NATIONAL GUARD ROUTS OKLAHOMA INSURGENTS

DENIED RIGHT TO ASSEMBLE IN SENATE ROOMS

Governor Brands Moral Turpitude Investigation as "Muck Raking."

By United Press.
OKLAHOMA CITY, Dec. 16.—"Muckraking" was the brand Governor Henry S. Johnston placed upon the announced "moral turpitude" investigation by an insurgent house committee, which was ordered ejected from the capitol today.

The governor placed troops about the senate chamber previously ordered by the senate court of impeachment to be made ready for the house investigation committee while the senate recessed for two weeks and expelled his accusers from the capitol.

DEMOCRATS ARE PLEASED WITH TAX VICTORY

Now Plan to Do Missionary Work Among Friends in The Senate.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—Exuberant over tax victories, house democratic leaders today planned some "missionary work" among their senate colleagues to hold the additional reductions they forced through in the house which raised the bill's total from $233,000,000 to $290,000,000.

THE ZONING PLAN.
A number of the more progressive towns of West Texas are considering the zoning plan of city development. Only recently, steps have been taken both by Amarillo and San Angelo, looking to the systematic development of business and residential districts.

These young, and as yet comparatively small cities are using foresight in taking this very important step while they are yet young and small. It is a lot easier to build a beautiful city than it is to beautify one after it is built. It is much easier to widen the narrow streets and straighten the jogs now than it will be five, 10 or 20 years from now. These towns will find the zoning business much easier to handle now than in the future.

Other towns in West Texas should take to the zoning system right now. Eastland, Ranger, Breckenridge, Abilene, Lubbock, Midland and scores of other towns that are growing rapidly should look at once to this all important step in their growth and proper development.

Well, we see where two more star athletes have turned sport correspondents. Raymond (Rags) Matthews, all-southwestern end from Texas Christian university and Gerald Mann, another southwestern selection, who are now en route to California to play in the all-east-west game for charity on Dec. 26 will represent the Fort Worth Star-Telegram and the Dallas News respectively. If those boys write sport news like they play football, some of the sport writers of today may lose their jobs.

AIR MAILMEN SOON TO COVER 11,856 MILES

By United Press.
WASHINGTON.—With the completion of 10 air mail routes now under construction, the United States will have a total of 25 in operation with a mileage of 11,856, according to the commerce department's aeronautics bureau.

The territory covered by these routes has a population estimated at 62,299,409, served by 70 intermediate stations, comprising one of the greatest airways in the world.

The department said 15 are in operation now covering a total mileage of 7,997. Commercial routes bring this total to 12,000 miles.

With but one plane a day flying each way over this network, the department estimates the daily airplane mileage will more than equal the distance around the world at the equator. On one line service will be doubled.

BANKS WITHOUT CAGES NEW YORK DECREES

NEW YORK.—With the opening on Jan. 1 of a new home for one of New York's biggest banks, the abolishment of steel cages and armored arrays of safes and vaults will become the latest national fashion in business.

The new bank will have the appearance of any modern business office and money transactions will be carried on at desks or over counters un-protected by forbidding screens.

"New York financiers have reached the conclusion that bank cages never prevented robberies," says the Woman's Home Companion, in announcing the revolutionary action in banking establishments, "but such fixtures have always made the depositor or borrower feel more like a suspicious character than a welcome customer. Banks have tried so hard to wear an aspect of safety that they have made themselves grim and cold. The abolishment of cages is one of a number of instances of the tendency to humanize the nation's business."

OLYMPIA, Wash.—A plan to have state teachers from Washington state unless they received their training in state institutions has fallen by the wayside. The old board of education passed a resolution making such requirements effective Jan. 1, 1928. The new board, at a recent meeting rescinded the resolution and referred the matter to the legislature which meets in 1929.

The president's message proposed creation of a federal board to administer a revolving fund to help farm co-operatives. We hope the revolving fund won't get any sinking spells.

A Modern Atlas

Gripings
By GUS

If you think the old main drag don't look pretty of a night you ought to come down and look at it, and then drive out West Main and back and there's the pretty sight. When you top the hill there by Teals apartment you get bird's eye view of the whole works.

Speaking of Teal reminds us of something. He's got so much of his store out in front of itself that people have to hunt somebody else's side walk to throw their pecan hulls on. Bill Paschall said this morning that he was getting tired of cleaning up the mess and was going to take the matter up through the courts.

The thing to do is to have Teal pinched for being a public nuisance and make him put up a detour sign when he blocks the road, or, at least, a sign that says "One way traffic only."

We saw where the first wreck of a new Ford happened up in Frederick, Oklahoma. It's a damn strange thing to us that Pete Peters of the Cisco chamber of commerce didn't think of that and arrange for it to happen in Cisco. They haven't had a blank thing happen at the Big Dam all winter, and Pete's the type that would have put the wreck over in his style if he had thought about it in time.

Another funny thing about Cisco is the weather forecast. Every time a cold wave leaves the north pole the paper runs a heading, "Cold Wave Heck, you think the cold weather was sent to Cisco in a box and released for distribution to West Texas from there."

But you got to hand it to the boys over there for having the old fighting spirit. They sure believe in their town.

WHAT THEY'RE SAYING

Fournier Solved Johnson.
Walter Johnson is to manage the Newark team of the International league next year. His first baseman will be none of them the hard-hitting Jack Fournier.

On the surface there doesn't appear to be anything about the above statement. However, if you discussed the matter with Walter Johnson he would probably tell you he much prefers having Fournier on his team than in the lineup of the opposition.

The reason, you ask. Here it is: When Walter Johnson was the outstanding pitcher in the American league no batter in the organization took more liberties with his stuff than Fournier. No matter what his average was, Fournier always found the great Walter to his liking.

"Fournier is the toughest batter in the American league for me to work on," Johnson told me several years ago.

Perhaps that explains why Johnson secured Fournier for Newark the moment he outlived his big league usefulness.

Squawks on Decision.
Soldiers' Field in Chicago appears to be a tough spot for the officials in charge of the big sporting events that have been staged there in the past year.

The latest squawk comes from Morley Drury, captain of Southern California's great football team. Drury is one of the best football players I have seen in action in years. It is unfortunate that he had to get mixed up in the dispute over the umpire's decision.

Drury claims Notre Dame got a long count which put Southern California on the short end of the score. Had the umpire ruled a safety on the play in question Drury's team would have won, 9-7, instead of being defeated, 7-6.

If the squawk did nothing else, it wised up a lot of fans to the control and possession of the ball thought, as differentiating between just a fumble or a free ball.

Field Must Be Jinx.
Just a few months prior to the disputed football ruling we had the referee of the Tunney-Dempsey fight in a peck of trouble because of his manner of tolling off the seconds after Dempsey had dropped Tunney to the canvas.

The motion pictures made it bad or the official in charge of the championship bout because his method of counting over Dempsey was just the opposite to his style when Tunney was on the floor.

This feature of the now much discussed battle has never been explained in detail by the referee and I have always believed it would tend to set him right if there was a satisfactory solution that he could present.

It was a strange coincidence that just one year ago to the very day on which the Notre-Dame-Southern California game was played a squabble took place in the Army-Navy game played on the same field.

It will be recalled a Navy back fumbled and an Army man recovered, converting the play into a touchdown. There was an argument that the Army man had kicked the ball a matter of some 20 yards before he finally picked it up.

The officials ruled otherwise, but the slow-motion pictures merely confused the situation. Three big sports events inside of a year, all featuring a questionable ruling, makes Soldiers' Field look like a jinx for the officials.

PRE-HOLIDAY DANCE TONIGHT'S EVENT.
The pre-holiday dance to be given tonight by Carl Barnes Post No. 69 at the Legion hall is expected to be the largest attended pre-holiday event so far this season. Ward's Varsity revelers will play and since this is a snappy, classy orchestra, the music is expected to please the most exacting.

The atmosphere is just right for dancing—the hosts claim the best dance floor in the west—and promise a "red hot dance in a red hot town."

1920 CLUB HAS FINAL MEETING OF YEAR.
At yesterday's meeting of the 1920 club the members said good-bye to each other as far as the club is concerned until after the first of the year, as there will be no meetings until Jan. 5, 1928. Mrs. Garvin Chastain, president of the club, concluded the afternoon's program by wishing the club members a "Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year."

The study for the afternoon was led by Mrs. R. H. Hodges.
Mmes. Ross Hodges, Roy Jameson and R. F. Holloway ably handled different characteristics of Frost's works and Mrs. Chastain read one of Frost's poems, "Good Bye—Keep Cold." Mrs. O. L. Phillips was appointed as a delegate to attend the county federation at Eastland Saturday.

After talks by Mmes. Phillips and Hagaman on the tree-planting campaign, pledge cards were given out to the various members present.

