FIVE PERSONS DEAD IN ARKANSAS STORM

State Briefs

DALLAS, Oct. 12.—One minute after C. W. Reeder bought an automobile here, the car was stolen. The car was parked outside while Reeder was completing the purchase. Reeder emerged to see his car moving down the street with a negro at the wheel. The dealer from whom Reeder bought the car gave chase in another car and recovered the machine after a 10 block chase. The negro escaped.

AUSTIN, Oct. 12.—New regulations ordered by the state livestock sanitary commission will become effective Saturday under a proclamation signed by Governor Moody. The regulations provide that if either dairy or breeding cattle are moved from one stockyard where there are federal inspectors to another yard the cattle must be accompanied by a certificate showing they have passed the tuberculosis test. The test must have been made by a veterinarian approved both by the state commission and the U. S. bureau of animal husbandry.

BRADY, Oct. 12.—Brady's fourth annual "Turkey trot" will be staged Nov. 11 the chamber of commerce has decided. This will be one of the few turkey trots held in this section this fall most communities having abandoned the method of bringing turkeys to market. Three newsreel cameramen have made arrangements to film this unique turkey classic. During the past three years more than one hundred million people throughout the United States have seen Brady's famous turkey parade on the screen, it is estimated. Several thousand birds will be used in this year's trot. More than a score of floats, symbolizing the turkey industry, will participate in the parade.

GAINESVILLE, Oct. 12.—The Gainesville post office will become first class on July 1, 1928, as a result of business done by the office during the present year, according to Postmaster J. L. Hickson. A postoffice must have annual receipts amounting to $40,000 to become first class and the local office is $11,000 short of the mark with three months to go. Receipts for each quarter this year have shown substantial gains over those of last year.

DALLAS, Oct. 12.—It is now unlawful to express your sentiments at ball games or other amusement places in Dallas by throwing pop bottles, cushions or other missiles. After the city attorney found that the city had no law under which to prosecute persons offending others by throwing missiles of this kind, the city commission hastily passed an ordinance making such acts misdemeanors.

MEXICO DOUBTS THAT MORROW CAN SETTLE TANGLE QUICKLY

MEXICO CITY.—Early arrival here of Dwight W. Morrow as United States ambassador to Mexico is looked upon as a final attempt of the Coolidge administration to settle existing difficulties between the two countries before March, 1929. And although the successor to ex-Ambassador Sheffield is regarded as admirably fitted for his job, a majority opinion in the Mexican capital fails to see how he can succeed with what is before him. "President Calles and Ambassador Morrow do not talk the same language." This is the comment one hears most frequently from Americans and other foreigners in Mexico City. No one means by this the difference between Spanish and English but rather the greater gulf that exists between men with entirely opposing ideas about capital and labor, the rights of foreign concession holders and the multitude of other issues on which American and Mexican interests have clashed almost daily during the last 15 years. "Calles cannot turn back now. He will have to go on with his policy. He is committed." That is what one hears from Mexicans, Americans, British and almost everyone who expresses an opinion. And Calles himself has promised to carry on. "You started it. I will continue," he said in a speech a year ago. What then is going to happen to Ambassador Morrow when he finds himself up against the same stone wall which Sheffield, his predecessor could not batter down? The answer is usually, "the same thing; he won't be able to make any progress." There will be one difference, however. Morrow, by reason of his closeness to President Coolidge, will be backed up completely by the white house in all that he does. The ambassador and Mr. Coolidge probably will concentrate on the Mexican problem in a way that has not perhaps been possible up to now. The reports from the embassy in Mexico City will find their way, it is predicted, immediately to the president's desk in the white house. There will be no relays of second-hand information from the state department. Next to the fundamental differences of opinion that exist between the two governments, time may be Morrow's greatest handicap. To even trained observers Mexico is always most bewildering. In no other country in the world, except perhaps Russia, have such radical social and economic changes taken place in the last decade. Trying to get a grasp on the situation as it exists here is to many an appalling job. There is not only the difference between the Anglo-Saxon and Latin temperaments, but a hundred others add to the confusion. For instance, from the foreign viewpoint the principal objection to the agrarian and oil laws is not the laws themselves but the way they have been applied. This is hardly understandable in the United States where a court settles instantly any question of interpretation. While the same rule is supposed to hold in Mexico, to some extent at least, Americans and other foreigners frankly regard relief from this direction as hopeless. A purely "business settlement" of the Mexican-American differences therefore seems to the more-hardened observers here to be an impossibility. The history of past attempts of this kind apparently shows that men with the political type of mind here had the greatest success in Mexico, or at least have understood the Mexican point of view with more facility. If Morrow, in his untried role of diplomat, exhibits this political trend, that together with his international business experience, may enable him to accomplish what others have failed to do.

