed her on the lips, kissed the tears from her eyes.

"Come, Fay," he said, "can't you understand?"

"It isn't understanding you want," she answered him with some bitterness. "You've always asking me to overlook this and disregard that as being of no consequence. You're always wanting to be forgiven."

"Not forgiven, exactly," he said a little sharply. "Not until I've sinned, at least. I want to ask you this—do you think I'd have come out and told you about kissing Dorothy Francis if I had thought it was something to be ashamed of?"

"I don't know," she answered dutifully. "Sometimes I don't know what to think of you at all."

He grinned, like a schoolboy who has been caught at some prank, and Fay again felt the impulse to mother him, and relented.

But that night as he lay beside her he was forced to confess to himself that he had not been as honest with her as he had pretended to be. "Confound it, though," he thought, "how can I tell her about Eleanor and the other things if she feels this way about Dorothy? She'd have a fit if I told her I had kissed Eleanor Mason."

He thought of something that Fay had said to him just before going to bed.

"Suppose," she had asked, "I had fallen in with an old flame when I was back home, and I had kissed him. How would you feel about it?"

And looking at her seriously he had answered, in all honesty: "If would be all right, Fay. If you did such a thing I'd know it would have to be all right."

He felt that he understood something of Fay's attitude. She was so honest and above board that he knew he could trust her implicitly. But he knew, also, that Fay was never quite sure about him, and it was that that was troubling her.

Sleep was long in coming to his troubled mind. He felt that by telling Fay nothing of his escapades he would be doing the saner thing. It would be so hard for her to understand and it would make her so unhappy.

Finally he rapped off, his last waking thought a recollection of what he had told Nat Graham about not having done anything that he would be ashamed to tell Fay.

But she quickly recovered.

"John," she asked, "were you really drunk? You know I think that's disgusting."

"Drunk? No. There's a difference between being dead drunk and being hilarious. Pat Forbes and I had been drinking some of Paul Davidson's very excellent Holland gin. When we got home I paused on the front lawn long enough to impress Pat with the virtues of that particular brand."

In spite of herself, Fay again found herself laughing, and John suddenly exploded.

"Damn Old Lady Blodgett!" he cried, smacking his fist on the table. "What did she tell you? Ten to one, she exaggerated it."

But Fay, eyeing him a little wistfully, said, "John, do be careful—please. I'm afraid, John, afraid."

"Afraid of what?" he asked, alarmed at her tone. But she did not answer.

TERRIBLE PAIN

Alabama Lady Tells How She Obtained Relief by Taking Cardui. Feels Fine and Enjoys Life Now, She Says.

Talladega, Ala.—Mrs. Mary Hardy, 406 Henderson Avenue, this city, says that seven years ago she "got down sick" and was unable to attend to her household.

"I have never been so weak before or since," she says. "I had a terrible pain in my side—so sore in my side and the lower part of my body."

"Across my back ached, and I was so nervous I couldn't stand up. I had just about given up when some one who came to see me began talking about Cardui. This caused me to get it. I took about two bottles before I saw much improvement."

"After this, though, I picked up right away. I slept better at night. I was hungry, enjoyed my food, which I hadn't done for some time."

"The pain and soreness gradually left my side. I regained my strength. I took about six bottles and left off for awhile, then took two or three more. . . I feel just fine, enjoy life and can work now, too."

LOU TELLEGEN REACHES HEIGHT IN "THE OUTSIDER"

Lou Tellegen, who has made an enviable reputation for himself since signing a long-term contract to appear in Fox Film productions, does some of the finest work of his remarkable career in "The Outsider," Rowland V. Lee's screen version of the legitimate stage success, by that name which is at the Lamb today only. The all-star cast includes Jacqueline Logan, Walter Pidgeon, Louis Payne and others. Tellegen, noted for his subtle villainy in Lee's dramatic novel of Joseph Conrad's famous work "Nostromo," has a kindred part in John Ford's Fox film production, "3 Bad Men." In these super-productions Eleanor Duse's former co-worker proved beyond question his mastery of repression, but in "The Outsider" he is believed to have eclipsed all previous efforts.

