COURT SAYS MOODY'S QUEST IS PROPER

MRS. LANSDOWNE TWICE REFUSES HER TESTIMONY

Her Attorney Refused Permission To Make Statement And Thrown From Room

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—One of the most turbulent scenes ever witnessed in Washington before court or investigating committee occurred this morning when Mrs. Margaret Lansdowne, widow of the commander of the ill-fated Shenandoah, went before the Shenandoah court of inquiry today to testify regarding an alleged attempt on the part of Capt. Paul Foley to "fix" her testimony at a previous session of the court.

Joseph Davies, Washington attorney and counsel for Mrs. Lansdowne, was forcibly ejected from the courtroom before she took the witness stand. He was thrown out during a great uproar when he tried to make a statement and his request was refused by the court, the presiding judge of which insisted that an orderly remove him from the room.

Following this sensational beginning, Mrs. Lansdowne twice declined to testify at all, but, ignoring her refusal, the judge advocate put questions to her and received the answers which she calmly gave.

VISITOR FROM CALIFORNIA IMPRESSED WITH RANGER

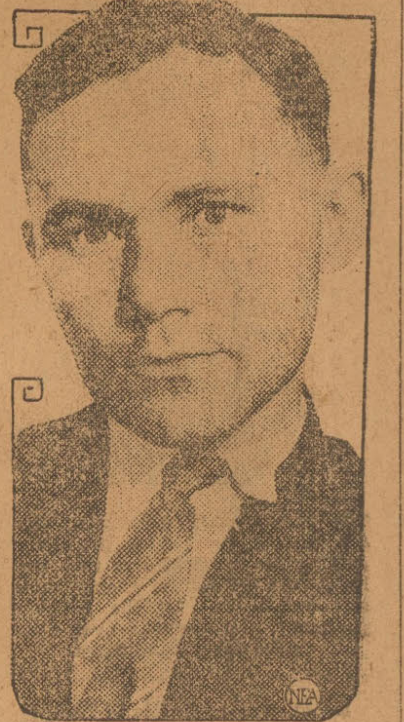

Ranger had the distinction of entertaining the president of the National Greeting's association, the hotel clerks and managers association, which puts out all the "howdy" signs and the like, Monday night, when George G. Swain of San Diego, Calif., stopped for a night on his way home from the national convention in Denver.

Mr. Swain was prepared, he states, for something out of the ordinary in Ranger, but was truly amazed at its growth during the post-boom period. He had kept tab on it during the boom days and had heard that it had lost much of its pristine glory. That it has passed even boom day standards in many respects was noted.

LADY ASTOR WOULD BAN ALL SUBMARINES

Starts Movement For Agreement Among Nations To Stop Use Of U-Boats

LONDON, Nov. 17.—Lady Astor, Virginia beauty and member of the British parliament, originator of the latest movement to banish the submarine, urged today in an exclusive interview with the United Press an agreement among nations to "halt this terrible thing." She expressed the belief that the United States would back England in the movement, and insisted it was for France to agree to it.

Only last Saturday, Lady Astor, speaking at Plymouth, declared she was ready to go among the women of the entire world and rouse them against this undemocratic weapon. This word from her has started statesmen of England and America to thinking and talking of stopping the use of submarines, which failed of adoption at the Washington arms conference because of objections by France. Asked today for details of her plan, this charming southerner, the first woman in the British parliament, said:

"I feel very strongly we should do something to halt this terrible thing. The submarine should be abolished by agreement. How this may be done I do not know, but it can be done."

SPINSTERHOOD

"SPINSTERHOOD" — is that the price a girl must pay for glory, independence, freedom and a career? Must she cast aside love and marriage in order to win a name for herself in the world? Many a girl ponders deeply on this problem, around which Miss Virginia Swain, one of the most skilled newspaper fiction writers in the country, has woven an unusual love serial. It's a true-to-life story about a girl who places her views on love and a career to the acid test of actual experience. It will help many a girl decide this most difficult problem. The title of the story is 'Spinsterhood' It will be printed in 60 installments, each chapter illustrated with specially posed photographs. You won't want to miss a chapter. BIBLE THOUGHT.

EASTLAND COUNTY ROAD SUIT TO BE HEARD SOON

Eastland county authorities have advised from Austin which lead them to believe the case of Davison et al. v. Eastland county in which certain of the county's road funds have been enjoined, which suit was recently appealed to the Texas supreme court, will be up for hearing next Friday. This is the suit in court of civil appeals decided favorably to Eastland county, which was appealed a few days ago to the supreme court. It is of much interest to all sections of the county where road work has been halted or held up pending the final outcome of the suit. A confirmation of the decree of the court of civil appeals would free these funds for immediate use, it is stated, and its reversal would deprive the county of them altogether. Prompt action by the supreme court is hoped for.

C. M. ROOT ON TRIP TO OKLAHOMA AND CALIFORNIA

C. M. Root, Eastland oil operator, left yesterday for Duncan, Okla., where he will spend a few days looking after business interests before going to California for a stay of several weeks. Beginning in the oil business when a boy 8 years of age, Mr. Root has followed it continuously ever since, and has amassed a fortune by his efforts.