CALLES THINKS REVOLUTION IS OVER IN MEXICO

President Claims He Has Known of Revolutionary Plans for Months.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 12.—Mexico's abortive revolution today deteriorated the posse-like hunting of small fugitive groups—a failure because its leaders had only their personal ambition to offer the country—President Calles declared in a statement to American newspaper correspondents. Eastland Buying Many Tickets To Game at Ranger

Tickets for the Ranger-Eastland football game to be played in Ranger Friday afternoon, Oct. 21, are going briskly, according to reports given out at the office of Jack Williamson, who has charge of the sale of tickets in Eastland. Eastland will have the east wing of the stadium while the Ranger supporters will occupy the west side of Lillard field. The pep squad and Eastland band will accompany the team to Ranger for the conference tilt have been awarded a section of seats located near the 50-yard line. First day ticket sales indicate that there will be a good crowd from Eastland to go over with the team. According to reports from Ranger the side they will occupy has practically been sold out. On account of the oil jubilee that opens in Ranger that day, it is expected that both sides and the ends of the stadium will be sold out before the time for the game. Eastland fans who intend to attend the game should get their tickets today as the tickets not sold will be sent back to Ranger for distribution. On account of the expected crowd there is a rush for tickets in Ranger as it looks as if good seats will come at a premium days before the game.

It was learned unofficially that Mineral Wells is going to do her part in putting over successfully the Ranger Home Coming Oil Jubilee. The chamber of commerce jointly with the city will send a big float and a band to Ranger for the parade. The secretary of the Abilene chamber of commerce telephoned Wayne C. Hickey, secretary of the Ranger chamber of commerce yesterday and indicated that his town would be here with a float or band, or possibly both, on that occasion. Two of the loving cups to be given as awards have arrived and are at Effie's. These cups will be the given as first and second awards for the best home float in the parade and will be suitably engraved. The two cups to be given to the best out of town floats competing will be on display at Durham & Pettit in a few days. The Texas and Pacific railroad has extended the courtesy of a replica of the first locomotive and coach ever run over its line to West Texas for the Jubilee. The smoke stack on the replica is of the old battle ship type and the engine is equipped with two drive wheels. The railroad company requested that the tiny locomotive and coach be carried in the parade on a Chevrolet chassis, so the Oilbelt Motor company will take care of the train when it arrives in Ranger.

There's a town in Eastland county, Where the liquid gold does flow;
This wonderful town most everyone knows
Is Ranger town so fair,
Now won't you come to Ranger,
Where the wonderful west breeze blows,
For you each one and everyone a thousand oil wells flow.

CHURCH PARTY AT SWOVELAND HOME.

A real church party with 83 members of the Central Baptist church was enjoyed last night at the home of Earl Swoveland, three miles south of town. Although the night was a little nippy, due to a norther that brought to an end a perfect summer day, huge gas flares on the lawn of the Swoveland home counteracted the cold and furnished light in abundance for this happy affair.

Rev. J. A. Caraway, pastor of the church, was master of ceremonies and one of the ring-leaders in many of the games that were played during the evening.

One pleasurable part of this party was that the men of the church did the work. They prepared the refreshments of roasted weiners, coffee and all the fixings that were served during the evening.

A happy feature of the event was a shower tendered Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Poe and children, who recently lost practically everything they possessed in the way of clothing and household goods in a fire. Many nice things were showered on the fellow church members who had sustained such a loss.

Mrs. Poe gracefully acknowledged the courtesy of their friends—a courtesy which served to strengthen the tie that binds them to their fellow church members and church.

In every sense of the word it was a happy party and enjoyed by everyone present to the fullest extent.

Still Pioneering

Gripings
By GUS

Some one has asked us to gripe about the pep squad and turned us in a list of shortcomings as long as your arm.

They don't yell together, they yell at the wrong time, they don't yell at the right time, they stand up when they ought to sit down which is most of the time, the yell leaders lack pep, the sponsors lack control and so forth ad infinitum.