Washington Looms Up As Winner Of Rowing Regatta

By United Press. SEATTLE, June 23.—As the annual American rowing classic—the Poughkeepsie Regatta—approaches, the influence of the University of Washington school of rowing in the world of sports is becoming more apparent.

In the first place, the present Washington varsity is looked upon as one of the best prospects to win on the Hudson, June 28. The Washington crew won in 1923 and 1924, came in a close second to the Navy in 1925, and now "Rusty" Callow's men are threatening to take this year's race.

But that is only one angle of the University of Washington influence which has leavened the rowing game. It was almost two decades ago that Hiram Conibear undertook to turn out a winning crew at Washington. He decided that there was a fundamental improvement to be made in rowing style, and he created a longer and more powerful stroke.

It took years for this stroke to be recognized, and Conibear died long before the full results of his creative work could be realized. But now the Conibear stroke or adaptations of it are being used at a number of the leading rowing institutions of the country.

It is significant today that crews at Yale, Pennsylvania, California, Princeton, Navy and Washington are being drilled by former Washington oarsmen.

It is believed here that Ed Stevens, who recently resigned at Harvard, may be succeeded by a coach who got his early training at Washington.

Callow himself has been sought by Harvard, but the Washington mentor indicated before he left for the east with his crew that he would not go to the Crimson.