PRISONERS IN COUNTY JAIL DESTROY COMRADE'S CLOTHES

Otis Caffey, held in the Eastland county jail to await trial on a burglary charge, found the jail an unsafe place for good clothes according to Deputy Sheriff Virgil Foster. He wore a good $10 pair of shoes and other clothes to match when he entered the jail. Other prisoners, apparently disapproving of these glad rags, mutilated them. What were shoes are now in effect, shoe strings, it is said, these envious ones having cut them into fine strips. In like manner, they marred the beauty of his suit of clothes and reduced them to rags. Prisoners suspected of the act have been confined to their cells until further investigations can be made, it is stated.

CIRCLES HAVE INTERESTING MEETING.

Circle No. 2 of the Central Baptist church met Monday afternoon with Mrs. S. K. Mitchell, at her home on Mesquite street, at which time a very interesting missionary program was rendered, the subject being "The Child and the Future of the South." A brief business meeting was followed by a social hour, during which time, the hostess served sandwiches macarons and coffee. The attendance was good and all present felt that they had been spiritually and socially benefited. Circle No. 3 met at the same hour with Mrs. Stidham. There were 16 present. Mrs. McNeal, president of the W. M. U., was present and assisted with the program, which was most interesting. After the program and business meeting had been completed the hostess served refreshments.

T. E. L. CLASS TO SERVE TURKEY.

Sounds good and doubtless all the husbands of the members of the T. E. L. class of the Central Baptist church will think that it tastes good, when they enjoy the turkey dinner that their wives will prepare for them, Friday, Nov. 27, and which they will serve at the annex.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY MEETS.

The Woman's Missionary society of the Methodist church met Monday afternoon at the church and held an interesting meeting. Devotional service was conducted by Mrs. O. L. Phillips and the mission study lesson, "From Over the Border" was read by Mrs. R. R. Stafford. The attendance was good and all who responded to Mrs. Stafford's call for expressions on the lesson, were well prepared to take care of their subject. Mrs. O. L. Phillips extended the society an invitation to meet with her in a social session next Monday afternoon.

AN ART EXHIBIT.

Mrs. John Thurman will hold an art exhibit at her home on Cherry street on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week, beginning at 9 a. m. and closing at 5 p. m. each day. This promises to be a most interesting display of oils and all lovers of good paintings are looking forward to this exhibit with much pleasurable anticipation. Many of the subjects are taken from still life and a number are copies of the old masters. Texas scenes predominate in the still life pictures and Texas blue bonnets are favored themes of the artist. The doors of the Thurman home will be open to the public practically all day, especially that part of the day when the light will be to the best advantage.

BROUGHT HOME FROM HOSPITAL.

Joseph Hicks, the young man who was accidentally shot a few weeks ago, was able to be moved from the hospital to the Crescent hotel, where he makes his home today. He stood the trip very nicely. Mrs. Hicks, his mother, who arrived soon after the accident to be with her son, is still here.

EASTERN STAR BIRTHDAY PARTY.

The Eastern Star birthday party was largely attended last night not only by members of the local chapter, but there was one sister from Canada present, Mrs. Clara McQuade, from Casper, Wyo., and Mrs. Morehart of Cisco, who is the worthy matron of the Cisco chapter, also favored the assembly with their presence. A pleasing program had been arranged, which consisted of numbers given by several of Ranger's talented musicians. Meses. Walter Murray, W. W. Housewright, Hall Walker and Mr. Leo Underwood, rendered a very effective musical number. Meses. Christine Schmuck and Virginia Brookes sang a duet and Miss Geneva Armer sang "Out Where the West Begins." Barbara Schmuck gave a reading. Several impromptu talks were made by different ones present. The worthy patron asked the co-operation of the chapter in giving a banquet for the De Malay boys. At the close of the program refreshments of pumpkin pie topped with whipped cream, and coffee were served by the hostesses of the evening. Those whose birthdays came in the months of October and November were Meses. R. M. Schmuck, E. T. Kendrick, E. H. Chaplin, William Denman, Ethel Hauge, S. W. Bobo, F. L. Shoffstaff, W. C. Hickey and Miss Marie Armer.