A little constructive criticism don't hurt anybody but knocking does everybody harm, even the knocker. If you have a suggestion to offer we are sure it will be accepted by those in charge in the spirit in which it is given. If you have made some suggestions and they have not been accepted it was probably because of the spirit in which they were made.

Coaching a pep squad is no small job in itself. Maintaining discipline among a bunch that is supposed to make noise and not keep quiet is a job few of us will undertake. To get a hundred kids to yell as one is a marvelous achievement when it is accomplished. It takes time and patience to do those things and cannot be done in one or two rehearsals.

The pep squad is promoting the game Saturday between the Bulldogs and Thurber All-Stars and will use the proceeds to defray the expense of the new equipment which they will flash for the first time when the Bulldogs tangle with the Mavericks on October 21st.

In case you didn't know it there are several players at Thurber who have had their names in plenty big type not so many years back and who are itching to feel the old shoulder pads and sweat shirts back in place. They are coming up here in the hope of showing the Bulldogs how it was done when they were wearing the moleskin for old Alma Mater, whoever she was.

The only athletics girls may participate in at the high school is football. They may take lung and throat exercises by yelling at the game.

Got a big gym down there but the girls can't use it. Many of the girls have their gym suits and no place to wear them.

Got a gym teacher, too, but no place to teach.
A lot of them are hollering for athletics. They may get their wish. Some of the parents have asked us to gripe about it. We don't know what to say except what you see above.

There's one thing you can't buy from a mail order house. You can't write for them to send their wrecking crane and ambulance to take you and your car to respective hospitals after having a wreck.

Ranger Rotary Club Will Take Part In Parade

Ranger Rotary club will be in the parade, it was decided today, when the club voted to have a decorated float in the big parade on Friday, Oct. 21.

Hughes of the Liberty theatre. Jimmie Stage, Ernest Anderson and Richard Rudolph wore other tender-foot Boy Scouts that were visitors at the Rotary club luncheon today.

W. W. Housewright was program chairman and he was assisted by B. F. Peacock who talked on the municipal airport here and displayed blueprints he has recently completed, which will be sent to San Antonio for the use of pilots coming to Ranger for the jubilee.

Out of town visitors were Frank E. Burke of Tulsa, Phillip Pettit of Cisco, O. D. Dillingham of Abilene and George Bryant of Eastland. T. J. Peacock of Ranger was also a visitor.

GERMAN PLANE TAKES OFF ON MYSTERY TRIP

WARNEMUENDE, Germany, Oct. 12.—The Heinkel biplane D-1220 took off at 1:21 p. m. today on a flight the destination of which was kept a close secret. If flying conditions were good, it was said reliably the plane might go to the Azores, presumably intending to continue to the North American coast.

Crazy Water Depot Established For Ranger Vicinity

Mineral water without going to Mineral Wells after it, is offered the people of Ranger by the installation of a Mineral Water Depot, opposite the Ranger Steam Laundry, Ranger. S. D. Yokley, who for the past seven years has been connected with the Mineral Wells Water company, is manager of the water depot for the time being and is prepared to deliver fresh mineral water daily to Ranger or Eastland county people.
Crazy Water numbers 1, 2, 3 and 4 are now ready for house to house delivery service.
This is a new service for Ranger and to obtain water fresh from the famous Crazy Wells each day without having to drive miles after it is really a very great boon.
The depot has phone service and will deliver water anywhere in the city.

Methodists Will Hear Dr. Bishop In Ranger Sunday

Dr. C. M. Bishop, of S. M. U., Dallas, will conduct the men's bible class of the Methodist church, Ranger, Sunday morning, October 16 and preach at the morning service. These two services will be the opening events of a jubilee program to be observed on that date by the Methodists of Ranger in celebration of the tenth anniversary of that church as an oil field church.
Dr. Bishop came to Texas from Missouri back in 1910 and was first located in Wichita Falls as pastor of the First Methodist church there. He later was transferred to Southwestern University, Georgetown, and for the past several years has been in the theological department of Southern Methodist University. Other events of the jubilee church program will be announced later.

Do you rise lame and stiff? Drag through the day, listless and depressed? Evening find you all worn out? Have you given any thought to your kidneys? TEXAS UNIVERSITY VANDERBILT GAME BIG GRID TILT OF WEEK

PERFORMANCES OF PAST FAVOR VANDERBILT

Lines Even In Weight But Texas Has Heavier Back Field and Big Reserve.

