MITCHELL ASKS VERDICT OF "NOT GUILTY"

FARMERS ARE LOOKING AHEAD TO NEXT YEAR

Harvesting Season Nearly Over and Ground Being Prepared for Next Planting.

Harvesting of crops in Eastland County, generally very good, is drawing to a close and farmers are beginning to look forward to another year. In some portions of the county ground is being broken and prepared for wheat sowing. A terracing program is soon to be inaugurated, many of the farmers having pooled their funds to purchase terracing instruments.

County Agent R. H. Bush states that, in his opinion, Eastland county farmers as a whole are in a better condition financially than they have been in the last three or four years. "Farmers are being improved in many ways and as a rule the farmers of Eastland County have plenty of good work stock and farming implements," Mr. Bush said.

The peanut crop, which is largely in the sandy land belt of the southern part of the county, is good and is now being harvested. The recent freeze did little damage to the crop. The rains, however, have done some harm to the peanut hay. The crop to date has been nearly all pulled and is now being threshed and moved into the barns. No growers seem to be selling peanuts as yet and there are no market quotations, it is stated.

The feed crop has been unusually good considering the unfavorable weather condition early in the season, and has nearly all been saved. Cotton was damaged considerably by the boll weevil in the latter part of the growing season and what top crop there was left by the weevil was virtually destroyed by the recent freeze. There is yet considerable cotton to be picked, and pickers are going ahead as rapidly as the changing weather conditions will permit.

39-Inch Potato Weighing Nearly 14 Pounds Shown

The rivalry for bringing in the largest sweet potato seems to have reached its climax in the large specimen of a red Bermuda raised by E. P. Dempsey and now on display in the windows of the Adams Grocery Store, Rusk street, Ranger. This specimen measures exactly twenty-nine inches the short way around and tips the scales at thirteen pounds and eleven ounces—just five ounces shy of fourteen pounds.

The potato was grown on the Dempsey farm, three and three-quarter miles north of Ranger. It is almost a perfect specimen. It looks more like a pumpkin than a potato save for its color. It is more than three pounds heavier than the mammoth specimen shown at the Citizens State Bank recently. It sold for 50 cents—a record price for a single potato so far as can be learned. It will not be re-sold but kept on display, it is said, for all to see.

STRIKING SEAMEN CLASH WITH AUSTRALIAN POLICE

FREMANTLE, Australia, Nov. 2. The seamen used rocks and clubs and the police charged with drawn batons. One constable was so badly wounded that he was taken to a hospital. Many of the strikers were seriously wounded.

PEDLAR BEING HELD FOR INVESTIGATION

Members of the Eastland county sheriff's department arrested a man late Monday afternoon who was peddling goods about Eastland. He is being held in jail for investigation. After his arrest the man told a pretty straight-forward story about where he got the articles he was selling, but failed to convince the officers.

DRAW POKER ENRICHES THE AMERICAN LANGUAGE

Draw poker owes its final perfecting to a captain in the United States Army, then stationed at St. Louis. The name of this officer was Jefferson Davis, who afterward played a more dangerous game for high stakes and lost.

But wherever it came from originally, draw poker has enriched our American language with stand pat, bluff, show-down; and it has also infiltrated into the French tongue, wherein the verb bluffer and the noun bluffeur are now understood of the people.—International Book Review.

ANNE DOUGLAS SEDGWICK MARRIED HER NICEST CRITIC

Mr. Basil de Selincourt, then a staff writer for an English review, wrote a glowing tribute to one of Anne Douglas Sedgwick's novels. Her acknowledgment began a correspondence that resulted in a personal correspondence with a romantic termination.

After they were married they went to live in the delightful house where for sixteen years they have worked and laughed together, outside the little village of Kingham in England, at "Far End."—International Book Review.

BREAKING OF DAM FLOODS BIG AREA IN NORTH WALES

LONDON, Nov. 3.—Flood waters in Lake Llycvgiau, in North Wales, broke through the dam there last night, pouring a great wave through the Conway valley and sweeping away dwellings at Port Lloyd, together with a church and a schoolhouse. The dam burst with a roar, which was followed by a series of terrific explosions and the electric lights went out in many towns. The dam held back about 18 billion gallons of water.