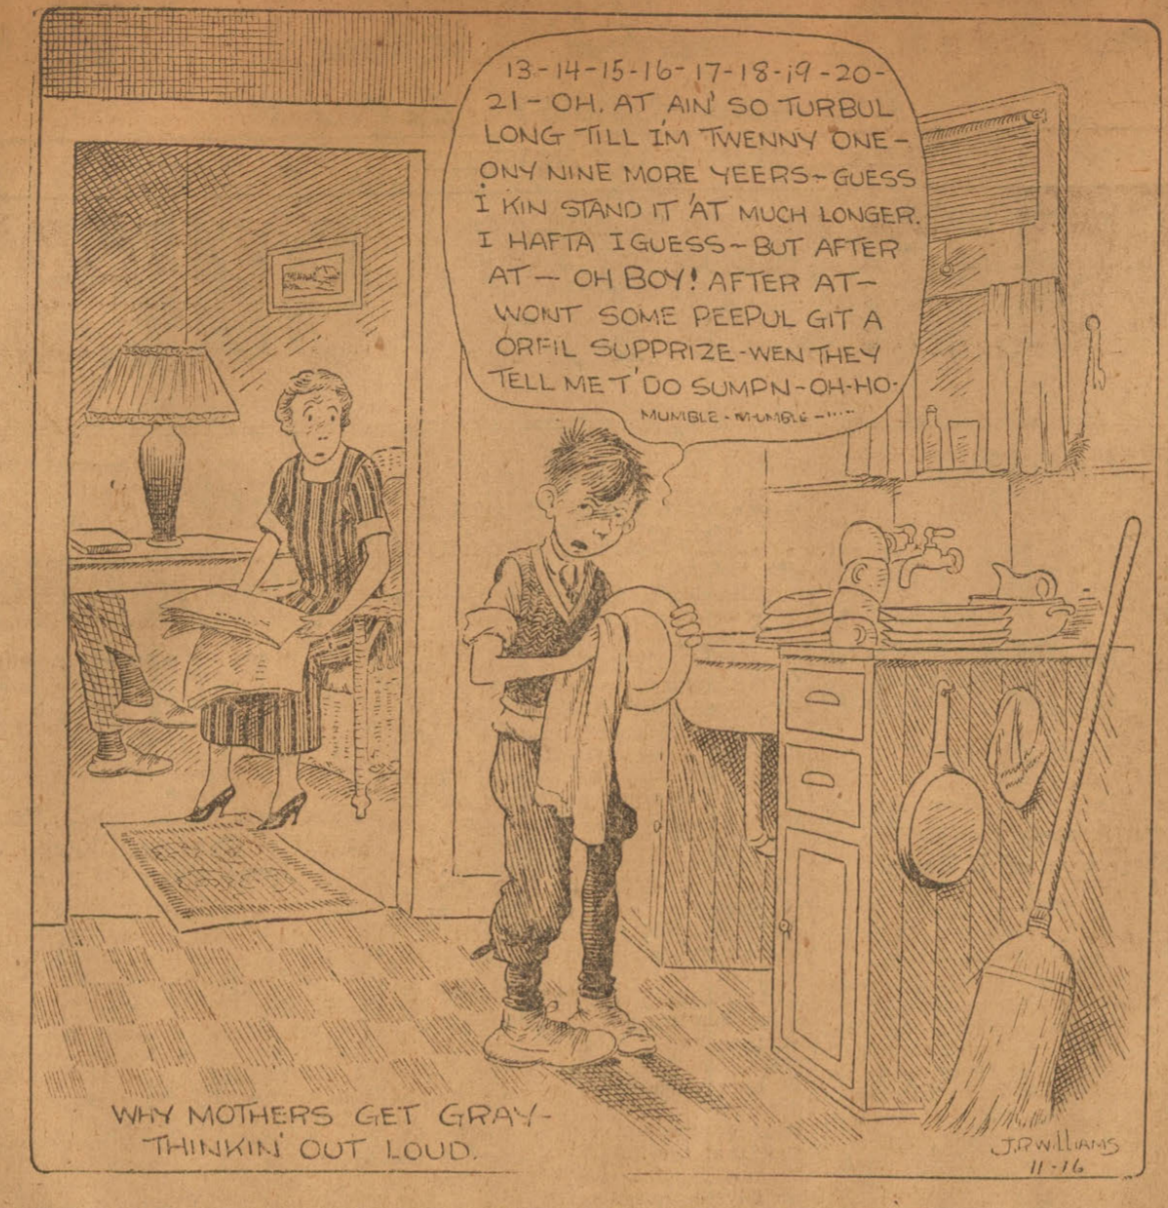

A COMING RECITAL.

Miss Christine Carter will present her pupils in recital Thursday afternoon in the High School Studio, to which the public is cordially invited to be present. A splendid program is being arranged for the afternoon.

"Running mates, not antagonists."
Eastland county hunters are justly indignant at Frank Champion, Dr. Harkrider and the newspapers for making all that fuss over killing big black tails, nine prongs and the like. Already, it had become quite patent that the safest risk any life insurance man could possibly write in these diggings, would be to insure the life of wild ducks. Past experience seems to have made them wry of this neck of the woods. And now, just as a feeble duck or two had begun to flutter down this way, these mighty Nimrods come back, have their return heralded on the streets and in the news sheets. Take it home to yourself. If you were a duck, would you venture out with men of that ilk out loose with guns? I should say not.

DOG SCARES MANY
A dog which is said to have bitten a number of dogs and was finally caught by Leonard Davenport and Wade Swift of the Ranger police force, threw a scare into the pupils of Cooper and St. Rita's schools and a number of citizens Tuesday. Rumors of people bitten could not be confirmed. The dog is now confined and may be killed as a stray.

YELLOW MOUND NEWS

YELLOW MOUND, Nov. 16.—The members of the Literary Society are certainly to be commended on the program that was given Friday night. "The Preplexing Situation" was an overwhelming success. We take this means of inviting all our guests back to our next program two weeks hence.

Miss Speer made a very interesting talk on the Parent-Teacher Association. After which, a P. T. A. was organized in this community.

