

MAN WHO FORGOT TO FACE JURY ON MURDER CHARGE

Prominent Oregon Dentist Accused of Killing Man and Changing Clothes.

By United Press

ROSEBURG, Ore., Oct. 5.—Roseburg's own tragic drama of Dr. Jekyl, suspected as Mr. Hyde, will approach its denouement here tomorrow when Richard Melvin Brumfield, once a popular dentist here, is scheduled to go on trial to answer charges, implicating him as the murderer of Dennis Russell, hermit laborer, the night of July 13.

Brumfield came to Roseburg from Indiana, settled down as one of the city's leading dentists, and made for himself an enviable niche as a social lion. He married. For some years matters went smoothly for the Brumfield family. Then it seemed as if all the four-leaf clovers on his ranch just outside the city died all at once. His house burned down. Later the new home he built also burned. In each case he had insurance to cover, or nearly to cover the loss.

Carried Big Load.

Then he bought additional land, heaped added financial burdens upon himself until the citizens of Roseburg began to regard him as a man who had the iron nerve to play the game quietly, calmly, for large stakes. He was carrying a big load.

He continued to mingle with the life of the town. He was the leading exponent of the arts, was well read, well versed in the lore of poetry, music and literature.

Then one night wayfarers discovered Brumfield's car aflame at the foot of a steep embankment. Aid was summoned, and there, beneath the car, they found a body wearing Brumfield's ring, his cravat pin, with his keys hanging in the automobile ignition lock, but with the head blown off the body, apparently with dynamite. Sticks of dynamite were found in the car. Search started for Dennis Russell as the murderer of "good ole Doc Brumfield."