VOTING TODAY FOR MAYOR OF GREATER NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—With betting offers as high as 15 to 1 on State Senator Jimmy Walker, Tammany nominee, New York city today is voting for a new mayor. Backers of Frank D. Waterman, republican candidate, continued to predict victory for him, but it was generally predicted that Walker would roll up a two to one majority.

Weather conditions were unfavorable to a large vote. It was a gray, damp day, with the temperature near 40 degrees.

ALLEGED FRAUD WORKERS AWAIT REPORT OF JURY

HOUSTON, Nov. 3.—The fate of Jacques Blevins and eight co-defendants, charged with using the mails to defraud in connection with the sale of stock in the Southern Motors association, was in the hands of a federal jury today.

Their Romance Ends

Her famous "love in a cottage" exploded for Josephine Pancoast Leidy, the former "Fifi" Widener. She has filed suit for divorce against Carter Randolph Leidy. ## Eastland County Rotary Clubs To Hold Next Inter-City Meeting In Ranger

The next inter-city meeting of Eastland County Rotary clubs, which meets every four months, will be held at Ranger, in the Gholson Hotel, Wednesday evening, Nov. 18, at 7:30 o'clock, according to an announcement made by the inter-city committee, composed of members from the Eastland, Cisco and Ranger Rotary clubs, at the regular weekly meeting and luncheon of the Eastland Rotary Clubs yesterday at noon.

Rotarians Raymond Teal and John Thurman of Ranger, and Retarian Foley of the Cisco Club, were present at the Eastland club meeting, and Retarian Teal made a short talk in which he told those present something of the plans for entertaining them at the Ranger meeting.

"Heretofore these inter-city meetings have been stag affairs, but this one is for the Rotary also, so bring them along," Mr. Teal said.

William Pannell, chief justice of the Eleventh Court of Civil Appeals, was on the program at Monday's meeting for an address and responded with a short, but eloquent speech that was very much appreciated by the audience.

Ranger Heights Will Soon Have Scenic Driveway

A scenic driveway simulating the driveway up the mountain to the Wrigley hotel on Catalina island is being constructed up the hill to Ranger Heights and will soon be completed, according to the city engineer and workmen. There will be lacking the perilous heights of the California driveway with which it is compared but otherwise the analogy holds.

This road will have a sixteen-foot five-inch base of gravel with curbing and cross-cuts for side streets. The money to build it has been supplied by city and property owners jointly, the property owners having already raised something like $400 to pay for the gravel laid down on the ground, the city paying for the construction. The fund will, in all probability reach an aggregate of not less than $500, which is being raised by voluntary subscriptions, according to H. W. Purser, who has the collection of it in charge. When completed, the road will be almost a perfect replica of the road to City-Country Hospital, it is said.

CROSSCUT BANKER GETS NEW OIL WELL

According to A. E. Hudson, brand inspector for the West Texas Cattle Growers' Association, vice president Wakefield of the Crosscut Guaranty Bank, who has already cleaned up a fortune in oil, brought in a 400-barrel well there the latter part of last week. Mr. Hudson has just returned from that little city to the southwest, which is only a trifle more than an hour's drive from Eastland and Ranger. He owns a 640-acre tract six miles west of Crosscut himself, but has not yet prospected for oil.

Local Company Completes Mile Line to Wiles for Increased Fuel Supply.

The Southwestern Gas, Light and Power Company of Ranger has completed its line to Wiles, where it is now connected with that rich gas field, seven miles to the north, which it has entered for an increased fuel supply to take care of future emergencies, it is stated. The line is seven miles long and is of two-inch pipe.

The present addition to the company's gas supply is only about half a million feet a day from the single well (the Cosby), it is said. However, the Wiles field is comparatively new and those familiar with the situation there, believe numerous other wells will be opened up in the field. That this connection will result in increased activities in the Wiles field, is the opinion of gas and oil men, but it is not stated on the authority of anyone now connected with the companies operating in that field or either of the gas companies utilizing its output.

HECKLES APPOINTED TELLER IN CITIZENS STATE BANK

MRS. STILLMAN SAYS SHE WILL GET DIVORCE

Says Her Husband Has Agreed To Everything Except Financial Settlement.