AUSTIN, Oct. 12.—When the Texas Longhorns and Vanderbilt Commodores clash in Dallas Saturday, the Texas team will be decidedly the underdog club of the affair. Vanderbilt traditionally has one of the strongest teams in the south and this year is certainly no exception. A comparison of the records of the two teams is sufficient to prove that:

- Vanderbilt: Vanderbilt 39, Chattanooga 10, Vanderbilt 48, Ouchita 10, Vanderbilt 53, Center 6, Texas:
- Texas 43, Okla. Teachers 0, Texas 0, T. C. U. 0, Texas 29, Trinity 6.

From the point of view of experience the Black and Gold again has the advantage. The first string that the Commodores will throw into the game Saturday which includes James and Creson at ends; Sharpe at center; Lusky and Abernathy at tackles; Oliver and Holmes at guards; Speers, Armistead, Owen and Melhenny in the backfield, is composed entirely of veterans of other Vanderbilt teams with the exception of Holmes and Melhenny. These men are Sewell and Baldwin. Ford is playing at an entirely new position, end.

Texas has the advantage as far as reserve strength is concerned. The Longhorns have a wealth of material on the sidelines while Vanderbilt is comparatively weak in this department.

The weights of the team will compare favorably. Vanderbilt likely has the faster of the two backfields, though the lines will be about equal. Vandy's ends are far more experienced than the green wings that Texas will use.

Vanderbilt will go into the game with her full strength. Texas will go into the game with half her offensive power lacking since Captain Rufus King and Eddie Bealar will be out of the game with injuries. Rose may be another casualty to add to the list.

OFFICER WILL TAKE SUSPECT TO PYOTE

F. I. Dyer sheriff of Ward county, was in Ranger today for the purpose of taking back with him a man suspected of having stolen a Chrysler car from a Pyote storage recently. The Chrysler has been identified as the property of Jim McGory, of Amarillo and was in storage in Pyote when taken.

Sheriff Dyer will return to Pyote on the Sunshine, unless the sheriff of Brewster county, who is also after the same man, arrives before that time and in case he does and finds that the man under suspicion is the man he also wants, the three will travel cross country to Pyote.

Will Demonstrate Farm Terracing On Farm Near Ranger

County Agent J. C. Patterson has announced that a terracing demonstration will be held at the Dudley Bros. farm known as Oak Ridge farm on the Strawn road, Ranger, Friday. Fordson tractors and Corsicana graders will be the machinery used. These will be furnished by the Leville-Maher company, Ford dealers of Ranger. Mr. Patterson stated that the terracing school, which is being sponsored by the Ranger chamber of commerce, would be all day, and those interested in terracing or the work of the Ford tractor and Corsicana grader, are urged to attend the demonstration.

A series of these terracing schools will be held in the western portion of the county next week, Mr. Patterson stated. The locations for the demonstrations will be announced later.

George Pipgras Upset All Dope With Fast Ball

By BILLY EVANS.

A good fast ball is a winning asset even in a curve-ball league. George Pipgras of the New York Americans conclusively proved that in the second game of the world series.

Despite the fact that the Pirates are noted for their fondness for speed, Pipgras won, as he pleased, a game in which he didn't use over a dozen curve balls.

I had a seat in the press box nearby John McGraw, famous manager of the New York Gians. During the early innings of the second game, there was much comment relative to the great number of fast balls used by Pipgras.

"No twirler can get away with that kind of pitching against the Pirates," was John McGraw's viewpoint. Pipgras did get away with it and in a most effective manner. At no stage of the game was he in danger, although he threw only a limited number of curve balls.

Curve-Ball League. The National league is known as a curve-ball league, which means the curve is the most used style of delivery.

John McGraw, one of the game's greatest managers, has always been an advocate of the curve. He likes the fast ball merely as a threat.

Since the ideas of one John McGraw are far reaching in the national league, most of the managers have come in the same view as McGraw relative to curve-ball pitching.

In the second game of the world series, George Pipgras, Yankee recruit, used a fast ball almost exclusively, against a team noted for its liking for speed and won breezily.

That can be taken as quite a compliment to the fast ball which Pipgras served to the Pirate batters. He must have had something on it.