MRS. HELEN GIFFORD CLEGG SENDS MESSAGE TO FRIENDS.
Mrs. Helen Gifford Clegg writes to a friend in Ranger that she is having a number of inquiries in regard to her safety since the Buckingham hotel annex burned. In this card she states that while it was an awful night and all of them were torn with emotion and sympathy, the occupants of the Buckingham, in which she is housed, escaped unhurt. The annex is across the street from the main hotel, Mrs. Clegg explained.

COUNTY FEDERATION AT EASTLAND SATURDAY.
As many Ranger club women as possible are asked to attend the county federation meet at Eastland Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. At that time a real Christmas program will be carried out. Mrs. Joseph Perkins will conduct the program.

Her last meeting of the county federation, held at Rising Star, ranks as one of the best ever held in the county as it for the first time realized its hope and aim the merging of the city and rural clubs in one interest. It is generally conceded that had this meeting been prior to the federation meet at El Paso, Eastland county and not Mitchell county would have won the prize for the best canning display.

ADVISORY BOARD OF GIRL RESERVES GIVEN DINNER.
Miss Lone Wright of Dallas, an officer in the Y. W. C. A., entertained the advisory board of the Girls Reserve of Ranger last night, with a dinner at the Gholson hotel.

The meal was served in the coffee shop at a table beautifully decorated in carnations and chrysanthemums. Those present were Mrs. Stanley McAnnelly, Ernest Fletcher and Misses Mattie G. Roberts, Helen Howdeshell, Gladys Maddocks, Lucile Hill, Norma Woody Graham and the hostess.

During the meal plans for the work of the board in connection with the Girls Reserve work were discussed.

MRS. L. R. PEARSON GIVES BRIDGE-LUNCHEON.
Mrs. L. R. Pearson extended to a number of her friends the courtesy of a prettily appointed bridge-luncheon at her home on Tuesday afternoon. Guests assembled at flower bedecked luncheon tables at 1:30 and after enjoying a splendid luncheon, spent the remainder of the afternoon playing bridge.

Mrs. E. Crawford won the high score trophy, Mrs. John D. Golsdon second high and Mrs. Harry Golsdon low.

Other guests present were Mmes. Frank Brahaney, D. H. Barnett, M. H. Clark, W. D. Conway, T. L. Lauderdale, Jerome McLeister, Walter Murray, Garvin Chastain, Howard Gholson, Fred Dreinhofer, C. C. Craig, Ed Maher, Eddie Horrigan, M. H. Hagaman, J. A. Shackelford, B. S. Dudley, Roy Jameson, Ghent Sanderford, Charles Conley.

The hostess employed Christmas colors in carrying out house, table and luncheon appointments.

HODGES OAK PARK P. T. A. PROGRESSIVE.
Hodges Oak Park Parent-Teacher association met in regular session on Tuesday at 4:45 p. m.

This association has a membership of 130 fathers and mothers with some splendid co-operation, but on account of the holidays so near at this meeting the attendance was not what to be expected. Those absent missed a rare treat when Mrs. Henrietta Ablard, delegate for this association to the State Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher associations held in Houston, Nov. 14-18, gave her interesting report, she being the only health nurse delegate present at this convention, was asked to talk at a health breakfast on "How Ranger Maintains Their City Health Nurse." Mrs. Ablard, after finishing her report, boosted the tree and rose-planting campaign now being launched. Also the midnight show, Dec. 23, the Goodfellows are sponsoring.

Mrs. J. Demmer and Miss Christine Schmuck's rooms tied in the membership contest for the beautiful blue-bonnet picture, presented them by the Parent-Teacher association.

The next meeting to be held Jan. 10, Miss Buchanan and Miss Robison, rooms to entertain with Mrs. S. Covington, Mrs. Clapp, Mrs. W. M. Fife and Miss Eva Long, hostesses.

Suburban Grocery Robbed Thursday Night, Near Ranger

Stocking up his larder in anticipation of a hard winter, was the trick of some thief last night, who broke in and robbed Chas. Hodges Grocery store, on the Caddo road, north of Ranger. Flour, meat, canned goods, snuff, tobacco, cigarettes and other staple and fancy groceries were taken, aggregating a loss of around $150.

Mr. Hodges knew nothing of the robbery until he arrived at his store this morning and found the front door open. It showed every evidence of having been pried open.

A car stolen from F. H. Sanders last Saturday night, was found yesterday by a hunter in a pasture near Thurber. It was stripped of casings and battery.

Winsome, Says Wise Wichita

Tomorrow in the World of Fashion

By LUCILE BUCHANAN (fashion Editor of Harper's Bazaar) (Written for United Press)
NEW YORK.—Fashions, at this moment, are at a stage where they take the attitude that says, most decidedly, "Be yourself." This winter is really the chance of a lifetime for you who have been bewailing the standardization of fashions for the past seasons.

You are not limited to type of hats. Position of waist-line has become practically optional, in fact almost "normal" in some cases. Skirt lengths are varied according to type of frock and fabric. Colors are subtle and interesting. In short, it is your winter, and you should make the most of it.

For street wear, let us look over your possibilities and note the variety of types you can choose from. There is, of course, the tailored costume of the type sponsored by O'Rosen. The coat is hip-length, and semi-fitted, or straight of line, according to what suits your figure best. This may be oxford grays or beige, or some neutral color, in tweed or in some beautifully woven cloth not too heavy for a suit. This type of suit worn with a jersey to harmonize or with a more formal blouse in heavy crepe goes out onto the street, for shopping, or for general morning wear in town, with two fox furs, silver, or blue, or beige.

Another type of street costume is one that Chanel has made successful. The coat is of tweed, of seven-eighths or three-quarters lengths, and full length, too, although that is not so rew. This coat is trimmed with beige fox or natural lynx to harmonize with the beige or brown of the tweed. A long stole collar of lynx reaching from neck to hem is extremely good. The frock consists of a tweed skirt with a blouse of thin Kashmir jersey and tweed, to match. Sometimes the blouse is more elaborate, and is of crepe with an ornamental belt-buckle and shoulder-bow, or cravat ends tied in bow-knot.

Another street type is the costume of very heavy wool jersey. It is extremely heavy, resembling tweed. This is in a street color such as beige, brown, or dark green, and is lined with a lighter weight wool jersey in a lighter shade or in horizontal harmonizing stripes. The collar and cuffs are of fox or lynx. Chanel and O'Rosen both show these.

A similar costume that may be worn for either street or afternoon is of velveteen, which may or may not be a "dressy" (if you can find a better word, use it) fabric—it all depends upon circumstances. The coat is of wood tan velveteen, made with a kasha cloth lining, and has sleeves very wide at the arm-hole and narrow at the cuff.

A wide tuck defines the low waist-line of this coat, and gives a decidedly smart line to the figure. Under this wrap is worn a checked velveteen frock of typical Vionnet design in tan and white, made with converging lines to the low waist-line, where it fastens with a buckle.

Other street types are the coats of black or very dark green soft wool fabric with beige fur that can be worn for afternoon, the Chanel scarf-attached coat, the Lavin slightly flared coat with the fur applied flatly.

For afternoon you may change your type entirely. You may go all in black, like a lady in the third act, or you may wear a vivid frock under a coat of darker tone, heavily furred with flat bands of fur to harmonize with the fabric.

Metal lame blouses, and blouses of fabrics touched with metal are conspicuous in the afternoon mode, as well as whole frocks of flecked or plain velvet to go under dark cloth coats.

The waistline on the afternoon frock is extremely flexible. It goes up in front, or up at one side; it is defined in two places, at the top of the hips and below the hips. It ties in front with a huge bow; it becomes a slim line almost at normal; it is merely a tuck showing where a waist-line might be.

There is nothing arbitrary about this winter's mode. Your figure is yours to dispose of as you see fit. You may be conservative and stick to the Chanel sports type of costume, or you may be the Louiseboulanger type, which is quite different, and a little quaint and quite a little elegant.

DALLAS.—Wheeler Chinn, negro, charged with robbery, owes the loss of his liberty to a baby in the home he robbed.

Chinn is charged with burglarizing the home of Dr. L. L. Keller. According to Dr. Keller, the negro stepped on an infant sleeping on the porch as he made his exit. The baby was seriously injured and its wails awakened the family in time to effect the negro's capture.

Hughes says he is "not a candidate in any sense." We know several who are candidates, however, without any.

SANTA CLAUS LETTERS

One little Ranger boy hopes that Santa Claus won't think he is a sissy because he wants a doll. Santa does not consider him a sissy at all for all little boys have just as much right to display an affection for dolls as do little girls.