By United Press.
 NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—A staff correspondent of the New York World has penetrated the fastness of Canada to Camp Stillman at Grand Anne, Quebec, and obtained from Mrs. Anne U. Stillman confirmation that her husband had agreed to give her a divorce. The interview appeared as a copyrighted dispatch in the World and speaks of a great change that has come over James Stillman, multimillionaire banker.

With Mrs. Stillman was Fowler McCormick, son of Harold McCormick of Chicago, the dispatch said. Both are described as denying singly and together any intention of marrying. They did not deny, however, that a great bond of sympathy existed between them.

"I am too old and he is too young," Mrs. Stillman is quoted as replying to a direct question when asked if she and McCormick planned to marry.

Mrs. Stillman is pictured as believing that several factors, principally the elimination of Florence Lewis from his marital problem, have conspired to make her husband change his mind. Everything had been agreed upon between them except the financial settlement, she indicated.

COUNSEL SAYS MITCHELL IS GREAT PATRIOT

Insists Government Fails To Prove Harm To Discipline Or Intent Thereof.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—Col. William Mitchell today asked the court-martial to return a verdict of "not guilty." Through his counsel he asked the court to find the prosecution had failed to prove in a single instance that his critical statement concerning the war and navy departments had injured good order and discipline.

After a short reply by Judge Advocate Sherman Moreland, Reid's motion was overruled.

Swinging into his attack on the army's case, Reid then launched a formidable argument based on the contention that ninety-sixth article of war, under which Mitchell is being tried, requires proof of harm to good order or discipline to obtain conviction.

"Not one scintilla of evidence has the prosecution introduced to prove any intent to bring discredit on the military bodies of the country or any harm to discipline or good order," declared Reid. "How can any fair-minded citizen having his country's welfare at heart contend for one minute, having in mind the events that led up to this issue, that they were done with any other purpose than to arouse the dormant interest in aircraft arms. No one can deny that the issuance of the statements could have been other than the author rendering the greatest service ever rendered, an act of the greatest patriotism."

The prosecution has failed utterly to prove any intent to bring discredit on the military bodies of the country or any harm to discipline or good order," declared Reid. "How can any fair-minded citizen having his country's welfare at heart contend for one minute, having in mind the events that led up to this issue, that they were done with any other purpose than to arouse the dormant interest in aircraft arms. No one can deny that the issuance of the statements could have been other than the author rendering the greatest service ever rendered, an act of the greatest patriotism."

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—Prosecution in the Mitchell court-martial today granted a subpoena request for 73 defense witnesses, including three cabinet officers, and recessed until next Monday.

Granting the request for the array of witnesses does not mean the defense will be allowed to prove the charges made by Mitchell. "We are going to be very liberal," Col. J. I. McMullen, assistant judge advocate, said.

Major General Howze, president of the court, warned both sides he would refuse further delay after Monday. He told the prosecution to give the defense all possible aid in obtaining witnesses.

By THE FENCE RIDER. (Items for this department must be phoned in to the Fence Rider, by 12 o'clock daily in order to insure their insertion. Don't be bashful. Jingle the telephone bell.)

Was it a high school boy who placed the Fence Rider under obligations by getting those plays on the side lines while me and old bronc saw the game? It was—Knott.

We went. We saw. We got ticked. We took our medicine and had a real good time—everywhere else except on the field of glory—glory for Abilene. Oratory and song to Demosthenes and Patti turn in their graves, were on the recipe for down heartedness administered on the train returning to Ranger.

And while speaking of the Ranger Chamber of Commerce, wasn't it a shame to frame a fellow up and get him so close to the jail he could smell the rusty cells before he ever suspected it was a frame up? What has that to do with the Chamber of Commerce? Not a thing. Not a thing.

There were other echoes in the air but they fade with time. It was a great day—all but the game. And it was a great day at the game for Abilene. Furthermore, who could help admiring that perfect performance we loved against? Light but fast—trained to the queen's taste—on and on hours, it is said.

Kept abstemious in habit as becomes high school players, it is further said. Kept clean, played clean. If Ranger had to be beaten, it was almost a joy to be beaten by a team live that.

Now a few echoes of the streets. Reports come to The Fence Rider that somebody murdered a duck during the late cold spell. Verification is lacking.

COMMON MALADY IS DANGEROUS TO EXPECTANT MOTHERS

More Than Twenty Thousand Expectant Mothers Pay With Their Lives Every Year for Neglect of Serious Condition.