Recruits Hog Glory. In the remarkable victory scored by the Yankee recruit, Pipgras, much credit is due the clever manner in which Benny Bengough handled his stuff.

His was far from an auspicious start when Lloyd Waner, the first man up for the Pirates, tripped to left. It would have upset many a youngster. No doubt Manager Huggins immediately sent orders for someone to warm up.

However, Pipgras settled down.

HOW DO YOU SPEND YOUR MONEY?

If you were considering the purchase of stocks and bonds, you'd do a lot of studying before you actually parted with your money! You'd want to know about the company—its policy—its past record.

Yet that money represents only your surplus. Every day you spend money—almost all your earnings—upon the requisites of life.

Are you less wise with the greater part of your money than with the smaller share?

You CAN select the daily products you buy as carefully as your most conservative investments. In every store you'll find products that you know well. Friendly names that have stood for first quality many years. Names of products that millions of people have bought, and bought again and again. Products that these people, by their steady patronage, have approved from coast to coast.

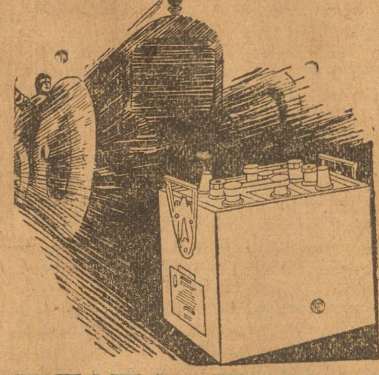

They are the advertised products. They must be full value—first quality, or they couldn't satisfy so many millions of people year after year!

The other products you see are strangers. You don't know them. Few people do. They may be good—they may not. No manufacturer holds them up to the pitiless light of publicity. They are just here hopelessly unknown—the "speculations" of the world of merchandise.

INVEST YOUR MONEY FOR EVERY-DAY THINGS AS CAREFULLY AS YOU MAKE INVESTMENTS. SELECT ADVERTISED GOODS

BADLY RUN-DOWN

Kentucky Woman Had "Terrible Time" Doing Her Home Work. Strength Returned After She Took Cardui.

Shelbyville, Ky.—"Several years ago," says Mrs. Alven Jesse, of this place, "my health was very bad. I was very much run-down. I was in such a weak, nervous condition that I was not able to do my housework. I struggled to keep up, because I had to, but many a time I spent hours in bed, trying to force enough strength to go through the daily routine.

"This condition went on for some time, until I heard about Cardui, which some one told me was good for such ailments. I gave it an immediate trial, and, I am thankful to say, my improvement was rapid. I soon was able to do my housework with ease and comfort. I felt fine and I looked so much better.

"This spring I was not as well as I had been. I was ill in the winter with colds, which left me weak. So I sent at once to the store for Cardui and began taking it. In just a little while I was feeling much better, my strength returned and I was able to get my work done easier and with less effort."

NORFLEET

The Manhunter's Own True Story

As told to Gordon Hines

ALL RIGHTS RESERVED - IMPERIAL PRESS - SUGAR LAND, TEXAS

WHAT HAS BEEN TOLD

Frank Norfleet, a Texas rancher swindled out of $45,000 by members of an international confidence ring headed by Joe Furey and W. B. Spencer, resolves to break up the ring if it costs him his last penny. After a wild trip to San Antonio and Corpus Christi he plays a peculiar hunch and goes to San Bernardino, California where he finds two of his men in jail. They are returned to Fort Worth for trial. Norfleet, following the tip of a woman whom he had met on the train, rushes to Florida on the trail of his men. While in St. Petersburg he casually meets two old people who have been robbed of a life time's savings in the director's room at the bank at Clearwater. Norfleet promises to try to find their swindlers and if possible to recover their money. He goes to Clearwater to investigate and an official in the sheriff's office abuses the unfortunate old people in a rough manner, declaring that such people deserved to be robbed. Norfleet forces the man to apologize and realizing he can expect little from the official, after a brief search he goes back to St. Petersburg. A young garage mechanic tells him of a place in St. Augustine where many crooks hang out.

CHAPTER 11

Every car going to this secluded spot passed over the bridge, he said. He had also been told that the innocent looking club house was headquarters for an internationally known gang of confidence men and wire tappers. He added that many persons were supposed to have gone over the bridge and never returned. Evidently this place would be worth watching. Seemingly only idly curious, I got the boy to give me full directions as to how to find the garage and bridge.

