ROAD COMPANY WANTS MONEY FROM STATE

GUY WAGGONER HASTENING TO SISTER'S SIDE

Charters Special Train to Take Him to New York, Where Electra Waggoner Is Ill.

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—In a special train flying over the Pennsylvania railroad from St. Louis, Guy Waggoner, millionaire of Fort Worth, is on his way here to the bedside of his sister, Electra Waggoner, reported in a dying condition at the Lenox Hill hospital.

According to the train dispatcher at the Pennsylvania station, the train passed through the Ohio capital at 12:45 a. m. This means the Waggoner special may reach New York as much as three hours ahead of schedule time.

When the Fort Worth millionaire, who has large oil holdings and valuable ranch lands, arrives in New York, an automobile will be in waiting at the station to speed him to the hospital, and the police have been instructed to have the right of way given hospital ambulances.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 16.—Traveling 68 miles an hour, a special Pennsylvania train carrying Guy Waggoner, Fort Worth, Texas, millionaire oil man and ranch owner, to the bedside of his sister in New York went through here at 12:45 o'clock this morning.

Waggoner chartered the special train at St. Louis for $9,000 and has offered the railroad a bonus of $5,000 to make the run in 20 hours.

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—A mad dash half way across the continent, brought Guy Waggoner into the Pennsylvania station here today in 20 hours and 28 minutes after leaving St. Louis yesterday.

Electra Waggoner, known at her Park avenue apartment as Mrs. James Gilmore, although her marriage to Gilmore was recently annulled, lies critically ill, suffering with gall stones.

Waggoner made a record-breaking run to New York.

The limousine tottered perilously as it swept down Fifth avenue when the traffic lights were flashed for it to stop when he reached 430 Park avenue. He jumped out and ran into the apartment house to take the elevator to the sick room.

The apartment is in Mrs. W. T. Waggoner's home. She is the mother of Guy and Electra and has been constantly at the bedside of her daughter.

Denied newspaper men, but promises that bulletins would be issued later were made.

Mrs. Guy Waggoner and a son of Electra are following Guy Waggoner and another son has been in New York for some time.

TEXAS EX-STUDENTS WHO ARE DOING WELL IN NEW YORK

AUSTIN, Nov. 16.—There are more than 30 ex-students of the University of Texas in New York city, according to W. B. Ruggles, secretary of the Ex-Students' association. These former students are engaged in many professions and vocations; a number are making moderate salaries; some are achieving notable success and are earning large incomes.

Among those who have become prominent may be mentioned J. H. Ardrey, a banker of national fame; Barry Benefield, journalist and author of "The Chicken Wagon Family," a novel published this fall; W. F. Buckley, probably the wealthiest ex-student in New York, who made a fortune as an independent oil operator in Mexico; Frank Feuille, former attorney general of Porto Rico, a position now held by Dr. George C. Butte, former dean of the school of law at the University of Texas; E. F. Fox, dramatic editor of the New York Herald-Tribune; C. H. Hubbrich, who has attained great prominence as an international lawyer. Another ex-student who has made good in journalism is Stanley Walker, employed on the staff of the New York Times, who has been a contributor to the American Mercury and other current magazines.

Four Killed, Score Hurt When Trains Crash In Minnesota

RENNVILLE, Minn., Nov. 16.—The "Columbia," crack flyer of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad, crashed into a freight train here early Sunday. A check-up showed four dead and a score of passengers injured, but not fatally. Two passengers and five trainmen were taken to a hospital at Montevideo.

The wreck occurred on a straight stretch of road about one-half mile from here. The "Columbia," bound for the Pacific coast, had left here only a few minutes before the accident occurred. The two trains crashed head-on.

WILL SEE NEXT YEAR'S PLAYERS IN RANGER GAME

Gorman's First String Plays 1926 Bulldogs Friday in Ranger.

An opportunity to see exactly what Ranger has to start with for next year's football team will be given Friday of this week, Coach Cherry announces, when Gorman's hard hitting first string men will meet the all-1926 Ranger men on the Ranger grid at a game which will be popularly priced.