His letter reads: "Dear Santa Claus: I am a little boy 5 years old. I have tried to be a good boy all the year. Here are a few of the things I want: A little desk, a good drum, and a fire truck like Chief Murphy's. Please don't call me a sissy 'cause I want a doll. Don't forget the fruit, candy and nuts. Glenn Bailey."

Dear Santa: I am a little boy 5 years old. I want a little train, a fire wagon and a football. Sister wants a doll and I don't know what else, as she can't talk good. We will be at our grandmother's, who lives in Lamesa, so please bring our things up there. I have a baby brother, too, so bring him some things to play with, as he is big enough to sit alone and play now. George Gray Wilkes."

May Not Play Against Penn

Unless Ned Green, star California tackle, pays a delinquent $10 student activity fee, he will not be allowed to play in the coming Penn-California game on December 21. Green's letter, earned this season, has been held up. The student association, which is handling Green's case, hopes to arrange it so that he will get to play.

BILLY EVANS' SPORT TALK

It seems the question of drafting ball players is again to be the source of considerable argument between the majors and minors.

As I talked with perhaps 100 minor league club owners at Dallas, Texas, during the recent convention, the thing that struck me most prominently was the inability of the minor leaguers to agree on just what they wanted.

Some strongly favored major league ownership of minor league clubs. Others just as strongly opposed it. Some favored the draft, others were just as desirous of severing relations with the majors.

Relative to having working agreements with the major league clubs, a certain clue was delighted to work hand in hand with the big leaguers in taking players on option, while other owners frowned upon the proposition and insisted on outright ownership of every player on their club.

With such a condition existing, it is very easy to see why it is difficult to work out a satisfactory agreement between the majors and minors.

What Barnard Thinks

In discussing the project with President E. S. Barnard of the American League on the way north from Dallas, he was convinced that the majors were doing everything in their power to be fair with the minors. For several hours President Barnard went over the disputed points between the two factions and, in practically every one of the debatable points, it seemed to me as if the majors had given ground in order to have the minors perfectly satisfied they were getting an even break.

With the scarcity of star ball players on the market for the past ten years, or since the war, it behooves the majors and minors to get together in order to make the proper development and advancement of the available material.

Under the conditions now existing in a number of leagues the chances of the player to reach his goal, the majors, is greatly handicapped by the conditions that now prevail.

Instead of a friendly feeling that should exist towards the majors, there seemed to prevail a belligerent attitude against the big fellows in many quarters.

Blizzard Wrecks Army's Biggest Plane

When an 84-mile blizzard struck Buffalo, N. Y., the other day, it wrecked this $30,000 Curtis army bombing plane. Air field employees were unable to get the plane under cover because none of the hangars was large enough.

Others who spoke all briefly included: Dean Kyle, Lt.-Col. C. J. Nelson, commandant; track coach Frank Anderson, freshman coach R. G. Higginbotham, James Sullivan, business manager of athletics; Dean Charles E. Friley, chairman athletic council; W. A. Duncan supervisor of subsistence; and Sikes, Sprott and Lister of the team.

In his talk, Bible nominated the Martin brothers, President Walton and Dean Kyle as the 1927 championship hunting team and the nomination was seconded and carried unanimously.

A Laugh From Atz

To me one of the most interesting characters at the Dallas meeting was Jakey Atz, manager of Fort Worth team of the Texas League. Any time I tired of listening to arguments—I have had my share during my 22 years as an umpire—I hunted up Atz, and he never failed to give me a laugh. During the meeting he slipped me one of the funniest race track stories I have ever heard. Residing in New Orleans during the winter, Atz spends much of his time at the track trying to pick the winners. Speaking of a certain horse and a bet he made on him recently, Atz remarked: "After putting down the bet it occurred to me I hadn't taken the precaution to inquire as to the condition of the track. I learned it was raining and the track was heavy." "Did that condition suit you?" I inquired. "I should say it did," replied Jake, "for that baby was a real mudder. Why, if that horse was hungry and you placed a pail of mud and a pail of cats in front of him he just naturally would eat the mud."

The New Jersey dentist who had to pay $11,500 for making a woman's lip was lucky. There are men who would pay twice that much to make a woman listen.

A scarcity of maple sugar is reported in Vermont. Maybe the sap doesn't choose to run, either.

Aggie Squad Is Served Venison Quail Dinner

Special Correspondence. COLLEGE STATION, Dec. 14.—By far the "wildest game" of the season was faced by members of the 1927 championship Texas Aggie football team when they sat down to the wild game dinner given here in their honor by President T. O. Walton and Dean E. J. Kyle of the College as a tribute to their season's record on the gridiron. Juicy venison steaks all garnished about with nicely browned breast of quail made up the piece de resistance of the dinner and the husky championship Aggies scored a devastating victory against this "game" fully in keeping with their victories on the playing field.

The idea of the wild game dinner was suggested by President Walton and the president himself bagged the venison for the occasion while on a recent hunt at the ranch of C. L. Martin and sons in Mason county. Dean Kyle was the nimrod who supplied the quail, this delicacy being added to the feast following a hunting foray on the ranch of Charles Menke near Hempstead.

Rudolph and Seth Martin, A. & M. graduates of the classes of 1908 and 1911 respectively and two of the four sons of C. L. Martin, all of whom attended A. & M., were honor guests at the dinner. Seth Martin accompanied President Walton on the quest for deer at the Martin ranch and he and the president regaled the athletes with an interesting account of how the venison was bagged. Rudolph and Seth Martin made the long drive from Mason county in order to attend the dinner.

Members of the coaching staff and the A. & M. Athletic council as well as the football players were special guests of the occasion also. President Walton presided as toastmaster, presenting first Rudolph and Seth Martin, the honor guests, who spoke briefly.

"I hope, President Walton said in his short talk to the athletes, "All of you men will play the game of life as you played on the A. & M. football team here. No success will be beyond you if you play the game of life as you have played the game here."

A surprise feature of the affair, at least for the coaches was the presentation of Joe Hunt, captain of the 1927 Aggies on behalf of the squad of gold watches to head Coach Dana X. Bible and line coach Charles F.

More Athletics Make For Peace Says Roosevelt

By GEORGE KIRKSEY
(United Press Staff Correspondent.
NEW YORK.—"The Olympic games do greater work for national and international understanding than all of the efforts of the League of Nations and treaties combined."

This is the opinion of Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, soldier, politician game-hunter and sportsman who won the Legion of Honor and the Croix de Guerre for bravery on the battlefields of France.

Roosevelt was speaking at a dinner given by the American Olympic committee to the sports editors and sports representatives of the American press at the New York Athletic club.

"Athletics breed sportsmen," he said, "and the more sportsmen we have the better this country and all countries."

The ninth Olympic games will be held at Amsterdam next July and August and athletes from practically every nation in the world will gather there to vie for athletic laurels. It is there, Colonel Roosevelt believes, that the foundation of international peace may be laid.

"Father was a great believer in athletics," Colonel Roosevelt said. "I remember well one of the mottoes he gave us kids. It ran:

"Don't flinch,
"Don't flinch,
"Hit the line hard,
"Another one was:
"The score doesn't matter, it's

The Great Annual Eclipse

how you played the game.

"I never was such of an athlete because the other fellow always beat me at every game I played, but I had just as much fun as he did.

"There is a lesson underlying all games. Athletics played as a kid will stick by you in later life."

Colonel Roosevelt made a plea for general athletics for the country at large.

"I had rather have the whole nation indulging in sport and lose the Olympic games, than have only a select few participating and win the Olympic games," he said.

"I am a great believer in corner lot baseball and I think the whole nation ought to encourage it among the kids."

Colonel Roosevelt made an appeal to the star athlete to set a good example for the younger generation to follow.

"One of Napoleon's mottoes ran 'Every private has a marshal's baton under his knapsack' and I believe every American kid has a college football hero under his persey."

EL PASO.—A stove has been installed in the holdover cell of the juarez jail where drunks are confined until they are in condition to return home. This, according to Mayor Antonio Corona, is in line with many improvements made in the Mexican city for the comfort of thirsty Americans.

Triple Banding

Not one, but three brown felt bands encircle and almost make the grade over the crown of a smart tan felt hat.

DALLAS.—It required the combined efforts of nine men to lift a 400 pound negro into an ambulance here after she fell and broke her right leg.

Several months ago the negro fell and broke her left leg. At that time the handles of the ambulance stretcher broke when it was lifted with her weight.

Paris Regards Lindbergh And Gilbert Models

By RALPH HEINZEN
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
PARIS.—Europe finally has awakened to the realization that the real American is best personified by Col. Charles Lindbergh and Seymour Parker Gilbert.

The recent note of the agent general of the Dawes plan to the German minister of finance, calling for the application of brakes on Germany's spending, centered the attention of the Old World again on that cold, calculating youth who at 35 has much to do with the finances of all Europe.