Mrs. T. E. Castleberry was elected president of this organization. The other officers were elected, and the responsibility is well distributed into efficient hands. We expect great returns from this association.

Little Billie Jean Lackey spent the week-end in Abilene with her mother. She is staying with her grandmother here, and attending school.

We are planning to meet the Pleasant Grove ball team on their ground next Friday afternoon. We want a bunch of boosters to go over with us and see just how we play ball.

When it's Thanksgiving—and the teams are drawn up for battle on the gridiron—when the first touchdown goes over and the grandstands rock with frenzy—have a Camel!

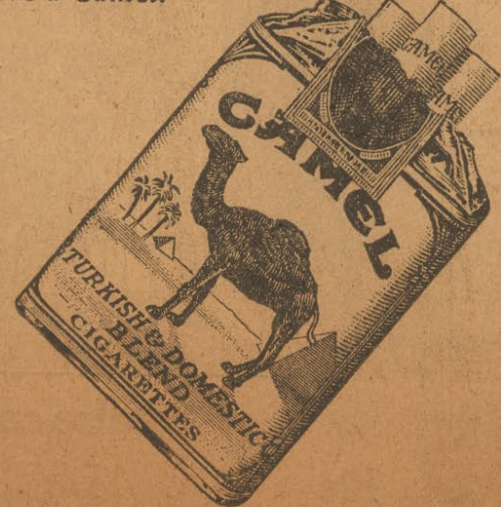

WHEN the college bands are playing to make your blood tingle. And the cheers and answering songs sweep back and forth between the opposing thousands of rooters. When, following that tense hush, a swift player darts out from the flashing formations on the gridiron and races across the goal for the first touchdown—oh, man, or superman, when the taste of joy is too keen to endure—have a Camel!

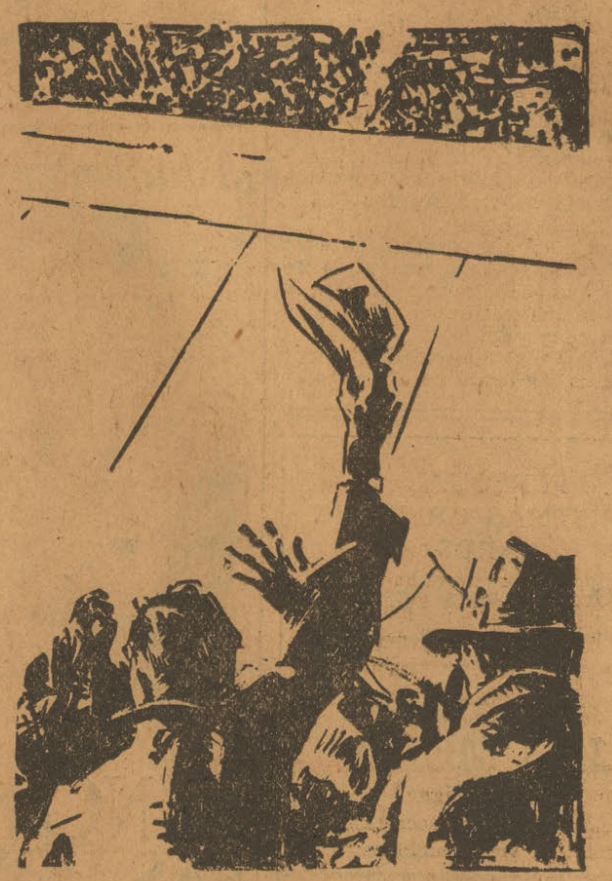

For Camel is the boon companion of your joys. Roam as far as you will from the prosaic things of every day, Camel will be the truest smoke friend you ever had. Not a tired taste, not a cigarettety after-taste, not a regret in a million Camels! Just full and fragrant smoke contentment, just added zest in living.

So when your own college's team tears through for its first smashing goal this Thanksgiving Day—when life seems fullest of the frenzy of happiness—joyfully apply the fire and taste the smoke that's loved by millions.

MAY SEYMOUR FOOT LOOSE

by BEATRICE BURTON

THE STORY SO FAR:

May Seymour, whose husband killed himself because of her love affair with another man, returns to her home town after a year's absence. She sells her property, and with her whole tiny fortune in cash, sets out to find and marry a man with money.

At Atlantic City she meets Herbert Waterbury through a divorcee, Mrs. Carlotta Frolking. When he proposes, May accepts him, believing him a millionaire. She turns over to him all her money for investment, and he disappears with it.

Penniless, May sells her jewelry to pay her fare to California where Carlotta has a hanglow. On her way west, she stops off in her home town to visit her old friends, Dick and Gloria Gregory. There she meets a widower, Ulysses Forgan, who falls sincerely in love with her and asks her to marry him. But May refuses, explaining that she likes him too well to marry him without love, and goes to California.