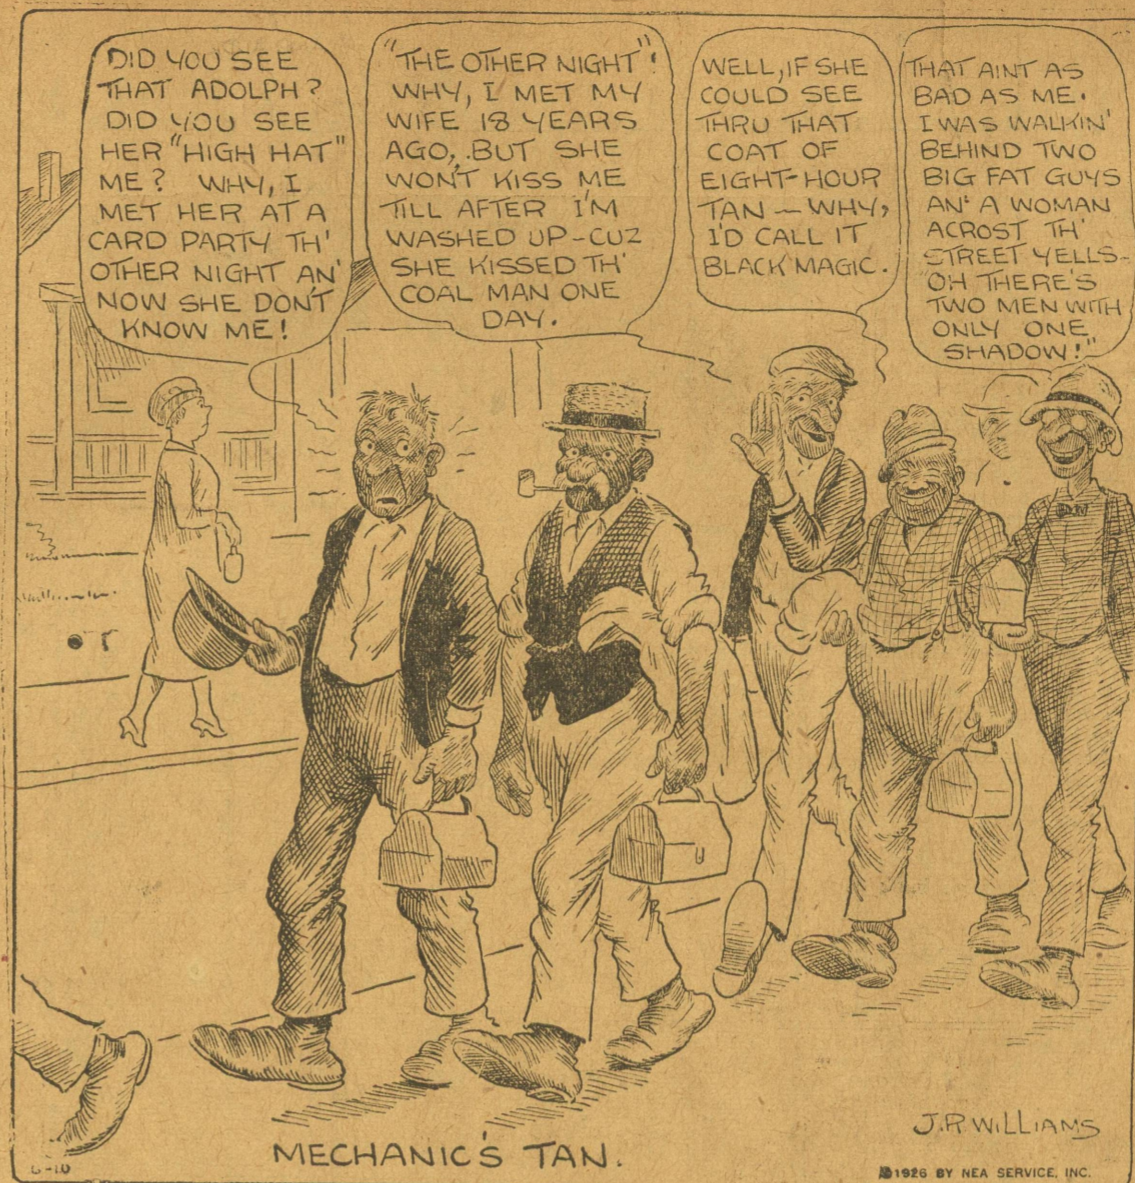

There may be some other switches in the coaching personnel over the country in this sport. Mike Murphy, freshman rowing coach at Yale, and Russ Nagler, California freshman coach, are among other former Washington oarsmen and coxswains who are expected to climb to high places in the coaching game soon.

The old professional school of rowing is giving way to the newer Washington system, the merits of which are coming up for another test at Poughkeepsie.

Hungary Leads World In Suicides, Records Show

By United Press. BUDAPEST.—Hungary leads the world in suicides. Although the total population of the country is less than eight million, 2,313 persons killed themselves during the past year.