Many of those women who made the supreme sacrifice, paid with their lives for their error in trying to perform the miracle of bringing a new life into the world, without preparing their organs for the task in advance.

"It is its proven reliability to overcome and stamp out catchup of the generative organs which is responsible for the wonderful success St. Joseph's G. R. P. is now enjoying in relieving thousands of weak, thin and undernourished women of their suffering and pain and restoring them to health and happiness, with plenty of energy, vitality and buoyancy," says the representative of the discoverers of this phenomenal medicine.

Thousands of expectant mothers are now getting themselves in readiness for this great event in their lives through the consistent use of this marvelous medicine which not only relieves them of the suffering and pain caused by nature, but strengthens and invigorates their system, builds up real solid flesh, tissue and muscle, and stimulates the healthy, regular functioning of their bodily organs.

MAY SEYMOUR FOOTLOOSE

by BEATRICE BURTON

THE STORY SO FAR:

May Seymour, whose husband killed himself because of her love affair with another man, returns to her home town after a year's absence. She sells her property, and with her tiny fortune in cash, sets out to find and marry a man with money.

At Atlantic City she meets Herbert Waterbury and Dan Sprague, through a divorcee, Mrs. Carlotta Frothing. Both men pay suit to May, greatly to the distress of Carlotta, who has been in love with Dan for years.

May finds Dan very attractive; but she sets her cap for Waterbury, having made up her mind that he is the rich husband she is looking for. Finally he proposes, and May plans to marry him within a week. She gives him all of her money to invest for her.

But almost at once she regrets this when Carlotta, leaving for her home in California, warns May not to put too much trust in him. Worried, May goes to Waterbury and demands the return of her money, and an hour later he disappears.

Frenzied, May sells her jewelry and fur coat to buy a railroad ticket to California, intending to spend the winter with Carlotta, who had previously invited her to do so. On the way west she stops off in her home town to visit her own friends, Dick and Gloria Gregory. One day while she is lurching downtown with Gloria, she meets Ulysses Forgan, a widower, who is mildly in love with her. He takes her to his house to aid in chaperoning a party given by his young daughter, Sally. On the drive home May tells him how she has lost all her money, and she cries on his shoulder. Ulysses puts his arm around her protectively, but fails to make love to May.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY: Ulysses slowed down his car as they reached the sprawling outskirts of the town, and the wet road became a city street. He seemed to want to make his ride with May last as long as possible.

And when, at last they drew up before Dick Gregory's house and May opened the door of the car to step out, he suddenly leaned over and gripped her cold bare hands with his.

"You spoke of going to Los Altos this winter," he said awkwardly. "When are you leaving? Am I going to have another chance to see you?" May caught her full lower lip with her teeth, and dropped her eyes demurely. She said nothing. But in the silence and the darkness she managed to tell Ulysses that if he wanted to see her again, it was up to him!

Without a word or a look she plainly told him that she would love to see him again—and again! She told him that with the soft pressure of her palms against his—with the quick in-drawn sigh she gave.

May was a born flirt. She was the kind of woman who can tell a man more with the brushing of her shoulder against his than another woman could say in a 10-page love letter! It was as natural for her to flirt with men as it was for her to yawn when she was tired or laugh when she was amused.

Her lure was part of her. Some women are born with that lure—the power to attract men; and some are not. That is why many a rapturous beauty goes to her grave an old maid, while a homely girl with a "come hither" look in her eyes marches up to the altar with the town catch!

"Let me see you tomorrow," pleaded Ulysses as they walked up the path to the Gregory's front porch. The light from the hall streamed out into the darkness, and in its orange glow May raised her face to his.

"Tomorrow," she echoed. "And tomorrow will be the last time. I'm leaving for California day after tomorrow."

She sensed, rather than saw, the look of disappointment in his face. "So soon?" he asked dismally. "I didn't know you expected to go so soon."

"No," was all May said. Ulysses shook himself. "Well, then?" His voice was suddenly brisk and cheerful. "I may as well make the best of the time before you do go! Will you have dinner with me, now, tonight?"

May didn't know why she eagerly accepted his invitation. She was tired and her head ached. Moreover she had eaten too many little cakes and sandwiches at Sally's party, and she did not want dinner.

But she found herself, saying, "Yes, I'd love to!" and running up the steps of the Gregory's house, to tell them that she was dining out.