Carlotta doesn't welcome May warmly when she finds that she can't pay her board, and May leaves. She finds a position selling real estate, but gives it up when her employer makes love to her. Finding herself again without funds, May wires to Ulysses for fare home. She returns to the Gregorys, and there Ulysses comes to see her. He tells her she ought not to live with the non-too-rich Gregorys, but ought to go out into the world to make her own living. May takes his advice, gets a job, and sets herself up in house-keeping rooms. Then she loses her job, and Ulysses offers her one in his office. But May refuses it, on the grounds that her stenography is so poor that she wouldn't earn her salary.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

May's next position was in the advertising department of a large store. Her work there consisted mainly of addressing envelopes.

Sometimes she addressed as many as 500 a day. But this was not enough. A thousand a day was the number required, and at the end of the second week May gave up her job.

She rented a typewriter, took it home, and for three days practiced on it. But neither her speed nor her accuracy increased. It was hard to believe that only 10 years ago she had been a first-rate typist who could turn out a hundred letters a day!

Every night she read the "Help Wanted" ads carefully, but failed to see anything promising. She had very little money, but she lived on soda crackers and coffee for several days.

Finally she made up her mind to take anything in the way of a job. "Anything" proved to be filing and errand running in the office of a large eastern railroad.

She worked nine hours a day, and earned $14 a week. On the first Saturday, May tore open her envelope and looked at the money she had saved for all week long.

There had been a time when she had spent that much, and more, every week on lunches downtown and for gasoline for her car.

Now it must buy her food, pay her rent, and supply her with what clothes she needed.

So far, she had had to buy very few clothes. The dresses and shoes she had bought in Atlantic City, months ago, were still smart and fresh looking.

As a matter of fact, they were much too smart to be worn by an office girl in a railroad office.

May caught the other girls in the place looking askance at her once or twice. They seemed to be wondering why a girl who wore hand-made dresses and custom-made shoes should be working for $14 a week.

Any pair of shoes she had cost more than $14—that was plain to be seen! And the other girls told each other so in the washroom where they gathered to gossip.

May knew that they gossiped about her; and so she made no effort to be friendly with them, although she needed friends.

She sat alone in the darkest corner of the room, walled off from the others by the filing cases, and worked like a machine day in and day out for two months.

Three or four times Gloria Gregory telephoned to ask May out for Sunday night supper. But May refused.

She knew that she couldn't afford to return their hospitality, for one thing. But there was another reason for her repeated refusals. The very sight of Gloria's happiness in her home had suddenly become unbearable to May. She didn't know why, either.

The men in the office began to pay attention to her. Two or three of them asked her to have lunch with them, at intervals. In the slang phrase of the office, she "turned them down cold."

Attractive young chaps they were, too, but not to May. She had fallen into the fatal habit of contrasting all men with Ulysses Forgan.

This one was not so tall as he, or so good-looking.

That one walked with a slouch, while Ulysses was as straight as an arrow, and walked with the grace of a trained soldier.

One afternoon a group of four men walked into the office to confer with Mr. Boulanger, the office manager. All four of them were the sleek, well-fed, well-dressed type of successful business man.

May fond herself comparing them with Ulysses—greatly to Ulysses' advantage, as usual.

The truth suddenly flashed upon her—she was in love with Ulysses!

She was in love with him! That was why all other men looked gray and uninteresting to her!

The friendly feeling she had always had for him—the feeling of loneliness that lay like lead at the bottom of her heart—that was love and she had never guessed it.

She sat there staring at the blank wall in front of her, so wrapped in her own thoughts that she was unaware that someone was standing beside her desk, until a large roll of paper was laid before her.

"Day dreaming, Mrs. Seymour?" asked the booming bass voice of Mr. Boulanger, the office manager.

"I—I think I was," May faltered. She looked up and smiled at Mr. Boulanger, longing to slap his fat face.

He had a way of looking at May, of standing too close to her when he talked to her, that was insulting. May felt very sorry for Mrs. Boulanger, a white-faced little woman who brought her husband to the office every morning and called for him every night—as if she didn't dare to trust him out of her sight.

"Well, if you're day-dreaming about me, I don't mind your doing it," burbled Mr. Boulanger. "About these papers—" He pointed to the roll on May's desk with a fat forefinger.

"About these papers—you're to take them up to Mr. Forgan—Ulysses X. Forgan."

Ulysses X. Forgan!

When Mr. Boulanger had gone,

May sat perfectly still looking down at the roll of papers, bound together by a thick elastic band. It was the most ordinary roll of paper imaginable, and yet to May that April afternoon it looked like the Magic Carpet of Bagdad.

For it was the means of taking her to the man she loved!

Outside there was sunshine and a high wind that tossed scraps of paper over the city streets like white butterflies over a meadow.

The very smell of springtime was in the air—as if the fragrance of all the daffodils and burgeoning buds out in the country lanes had found its way into the gray town.

And without warning something very like springtime blossomed in May's breast. It was as if all the coldness and the loneliness went out of it, as miraculously as winter leaves the earth.

For the first time in months and months she was happy—wonderfully happy. In all her life, she could not remember such happiness as this. She was going to the man she loved—the one man in all the world she would ever love!

The one man in all the world sat at his desk, frowning.

He was trying to decide which would bore him least—to go out and play golf, or to go home and putter in the garden.

Neither prospect lured him much. When he went out to play golf, he spent most of his time comparing the women on the links with May Seymour—wondering how she would look in a scarlet golf sweater and leather shirt.

