SPORT DOPE AS SEEN BY RANGER FAN

By GUS COLEMAN
Having been asked this question many times and by so many diferent people, it has occurred to us that a little discussion in attempting to partially answer the question might be interesting to a great many fans. Not that we claim to be an authority nor anything like that but, having been rather close to the poys and their coaches this fall, we do consider ourselves in a fair posi-tion to know their attitude.

In the first place, it will not be necessary here to name all the losses through eligibility causes, but it is well to mention that with the loss of each good man the boys that were left on the team felt that they were just a little farther out in the wilderness. They have felt that their own individual task was increased, yet they have felt that their ability cope with the job could only be increased by experience and the on; ly way to get that experience was through trial by fire.

Overconfidence was the big factor in their defeat by Eastland, and we can say that without detracting one iota from the wonderful show of the will to win and fighting spirit shown by the Mayericks by the Mavericks.

Abhere trounced the Bulldogs while Garland Hinman was only a shadow of his normal self and Reeves crippled, too. The new men on the team had a real trial by fire then, but. at the same time, they were conscious of their weakness and felt somewhat lost without Garland back there behind the line of scrimmage talking it up.

Bulldogs just lack one man to enable them to meet the Loboes half way and carry the fight to them. This deduction is made after noting that when Garland Hinman plays his old tackle position it makes a line that holds, and when he is taken out and played in the backfield, the line is weakened but the backfield strengthened proportionately. It's the left talking it up.

The fact that they made no better showing against San Angelo than the Bobcats had two real men in there that were not in their game against Cisco or Breckerridge.

And now they are being groomed to meet the Big Dam Cisco Loboes. It is conceded, even by no less authority than Tom Whitehead of the Cisco Daily News, that the Loboes look by far the best on paper. In their comparative showings they find the backfield strength, the hile is darkfield strength, the field strength, the hile is darkfield strength, he hile is darkfield strength, he hile is darkfi

They have no doubt had a little stage fright and a little sort of an inferior complex because of their lack of experience, but this seems to be passing off and it don't look like they are much afraid of the Big Dam Loboes. If they can just make up their minds to put out the stuff they have in them they will come off the field next Friday happy and secure in the knowledge that they did come through and did uphold the reputation of the 1926 West Texas champions. is being acclaimed one of the best in the east. Ernest Whitehall led the team in gaining ground at San Angelo, while Hamilton was second. Ernest is a little light and this is his first year out, but he tackles like a demonand puts everything he has into every play.

Hamilton looks like the best bet for one reason alone. That one reason is that he has the physical build to be the outstanding halfback of the district. He played the full game at San Angelo and put up the best game he has played this season. It just appears that the success of the Cisco game depends upon how well Charlie will carry out his assignments and how much of the old "stuff" he will put into his work.

This will be just about the last story in which we can say that the boys are inexperienced. They have been in three conference games this

They will meet the Kansas Aggies of Manhatton in the second bi-sectional game of the season with the Missouri Valley. Missouri was previously drubbed by Southern Methodist of Dallas.

Last year, Texas renewed a hostility with the Kansas team that was started in 1913. The Longhorns lost a heart breaker last year 13-3. In 1913 the Texas team won 46-0. This year will be the rubber contest and the Longhorns will be working hard to win the supremacy.

Texas will again be hampered with injuries. Tommie Hughes, one off the main sparfplugs of the Texas offense will be out of the game with a leg injury. When the planist's fingers strike the first few notes of this charming ballade, a thousand people in the audience recognize it.

How many people in an average audience would have known it twenty years ago? Very few.

Today our people know good music. They not only know it when they hear it, but even the youngsters can instantly attach the proper names to most of the classics. Quite a change from the days when most of us pronounced "Chopin"—if we had the temerity to pronounce it at all—as we spoke of a well-known exercise with an axe.

We all know what has brought about this change. We all know that music has come into our homes. First it came through the ordinary piano, then through the player-piano, then through the talking machine and now through the radio.

But what brought the music-producing mechanism itself? If you stop and think a moment, you will realize that the greatest agency in this work has been advertising.

Advertising told us about these new things. It created in us a desire to hear better music and to possess these wonderful contrivances. And because we bought, we enabled manufacturers to produce these things at lower and lower cost, and to continually improve them in Furey cursed vehemently, but we didn't mind. We had already become accustomed to his swift transitions which were placed in our way.

"Well, if we have good luck and plenty of it, we may beat them,'

We race back to the jail in the officer's Ford and, inside, we claimed our right to remove our prisoner, execting every moment to be pound d upon by a process server. We did have a little of the luck Pete had oped for, for Furey was soon receipted for and hustled to the waiting automobile. The officer opened up the little jitney's throttle and ve sped into darkness.

Mile after mile we sped along in the night. My eyes were heavy and Pete had to jab me occasionally to keep me awake. Fureys' groans and complaints were the only sounds to be heard in the stillness. He tried to enlist the sympathy of our officer friend, but had no success.

Neither rete nor myself had eaten a bite since that arrain and we were glad to be temporarily rid of our prisoner that we might grab a bite and a few winks. The orficer who had accompanied us to the jail was a friendly soul and we chated with him. I was still somewhat nervous about Furey, even though we had jet him locked in an iron cell. I asked the fifteet of the number of ficer if he knew of some crustworthy person in whose home we may make the next evening. I didn't want to appear at the reilway station in daylight if I could help it. He said he might think of some one and suggested that he go home and get his Ford while we were eating, the man (his name was Padgett) was a fraternal brother and I felt fully justified in trusting him.