THE FOLKS BACK HOME

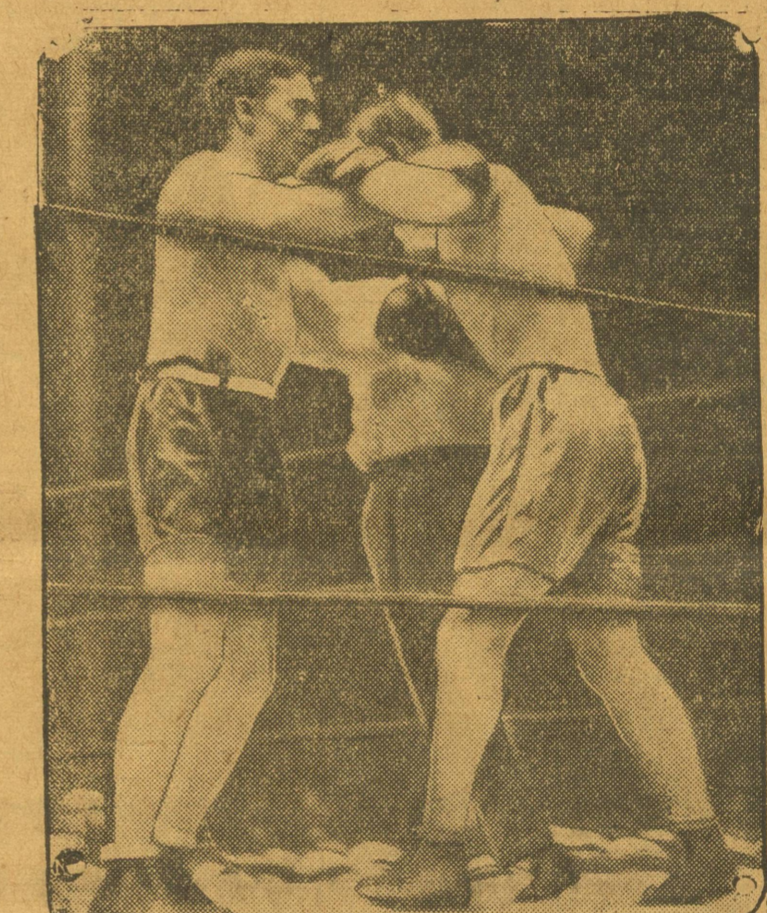

The figure for the next twelve months promises to be even greater. Despite every effort on the part of "anti-self-murder" societies and even greater preventative work on the part of the police to drag suicide candidates from the Danube the number of self-inflicted deaths is increasing each week.

Among the latest suicides was Eugene Balla, chief of the police statistical bureau, which keeps the records of suicide cases. He used the method most popular with his fellow-suicides. Avoiding the watchful eye of the bridge policeman, whose job it is to hinder such acts, Balla jumped into the Danube from the Margaret Bridge, one of the principal connecting links between the twin cities of Buda and Pest.

Modern Dress Is Condemned By Former Indian

LONDON, June 2.—The liberty accorded the modern English woman, short skirts and the "society butterfly" were denounced by the Begum of Bhopal, formerly only woman ruler in India, in an interview granted here on the eve of her departure for her native land.

The Begum recently came to England to secure the recognition of the British government of the right of her only surviving son to succeed her as ruler in preference to the heirs of her deceased elder sons. The government recognized the proposed order of succession and the Begum immediately abdicated in her son's favor.

"I consider that English women should not have so much liberty, and I do not approve of the very short skirts they wear," she declared.

"According to my religion, woman was born of man, as Eve was born of Adam, and therefore I consider it a mistake for modern women to strive to occupy the role of man. I think they should cultivate a more womanly spirit and in their fight for freedom should not become mannish in either speech or manners.

Referring to the "society butterfly," she said, "Every woman should have a definite occupation to keep her from frittering away her time in silly pursuits and pleasures. No matter how rich a woman may be, she ought to be able to support herself

Byrd Predicts Airplane Line To North Pole

By United Press. NEW YORK, June 23.—An airship line between Spitzbergen and Alaska, via the north pole, within the next 30 years was predicted by Lt. Commander Richard Byrd, who with Floyd Bennett, his pilot, arrived after their successful flight to the top of the earth.

Byrd said the success of such a service would depend largely on the development of the multi-motor airplane.

Fresh OIL
Every 500 MILES Means LONG LIFE for Your Motor

Every manufacturer of automobiles stresses the need for frequent changing of the motor oil in the crank case.

Even the best oil suffers from "Crankcase dilution", and should be periodically replaced with fresh oil. Experience has shown that draining and refilling it with high-grade motor oil of the right consistency, every 500 miles, pays handsome dividends in better motor performance, fewer repair bills and part replacements, and longer service life for the motor.

There is a Humble Dealer near you. Let him drain and refill your crank case with Humble Motor Oil, regularly—every 500 miles.

Terrapin Farm Proves Profitable In Old England

LONDON, June 23.—A terrapin farm, covering 15 acres of marshy lands in Kent, the only preservation of its kind in Europe, has been established by one of London's largest hotels in the hope of introducing terrapins as a common dish.