Parker Gilbert is the man to whom France, Belgium and Germany must voice their thanks for putting their financial houses on solid foundations. Just as the Dawes plan brought order out of chaos, Gilbert, as a strong neutral, applied it without ever arousing a single word of criticism.

When, three years ago, Gilbert was brought from Washington to assume supreme command of Europe's financial salvation, his appointment was a shock. He did not qualify under Europe's standards of measuring a master financier. He did not have the eye, and did not even possess the requisite whiskers.

But in three years Gilbert has won the appreciation of the Germans from whom he must take the reparations money, and the French and Belgians, to whom the bulk of it goes.

His success is largely due to his aloofness. He has taken no one into his confidence. His recent note was one of very few in three years. He scoffs at European politics and figures that no one can change arithmetic. Not a word of criticism has ever been uttered openly, but he must have thousands of jealous elders all over Europe watching for an inevitable fatal step which has never come.

Lindbergh and Gilbert have enabled the French at least to change their opinion of Americans. They have known many in the past who, upon taking residence in France have become more French than Poincare, and others who have been obnoxious by their hostility. The American who is an American is somewhat of a novelty.

Typical of the editorial attitude of Paris newspapers was the recent characterization of "Cri de Paris": "Parker Gilbert is neither Francophile nor Francophobe. He takes pride in remaining neutral among these unfortunate little powers of Europe. He is the most American of Americans, and he likes only his compatriots."

The barbers now call themselves chirotonors. But talk about the weather we had last Christmas would sound as sweet by any other name.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER,
NEA Service Writer
WASHINGTON.—The jolly old sport of robbing the Indians was long ago abandoned, according to popular impression, either because the Indians had nothing left to be stolen from them or because none were left to be plundered.

The seventeenth congress, however, will be told that the Indians are still being robbed, not only of property, but sometimes even of their lives through the neglect of those who are supposed to take care of them. It will be told that they have also been robbed of their liberty and the right to enter productive industry and the pursuit of happiness.

Although America has almost unannouncedly forgotten its original inhabitants and has left them to the mercies of the bureaucracy of the Indian bureau, they have a few good friends down here who are willing to fight for them. Every so often, someone not too busy making money or votes discovers what he considers the real plight of the Indians and flies into a permanent rage at the injustice of it.

Congressman Clyde Kelly of Pittsburgh was one who had that experience when he became a member of the house Indian affairs committee back in 1920. He has been working for the Indians so hard ever since, despite the fact that there isn't one in his district, that when an Indian thinks of the Great White Father in 1927 he is apt to think of Kelly or Congressman James A. Frear of Wisconsin.

Kelly and Frear are fighting in the house for abolition of the Indian bureau, while at the other end of the capitol Senator Burton K. Wheeler is expected to demand an investigation of the bureau. Kelly and Frear, incidentally, are republicans. There were other congressmen who fought the Indian bureau under the last democratic administration but who now support it.

"I found 200,000 Indians under a little central bureaucracy which dealt with them in arbitrary and autocratic fashion," Kelly says. "Indian property to the amount of $1,600,000,000, withheld from its owners, was handled by this bureaucracy—often wastefully and sometimes dishonestly."

"The Indians would be better off today if the bureau had been wiped out 25 years ago. They would now be members of the community, facing the world as free men. Instead, they now have no constitutional rights whatever, and are dealt with as children. In 1924 we passed the Indian citizenship act but it meant nothing because they have none of the rights of citizens. They don't have the right of jury trial and can be thrown in jail for months without even having their accusers appear before them. They have no constitutional rights of free assembly. They are judged and sentenced by Indian bureau employees.

"The Indian bureau gets away with its high-handed activities because of the general lack of interest in the Indians. It will take some public pressure to abolish it."

"We are now trying to lop off some of its activities and Congressman Frear and I hope to obtain legislation which will take the health and education out of its bureaucratic hands."

Kelly credits Secretary of the Interior Work with a desire to remedy the situation. He and Frear, apparently the only two men in the house who have made a study of the problem, are trying to produce a bill which Work will approve and which, Kelly says, "will begin the overthrow of the bureau."

We are still patiently waiting for the story of the huntsman who shot at the new Ford, thinking it was a rabbit.

PARIS.—Looking through a pile of old books acquiring dust on his shelves, a book dealer of Pont-a-Mousson was about to hurl one of them, a family prayer book, into the fire when he noticed an official looking document between the pages. Examining the document he found it to be the will of the proprietor of a nearly chateau executed the day the nobleman was led to the scaffold more than a century ago. The will bequeathed the man's fortune to the church and gave indications where the money was hidden. Search in the basement of the chateau revealed gold and jewels estimated at $2,000,000.

ERNEST LYNN

The Indian scrambled to his feet with an effort and again staggered toward the watch.

Lillie edged into the group, frowning. "Whose watch is it?" she asked.

"I suppose he thinks he's having a lot of fun," Lillie spoke bitterly.

"I will," he turned abruptly and strode toward Bredon just as the latter was extending the watch for the fourth or fifth time.

"I hate," said Lillie calmly as he wrenched the watch out of Bredon's hand.

He turned his back deliberately on the amazed Bredon and placed the watch in the eager hands of the Indian, who thanked him volubly if incoherently.

Bredon stood over him menacingly, his fists cocked, threatening to knock Lillie down again the moment he scrambled to his feet.

"Two to one on the little fellow," someone called. It was all that Lillie needed. It was his fight now and he'd finish it.

"Gentlemen," announced the referee importantly, "this here fight will end when one of the principals has signified he has had enough or is unable to continue."

"Seeing as how there's quite a difference in weight," he continued, "this will be strictly a fist fight, with straight fists and gouging barred."

"Ready?" the referee asked. Lillie nodded grimly, and Bredon stepped forward, a confident grin on his face, fists swinging.

Cries of approval went up from the crowd, for the smaller man had caught its sympathy. But they died out with alarming suddenness.

Again Lillie tried to spring back out of harm's way; but to have avoided that veritable windmill of swinging fists would have required more science than he possessed.

"Get back there," he said menacingly to Bredon. "You wait till he gets on his feet or quit."

Lillie scrambled to his feet in a half-daze. His legs were unsteady and he braced himself to meet Bredon's next assault.

He leaped at the other like a wild fury and beat him across the improvised ring in a surprising and relentless rush.

Bredon was too surprised to meet it. Their positions had amazingly reversed. A moment ago he had been the aggressor; now he was trying to keep from being hit.

The Indian scrambled to his feet with an effort and again staggered toward the watch.

Lillie edged into the group, frowning. "Whose watch is it?" she asked.

"I suppose he thinks he's having a lot of fun," Lillie spoke bitterly.

"Why don't you come for a ride with me?"

brought him back to the center and started them off again.

And Bredon, turned panicky in the face of this youthful tiger, curled up and quit.

"My name," he informed the wildcat, as they stood before Mag Woods bar, "is Pate—Henry Pate. What'll you have?"

"Ginger ale." Pate was mildly astonished. "I sort of thought," he said slowly, "that wildcats took their meat raw and their liquor neat."

"That night Gordon Lillie gave notice to his employer that he was leaving."

CHAPTER VI Joe Craig rode up the gentle rise and when he reached the top he reined in his horse.

From their little eminence they could see the rough ranch house of the Bar K. South of them flowed the Salt Fork of the Arkansas, several miles away; and in between was a vast herd, munching peacefully at the succulent grass.

The sky was flawless, and the earth a carpet of green. They had just returned from Colonel Chivington's ranch near Turkey Creek with a small herd of yearlings.

"Yes," Craig continued, "I should of been. You know, it ain't right to look on a landscape like this without being able to express your feelings in the proper kind of words."

"Take the Salt Fork, for instance; the only words I could ever rhyme with them two was salt pork—and this is beef country, Tony."

His appearance, too, had undergone a change. Already he was healthily tanned, and a week of ranch life, with man-sized meals for a razor-keen appetite, had been like a tonic.

Joe Craig regarded his young friend in a pleased silence. He lifted his head and was about to speak when something in the direction of the ranch house caught his eye.

It was moving toward them like a comet, only it was on a horse.

Tony saw it, too. "Who's that, Joe?"

Joe smiled. "That? Oh, that's a cyclone, I reckon." He spat carefully at a dandelion.

"Son, you're all wrong. She rides like all hell turned loose. She's 12 years old and she's been in the saddle pretty near ten."

He urged his horse forward. "Come on, Tony, we'll go and meet her before she breaks her neck."

But Tony stayed irresolutely. He frowned. "You go ahead. I'll ride over by myself."

"Well, I can't help telling the truth, Miss Rita, this is my friend, Tony Harrison. He's staying at the Bar K."

"Daddy was telling me about him," she studied Tony coolly, much to the boy's embarrassment.