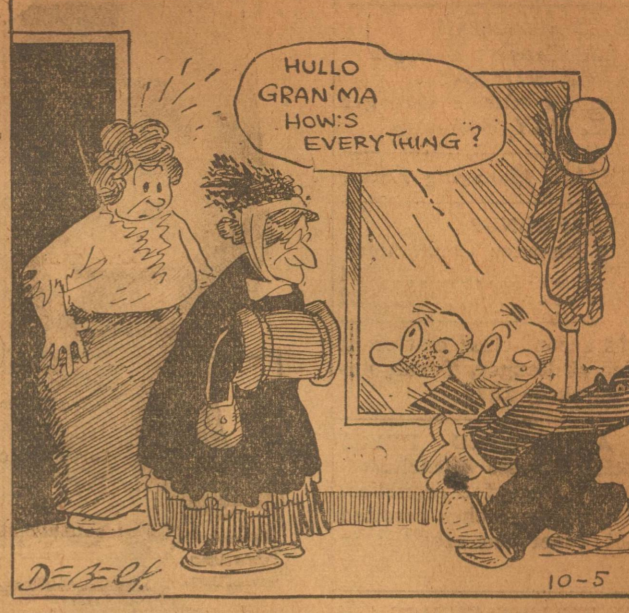

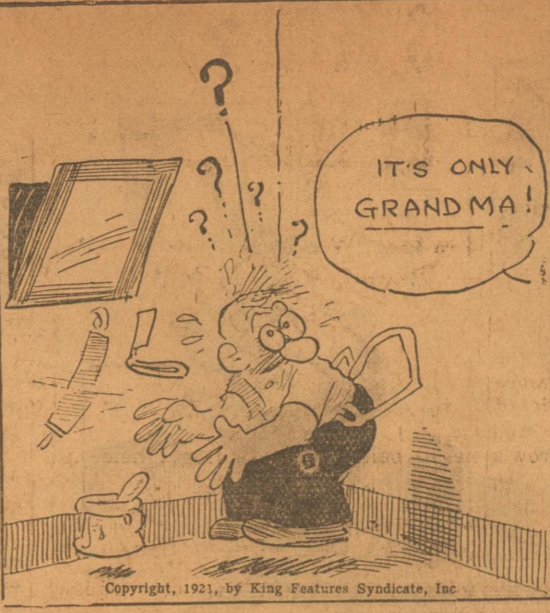

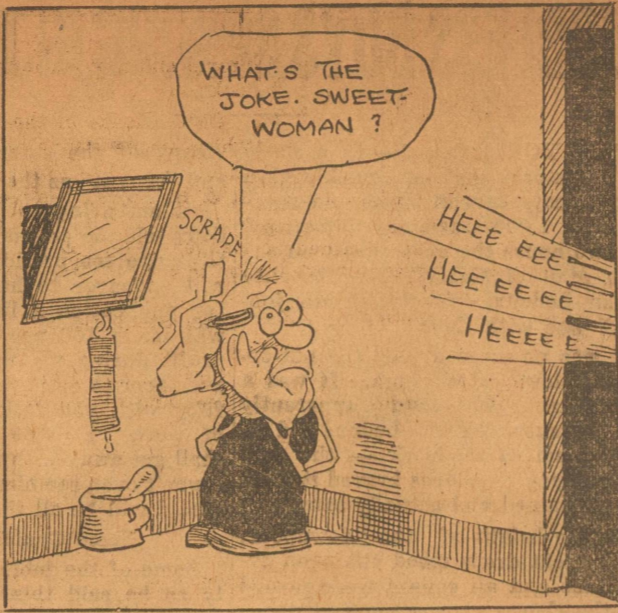

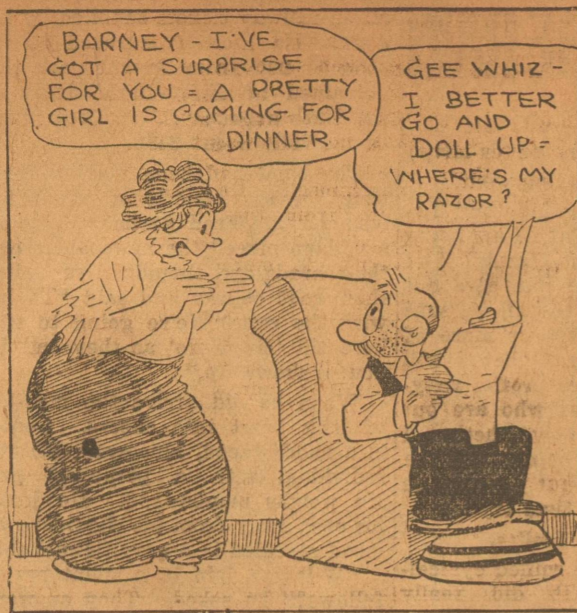

Divided on Identity. Almost everybody agreed it was the Doc's corpse, but some began to doubt. An inquest was held. The town divided. Some said the body was Brumfield's, others said it was Russell's. Men came forward who said they had seen the two together the night of the murder, had heard gun shots, had seen Brumfield bundling something that looked like a corpse into his automobile. The corpse was clothed in Russell's rough working clothes. Russell's letters were found in the pocket. The coroner decided the body was that of Russell, they began hunting for Brumfield. A reward of $2,000 was offered.

The "Doc" was found in Calgary, Alberta, Canada, and was brought back here to face trial. He was indicted. But he couldn't remember. He might have committed the murder; if the officers said so, there must be something to it. On the other hand, it seemed to him that had he killed a man he should feel some remorse. He felt none, he said.

Amnesia Victim.

He just "couldn't remember," Brumfield confessed to having had attacks of amnesia at recurrent intervals during his life, and they had proved embarrassing. And he could not explain why he had shipped a box of feminine "pretties" to himself at Seattle, under the name "Norman Whitney," the alias he assumed while working on an Alberta farm prior to his arrest.

But the authorities say his financial condition when he left Roseburg indicates an entirely different story. They claim he was in debt to a sum exceeding $25,000, and that he was insured for over $31,000. They discovered, they say, that he had borrowed every dime he could get, had mortgaged his real property to the limit, and had drawn his bank balance down to the last dollar. They say he attempted to pose as a corpse so that the insurance money would be paid to his wife and his creditors would be satisfied. He himself, they say was weary of the grind and wanted freedom from care.

OFFICIOUS FRIEND SPOILS SECRET SUICIDE

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Oct. 5.—Her wishes for secret death were defeated when a salesman, Rodney J. Hoyer, of Toledo, identified Harriet Gates, 22 years old, also of Toledo, as the young woman who ended her life when in a hotel here Sunday.