I went to St. Augustine next day and soon located the garage. The bridge was close by and the general topography was just as the boy had described it. Directly opposite the garage was a dilapidated shack of corrugated iron, which had served as a cold-drink stand before it fell down into a rusty heap. It looked as if the slightest breath of wind would topple it over. But it was near the road and it would conceal me. I determined to come back after dusk and watch the passing cars. Perhaps I might catch a glimpse of my men. Anything was worth trying.

When dusk came, I slipped over to the wrecked stand and hid myself. All through the night I waited. An endless procession of cars passed over the bridge and up under the shelter of the trees that nodded slightly in the gentle breezes—nodded sagely, as if they were very wise as to what went on beneath their waving branches.

One after another the cars slipped past. Cars of all sizes, colors and makes. Occupants of every fastidious and nondescript sort. Young men. Mature men. Aging men. Men upon whom Father Time had laid a heavy hand. And women—all sorts of them. The arc light at the bridge played on their features—features that were drawn and gray looking, painted over with worldly gloss—faces cunning and faces youthful and possibly innocent. I wondered about that. An innocent face does stay with a bad woman—or a little while. Faces that were rouged blanks, with lines of dissipation temporarily blotted out with heavy powders, and coats of red.

Beautiful evening wraps—naked shoulders—brazen bosoms—flashing jewels, some of them mostly flash. Flashing hands that were as much at home in strange pockets as their own.

I waited in my cramped billet until dawn. With the first rosy tint in the bit of sky I could see between the waving trees, I imagined I heard old Cockalorum, a huge Plymouth Rock back home, crowing. That brought up a picture of a golden stack of wheat cakes, with rich syrup spilling down their sides, crisp sizzling bacon and fresh eggs looking at me with wide-open golden eyes from a huge platter.

Who could withstand that urge? My night outdoors had done things to my appetite.

I crawled out and stretched my legs. I took a long breath and hiked for an inviting little cafe which had just been opened by a bustling proprietor a little way down the road.

For some time I was the only customer in the little cafe and after I had enjoyed the first few bites which took the edge off my appetite, I sat sleepily no longer, taking a bite now and then and wishing for a soft bed. Suddenly I was aroused by a harsh voice, the voice of a crabbing, irritable man.

"What's the idea there? Let's have a little service! Shake a leg, sister, it's daylight—time to be awake!"

I looked up at three burly fellows, seated at a table near the door. The largest of the three, a big blond brute, was shouting at the nervous waitress. She hurried to their table, pad and pencil poised for their order.

While the men were scanning the brief menu and complaining of the limited variety of food, I was busy connecting the disagreeable voice of the burly fellow with something Mrs. Bockerman had told me. He was a real estate agent to me. He was, she said, more than six feet tall, very bulky, with a Van Dyke beard, raggedly barbered. His chin was massive and she remembered that he had a way of thrusting it forward when he talked. This crude bucko in the restaurant fitted her description perfectly. I took stock of the other two. The old lady's descriptions of the pseudo-property owner and the young man with the typewriter were vivid enough that I felt I could check them accurately against anyone who might resemble the parties in the least. I had no trouble in picking the land owner from the other two, but the third party did not fit her description of the younger fellow.

I was sure I had located two of the crooks, rather old types and I felt that there would not be two others like them in the state of Florida. The old lady had particularly stressed the irascible disposition of the so-called land agent. In another moment, I was all the more justified in my suspicion, when the nervous little waitress hurried in with a tray almost as large as herself and began setting the dishes before the men. When the big fellow's eyes were put before him he scowled darkly and thundered:

"What the hell ails you? Can't you get it through your head that when I say 'scrambled eggs, soft,' I mean soft, not hard? My God, are you dead from the neck up?"

I felt like hurling a plate at the big bully, but that wouldn't have helped matters a bit. This, I thought was a perfect sample of the conduct of the agent the old lady had described. I recalled her exact words. "He is so naturally ugly and overbearing that he would insult you for nothing when he'd get cash for courtesy."

I laid a hasty plan and rose from the table, paying my check and passing quietly into the street. It was still early morning and I wondered if I would be able to locate some one at the sheriff's office or at the police station. I decided the police would be a better bet at such an early hour and, luckily, found the chief at his desk.