This will be the first time Ranger people will have an opportunity to see their next year's team function without aid from the old Bulldogs whose teeth are now being whetted for college work, it is said. They will be up against a team which has shown wonderful fighting spirit and some good winnings. The game will be called at 3 or 3:30 p. m.

THOMAS HORTON MOSS IS BURIED IN RANGER

The body of Thomas Horton Moss, who died in Williams, Arizona, last Friday, arrived in Ranger on the east bound Sunshine train today, and was interred at the old Ranger city cemetery this afternoon. Funeral services were conducted at the First Baptist Church, having been announced at 2:30 p. m. but delayed pending the arrival of relatives.

Deceased was 43 years old. He was born and reared at the old Moss Crossing, three miles from Ranger where he spent all his life except the last three years spent in Arizona.

He is survived by his widow and two small children, 2 and 4 years old, also by his two brothers, J. S. Moss of Big Spring and G. C. Moss of Winslow, both of whom were in attendance on his funeral, together with the family of the former, who came up from Cisco, where they were at the time the news of the death of their relative reached them.

Rev. C. H. Ray of Weatherford, the family, conducted the funeral Baptist minister and an old friend of services.

HIP IS BROKEN WHEN HER CARS TURNS OVER

Mrs. Omar Cole, formerly of Ranger and now of Breckenridge, when driving with her husband on their way to Weatherford, Sunday afternoon, met with a serious accident on the pike not far from Ranger. The touring car in which she was riding, turned over while avoiding a collision with a car driven by an unidentified person, it is said. Mrs. Cole's hip was broken. Mr. Cole escaped with minor injuries. Mrs. Cole is in the hospital in Weatherford. The cars was badly damaged.

Girl's Letters Are Read In Court In Rhinelander Muddle

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 16. Philip Rhinelander, proud descendant of the Huguenot first families, tried vigilantly to shatter the romance between his son, Leonard Kip, and Alice Jones, dusky daughter of a cabman who confesses to negro blood. This was shown today in letters by Alice to Leonard which were read in court in the suit to annul the marriage on the grounds that the bride had deceived her husband as to her color.

Rhinelander was sent by his father to a ranch school near Phoenix, Ariz., it was said today on direct examination of the young aristocrat. In one letter to him, Alice wrote, "I can't seem to take to another man any more."

In another letter, Alice referred to their expected marriage. "How happy you make me feel, Len," she wrote, "when you write me about buying me a car for a wedding present. I am very much satisfied about your answer about buying me a car and I will not buy one."

IS "SPINSTERHOOD" THE PRICE GIRL MUST PAY FOR CAREER? FAMOUS MOVIE STARS SAY "NO"

By NEA Service. HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 16.—Spinsters—Is it the price a girl must pay for glory?

Should marriage or a career come first? Or is it even possible to have both?

The self-possessed, straightforward young woman in the movie colony here aren't slow in answering those questions.

Summed up, the opinion of most of them would read about like this: "The career is the important thing. But there's really no good reason why a girl must remain a spinster to have one."

This is the conviction voiced by such stars as Norma Talmadge, Blanche Sweet, Vilma Banky and Jacqueline Logan.

The only dissenting votes are cast by Katharine MacDonald and Bebe Daniels. Both believe that marriage and a career are incompatible. And each made a different choice, Miss MacDonald quitting the screen to become a wife and mother, and Miss Daniels remaining in more or less solitary spinstership—if you can call a girl like Bebe Daniels a spinster—to stick to her career.

Miss Talmadge insists there is no conflict, for, she points out, she is an actress and at the same time is a wife—the fortunate man being M. Schenk, head of the United Artists Corporation.

"If I had to choose between glory and a home I would, without hesitation, choose the latter," she said. "But why isn't it possible for the woman of today to have both? Thousands of women in all parts of the world have discovered that it is not only possible but easy."

"The intolerant days when the world decreed that a woman must give up her home to have a career are gone. In my opinion every woman has a chance for glory. If she has the ability she needn't worry."

Miss Banky is more outspoken. "I burned all my bridges behind me for glory on the American picture screen," she said. "I left my home and family in Budapest, my friends, my fiancé."