And if he went home to dig in the garden, he would picture her there standing on the graveled path between the rows of budding plants, with the sun in her eyes.

He got up suddenly and put on his hat. He'd get out and walk off his mood! No use to stay here and brood about a woman who didn't care the snap of her white finger for him.

At that instant the door opened and the woman, herself, walked into his office.

"A package for you from Mr. Boulanger," she said, demurely, and laid a large, rubber-strapped bundle on his desk.

Ulysses stared and stammered. "Y—you working for him?" he asked.

"Yes," May answered. She threw back her head with a defiant movement.

"I'm his office girl," she said.

Then she turned to go. She had reached the door, and her hand was on the knob when he stopped her.

"Wait," he said, and she turned and faced him quietly.

The length of the office was between them.

May measured it with her eye. She had once thought she would like to be footloose—to travel all the high-roads of the world—but now she knew that the only road for her was the few feet of space between her and Ulysses Forgan.

She never knew whether or not he called her to come to him.

She never knew how she crossed the floor of that office of his. All she knew—all she wanted to know—was that she was in his arms, close held against his breast.

"All my life—it seems to be—I've been trying to find my way here—to you," she said in a whisper so low that Ulysses could hardly hear what she said. But he did hear, and he held her even more closely—held her as if he would never let her go.

And as May looked up at him, she knew beyond all doubt that life held no better for her—or for any other woman—than this: to be in the arms of the man she loved.

THE END.

MARINE CORPS, 150 YEARS OLD, BORN AMID FIRST FLAMES OF AMERICA'S WAR FOR FREEDOM

The United States Marine Corps was born 150 years ago and on Nov. 10 marines in all parts of the world will celebrate the anniversary. On the site of the old Tun Tavern in Philadelphia a tablet will be unveiled to mark the spot where in 1775 the first marines enrolled for the war to free the colonies.

There are none who can recall those days and the authentic records are bare of details. But it is certain that the little tavern on the Philadelphia waterfront was a gathering place for ship masters and for the merchants whose vessels poked their jib-booms across the stones of Water Street. There can be no doubt that these men spent many hours discussing the formation of the first fleet that was to sail down the Delaware flying the flag of American independence.

Popular Meeting Place.
British men-of-war were ravaging the southern coasts of colonial America and driving native shipping from the seas. Along the waterfront of every city seafaring men were talking of armed revolt. The Tun Tavern was one of the most popular meeting grounds for these early patriots, and when the Continental Congress authorized the formation of a fleet to challenge British supremacy in America waters this tavern was the place selected for the enrollment of marines to act as riflemen aboard the Continental vessels.

It was on Nov. 10, 1775, that Congress, which had already dissolved the "compact between the Crown and the people of Massachusetts Bay," passed a resolution to the effect that two battalions of marines be raised to serve "for and during the present war with Great Britain" and that "particular care be taken that no persons be appointed to officers, or enlisted into said battalions, but such as are good seamen, or so acquainted with maritime affairs as to be able to serve with advantage by sea when required."

Thus the Marine Corps was born

eight months before the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

There is nothing now to remind the visitor to Philadelphia of the old tavern where in those stirring days Benjamin Franklin attended masonic meetings in an upper room and Mrs. Mullen broiled thick steaks and drew fine ale to sustain the hearts and stomachs of good patriots.

Today a warehouse stands on the spot where hot-blooded "rebels" defied their king and risked their necks by signing their names (or crosses) on the first roster of marines.

The only physical reminder that we have of the tavern is its diary which now reposes on the shelves of the Pennsylvania Historical Society. This dingy old book is one of the quaintest relics of the Revolutionary period. In it the widow Mullen, proprietress of the tavern, kept her accounts, and a few pages further on the brand-new Commandant of Marines signed up his men and penned the records of courts martial. For even the early patriots sometimes lapsed from grace, and it is set forth that at least one of them received ten lashes "well laid on" for neglecting his duty while on guard.

BRIGGS AND BUSH TO MAKE ADDRESSES IN DELEON

County Agent R. H. Bush and George W. Briggs of the Eastland Chamber of Commerce went to DeLeon this afternoon where they will be present and deliver addresses at a banquet given in connection with the DeLeon pean and poultry show.

Mr. Bush stated this morning before leaving that the extension department of the A. & M. College of Texas was assisting the baby chick association to accredit and certify their flocks and said that additional information along this line, which would be interesting to the poultrymen of this section, would be given out by him soon.

HERE SHE IS, THE GIRL WE WILL LOVE IN THE YEAR 1926

Here's the flapper of 1926, according to specifications laid down by Ernie Young, Chicago theatrical producer.

By ROY J. GIBBONS, NEA Service Writer.
CHICAGO, Nov. 16.—Miss 1926 will be an abbreviated creature! She will be typically a flapper and everything about her will be shorter, from her hair to skirts.

Only her complexion will be much different from her 1925 sister. It will be ghastly white. Miss 1926 will endeavor by every cosmetic means to resemble, as closely as possible, a spook.

At least these various qualities have been attributed to the "New Year Girl," by the prophecy of Ernie Young, famous theatrical producer of this city.