"Now, what do you know about that?" Gloria cried to Dick when the front door had slammed behind May, and the sound of Ulysses' departing motor had died away in the distance. "She's been with that Forgan man all afternoon, and now she's going to spend the evening with him. And she hardly knows him, Dick!"

Dick Gregory laughed. "May always was a fast worker," he commented dryly. "She knows this Forgan has a lot of money, and she's probably picked him for her second husband. May was born with an itching palm, if you ask me." "You never did like her," Gloria answered him with a flash of spirit. "And it's not quite fair to say that she's after nothing but money, all the time."

"She's said so, herself, plenty of times, right in this very room," Dick answered with a shrug of his shoulders. "All I have is her own word for it. You've heard her say that between love and money, she'd always choose money, haven't you?"

Gloria had to admit, somewhat unwillingly, that she had heard May say that very thing.

"But she didn't mean it, I'm sure," she added loyally. "She was just talking to hear herself talk. Women do that, you know."

Dick shook his head. "Not your friend, May," he said. "She isn't the type that can talk a year without saying anything. When she says a thing she means it—and believe me, I'd hate to be in Ulysses X. Forgan's shoes this minute, if May's picked him for her next tea-kettle!"

"Oh, I wouldn't go so far as to say that. A man could do a lot worse than to marry May," Gloria defended her friend. "You don't know May so well as I do. And I know that underneath her hardness she's all right."

She picked up her mending basket and set down under the light to darn the absurdly small socks of Richard Gregory, Junior, who was fast asleep upstairs.

For a long time there was peaceful silence in the cozy room, broken only by the crackling of the wood in the fireplace. Then Gloria spoke again, musingly.

"May would be the very wife for a man like Ulysses X," she said, with a nod of her bright head. "She's heaps of fun, and Ulysses looks as if he needed a little fun in his life. Mother Gregory says his first wife was a perfect prune."

Dick looked up from his book and grinned. "Don't worry; Ulysses isn't going to marry your friend, the widow," he assured her. "He's too much of a fox to walk into May's trap!"

But if there was a trap, Ulysses had certainly walked into it. At the very moment that Dick was speaking, he was asking May Seymour to marry him.

He had stopped the automobile along the side of the road, and sat humped over the wheel staring into the circle of light that the headlights flung upon darkness ahead.

"May," he was saying, and his voice trembled on her name as he spoke it for the first time. "May, I'm lonely. How lonely I didn't know until I saw you again, today. I want you. I want you for my wife."

He turned in his seat and looked at her, his hands clenched upon the wheel. A look of surprise flashed out upon May's face.

"Oh, Mr. Forgan!" she breathed. There was surprise in her voice. But she felt no surprise. She had seen how it was from the beginning, with Ulysses. She had known that he was falling in love with her that day, a month ago, when she had gone to his office.

She had watched him from the corner of her eye all afternoon—and had made a private bet with herself that before the day was over he would ask her to marry him. And he had—just as she had known he would!

She had meant to take him, too; to be the mistress of his beautiful home. She meant to take him, now. But something deep within her—her consciousness perhaps—spoke for her.

"I don't love you," she said clearly. For a long moment Ulysses was silent, as he studied her face in the dim glow of the automobile lamps.

"No," he said at last. "I know you don't. I shouldn't have asked you what I did."

Without another word he bent forward and started his car. It shot forward into the rainy blackness of the night. May, leaning back against the leather cushions, felt a curious sadness settle down upon her—a sadness that she didn't understand. What was the word the Germans had for it—? "Weltschmerz?"

They dined at a little inn a dozen miles from town. The place was famous for its food, and the waiter who served them wondered why they ate so little.

They talked very little too. May, who usually chatted like a brook, was strangely silent as she crumbled bread with her white, pointed fingers. Under Ulysses' grave eyes she twisted uneasily in her chair. She searched her mind for something to say—something light and frothy and amusing. But no words would come.

At last the meal was at an end. May exhaled a breath of relief as they left the inn and stepped into the darkness again.

"I shan't see you again—ever, I suppose," she said when they were back on the Gregory's white-pillared porch. "Goodby, Mr. Morgan."

She held out her gloveless hand. "Goodby, May," he answered quietly.

And without taking her hand in farewell, he turned and went quickly down the steps.