"I consider that it is the rightful heritage of a woman to find glory for herself, instead of remaining at home. But that doesn't mean I think it's possible for a woman to have a career and a home, too, or that I myself will never marry. But I'll make sure of my career first."

Jackie Logan knows both sides of the argument. "I had my share of spinstership," she began. "I am married now, and I don't see why I can't go on having the same little glory in moving pictures that I have been fortunate to find in the last few years."

"Women can progress whether they are married or not. I intend to prove to the world that I can continue in my career, although I am married."

Blanche Sweet, aside from being a star of the first magnitude, is in private life, the wife of Marshall Neilan, director. She contented herself with remarking that "a woman has the right to both glory and a home."

And then Miss Daniels takes up the other side. "Every woman must choose between love and fame—between marriage and spinstership," she declared.

"Dozens upon dozens of marital disasters have proven that no one can hope for both marriage and a career. If a girl chooses love and marriage, let them be her whole life. If it is glory that she covets, that, too, admits of no rival interest. If it were otherwise, perhaps I wouldn't be Bebe Daniels."

"For myself, I am happy in my work, content in my efforts toward the achievement of the goal I have set myself. Will I ever change? Perhaps. But I doubt it."

Miss MacDonald retired from the screen a few years ago to marry Charles Johnston, millionaire music roll manufacturer.

"I suppose I'm a little bit old-fashioned," she said. "I wouldn't trade my baby and husband for all the movie glory in Hollywood. You can have your spinstership and glory. I am happy in my own life."

And that seems to leave the whole argument just about where it started.

Mystery Surrounds Death In Chicago Of Pretty Alabama Girl

CHICAGO, Nov. 16.—Florence Manley Hood, 28, pretty Birmingham, Ala., society woman who swallowed poison here yesterday, had no cause to commit suicide, her brothers-in-law, Clive Richardson and Blaine Drowell, testified today at the inquest into her death. They said she had appeared happy and had come here to get an apartment because her husband's business required that he make a long stay here.

J. D. Dockery, manager of the Plaza Hotel, where the woman rented an apartment, testified that John A. Cashin, wealthy Chicago bachelor, registered at the hotel as Mr. and Mrs. W. Hood, Saturday morning. Early Sunday, he said, Mrs. Hood telephoned from her room demanding a doctor. "When we got him to her room we found Mrs. Hood in her nightgown, lying on the floor and a bottle of shoe polish was in her hand," he testified. Mrs. Hood died soon after being taken to a hospital.

Walter M. Hood, prominent attorney, arrived here today. He did not attend the inquest. Cashin was at the inquest, sitting by the side of his attorney awaiting to be summoned. He appeared calm and smiled occasionally.

Isabel is a second cousin of the late President Harding. Her father is John B. Bennett of Cleveland, Ohio, recently divorced, after which Mrs. Bennett married Frank Bent, a banker here.

Olden Boy Is Run Down on Highway Two Times, But Survives

Edward Blockman, about 10 years old, of Olden, was run down by an automobile on the Bankhead highway near Olden late Saturday afternoon and sustained a number of cuts and bruises which, physicians say, are not of a very serious nature.

Frank Jones (colored) of Eastland brought the boy to the Eastland sanitarium where he was given medical attention and a few hours later removed to his home at Olden.

According to Jones' statement to the Eastland officers he was coming into Eastland from the east and a car just ahead of him ran over the boy and knocked him down and, before he could stop, his car, a Ford, had struck the boy, too. The car in front of him, Jones said, was a Buick and did not stop after hitting the boy.

SWEETWATER, Nov. 16.—Mrs. Jose Lopez, mother of five small children, is dead. Her husband is in a Sweetwater sanitarium with a bullet through his chest and not expected to live. Another lad, a cousin, got a bullet in the arm.

The tragedy is the result of a week-end shooting affray on the Barron ranch in Fisher county, north of here. James Sheffield, 25, a negro, is in jail at Robery charged with the shooting.

THREE SCHOOLS COMBINE IN ONE LARGE BUILDING

County Superintendent and Principal Head Elaborate Program in Which Cities Join.