Rita Moore had inherited her red hair from her father. From him also she had inherited a masterful disposition.

She and her mother spent most of the year in Kansas City, where Rita attended a boarding school.

Katherine Moore had readily persuaded her husband that rough ranch life, while it was desirable from many points of view, held forth very little in the way of educational opportunities for young girls.

The colonel's wife was a slender, gentle creature with considerable pride in her blood. She was a Virginian and, what was more, a Pridmore.

"I'm afraid she'll break her neck, Titus, the way she rides that horse of hers."

And Titus Moore chuckled. "Let the girl see Katherine. She can take care of herself. You can't raise Rita like a hothouse plant."

Bredon turned panicky in the face of this youthful tiger.

"No? Well, I wouldn't bother about it if I were you."

That was the way such discussions always ended. As for Rita herself, the coming of Tony Harrison meant but one thing to her: that one more person was around to do her bidding.

He rode forward, waving his hat, and getting an answering wave from the little demon that was galloping toward them.

"Joe," she addressed Craig, "make him quit and come with me."

Craig scratched his head and looked undecided. "Well, now," he began, but a stamp of her little foot, and a frown, stampeded him.

"Tony," he said weakly, "you'd better go for a while. This fence can get along without you for a bit. Besides, it's about 2 o'clock now, and I figure that's knocking off time for a youngster like you."

When they had departed he gazed after them and shook his head hopelessly. "Heck," he said to the remaining hand, "you just can't argue with her."

Heek agreed. "She's just bound to have her own way, Joe."

That evening, Gordon Lillie rode up to the ranch, on his way to Pawnee. He had been to Wellington, he said, to bid his family goodbye.

Lillie shook his head. "I learned there was a train holdup near Wichita a few days before we last saw him. The description of one of the men sort of fitted Benton, if that means anything. You remember he had a lot of money on him—that little sack of gold coins."

Craig nodded. "I wouldn't put it past him." He caught that curious look on Tony's face that he had seen before at mention of Benton's name, and changed the subject.

Lillie told him of his encounter with David Payne, and Craig swore. "That man's just a plain fool. When you meet the colonel I wouldn't mention that you had any sympathy for Payne. That's one subject the old man won't stand."

He rode away the next morning, leaving a present of a book with Tony.

That afternoon the imperious little Rita Moore again got her clutches on the unwilling Tony and was the cause of his nearly being killed.

LOUISIANA PAIR MODEL MURDER ON SNYDER-GRAY

Believed They Could Improve On Job Of Ruth And Judd, But Face Gallows Now

By United Press.
 HOMER, La., Dec. 15.—When a Long Island housewife named Ruth Snyder plotted with her corset-salesman lover, Judd Gray, to club her husband to death, the echoes of the affair were heard in the remote confines of the Louisiana town of Haynesville, La., near here.

They put an idea in the heads of Elisha Swift, ne'er-do-well soft drink salesman, and Mrs. Effie Jowers, wife of a small-town store-keeper.

As a result, J. P. Jowers, the husband, is dead, and Mrs. Jowers and Swift have confessed to his murder and are facing trial for their lives in a crime that is almost the exact counterpart of the Snyder-Gray murder—except that it was, if possible, even more sordid and repellent.

Copied Ruth and Judd
 The two prisoners admit that the Snyder-Gray crime was their model.

Mrs. Jowers, a thin, discouraged-looking woman who looks even less like a principal in a flaming romance than Mrs. Snyder, says:

"Swift and I read about the Snyder-Gray murder. Every detail of it. Swift thought he could improve on it by hiding the body so it could never be found. We thought that Gray and Ruth Snyder had made a mistake in leaving the body where it was."

Swift and Mrs. Jowers had been maintaining a romance for a year—a romance that everyone in town knew about but Jowers. Swift visited Mrs. Jowers every day, when Jowers would come home before he left. Swift would hide in the attic until Jowers had fallen asleep.

This might have gone on indefinitely had not the Long Island murder given the lovers an idea. So, one night, Swift waited in the dark attic with more than his natural craft. His son Paul, aged 16, was with him. Jowers was a big man, and Swift, who had planned things better than Judd Gray had planned, was taking no chances.

At last Jowers' high-pitched snore announced that he was asleep. Mrs. Jowers called Swift. He came into the bedroom. Mrs. Jowers held a light, and Swift swung a four-pound sledge hammer. It was soon over. Jowers was too heavy for Swift to carry down to his auto. So Paul was pressed into unwilling service, and father and son dragged the body down stairs, across the living room floor, and loaded it into the auto. Then they drove for miles to a bridge over a lonely bayou, where Swift tied heavy weights to the body and dumped it into the water.

The next day Mrs. Jowers announced that her husband had left her. Her story was generally accepted, but Sheriff John Coleman, suspicious, went to her home to question her.

It was Sunday, and she was varnishing her living room floor. This made the sheriff more suspicious; so, a few days later, when she was away, he entered and examined the floor.

As he suspected, the varnish was being used to cover bloodstains.

LIKE MRS. SNYDER, MRS. JOWERS HID HER LOVER IN THE HOUSE

THE MURDER WAS CLOSED PATTERNED AFTER THE SNYDER-GRAY KILLING

BUT MRS. JOWERS AND SWIFT SOUGHT TO HIDE THEIR VICTIMS' BODY

Mrs. EFFIE JOWERS

Mrs. RUTH SNYDER

Mrs. Jowers and Swift were arrested. After a brief questioning they confessed, implicating the boy, Paul. Deputies found Paul at a movie and brought him to the jail. The boy seemed relieved at being arrested.

"I'm glad you've got me," he said. "I couldn't sleep ever since that night. Lots of times I was going to tell about it, but Pop wouldn't let me."

Then the boy revealed a strange, shadowy drama—the drama of the semi-illiterate soft drink salesman forcing his son to help with a murder, stifling the boy's protests with blows and threats and compelling him to take part in a tragedy that robbed the lad of sleep for days afterwards.

When the two went to Jowers' house together Paul knew that Jowers was to be killed.

"I wouldn't do that, Pop," said the boy. "I won't help you do it."

"You'll do just as I say or I'll thrash you," snarled Swift.

Then, later on, on the rickety bridge over the lonely bayou while father and son poised the lifeless body on the rail, Paul pleaded again.

"I told Pop that wasn't any way to do," he says. "I told him that if he was going to do that he ought bury him right. I told him he should be buried. I asked him how he would like to be done that way."

But the boy's protests were useless. Swift made him help put Jowers' body in the creek. Later, it was Paul who showed the officers where the body was.

Mrs. Jowers and Swift offered to plead guilty and accept life sentences. But the prosecutor refused, announcing that he would put them on trial and demand the death penalty. The trial will begin soon.

And in the courtyard of the jail where they are confined, right under Swift's window, carpenters are building a scaffold. The sheriff believes in being prepared.

And there you have Louisiana's counterpart of the Snyder-Gray murder. The principals are a little lower in the scale, to be sure; the whole affair is a little bit more shabby, a trifle shoddier all around. But it is a parallel, as Mrs. Jowers rather proudly says.

Trying to Escape
 Mrs. Jowers, like Ruth Snyder thought her husband too contented with the rut in which life had placed him. She told, in jail, how once, years ago, she had induced him to quit being a roving preacher and become a store-keeper.

"Now, of course, I wouldn't like this to become known," she said, in her drawing voice, "but Mistah Jowuh was not such a very good preachuh. He wasn't educated so very good. You know, a preachuh has to be pretty educated these days to get any money. So we decided he was to quit bein' a preachuh."

And then—along came Swift, with a promise of relief from the life of a village storekeeper's wife. And then came the accounts of the Snyder-Gray murder.

Much Opposition Has Developed To Stock Ordinance

Opposition to the city of Eastland "cow ordinance" which was passed by the commission some weeks ago and which prohibits the keeping of cows and other animals in the city limits unless they are kept 200 feet from an occupied residence or house, is growing. A petition seeking to have the ordinance which is to become effective January 1st, is being circulated and quite a number of signatures are being attached to it.

The commission has authorized the city attorney to make a study of ordinances of a like character in use in other towns and cities of this section and he is doing that. Whether this means that the commission is considering modifying the ordinance or not could not be learned. It is known, however, that the commission wishes to work no hardship on anyone and is willing to go the limit to keep from doing so.

While opposition to the enforcing of the "cow ordinance" is growing, there is equally strong sentiment for its enforcement.

UNIVERSITY OF TEXAS THESIS REVIEW OLD TIME RANCH LIFE

AUSTIN.—The history of the cattle ranch industry in Texas is proving a fertile field for students of the University of Texas who are interested in writing thesis for advanced degrees. Two such studies were presented to fulfill thesis requirements for master of arts degrees during 1927.