She had drunk poison. No reason is known other than despondency. The young woman came here and registered as Gladys Cook, of Springfield. She wore new and expensive clothes from which all identification marks had been removed.

Hoyer, reading of the tragedy, concluded the description fitted his acquaintance and came here from Springfield to investigate. He readily identified the body at the morgue. The body will be buried by her family in Toledo.

JACKSON, Miss., Oct. 5.—Henry Martin, negro, convicted of murder, whose death sentence is pending on appeal before the supreme court, is making frantic appeals to Sheriff L. B. Williams to come and "hang me right away."

"I can't stand it any longer," Martin told the sheriff today. "This suspense is killing me. Let's forget about the courts and have it over with."

It would be difficult to imagine a more difficult role for a hero than that of a waiter. People just naturally don't connect waiters and romance together. Yet Conway Tearle in "Society Snobs," the latest Selznick picture now showing at the Manhattan theatre, invests even this menial characterization with real personality.

The foibles and absurdities of society are pictured by the merciless pen of Lewis Allen Browne, who has a particularly happy faculty of driving right to the heart of things. The dangers to which ambitious mothers heedlessly expose their daughters are vividly set forth. Gorgeous settings are plentiful and it is easily seen that no expense was spared in making the picture in every respect a true mirror of society as it is among the extravagant members of the idle nouveau riche. Conway Tearle as Lorenzo Carilo, a young Italian of good birth who has been forced to take a position as

We wish to advise Mr. A. R., representing Mr. Harold Lloyd that there never was a production made that was too much for us to give the fans if that production in our estimation warranted it. LEDOUX'S MAGIC KEEPS THOUSAND JOBLESS BOYS SINGING IN THE RAIN

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—In a slashing rainstorm that cut quickly through cotton coats, muslin shirts and shoddy caps, 1,000 unemployed men sat for two hours the other night on the open Mall of Central park because Urban Ledoux, "friend of the jobless," was with them. It was no mere drizzle the out-of-work fellows sat through. It was a downpour. But—and apparently just because the man Ledoux had invited them to the park—the men without pay envelopes braved it, never complained and actually sang. At the height of the downpour, when great drops stood out upon every face and all clothes were turned up, the cherry chorus sounded up: "Pack up your troubles In your old kit bag And smile—smile—smile!" They had plenty of troubles, these chaps in the rain. And probably they didn't have a kit bag among them. But there they were and there they stayed. And they smiled. Ledoux influenced them as no man (to the reporter's observed mind) has influenced men hereabouts since Billy Sunday at his best. They were orderly, cheerfully and above all else, game. Their belief in Ledoux was extraordinary. They didn't know just exactly what he was going to do for them, but they were with him, heart and souls. An Odd Spectacle. If it had been a decent night there is no telling how many unemployed would have turned out at the park meeting. But 1,000 in a downpour made one of the oddest spectacles the park ever provided a background for. The meeting was staged about the bandstand on the Mall, with permission from Francis D. Gallatin, of the park commission. Dry and comfortable, Frederick Watson's band played. Harry Barnhart, song leader of note, inspired the choruses. He too was under roof. But Ledoux—the man who got himself into print recently chiefly because he had a "slave sale" of jobless in Boston—stayed out in the rain with the rest of the lads (many of the ex-army or ex-navy) and "took it" as the saying went. "I am going to Washington," Ledoux told the crowd, "and I am going to try to see president Harding." I will endeavor to have him give out for publication a list of all persons who made 100 per cent or more of profit during the war. Then I will ask them to split these profits fifty-fifty with you fellows who are out of work. I don't know whether I shall get away with it or not. Maybe I won't even see him; but you may be sure I will be all the time trying. Some Cynical Smiles. Some of the jobless smiled cynically as he said this. It did really sound like a hopeless proposition. But the majority of the men seemed to think Ledoux would do what he said he would do and get away with his project. Ledoux had thought of the scheme of going to Washington with a fleet of motor lorries and taking a couple of hundred unemployed with him, but he gave that up. From time to time he will gather around him at the capital men without work and will try to show them to the president. He said he would return Nov. 11, Armistice Day, and stage the biggest demonstration New York has ever seen. At that time, he told his hearers, he would offer a permanent solution of the unemployment question. He didn't say what it was. When he made this declaration again there were derisive and doubting smiles, but most of the men seemed almost spellbound in absolute belief. Maybe it is because Ledoux feeds the unemployed and gives them subway and "L" tickets and pats them on the back, or maybe it's because of "personality"—but at all events he has them. They're his. There was no trouble of any sort at last night's meeting. The police—in vivid contrast to Ledoux public library rally of a short time ago—were extremely courteous. In fact, they were all sympathetic with the man.