One of the most important pages ever written into the educational history of Eastland county was unveiled today, according to Miss Beulah Speer, county superintendent, when the county's first rural junior high school was opened in the new five-room Colony schoolhouse just off the Pleasant Valley road. That this school will also be the second classified rural school in the county was also revealed in a short, pointed talk by Miss Speer, to whose efforts, together with those of C. D. Stuard, J. B. Maddox and J. W. Davis, trustees of the district and Principal G. D. Holbrook, Mrs. G. D. Holbrook, John Cook and Miss Maud Pritchard, teachers in the community school, are largely due the launching of this new educational enterprise.

Speakers At Opening.

The opening was announced as informal, but it partook of the character of a well thought out program. Principal G. C. Curry, head of the only other classified rural school in the county which is in the adjoining Pleasant Grove district, brought greetings from his district. Representative M. H. Hagaman of the Texas legislature, Supt. R. S. Holloway of the Ranger city schools, and Judge N. M. Rosenquest of Eastland, were among the speakers, all of whom stressed higher standards, better co-operation, the importance of work as an element in success, the growing importance of the rural schools in the life of the state and nation and the vast importance of teaching patriotism, and community pride, which Representative Hagaman characterized as the real source of patriotism, and Superintendent Holloway stressed the importance of the '90 per cent of the nation's great characters who came from the brush."

Music for the occasion was under direction of Miss Christine Carter of the department of fine arts, Ranger High school, assisted by Mrs. Hall Walker, Mrs. Walter Murray, Mrs. W. W. Housewright, Mrs. H. H. Durham, Mrs. H. C. Barkley, Mrs. Marion Peters, and Misses Christina Schuck, Virginia Brookes, and Mildred Bryant, with the entire school and visitors joining in to make it a sing-song of popular airs.

Looking Ahead.

The school has already taken steps, it is said, to organize two basket ball teams—a boys' and a girls' team. Arrangements for seats in the commodious auditorium are virtually complete, it was stated by Principal Holbrook. A truck for hauling pupils has been provided.

A school library will also be provided, it was stated. The presentation of a large dictionary to the district by W. W. Housewright, vice president of the Citizens State bank, as a gift from the bank, was the first contribution to the library, it was revealed. The course of study covers all the first nine grades and, when completed, will admit the pupils of this school to the preparatory department of the state normals and to the junior class of any high school in the state, it was declared.

The active part taken by the Ranger Chamber of Commerce in assisting to arrange the day's program came in for gracious acknowledgment. It developed that the participation in that event by Ranger musicians and school heads, grew out of a visit to the district by C. C. Patterson, secretary of that body, Steve A. Lillard Jr., vice president of the Ranger State bank, and a Times representative some weeks ago. Other visitors included: J. M. White, merchant; S. T. Lillard of Decatur, and C. E. May, insurance man.

That the whole community is a unit in support of the school was indicated not only by the large turnout to the opening but by the lusty cheers given trustees and faculty when they were presented and by numerous expressions by patrons at the opening.

DEFENDANT AND GOVERNOR JOIN TO FIGHT SUIT

Pleas in Abatement and of Privilege Filed in Answer To Attorney General.

AUSTIN, Nov. 16.—Pleas in abatement and of privilege were filed today by the American Road company before District Judge George Calhoun in Moody's suit to cancel the company's contract, for $500,000 and for a receiver.

The abatement plea attacked the right of the attorney general to bring suit without instructions from the governor. The highway commission privilege plea was based on the fact that the suit must be brought in the defendant's home county, Dallas. The intervention suit was filed in the name of the governor and the highway commissioners. Arguments on questions raised in the intervention suit are expected to take some time.

The American Road company entered a general denial of all Moody's charges, and the plea in intervening also denies the charges.

The American Road company also asks that $900,000 alleged to be due it for work done on the highways. The plea in abatement filed by the American Road company also asks for dismissal of the suit on the ground that the suit was not brought at the request of the governor or of the highway commission, nor by any state department, nor under any legislative enactment.

Lee Satterwhite In Austin, But Does Not Call On Governor

AUSTIN, Nov. 16.—The presence of Speaker Lee Satterwhite today renewed discussion of a special session, which he said was bound to come, but not before the Christmas holidays. He was here arranging for a meeting Monday, Nov. 23, to discuss federal tax inheritance laws.