Ernie is the Flo Ziegfeld of the middle west and way points. Fully Qualified.

For 25 years he has been hiring upwards of 10,000 ladies every year to perform behind his footlights in a dozen different cities.

This experience amply qualifies him to speak with authority on things pertaining to the fair sex, he believes.

Ernie's predictions about the coming girl for the next year have always come true. He never once has missed.

And here's what he says Miss 1926 will be like:

She will weigh between 115 and 120 pounds.

She will be about five feet four inches tall.

She will affect the face of a corpse.

It will be painted a ghastly white with carmine smears across the lips.

Her hair will be predominantly hennaed or blond. Few brunets will be seen.

She will balance with dexterity a cigarette holder no less than 10 inches long between her teeth.

She will use kiss-proof rouge at evening.

Eight-Ounce Costume.
Her costume will be of the eight-ounce variety and will affect the pattern of vertical-striped silk.

Her dress will be loose and drape itself from her figure showing minute outlines.

Her compact case will vanish to be replaced by the calsonme canteen (gallon size).

She will wear a strictly military watch.

Her jewelry will consist of crockery (immense glass beads) and three enormous finger rings (glass also).

As for "undies" she will do without or reduce them to the utmost irreducible minimum.

She will wear the smallest chapeau that her milliner can turn out. It will be some vivid color.

She will own an extra pair of stockings (flesh color).

Four Inches Shorter.
And her dresses will be four inches shorter than they were during 1925.

"And, oh, yes," says Ernie, "I forgot to add that she will once more roll 'em—stockings, I mean, not fags."

"And her hair will remain bobbed. And she will start going in for hair-tonics and other lotions that are said to prevent baldness."

"Altogether she will be very enjoyable and cute and we will love her more than ever."

"She is Miss 1926. And her slogan will be more freedom and less clothes. And I for one say, let 'er have 'em."

Quite a few from this community attended the singing at Bedford Sunday night.

Stefansson Describes Conditions In Arctic As They Actually Are

Conditions in the Arctic are discussed by Vilhjalmur Stefansson, noted explorer, in an article in November Current History Magazine. Mr. Stefansson attacks as fallacious the age-old theory that the Arctic zone is a wasteland of snow and ice, where nothing can live. This theory belongs to the past, Mr. Stefansson writes, and he points out that the popular impression of the North Polar regions is wrong in almost every particular. In the first place, the Arctic is not the coldest spot in the world. "Meteorologists believe that 65 below zero is the very lowest that could be recorded if you had a weather observatory at the North Pole for 100 years." "But," adds Mr. Stefansson, "the temperature of 68 degrees below zero has already been recorded at a weather bureau station in Montana, and that not on or near any mountain top; while 92 below zero has been registered near the meeting place of the temperate zone and the Arctic on the edge of the wheat belt in the Province of Yakutsk, Siberia."

Another false theory about the Arctic is the idea that the weather there is too cold for vegetation. Mr. Stefansson states that the supposedly barren area enjoys a considerable Summer season, during which flowers and foliage grow and blossom. The Arctic summer is only six weeks long, but due to the twenty-four hours of daylight the season enjoys the equivalent of twelve calendar weeks; therefore, such plants as grow during every hour of sunlight are enabled to wax strong and sturdy. On this point Mr. Stefansson observes that the polar regions really treat their flowers more generously as regards sunlight than do the tropics: "A plant cannot have more than twelve hours of sunlight at the equator; it may have thirteen in Texas and perhaps fifteen in Manitoba." But it has twenty-four hours a day on the North Coast of Greenland, which is the most northerly known land in the world."

The psychological effect upon man of the midwinter darkness of the polar region is considered by Mr. Stefansson to have been greatly exaggerated. The months of darkness are depressing only to those who expect to be depressed, he writes; morbid persons might feel it, he adds, and he admits that he felt depressed during his first Arctic Winter. The chief cause of such feeling, however, is mental depression and ignorance.

High Collar

There's no doubt about it, the high collar is the smart way to treat your neck this season. Here is a new style that was noticed on a Paris import that recently made its way over here.

DESTROYS THE GERMS THAT INFECT THE GUMS

A pleasant new medicated liquid, called Creosene, positively penetrates to the deepest troubled areas and kills out tissue destroying Pyorrhoea germs. Bleeding of gums is stopped in twelve hours; soreness disappears in twenty-four hours; pus clears up in two to three days; teeth begin to tighten in one week and if your Pyorrhoea has not been completely eliminated in three to four weeks, get your money back.

The super penetrating powers of Creosene carries germ killing medication to the deepest trouble, yet it does not injure the healthy tissues in any way.

Creosene is a new improved form of home treatment for Pyorrhoea infected gums which banishes this terrible disease and saves you the frightful expense of dental bills and severe pain. It is always sold on a guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money refunded by the druggist from whom purchased.

Sold by Texas Drug Company and other local druggists, at $1.00 for a full size bottle, or will be sent direct on receipt of price. Creosene Company, Dept. D-1, Atlanta, Ga. Adv.