The original consignment of 200 was shipped from the United States in large vats of water more than two years ago and for a time the terrapins were kept with the live fish at the hotel. Apparently disgusted however, with their transfer from their favorite mud of Maryland swamps, they waged a vigorous campaign against their isolation by killing all of the live trout in the hotel tanks.

To meet the aristocratic tastes of the immigrants, the hotel authorities searched the British Isles for a suitable place to house their guests and finally one was found in the swamps of Kent.

The colony prospered in its new environment and has grown to 2,000 requiring the service of 20 men to care for them.

Viennese Girls Are Learning How To Earn Living

VIENNA.—Viennese girls are fast learning how to become useful members of society. Not satisfied with their century-old reputation for unrivaled beauty and charm, they are not reaching out for laurels in the business and industrial world.

More than half of the women of this city between the ages of 18 and 45 are earning their own livelihood; and some are supporting or helping to support their families.

The census taker discovered that there are now 753,000 women in Vienna over 14 years of age. Of this number 369,000 are engaged in gainful occupations.

Although the total male and female population of Vienna is 10 per cent less than before the war the actual number of women employed in banks has quadrupled. The number in the railway service has tripled; while in the post, telegraph, telephone, and insurance offices the number has doubled.

They are doing some good work here and having conversions and additions to the church. The meeting is being held in the open air with plenty of light and parking space for your cars. Navarro Opens Eastland Office For This Section

The Navarro Oil company of which S. P. Farish is president and whose headquarters are in Houston, has opened offices in Eastland from which operations in this section will be directed. R. L. McClaren and C. H. Stewart, both experienced oil operators, have charge of the Eastland office.

The Navarro Oil company, until recently, has confined its operations to the gulf coast regions, but it is now developing holdings it has acquired in the southern portion of Eastland county, and is drilling on the L. N. Clarke lease just a short distance east of Rising Star.

While they have been in Eastland only a few days, having moved their office here from Cisco, Mr. Stewart and Mrs. McClaren have made many friends by their genial personalities and the business like manner in which they conduct their business affairs. Their office is located on the fourth floor of the Exchange National bank building.

Eastland Elks Will Celebrate In New Home

Eastland Elks will celebrate the opening of their new home on South Seaman street with a dance this evening to which all Elks and their invited guests from Ranger, Breckenridge, Cisco, Gorman, Rising Star and other neighboring towns to the number of 500 have been extended invitations. Dancing will begin at 9 o'clock and the noted Jack Gardner orchestra of Dallas will furnish the music. R. B. Goodman is exalted ruler and Jack Gillespie is secretary of the Eastland lodge, which fact guarantees an evening replete with high class entertainment for all.

Exalted Ruler Goodman stated that many were under the impression that the dance this evening marked the formal opening of the lodge's home, but such is not the case. On the other hand it is merely the first dance the club has ever held in its new home, which has just been refurnished, the floor being in perfect condition for dancing. This evening's dance, Mr. Goodman stated, will be followed by a "Fourth of July German" the program for which will begin at 12 o'clock Sunday night, July 4, and continue just as long as there are those who wish to dance.

The balcony of the club building will be a vantage point from which those who do not care to dance, may watch the dancing and listen to the music.

Bob Edwards Is Recovering From Sickness Attack

Sheriff Bob Edwards who was taken sick Monday night at Eastland returned to his office this morning but left soon afterwards for his home again. The sheriff has not fully recovered and his zeal for work brought him out today. He is recovering slowly and stated that in a few days he will be about again.

Good gasoline is essential to freedom from engine repairs. A large percentage of gasoline sold today is a blend of naphtha and casinghead gasoline, a fuel distilled from natural gas. The naphtha content does not burn as it should and so leaps past the rings to dilute the oil in the engine. The owner of a car using such cheap gas runs the same risk as he would if he bought the lowest grade of lubricating oil.