Satterwhite recently attended a Washington conference in protest against a federal inheritance tax. The ways and means committee has offered a modified amendment to reduce the inheritance tax 50 per cent and also to return 80 per cent of the tax to the states.

Following his reported "break" with the Ferguson, Satterwhite did not call at the executive office.

If the San Antonio-Mathis line is built, it will give San Antonio access to a supply from six fields, an abundance of domestic fuel.

ON THE RANGE
AT RANGER
 BY THE FENCE RIDER (Items for this department must be phoned in to the Fence Rider, by 12 o'clock daily in order to insure their insertion. Don't be haphazard. Jingle the telephone bell.)

It didn't turn out a blue norther after all. Only the wind blew!

Let's see. When was it those country club fellows were going to shovel gravel and make that boulevard out club way?

Those Eastland and Ranger officials seem to be getting in dead-earnest about making autos carry head and tail lights. Still and all, a red-headed driver driving bareheaded might be let get by. He has the signals all right.

Talk about good crops! Why here in Eastland county, even the rabbits have cotton tails; corn flows from bootleg stills; some of us feel like small potatoes and make wry faces —when things don't go our way.

One of these days, when me and the old bronc can find time, we're going way off to ourselves and write three books. One on "How Many Ways a Woman Can Trim a Hat"; one on "How Many Things Can Get Wrong With a Car"; one on "How Many Ways Can a City be Killed."
 We've already counted up to six hundred and sixteen thousand ways to trim a hat, about a million things that can get wrong with a car and only a few real smart ways to kill a city. These few include depending on natural advantages and starting things right and thinking they'll run themselves. Natural advantages have killed more cities than any one thing on earth because people depend on them. Cities worth while make their own advantages—build their own harbor like Los Angeles did—dig their own deep sea channel like Houston did, create their own trade territory like Oklahoma City did. The progress of a city depends on placing each and every enterprise in it in the hands of men who know how to handle it; the extent of a city's trade territory is exactly as broad as its arms are long; and its growth is limited only by the enterprise of its citizenship. It's only about 12,000 miles from any city to the remotest

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL
 Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.
 Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks
 the growth of the germs.
 Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of—persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu.
 Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion

FRECKLES AND HIS FRIENDS

'Thank You' Campaign Makes Good Headway

Civility is not a sign of servility. Only the vulgar are rude.—George Adliss.

That tersely telling answer came to the corresponding secretary of the recently organized American Thank You League from the distinguished actor yesterday. It opened the door to controversy, for Clarence Darrow while half commending the purposes of the organization that strives to awaken a spirit of universal courtesy, also half condemned on the score that many would feel forced to utter a hollow "thank you" parrot-wise and thus show a servility that would caricature sincerity and from-the-heart politeness.

"If it be true, as European writers charge, that as a nation, America is the most impolite of nations then the American Thank You League is justified," writes the corresponding secretary whose headquarters are given as Allerton Building at Fifth-Fifth street and Madison avenue, N. Y. "Scores of thoughtful men have sent their beliefs in its justification. Its purpose is to create an appreciation of the fact that courtesy is not merely a sure way of smoothing life's rough places but that it helps business. If it does either it will do much. Ninety per cent of those who respond believe it's a needed organization, but there is much mental exhilaration gained by studying the mental reactions of famous men when called upon to decide the little question: 'Are you in favor of promoting the custom of extending a courteous thank you in small partial payment for a favor?'

CANYON—Building of the electric transmission line between this city and Happy will soon be completed by the Texas Utilities Company.

Paintings Find Ready Market in Texas

DALLAS, Nov. 16.—Twenty paintings from 167 exhibited were sold, according to Mrs. Sydney Smith, director of the art exhibit at the State Fair of Texas, in her report to the secretary of the State Fair Association. Several wealthy Dallas citizens bought canvases of artists from all over the United States.

The art exhibit of 1925 was a complete success, according to Mrs. Smith, comment indicating that the work was highly pleasing. The academicians, the National Society of Women Painters and the Dallas painters showed their work at the art building this season.

Patrons showed a marked preference, in making purchases, for still life, Mrs. Smith says.