POTATO CHIPS, PAINT AND BLOOD HELP STUDENTS PAY WAY THROUGH INSTITUTIONS OF LEARNING

By NEA Service.
CLEVELAND, Ohio.—Some college students are cake eaters, and some wear flappy pants and have done just enough studying to know that 10 yards make a first down.

But here and there are serious, ambitious young men and women who want a college education more than they want anything else in the world—who are willing to pay any sort of price for one. And it's these people about whom this story is written.

There are more ways of earning an education than waiting on table or stoking the boarding house furnace. For example:

One young chap sells his blood at hospitals.

Another is preaching to earn his expenses.

A girl is making and selling potato chips.

Another girl is running a laundry agency.

All Sorts of Jobs.
And so on—every sort of job that you can imagine is turned to by these young people, who somehow have the odd idea that one goes to college to study, not to have a good time. For they are the youngsters whose parents can't afford to pay their way.

Miss Erma V. Shrimplin of Columbus, Ohio, is going to graduate from Ohio State university next year. She's carrying 16 hours of collegiate work a week—a heavy schedule.

To earn her expenses, she makes

PIMPLES AND BUMPS TAKE THE JOY OUT OF LIFE

Girls, and boys, too, whose faces are "broken out," rough, pimply and blotched, imagine all sorts of weird things.

The worst fault it leads to is using just anything which promises them relief from their condition, which oftener makes their trouble worse.

Never put anything on your skin which has not been proven by the test of time and public opinion to be right. In this connection the phenomenal success, which is called Black and White Ointment, and the soap, too, offers sufferers from such skin diseases the one reliable and dependable means of relief and restoration of their skin to that clear, smooth and lovely condition it was in their youth.

Black and White Ointment, and Soap, are economically priced in liberal size packages. The 50c size of the ointment contains three times as much as the 25c size. All dealers have both the Ointment and the Soap.—(adv.)

and sells potato chips. Every morning at 6 she goes to her little shop to peel and slice enough potato chips to fill 25 dozen waxed paper bags. At 10 she gets into a light delivery truck and delivers her consignments. By noon she returns to her shop, gets an assistant to work frying chips for the next day, and then goes to the university to classes. They take all afternoon. All evening she studies.

Not much free time. But she's getting an education.

Or consider the case of J. Milton Goss of Tyrone, Pa., who is attending Carnegie Institute of Technology. He has only one arm, and couldn't get an ordinary job. So he sells his blood to Pittsburgh hospital for transfusion operations. He gets $25 for each transfusion. This is putting him through college. He'll graduate in June.

No picnic, perhaps, but he's getting an education.

C. A. Postlewaite, a student at the University of Kansas, is handy with a paint brush. So he paints varied designs on the backs of the flaming slickers affected by his fellow students, and earns enough money to put him through nicely.

Miss Ida Landquist of Meddleton, Calif., is in Leland Stanford university. She waits on table for her board, and acts as agent for two laundry concerns in various dormitories. This gives her money to defray her other expenses.

Keeping Him Busy.
Leon T. David is another student at Stanford who has no money except that which he can earn while attending school. He acts as custodian of the Men's Union there, reports university news for an out-of-town newspaper, sells second-hand books, acts as a chemistry assistant and serves as a recorder in the registrar's office.

There's a third student at Leland Stanford who has a novel way of getting through college. His name, oddly enough, is Leland Stanford, though he's no relation to the founder of the college, and he preaches every Sunday in the Methodist church at San Bruno. In his spare moments he studies law at the university.

College is no gay round of pleasure for these young people. It means lots of hard work.

But they're getting something out of it besides a collection of dance programs and membership in a Greek letter fraternity.

SUCCESS OF G. F. P. PROVES CATARRH IS WOMAN'S WORSE FOE

It, Keeps Its Victims Irritable, Depressed, Nervous, Melancholy and Miserable From Pains and Irregularity.

The sensational disclosure that nearly 90 per cent of women who suffer from painful and irregular functioning of their generative organs, are victims of the most dreaded of maladies—catarrh—has caused such a tremendous amount of talk among women here that it is almost certain that the success of G. F. P., which is gaining such popular favor wherever it is being introduced to overcome this condition, will be as great here as it is in other cities.

Thousands of the best known women in all walks of life are making public statements in the papers all over the country showing that their enthusiasm for G. F. P. is really greater than that of the discoverers themselves about this remarkable medicine.

"To explain this," says a representative of the laboratories, "I want to first say that St. Joseph's G. F. P. is believed to be the first direct specific for catarrhal inflammation of the mucus linings of the delicate generative organs, and the terribly distressing ailments which come from this dreaded malady.

"Show me a woman who is irritable, nervous, depressed, and thin, sallow and weak, suffering from headaches, pains every month and oftentimes nausea, and I will show you one who is suffering from catarrh of the generative organs.

"But it has remained for the perfection of St. Joseph's G. F. P., to provide a really direct treatment for it. This is proven by the thousands of women who have been quickly relieved by using G. F. P., and is the reason this medicine is becoming more popular with girls and women as fast as they learn that they can regain their health, strength and robust vitality by using it."

Women Now Depend on St. Joseph's G. F. P. To Restore Their Vitality