One of these theses was prepared by John Allison Rickard of O'Donnell and deals with "The Cattle Ranch Industry of the South Plains." Included in the South Plains region, Rickard has taken that section of the state which is bordered on the north by the southern limits of Farmer, Castro, Swisher, Briscoe, Hall and Childress counties. The western boundary is the eastern limits of New Mexico from Bailey county south the point where the Pecos river crosses the state line; thence along the Pecos river valley to the intersection of that river by the Texas and Pacific railway. The southern boundary of the "South Plains" was taken as along the Texas and Pacific railway to Big Spring and thence to the intersection of the Cap Rock. The eastern boundary of the region was taken as the irregular north and south line of the Cap Rock.

A geological description of the region brings about a discussion of the forerunners of the ranchers who later came to locate in the South Plains. Early cattle trails, such as the Old March or the Old Butterfield Trail and the Goodnight Trail along with mention of some of the chief trail drivers and facts about some of the early cattle drives, are included in the history.

One of the first brands seen on the plains was the Lazy S brand of the Slaughters, who at one time held in fee simple more than a million acres of land, not including the vast amounts of land leased or grazed upon, according to Rickard. Other ranchmen of early times who are described in the thesis are C. O. Edwards, who settled in Crosby county in 1879; David Galbraith who established the Llano Live Stock company in Garza and Lynn counties in 1880; and John S. Chisum, who first established a ranch at old Fort Concho now San Angelo below the former county in 1862 but who was compelled on account of Indian raids to break up the ranch in 1867 in favor of a new location in New Mexico.

Much detail is given of the history of the organization and operation of early ranches along with mention of the enemies which had to be overcome by these early settlers. Chief among these enemies, Rickard points out, were "the Indians who dispossessed were filled with resentment and made robbing, stealing and murdering forays from the forests of which many south plains cattlemen suffered." Natural enemies inflicting hardships on the early day cattlemen were the prairie fire, droughts, cold weather and the natural cattle "die outs" which frequently swept over the region.

Brief descriptions of the leading ranchmen and their holdings are also incorporated into the thesis. Among these are the Singleton ranch the Lucien Wells Ranch, the M. K. Ranch, the Matador ranch, the Capital Syndicate ranch, the Spur ranch, the Slaughter interests and a biography of Roley C. Burns, one of the founders of Lubbock.

The thesis written by Rickard covers nearly 200 pages and included numerous maps and illustrations. Much of the material was gathered from interviews with ranchmen of the section by the author, along with research in old newspaper files.

The second thesis written on the subject of Texas ranching during 1927 is the work of Harley T. Burton of Clarendon. This thesis is a history of the J. A. ranch, the first cattle ranch established in the Panhandle. The thesis is dedicated to Col. Charles Goodnight, the first citizen of the Panhandle, and contains many of his records.

OUT OUR WAY

ing. As a part of this study, Mr. Lewis intends to make a canvass of northern feeders to determine the best type and quality of cattle which they are seeking to feed and where they fall to find that standard in Texas cattle. Mr. Lewis also expects to make a survey of methods of marketing Texas live stock. Most of this information will be obtained through information received from questionnaires sent to producers and shippers throughout the state, Mr. Lewis said.

LIVESTOCK INDUSTRY IN WEST TEXAS BETTER THAN IN YEARS

AUSTIN, Dec. 15.—The live stock industry in West Texas, including cattle and sheep raising in particular, is in better condition than it has been in the past decade, in the opinion of George M. Lewis, live stock specialist of the bureau of business research of the University of Texas, who has recently returned from about ten days spent in Fort Worth, Abilene, Sweetwater, Big Spring, Sterling City, San Angelo, Sonora, Del Rio, Uvalde and San Antonio.

Mr. Lewis has been interviewing ranchmen, bankers, chamber of commerce officials, county agents, live stock commission men and railroad agents in the vicinity of each of these cities regarding the general conditions in both the sheep and cattle industry. The prices of both sheep and cattle are high and there is no indication of a decline in either, Mr. Lewis reports. These high prices for their stock, along with oil royalties which are benefitting many ranchmen in the section visited by Mr.

Lewis, are bringing about the good financial condition to be found there. The bulk of shipping Mr. Lewis believes to be over and in the entire section visited, especially around San Angelo, he says that there are fewer cattle on the range than in several years. This scarcity has been due to the great demand for stocker and feeder live stock from that section by feeders in the corn belt and other northern states. This increase in demand has been due to the good grade of feeders which have been produced throughout the western Texas section by better breeding and better culling of live stock for agents in the vicinity of the ranchmen, according to Mr. Lewis.

Ranges are getting pretty dry all over the section visited by Mr. Lewis. Grass in South Texas is pretty good but it, too, is getting dry, according to Mr. Lewis.

In the Del Rio territory ranchmen have been feeding approximately 40,000 lambs this fall, which is a much larger number than has ever been fed before. These lambs are now moving to market where they are showing good flesh and are bringing favorable prices, Mr. Lewis said. The number of sheep has increased considerably in Texas, according to Mr. Lewis who says "in fact, most sections are pretty well stocked."

Mr. Lewis is engaged in working out an analysis of the shipment of Texas live stock, making a study of the percentage marketed in Texas markets and the percentage shipped to both northern markets and to northern feeders for further fattening.

GERMAN BUSINESS MEN ESPOUSE CONSERVATION AS YEAR CLOSES

BERLIN.—Politically, economically and socially, the year 1927 has witnessed a strengthening of conservatism in the German republic.

Conservative tendencies were eliminated during the 1918 revolution but they gradually began to reassert themselves in 1923. Prospects that liberal, labor or socialist groups might secure control of the young republic appear to have been crushed for many years; liberal tendencies occasionally penetrate into official German policy, but rarely emanate from it. The former feudal regime, in which the Hohenzollern court, military caste and big landed proprietors exercised decisive influence, has yielded to a republic dominated by cool-headed business men, manufacturers, traders and bankers in co-operation with a vast merchant class. During the past year these new German rulers fortified and cemented their sway over the country.

Economically, Germany, although still laboring beneath the burden of heavy debts, is forging ahead. According to official figures, new debts contracted by Germany at home and abroad since the war amount to 6,700,000,000 marks—without including the enormous reparations obligations. German ability to recover her industrial health and meet her Dawes plan payments, depends primarily upon an active trade balance—that is, a surplus of exports over imports. Although German foreign trade increased considerably in 1927, imports grew far more rapidly than exports. For the first nine months of this year the value of German imports rose to 10,300,000,000 marks, as compared with 6,900,000,000 for the corresponding period of 1926. Yet exports for the same period totalled only 7,400,000,000 marks, compared to 7,200,000,000 for January-September of last year. In short, while the nations' imports are slightly above the pre-war level, exports are about 75 per cent of pre-war. This foreign trade deficit means higher prices at home, higher taxes, bigger import tariffs and difficulty in paying reparations.

In such key industries as iron production, however, Germany shows immense progress. In the first nine months of 1927, Germany produced 9,700,000,000 tons of iron, as compared with 9,600,000 tons for the entire year 1926, while steel production also reveals a 20 per cent increase of last year. Coal production, too, is rising, generally achieving a 10 per cent increase over 1926. Meanwhile, the chemical and dye industry of Germany has attained gargantuan proportions and represents one of the greatest single industrial powers of the world.

The economic condition of the country remains in the shadow of the Dawes plan and the recent criticism of German financial policy, made by the reparations agent, Parker Gilbert, indicates that the coming year may see a revision of the plan, or at least its beginnings, as the sole alternative to a grave reparations crisis.

Politically the German republic is in the throes of pre-electoral fever. The next reichstag elections, which will be held between May and September, 1928, and which are expected to result in a slight but not decisive swing to the left, are causing a certain stagnation in domestic politics. In her foreign relations Germany continued during 1927 to straddle the fence between east and west, using Locarno as the opening wedge to improving her relations with western European countries and America, and reinforcing these relations through the League of Nations. The first year of German membership in the league, while not dispelling, undoubtedly mitigated the hostility to the league formerly perceptible among wide groups of the population. In the meantime, the Berlin treaty of neutrality enabled the government to maintain friendly, though by no means excessively cordial relations with the soviet union.

Disclosures made early in 1927 of secret relations between the German army and Moscow, entailing Russian munitions, deliveries for the reichswehr, embarrassed the German government and evoked a certain aloofness from Russia, later increased by the Anglo-Russian break which brought a slump in Russo-German business. The policy of Foreign Minister Stresemann was largely and successfully devoted to hastening the reconciliation between France and Germany. These efforts culminated last August in the signature of a provisional Franco-German commercial treaty which is expected to provide the basis of a permanent treaty of the same character. Other commercial treaties, including those with Japan, Jugo-Slavia and Czecho-Slovakia, tended to consolidate German trade relations abroad.