Supplied Tickets. The thousand came from the lower reaches of the city, from the Bryant park region and from the Bronx, all on railway tickets supplied by Ledoux. He himself marched at the head of 200 from Bryant park that detrained at Fifty-ninth street on the Sixth avenue "L." They reached the Mall about 8:30. The band had been playing for a time for the benefit of about 800 who foregathered earlier. This assemblage placed the newspapers over their heads and shoulders, turned up their coat collars and said "To hell with the rain! We're going to stick here till 'Mr. Zero' as they call Ledoux) shows up." When he did arrive the men-out-of-luck burst into cheers. Ledoux is a ruddy-faced, blue-eyed, stalwart individual with a perpetual grin. He weighs maybe 190. He jerked his coat away from his shoulders and stood revealed in a gray flannel shirt. "Will you join in a silent prayer, fellows?" he asked. They answered "Yes." "Humanity has been trying to lift itself by its bootstraps," he told them. "It forgets that higher power may assist. What we need is three things—meditation, contemplation, elevation. Let us pray!" He stood with eyes closed, shoulders thrown back, arms stiffened at his sides. The crowd stood, too—silent, respectful. Maybe they prayed as the downpour soaked them to the skins. A minute later they were singing "Old Kentucky Home," "Dixie," "Endearing Young Charms" or shimmying to jazz. They liked it. Get Place to Sleep. So the thing went on for a couple of hours. Toward the end J. L. Elliott of 46 West Twenty-seventh street stepped forward and said he had two floors in a building "where all you boys are welcome to sleep tonight." Later they all went there. Ledoux spoke again before the meeting concluded. He told them about what he intended to do and said he would be back Armistice day. A couple of buglers from the band had slipped away into the rainy distance. They blew Taps. The jobless men joined hands in great circles and sang "Auld Lang Syne." Ledoux said he wanted to call two friends to the band stand. He produced George Grey Barnard, the sculptor, and Walter Kirke Brice—the man who is financing his campaign. The unemployed cheered them. They, as the gray-shirted figure waved a farewell, the out-of-luckers cried: "Good-by Mr. Zero! God bless you! We want you to come back!" Many pressed forward to shake Ledoux's hand. He broke down and cried. A woman ran up and kissed his cheek. He could not speak any more. He went to the railway station to take his train. Earlier in the day he made a round of all parks, the bridge arches and the water-front regions, fed the men who had slept there and tried to cheer them up.

AFTER THE "RED RAIN."

Reports from the battlefields of France and Belgium tell of the remarkable change that has come over those scarred lands. Commanding officers of the American armies say they have had difficulty in recognizing the locations of their great guns. In the Argonne, where so much of the young manhood of this country was sacrificed, "trees are sprouting." Gardens are being cultivated on shell-torn areas. Flowers are in bloom and crops are being harvested over filled-in shell holes. One just returned from the American Legion tour of France said: "It seems strange to me to see so many daisies growing where seventy-fives and larger guns had torn the earth." So it has been after all wars whose decisive battles were fought on French and Belgian soil. Reports of the gathering of large crops from these fields this year recalls the line from "Childie Harold," when, standing on the field of Waterloo, Lord Byron makes his pilgrim say, "How that red rain made the harvest grow!"—Cincinnati Enquirer. It is not what we read, but what we remember that makes us learned. It is not what we intend, but what we do, that makes us useful. It is not a few faint wishes, but a lifelong struggle, that makes us valiant.—Beecher.

THE HUMAN SURVIVAL.