"I'll never see him again," May said to herself, and suddenly she called him back to her.

"I want to tell you something," she began, as he stood a step below her so that her eyes were on a level with his. "Not that it makes any difference one way or the other. But I like you better than any man I ever have seen!"

Before the astonished Ulysses could catch his breath she was gone, and the door of the house had slammed behind her.

All the next day he mused on the queerness of women—and upon the queerness of one woman in particular. A woman with long slate-gray eyes, and a scarlet mouth that was shaped for kisses. A woman who said she liked him better than any man in the world, but who couldn't love him!

"But she does like me," he argued with himself. "And she doesn't know me very well. Seems to me (Continued on page six.)"

Now With "THE BOSTON," Ranger, Texas.

It is a pleasure for this store to announce to our friends in Ranger as well as throughout this section, we now have with us Mr. Hugh N. Sherrod.

Mr. Sherrod and family are so well known to all the people of Strawn and Thurber, where they have lived for many years, that he possibly needs no introduction in our city, but as they are moving to Ranger and expect to make it their home in the future and be part and parcel of this citizenship of our town, we not only give this as a news item but also as an advertisement for our store. Mr. Sherrod comes to the Boston well recommended—in his chosen vocation he has a life-long reputation for successful merchandising, and in coming to Ranger and accepting the management of the gents' furnishings department for our store he resigns a valuable place with the Strawn Mercantile Company, a position he has held to the satisfaction of all the past eighteen years.

Mr. Sherrod will now be found in our Furnishing Department and extends a most cordial invitation to all of his old friends as well as friends to be, to call and visit him in his new home.

A 'Broken Out' Face Holds You Back

Many men and women of middle age feel that they have never had a chance to make anything out of themselves. But the main reason for it usually is that they let such things as pimples, rash, "breaking out," eczema, tetter, etc., on their face, neck, hands or arms, make them feel that they are not wanted! around and they keep to themselves too much.

You can get just as much out of life as anyone. All you need is confidence in yourself, which you get naturally when you rid yourself of those skin troubles, if you just use Black and White Ointment and Soap. They are economically priced in generous packages. All dealers have them both. The 50c size of the Ointment contains three-times as much as the 25c size.

that liking a person is a pretty good foundation for something deeper."
Finally he decided to offer May a position as his private secretary. She had told him all her money was gone. But after he had written the letter, he tore it up.

"No," he said to himself. "You can't offer to make a woman your wife, and then give her a job in your office. That won't do."
He spent another day in debate with himself, and at 5 in the afternoon he called the Gregory's house and asked for May. The maid who answered the phone told him that "Mrs. Seymour had left at noon for Los Altos."

May sat in the Pullman of a west-bound train, and watched the bleak landscape streak by—mile after mile of flat land with here and there a lonely farmhouse. In her lap lay a new book of Hugh Walpole's.

She opened her purse at intervals and took out a very new and cheap watch of a famous make. Three hours more before she could get off the train. She hated trains. She was beginning to tire of "knocking round" the world, footloose. She would be glad to reach the quiet haven of Carlotta's little bungalow.

She thought of Carlotta, and from her thoughts passed on to Dan Sprague. She wondered where he was now. In New York? Probably, camped on Francie Lee's trail.

"I wonder what would have happened to me if I'd married Dan Sprague when he asked me to, that day," she went on thinking. "I wonder what it would be like to be married to Dan."

She became aware of someone standing beside her, looking down at her. And she raised her eyes to meet the gay, clever eyes of Dan Sprague himself.

JUVENILE SENTENCED TO TERM IN REFORMATORY

Willie Todd, 16-year-old Ranger youth, was found guilty Monday of burglary, by an Eighty-eighth district court jury, which fixed his penalty at three years' confinement in the state reformatory at Gatesville. Judge Elzo Bean, sitting as a juvenile judge, heard Todd's case.

Willie Todd was one of several boys in and around Ranger recently convicted of burglary, some of them for the second time. For their first offenses they were given the suspended sentence in order that they might have a chance to reform and be better boys, but it seems that they soon violated their oaths and again violated the law.

Young Todd, officers said, expressed surprise that he should have been given such long term and on the way from the courthouse to the county jail asked the deputy sheriff accompanying him if there was any way for him to appeal the case and possibly get a shorter sentence.
