These factors, if true, would seem to make the Cisco lake the proper source of a water supply for both cities, provided satisfactory arrangements could be made. The cost of a pipe line and reservoir on Eastland hill was estimated a year ago at $35,-000 a mile. Today it would be less. Certainly it would cost less than the building of both reservoir and pipe line at Russell creek. And having enormous quantities of water, Cisco might be disposed to sell it at terms which would permit the same consumers' rate in both cities and at the same time derive revenue toward meeting the bond issue.

If Ranger wants water, and desires to obtain it in the most practical way, this proposition would appear to be worth considering.