What Major Leonard Darwin fears, according to his address before the Congress of Eugenics, is not race suicide but race multiplication on wrong lines. He voices the urge for more babies in the households of our people of high character. For the upholding of standards through the generations, however, he would depend rather upon high-minded folk, willing to accept the sacrifices of parenthood, than upon the extreme processes of selection advocated by pronounced eugenicists. As a son of the author of "The Descent of Man," Major Darwin might be expected to fall back upon the doctrine of the survival of the fittest. This should mean that our best families would just naturally be those which would endure. But the human equation does not run on the lines of the scientific hypothesis. Men and women indulge aims of personal comfort and social climbing. They use selfishly their marriage years and privileges. Posterity suffers by their avoidance of the finer and final responsibilities of the home. The point of Major Darwin's discourse is that among men the survival of the best depends upon the possession by the fittest of a will to fitness.—New York World.

Slim Pickens made a bold but unsuccessful attempt to short-change the ticket seller at the circus at Tickville the other day. Miss Flutie Belcher is puzzled. She is much better looking than Miss Gondola Henstep, but she don't have as much nice young men company on Sundays. But, she says Gondola ought to know better how to hold them as she has so many long years of experience in the courting business. Everybody was wondering why everything was so quiet around the home of Washington Hocks this morning, until it was learned that a hen was on the nest.

HELD UP TRAIN FOR GIN; THEN IT TURNED

STREATOR, III, Oct. 5.—Automobile bandits, it became known today, drove a mile down the right of way of the Santa Fe railroad, near Reading, last night, threw a danger signal that stopped an express train, and then filled their car with a score or more of cases of gin, consigned from Chicago to San Francisco. A mile from the scene of the robbery the automobile caught fire, and, after making an effort to put out the fire, the bandits fled. Police saved ten cases of the liquor, the remainder having been burned.

LASKER SAYS SHIPS VITAL TO PROSPERITY

Without Merchant Marine, There Can Be No Assurance of Gainful Employment.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—Until America as a whole awakens to the fact that national economic stability is dependent upon the establishment of a national merchant marine, there can never be an American merchant marine, Chairman Lasker of the shipping board declared today in an address before the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

Reviewing the work of the present board during its existence of sixteen weeks, he asked the "patience and indulgence of the country," declaring that if these were not given "America's economic life on the seas, for the next generation, is dark indeed."

"Until the farmer in Kansas, the industrial worker in Indiana, the miner in Arizona realize," said Mr. Lasker, "that the regularity and volume of their daily wage is, in a measure, as dependent on the establishment of an American merchant marine as is the continuity of employment and the wage of the dock worker in Baltimore or San Francisco, there can be no assured hope that the flag of the United States will be maintained as it should be on the seven seas. Sound economics accept as fundamental that national prosperity is based on continuity of employment at wages consonant with American standards of living.

"When surpluses accumulate, prices are demoralized and employment ends until the excess has been consumed.

"Generally speaking, the last ten per cent of production makes the market and it is this last ten per cent that we must insure disposal of to customers in foreign lands. Except with a merchant marine under our own control there can be no assurance of these essential markets."

The American nation today is possessed of 1,450 ocean-going steel ships of about 10,000,000 tons deadweight, the speaker said, adding that he had considered only steel bottoms since "eradication" of all concrete and wooden hulls had been determined upon. He estimated the cost of the available fleet at $3,500,000,000 which, he said, could be entirely written off, as one of the major factors in the victory over Germany, "without owing one penny to the American people."

"It was because of this fleet," Mr. Lasker asserted, "that we were able to move the enormous volume of American manufacture and raw materials at a time when there was a shortage of world tonnage. It was because of these ships that our factories, farms and mines were able to operate at top speed when the boys returning from the front were seeking employment."

WAR TORN AREA SHOWS RAPID RECONSTRUCTION

PARIS, Oct. 5.—An impressive picture of the extent of France's achievement in restoring her war-ravaged regions is afforded by M. Loucheur, the minister of liberated regions, in a public statement entitled "The Revival of France."

Official statistics of the destruction caused by the war and the reconstruction accomplished up to May 7, 1921, the minister declares, show that "the France of today is the same as France of yesterday, and that in peace as in war she continues to work with steadfastness, courage and confidence of the World.