He was a fine, stalwart fellow, clean-cut and honorable looking. I felt confident that he could be depended upon. Quickly I told my story.

"Without a shadow of a doubt, chief," I explained, "I have two of the thieves spotted. They are swallowing their breakfasts in a little coffee shop down the street. If we hurry, we can easily get them!"

He looked surprised, but swapped his hat for his official cap and rose. "All right, boss. We'll certainly grab them!"

I started for the door, sure that he would follow. I didn't hear him behind me as I turned to see if he was coming. He was leisurely fussing with some papers on his desk, as if uncertain as to whether or not he should accompany me. Finally, however, he walked toward me and said "Well, let's be going." As if I had been delaying!

He was thinking how kind fate had been and how happy the Bockermans would be to hear the good news. Perhaps there would even be a chance of getting part of their money back. As we left the office, the chief slipped an automatic into his pocket. I thought it odd that he did not enlist the help of any of the patrolmen lounging about the office, but concluded that he hated to break in on their sleep so early in the morning. One big fellow, who rested comfortably in a tilted-back chair, roused slightly as we passed and gave a sleepy yawn, then settled back to slumber. I flattered myself that the chief thought the two of us equal to the task. Well, I would be ready to do my bit.

We walked in silence toward the restaurant. My heart was thumping enough that I felt I could accompany any anticipated success. When we reached the entrance to the coffee shop, I turned and said:

"Chief, what do you want me to do?—or shall I just use my own judgment and do whatever seems necessary?"

I rested my hand on my six-shooter and waited for his instruction. He stopped short. He was looking through the window at the men we wanted. His glance shifted to me and he seemed rather nonplussed for a moment. Then he grabbed his gun from his pocket and, with an abstracted look, peering queerly beyond me, he forced a surprised expression and mumbled almost to himself:

"By George! I almost forgot! I have a very important engagement down on the corner. I've got three minutes to make it. It's a shame, but we'll have to get those fellows some other time!" and he dashed off down the street in a fast walk, leaving me to gape astounded.

I wondered what I could do. The three bullies inside were settling their check and picking their teeth importantly. They came out, brushed past me and walked off down the street in the same direction the chief had taken. I couldn't help wondering if they, too, had an important engagement down on the corner.

A fit of hopeless weariness seized me. Up to that moment I had not felt the fatigue of my night's vigil in the open, down by the bridge. Now I was tired. I had had many idealistic opinions of the majesty of the law and I had based my hope of catching my own men on the belief that I would always have the fine, strong arm of the law behind me. I knew I was inexperienced in the ways of the crime world, but I felt that the established guardians of the law would always give me their full support and advice. Here doubt was born. Could it be possible that my future experience with the law would be of this sort?

I tried to feel that was just an unusual case—that I needn't worry. Still, there was that load in Clearwater! He was another of the same stripe!

Many weary months later I had learned that such conduct was not unusual in law enforcement circles. But I also learned that many fine, upright officers are giving their best efforts to upholding the highest conceptions of duty. These splendid characters are balked, many, many times, by opposition such as I encountered on several occasions. It is true, however, that our national crime problems would be solved if the criminals were not able to buy official influence and help in so many high places.

I decided that the sheriff would probably be in his office by this time and I went directly there. Perhaps I might also learn something of Furey and Spencer.

County Agent Is Giving Time To Farm Terracing

The educational campaign begun in Eastland county some six years ago to induce Eastland county farm owners to terrace their land and thereby prevent its deterioration and which has borne fruit from the very first year, is to be continued by County Agent J. C. Patterson, who plans to begin at once terracing schools or demonstrations over the county and to hold, as near as possible, one of these schools in every farm community where demonstrations have not heretofore been held. Eastland county farmers, always quick to see the advantages of improved farm methods, have shown much interest in terracing. Many communities have pooled their resources and purchased instruments with which to terrace and ditch their land. Other communities have depended upon the county agent to do the work for them. It is impossible however, for the county agent to do much more than give demonstrations as his time for this work is limited.

especially true where the vertical fall is greater than 2 1-2 feet in 100 feet.

Terraces require some work each year to keep them in good state of repair; yet when they are properly constructed the outlay of labor, to keep them in repair, is small. Usually to take each terrace area in a land and "back-furrow" on top of terrace at time of breaking of land, is sufficient to maintain all terraces that have been properly constructed.