No record of 1927 would be complete without reference to the brilliant achievement of the two Americans, Clarence H. Chamberlin and Charles A. Levine, whose flight from New York to Cottbus, 50 miles from Berlin, not only represented a monumental achievement in aeronautic and sport, but evoked a spontaneous outburst of German-American friendship, doing much to wipe out the relics of wartime ill-feeling.

As the year draws to a close, the belief is prevalent that 1928 will be the most eventful since Europe's pacification after the war. Elections, scheduled to be held in the United States, France, Germany and possibly England, will have important repercussions both of German domestic and foreign policy. Moreover, the year 1928-29, which marks the beginning of the full 2,500,000,000 marks annual reparations payments under the Dawes plan, will confront both Germany and her creditors with the problem of assuring the smooth working of the plan under heightened difficulties.

The past year, however, has definitely aligned Germany—the new Germany which emerged from the ruins of military defeat—among the great powers. From now on, Germany must again be regarded as a factor of first magnitude in all international calculations, political and economic alike.

INJURED WOMAN BROUGHT TO RANGER FROM SANITARIUM
Mrs. R. N. Munday of Gainesville, mother of Mrs. H. G. McWhorter of Ranger, has been moved to Ranger from a sanitarium in Mineral Wells, where she has been recovering since Monday from a wrenched back received in an automobile accident.

Mrs. McWhorter, her three little sons and Mrs. Munday were in the car but only Mrs. Munday was hurt when the car skidded and turned over on the slippery pavement. Mrs. McWhorter said that she attempted to slow down on account of a wagon being in front of her, but the foot brake did not work so when she put on the emergency the car skidded and turned over.

Will Administer $100,000 Gift Of Pope Pius XI To Aid Mississippi Flood Victims

The gift of $100,000 made by Pope Pius XI to aid the flood sufferers of the Mississippi Valley, will be administered by the archbishop and four bishops, shown here, who represent the flood region. This photograph, taken at the annual meeting of the American Hierarchy in Washington, also shows Prof. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., Vice President of Georgetown University and President of the Catholic Near East Welfare Association, who was commissioned by His Holiness to convey the news of the gift of the Holy See to the American Hierarchy. The layman in the picture is Joseph F. Moore, of Philadelphia, General Secretary of the Catholic Near East Welfare Association, who was with Prof. Walsh in Rome when His Holiness expressed a desire to help the flood victims. Those in the picture reading left to right are: lower row—Rt. Rev. Camillus Van De Ven, Bishop of Alexandria, La.; Most Rev. John W. Shaw, Archbishop of New Orleans; Rt. Rev. Jules B. Jeanmard, Bishop of Lafayette, La. Upper Row—Joseph F. Moore, Philadelphia; Rt. Rev. Richard O. Gerow, Bishop of Natchez, Miss.; Rt. Rev. John B. Morris, Bishop of Little Rock, Ark., and Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., of Washington, D. C. Prof. Walsh, representing the Holy Father, will cooperate with the committee to determine the most effective measures of relief to reach the most people and to do the most good this winter when aid will be needed most. The committee will meet soon in New Orleans to determine just what form the relief made possible by the gift of His Holiness will take.

UNIVERSITY OF TEXAS OIL ROYALTIES HAVE PROVIDED SMALL BUILDING FUND

With a Royalty Fund on Hand of More Than Seven Million Dollars the School's Available Building Fund Had Derived to Date Not More Than $38,000.

"Black Gold from gushing oil wells" is a romantic figure of speech that creates visions of untold wealth in the minds of the reader; but University of Texas officials feel that it is little more than pretty figure. Even a road to prosperity paved with "black gold" may be long and torturous, they have discovered. Figures compiled by W. R. Long, auditor of that school, show that to Sept. 1, the latest figures available, the school's available building fund had derived only $38,000 from this source. On that date, interest payments on the invested oil funds had amounted to $203,374.98, of which amount $165,374.98 had been paid as premiums on the investments made. With oil royalties from the oil wells in West Texas amounting to $7,462,082 on Dec. 1, 1927, university officials find themselves still looking to the grass-fed steer to remove the decrepit, war-time wooden shacks from the campus and provide badly needed class rooms, laboratories and library facilities. At best, this is a slow-moving program, they ruefully admit. This situation, reminiscent of that in which Coleridge's "Ancient Mariner" found himself, is the outgrowth of legislative action on university finances. The school has two funds, the permanent fund and the available fund.

The available fund is mostly made up of the interest collected from investments of the permanent fund and is the only source the school has for building funds. The state constitution provides that the permanent endowment, which is nearly all in the form of lands, must be kept intact, that monies derived from the sale of these lands may never be spent, but must be invested in bonds of the state of Texas or the United States and only the interest used. It also limits the university to this source of revenue for building purposes, expressly forbidding the legislature from appropriating money for buildings on the university campus, as it does for other state institutions.

Court Rulings. With the discovery of oil on university lands, the question as to the disposition of funds from this source arose. Were these funds revenue from the land, as are grazing rentals, or not? The attorney general ruled that the oil was part of the land itself, and not a product of the land, since it cannot be replaced, and that, therefore, the money derived from this source must be placed in the permanent fund. The legislators made an effort to give the university the right to spend this money for buildings, but the attorney general ruled the bill they passed unconstitutional, and the supreme court upheld his ruling. University officials now hail this ruling as wise and for the best interests of the institution.

Then came the question of investing the oil royalties. The state constitution provides that the university permanent fund must be invested in state or national bonds. There are no state bonds to absorb so large an amount. United States bonds were the only source. The state comptroller was asked under what conditions the funds could be invested in these bonds, and ruled that the university could not pay more than par value for them. But all government bonds were selling at premiums of from $5 to $10 per $100 par value. When the deadlock seemed imminent, it was ruled that the university might pay the premium required; but that the first interest from the investment must be used to replace this premium in the permanent fund so that the money withdrawn from this fund for the purchase of bonds and the face value of the bonds would be equal.

Increase Expected. This meant that no available revenues from these bonds would be forthcoming for about two years. The first investments were made in the summer of 1925, after the various rulings had been made and confirmed, and the premium on these bonds has just been repaid. Bonds bought since that time have not yet begun to produce any expendable revenue. However, from this time forward a steady stream of revenue may be expected. Just how large a stream this may be is problematical. Financial organizations predict a steady lowering of the return from investtractive to those whose income tax is important. With these factors in mind, J. W. Calhoun, comptroller of the university, has figured that the university may reasonably expect an income in the future, after premiums are repaid to the permanent fund, of about $225,000 to $250,000 per year from its oil lands. In addition to this, grazing leases will bring in about the same amount. Royalties Grow. However, not all of this amount may be used for putting up buildings, not by any means. Premiums on current investments each year will amount to approximately $100,000, the auditor estimates, as long as the oil lands continue to produce revenue. This money must come from the available building fund. Then there is an item of $25,000 per year for supervision of the university's interests in the oil fields, another of about $35,000 for repairs and betterments and upkeep to existing buildings and other expenses, making the total to be deducted before funds may be set aside for actual new buildings close to $200,000 each year. It must be remembered that this fund is constantly increasing. Nearly $7,500,000 has already been derived from this source and it is still producing. Geologists and oil men have been asked to estimate the probable life of the pools found and the amount the university may reasonably expect from this source. The present low price of oil, so acute as to cause talk of a special session of the legislature to devise means of raising it, had altered these figures somewhat, but authorities generally are convinced that the pools have been at least half depleted and that $15,000,000 is a fair estimate as to the university's ultimate share. That would indicate that the university may ultimately expect a yearly income of from $450,000 to $500,000 from this source. That would mean that black gold will some day build one small building each year, or one large one each two years. At the present rate of income it would take the total oil income, not making deductions for premiums on investments or for maintenance of existing buildings, about two and a half years to pay for the new power plant now under construction on the campus. Another three years would be required for the library extension already planned by the board of regents and more than three years more for the chemistry building planned to take that department out of the half mile long row of wooden shacks it now occupies. That is, oil royalties for the next eight to nine years would be required to erect the buildings already definitely planned by the board of regents, without other projects totaling about $750,000 they have already approved. The building committee of the university places its needs for buildings needed at this time at approximately $10,000,000, or the oil income for 40 years, without help from other sources. With the other sources of revenue, and with the expected increase in oil funds available this time is cut to about 17 years, or about 20 years if there is no increase in the rate of income. This calculation is made on the rate of income. (Continued on page eight.)

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR SUNDAY

By H. W. WRYE.
 Topic: The Early Prophets of Israel.
 Golden text: "God, having of old time spoken unto the fathers in the prophets by divers portions and in divers manners, hath at the end of these things spoken unto us in his son."—Heb. 1:1, 2.