M. Loucheur's statement covers the following subjects: Inhabitants, municipalities, schools, houses, land, agriculture, livestock, roads, factories, and railways. After showing that 5,154,000 of the 8,400,000 Frenchmen from 19 to 50 years of age mobilized during the war, were killed or wounded, the statement presents the following statistics of civic reconstruction:

Inhabitants—Deported because of the war, 2,500,728; returned to France, 1,975,798.

Municipalities—Abandoned, 3,256; re-established, 3,216.

Schools—Before the war, 7,271; re-established, 6,830.

Houses—Destroyed, 789,000; rebuilt 10,213, repaired 326,700.

Land—Devastated 8,240,000 acres; cleared from projectiles, wire entanglements and trenches, 6,881,000 acres.

Agriculture—Farm land devastated 4,571,000 acres; farms now cultivated, 3,420,000 acres.

Livestock—Horses and mules carried away 367,000; restored 96,303; oxen carried away 523,000; restored, 120,263; sheep and goats carried away, 469,000; restored, 121,164.

Roads—Destroyed 32,960 miles, temporarily repaired 18,825 miles, definitely repaired 8,426.

Indian "Joiners" Fast for Two Days, Stand on Live Coals, Dance Two Days

By Associated Press
GEARY, Okla., Oct. 5.—The "Offering Dance" of the Arapaho Indians of Oklahoma, which closed here late in August, was witnessed and chronicled by the pale-face for what is believed to be the first time. The offering dance is the final ceremonial to be borne by candidates for the highest degree in the strongest religious fraternity of the tribe.

The ritual was witnessed by a party of Oklahoma City physicians and nurses who visited the encampment of Arapahoes, who were being visited by the Comanches, Cheyennes and Kiowas, during a study of skin diseases of the Indians being prepared for the United States public health service.

Stand on Live Coals.
Standing, they extended their feet so that the soles touched live coals. Without making any outcry the candidates in this position submitted to the painting of their bodies by the priests.

They were allowed to choose the color with which they were painted, according to the tribe's interpreter. If they chose white, it was taken to mean they would continue the ceremony as long as they were able without complete physical exhaustion. If, however, they chose yellow, it was explained, the warrior had pledged to continue the ceremony to the end, though he should endanger his life by so doing.

It was explained by the interpreter that through the entire ceremony the wives of all married candidates had been enduring their fasts and tests, behind a flap in the rear of the lodge. They were kept hidden from the initiated, however, until the conclusion of the ceremony.

The beatings of the tom-tom rose and became a roar and the dance was begun.

Dance Two Days.
For forty-eight hours they danced. Those who endured won the degree. Those who did not have the privilege of trying again the following year, it was explained.

This dance is often confused with the sun dance, which has been prohibited by the federal government, but is not akin to the sun dance.

Soon after the final dance, the tepees were dismantled, and the caravans of Indians departed over the Oklahoma plains.

COLLEGE ATHLETICS ARE BIG BUSINESS

AUSTIN, Oct. 5.—According to the financial report of the athletic council of the University of Texas for 1920-21, football is the only self-sustaining sport in this institution.

CRIPPLES ON CRUTCHES FIRST-CLASS HIJACKERS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—The police today are looking for three highwaymen, cripples, two on crutches and the other hobbling on a cane, who early today held up Thomas Payne, of this city, and robbed him of $20, according to Payne's complaint to the police.

Payne told the police he was sitting in his automobile, accompanied by a young woman, on a road about 100 yards from a hospital, when at pistol point he was commanded to leave the machine by three men who hobbled across the road with him, two on crutches and the other on a cane, appropriated the $20 and then, ordering him back to the car, threatened to shoot unless he drove away slowly.

Payne described all three as hatless and coatless.

COTTON SCREWMEN IN GALVESTON STILL OUT

By United Press
GALVESTON, Oct. 5.—Cotton screwmen still refused to return to their places on the docks here. Pending a wage agreement, the screwmen have been idle since Monday.

It is understood they are holding out for a scale resembling the one temporarily agreed upon by the New Orleans unions, which provides for a reduction of $5 a day per gang. The employers, unwilling to accept the proposals, have countered with a proposition that the union leaders have turned down.

BROKE DISCHARGE GENTLY.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 5.—Circuit Judge Charles W. Rutledge yesterday called Arthur Ruedi, his court stenographer, into his office and asked him to take a letter from dictation. Ruedi got ready with book and pencil and made the customary inquiry as to whom the letter was to be addressed.

"Address it to yourself," said the judge, who then proceeded with the dictation of a letter to Ruedi in which he said that in view of Ruedi's refusal to resign it had become the court's unpleasant duty to prefer charges against him and endeavor to have him removed for cause.

COUPLE LIVED FOR DAYS IN ROOM WHERE FRIEND'S BODY WAS CONCEALED

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—Detectives today were trying to trace a couple known as Mr. and Mrs. Boulanger, who, it is believed, lived for several days, unwittingly, in a room where the body of a young woman friend—murdered—had been stored.

The body, packed away in newspapers, was found last night in an unused closet of a lodging house room the Boulangers had occupied. A cloth bag had been tied into the woman's mouth with a white stocking. The date of one of the newspapers, Sept. 21, is believed to fix the date of the murder. The Boulangers did not quit the room until last Monday—four days later. Other lodgers said they thought the Boulangers had gone to Montreal.

The murdered woman was known at the lodging house only as "Mrs. Fay. The proprietor told the police "Mr. Fay" left the house last Thursday, saying "Mrs. Fay" had fallen ill and he had removed her to a hospital. He is being sought in connection with her death.

Excited Spectators Forget to Turn in Alarm When East Main Store Burns

Fire of unknown origin early this morning destroyed the one-story frame confectionery store and dwelling of A. H. Williams at 325 East Main street, and resulted in a total loss of approximately $2,500. All insurance on both building and contents lapsed last month, Williams said.

Williams and his wife, sleeping in the rear of the store, were awakened by the fire about 1 o'clock this morning and found the wall over the soda fountain in flames. The fire spread rapidly and within a few minutes the whole building was burning before even the household furnishings in the rear could be removed.

In the excitement Williams and spectators neglected to turn in the alarm at fire headquarters until after some twenty minutes had elapsed and the flames were beyond control. Williams declared that he had repeatedly urged the neighbors to phone the fire department and was too exhausted and excited to attend to this detail personally. The blaze, he said, was promptly checked on the arrival of the fire department. Neighboring buildings threatened by the flames were saved by the firemen.

The loss on the building was estimated by Williams at $500; on the store fixtures and stock at $1,500, while the household furnishings were valued at $500.

BIRTHDAY PARTY FOR MISS ELIZABETH COOPER

While Lisbuth Cooper on her thirteenth birthday went with her big brother a-riding away. Her mother prepared a nice surprise party in which her friends joined with good will and hearty. When all was ready and the guests had arrived, back to the house Miss Elizabeth hid; she was pleased to see the little girls and boys, and began at once to enter in their joys. A huge birthday cake the table did adorn, and Lisbuth was glad of the day she was born. The presents were spread out in grand array, and her little friends wished her a happy birthday.—A Guest.

COMPTROLLER PANS BANK PROFITEERS

By Associated Press. LOS ANGELES, Oct. 5.—Bankers who during recent periods of financial stringency have imposed excessive interest rates will "find it pretty nearly useless to protest issuance of charter for new and competing national banks within their territory," Comptroller Crissinger today told the national bank section of the American Bankers' association convention here. The number of such bankers, he added, "is not very great, but it will do no harm for me to say that we have our eyes on these over-cautious ones, and that we are not much disposed in their favor."

"The bank that gets advances from the federal reserve system, and only seeks to increase its profits by that privilege is not doing its part," Mr. Crissinger declared. "You are expected to understand that banks are a convenience and facility to business—not that business is the ever-ready support of high and yet higher banking profits."

EXPLOSION CAUSES DANGEROUS FIRE AT CASINGHEAD PLANT

BRECKENRIDGE, Oct. 5.—Fire originating from a gas explosion in the laboratory of the Mystic Gasoline company Tuesday destroyed the laboratory and small warehouse with contents, entailing a loss of $10,000, according to those in charge at the plant. The city fire department answered the call, but was ineffective. The Mystic-Martin lease north of the city limits and a quarter of a mile from the nearest fire plug. Fifteen thousand gallons of gasoline were in tanks hardly 100 feet from the blaze and the $250,000 casinghead gasoline plant was a similar distance. Neither received any damage.