The 11 lessons authorized by the international series, beginning Oct. 2, have led the students to see the outstanding characteristics of five of Jehovah's prophets, viz: Elijah, Amos, Hosea, Micah and Isaiah. Also their mission, which pointed to Jesus Christ.

I—Elijah.
 Elijah was a prophet of purity. He lived a clean, simple life and sought to hold Israel toward purity in life and religion. In all history there is not another like Elijah. John the Baptist, the greatest of prophets, was compared to him. He was austere, living in remote regions, asking nothing of any man. He stalks across the pages of Jewish history alone and incomparable. Akab trembled before him, Jezebel's anger was kindled against him, but does lick her blood in the streets. Elijah was permitted to introduce Hazael, Jehu and Elisha to carry on the work after he was gone. He was a man of prayer. He prayed for a famine, and for rain, and for fire at Carmel, and all his petitions were answered as requested. He prayed for life to be restored to the dead child of a widow, and the child was raised to life again. Elijah had power with God. He had power over water, he smote the Jordan with his mantle and the old river divided and he and Elisha went over on dry ground. His power over natural law was demonstrated when he ascended to heaven in a chariot of glory. He was fearless, faithful and served God with fidelity.

II—Amos.
 Amos was a prophet of justice. "Let justice roll down as waters, and righteousness as a mighty stream." (Am. 5:25). Jehovah showed him the plumbline and he pled earnestly and effectively for justice. He was a prophet of judgment, foretelling the punishment that would be meted out to an apostate people. His messages are brief, but clear and to the point. He was a herdsman and a dresser of fruit trees, made no pretension to be a teacher or leader. He was moved by the Spirit of God to prophesy. He said, "The Lord Jehovah hath spoken; who can but prophesy?" This is like Paul who said "Woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel." Amos fearlessly condemned evil in other nations but especially denounced sin in Israel.

III—Hosea.
 More than in any other book, the tender compassion of God is told in touching phrase by Hosea. He is the prophet of the broken heart. One can almost hear the sob of a sorrowing God yearning over the plight of his people. "I desire goodness, and not sacrifice; and the knowledge of God more than burnt offerings." (Hos. 6:6). Hosea lived in the gladdened face of Jeroboam II, when Israel was powerful and worship was gorgeous, but under it was a fallen people. Idolatry was rife, luxury was prevalent; the simplicity of the ancient faith was lost, and Israel was corrupt at heart. Here are counsels and promises to a backslidden people. Hosea tells them that God says: "I will love them freely." (Hos. 14:4).

IV—Micah.
 Micah's prophecy is a remarkable blending of judgment and mercy. Chapters one, two and three are occupied with the arraignment of wrong practices among the chosen people. But all along it is seen that something else is struggling for utterance. And chapter four it breaks out: "And in the latter days it shall come to pass that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established on the top of the mountains, and it shall be exalted, above the hills, and people shall flow into it." Whatever happens to Judah and Samaria, the cause of Jehovah has victory ahead.

V—Isaiah.
 More than any other prophet, Isaiah held up the highest and purest ideals of the Old Testament. He was a prophet of the Kingdom which Christ is the head. He was privileged to see that kingdom in a vision and his entire prophecy points to four things: Messiah's people; Messiah's kingdom; Messiah's throne, and his glorious reign. Isaiah rises to a shout of triumph in the closing scenes of 3, H. & T. C. Ry. Co. survey $1. His prophecy where the prosperity of Israel and the peace of all nations are foretold.

 The Old Testament is a record of God's dealings with a chosen people through whose agency the world was to be made ready for a Redeemer. God spoke to the Jews through prophets, "hath at the end of these days spoken unto us by his Son." All the fine qualities seen in the prophets, purity, prayer, power, justice, compassion, judgment and mercy are combined in Christ. "Therefore we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, lest at any time we should let them slip. For if the word spoken by angels was steadfast, and every transgression received a just recompense of reward; how shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation?"

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON.—The president's message to the new Congress makes especially interesting reading when read in conjunction with his message to the last Congress two years ago.

He made it known that he left out some subjects for lack of space, but he discussed 28 subjects in only 21 pages as compared with 26 subjects in 25 pages in December, 1925. Subdivision of the 1925 message which did not appear this year were world court, budget, foreign debt, immigration, reclamation, retirement of judges, mother's aid, civil service, federal trade commission and government reorganization. New sections included those on commercial aviation, Pan-American air mail, good roads in Latin America, Cuban parcel post, protective tariff, farm loan system, flood control, American Indian, petroleum conservation, education, department of labor, public buildings and historical celebrations.

The messages are alike in many respects, but on three important subjects President Coolidge has changed his attitude. These are: military and naval armaments and Muscle Shoals. More cruisers, of course, are held to be necessary as the result of the failure of the Geneva conference and new developments have altered the complexion of the Muscle Shoals problem, but the president's remarks on agriculture obviously were a concession to politics for, while noting a great improvement in the farmer's lot, the president was willing to go considerably further before.

Agriculture, relegated as far back as page 15 two years ago, has not appeared on page 8. Linked with the protective tariff and the farm loan system, it received nearly four pages, as compared with a page and a half in 1925.

Then, Mr. Coolidge said agriculture as a whole had improved in the previous three or four years, but that many localities and groups were still in a "distressing condition," which was "probably temporary." The farmers, he was convinced, did not want any "government meddling," nor any system of direct or indirect price-fixing. A "new era in agricultural prosperity" which will probably be unprecedented lay "just before us" and the president would recommend nothing more than a bill to enable the department of agriculture to give prompt information on crop prospects, supply, demand, imports, exports, and so on. The president told the new Congress that the past year has seen a marked improvement in agriculture's general condition, although the farmers had not fully recovered from the post-war depression. "The farmer must be assisted only in working out 'his own salvation.'"

Mr. Coolidge reiterated some of his prime arguments expressed in last year McNary-Haugen veto statement used curtailment of surplus acre-presumption that the oil royalties remain the sole possession of the university; that the A. & M. college is denied its claim to one-half of the fund, that Prairie View is denied its claim to participation and that other schools do not set up a claim that will bring them a division of the fund.

In estimating the needs of the university, the building committee has taken into consideration the present plants of other state universities, and has tried to arrive at a building need calculated on enrollment. For instance figures compiled by the United States bureau of education for 1924, the last year available, show that with an enrollment of approximately 2,200, the A. & M. college of Texas has buildings valued at little more than $3,061,000. This estimate excludes the two branches of this school. For the same year, the buildings of the University of Texas, including the medical branch and the school of mines and metallurgy, were valued at a little more than $2,905,000 by the same bureau. The enrollment at that time was approximately 5,150. Other figures given by the same source show the University of California with an enrollment of over 17,000 and buildings valued at $12,323,000; University of Illinois, with an enrollment of over 11,000 and buildings valued at $7,606,000; the State University of Iowa with 5,200 students and buildings worth $4,263,000; the University of Michigan with an enrollment of 9,500 and buildings worth $11,795,000; Louisiana State with 1,400 students and buildings worth $4,150,000; Missouri university with 3,900 students and buildings worth $4,059,000; West Virginia with 2,300 students and buildings worth $3,246,000.

These figures are the basis of the calculation that with an income which it is felt will not exceed $500,000 per year for several years at least, funds available for new construction, it will not be less than 15 years before the school is caught up with its present needs and probably will be 20 years.

"But by that time, we will be as far behind as we are now, if the enrollment continues to double each 10 years as it has for the past 40 years," Mr. Calhoun states.

and finally proposed a federal board of men experienced in marketing and handling surpluses not due to wilful overproduction, with provision for a low interest revolving loan fund. In short, the government would help the co-operatives establish the farmer on a sound business basis. Meanwhile the president held material tariff reduction would be disastrous to the farmer. Two years ago, the president said Muscle Shoals should be developed primarily for nitrates. Since then Mr. Coolidge has come around to the contention of Senator Norris that nitrates cannot be successfully produced at Muscle Shoals owing to new and cheaper methods and that the project is now "mostly concerned with power." He agrees with Norris—and thus disagrees with the American Farm Bureau Federation—that Muscle Shoals can best aid agriculture if its power revenues are applied to fertilizer development instead of its obsolete equipment. Two years ago, Mr. Coolidge was well satisfied with the condition of national defense and warned against competitive armaments. This year, the subject was moved up from page 13 to page 3 and the president stressed the need of adequate military and naval preparation. To meet our naval responsibilities, we needed "a very substantial sea armament," with aircraft development, more submarines, more airplane carriers and a "material addition" of cruisers. We should not engage in competition but every thing necessary to guard our interests must be done. For all purposes White Crest flour excels.—Adv.