GONZALES — Survey has been completed for the high tension electric transmission line between this city and Cuero to be built by the Texas Central Power Company.

NEW BRAUNFELS — Construction is under way here on the large electric generating plant of the Central Power Company. The plant when completed will have about 100,000 horsepower.

MAY SEYMOUR FOOTLOOSE

by BEATRICE BURTON

THE STORY SO FAR:

May Seymour, whose husband killed himself because of her love affair with another man, returns to her home town after a year's absence. She sells her property and with her whole tiny fortune in cash sets out to find and marry a man with money. At Atlantic City she meets Herbert Waterbury through a divorcee, Mrs. Carlotta Frolking. Believing Waterbury to be rich, May sets her cap for him. When he proposes, she accepts him and turns over to him all her money for investment. Immediately he disappears—and the money with him!

Peoniless, May sells her diamonds to buy a railroad ticket to California, where Carlotta has a bungalow in the Los Altos hills. On the way she stops off in her home town to visit her friends, Dick and Gloria Gregory.

There she meets Ulysses Forgan, a wealthy widower. He falls in love with May and asks her to marry him. But she refuses, explaining that she likes him too much to marry him without love.

Then she goes to Los Altos, but finds herself an unwelcome guest in Carlotta's home when she fails to pay her board. May writes Forgan for money to bring her home, and she settles herself with the Gregorlys for the winter.

On Christmas day the Gregorlys have a party, at which Ulysses and his daughter, Sally, are guests. He points out to May that she has no right to "live on" the Gregorlys, who haven't much money—and that she'll never be happy until she learns not only to take care of herself but to serve others as well.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

"If that's the kind of woman you think I am—the kind of woman who lives on her friends because she's too lazy to work—why did you ask me to marry you?" she asked.

"For the best reason in the world," Ulysses answered in a level tone. "Because I love you."

May sat looking straight ahead of her for a long time. Her eyes smarted with angry tears that kept gathering faster than she could blink them away.

But under her anger she felt, somehow, what Ulysses had just said to her was the truth about herself.

He had shown her just what she was as plainly as if he had held a mirror up before her eyes for her to see herself. She looked back over her life and couldn't see a single place where she had done the unselfish thing instead of the selfish one.

She had married Dr. John for money and had ruined his life. During the 10 years she had lived with him she had never considered him for a minute. She had gone about to "wild" parties with any man who happened along, she had smoked and drunk, and danced like a butterfly in the sun—without a thought of anything but her own pleasure.

She had refused to bear a child, although Dr. John had made it perfectly plain that in his code of life marriage without children was no marriage at all.

She had lived upon his bounty and given him nothing in return—she had been a grafter—a cheap grafter.

And now she was "sponging" upon the Gregorlys in the same fashion, so Ulysses said. And Ulysses was right! But the fact that he was right made May feel all the more bitter toward him.

She stood up and faced him for a minute, her eyes bright with tears, her hand pressed against her heart as if it hurt her. "All day I've been longing to see you," she said. "I've been wanting to tell you I'd marry you!"

At that he eagerly stretched out his hands toward her, but May pushed them away. She went on in a voice that was choked with tears:

"I was going to marry you for the sake of the home you could give me," she said frankly. "I was going to 'graft' on you just as you say I've been 'grafting' all my life on somebody or other. Only I didn't think of it in that way. I thought I'd give you companionship in exchange for your money. And I could have helped you out with Sally, too."

Ulysses tapped his spectacles on the back of his hand through several moments of silence. He looked at May as if he had never seen her before—the lovely turn of her cheek, the softness of her eyes, veiled as they were by tears.

"And so you would have married me without love—for the sake of having a home?" he asked. "You who wanted to be homeless all along—'footloose' as you called it!"

May nodded silently. "Well," Ulysses went on, as if he were talking to himself, "I wouldn't have believed it possible to care about any woman as I do for you—but I want you so much that I would have taken you on any terms even those!"

May smiled mirthlessly. "You'll never take me on any terms, Mr. Forgan," she said stiffly. "You'll never get a chance to! And I hope I never see you again!" She turned on her heel and ran upstairs. From the window of the guest-room she watched him leave the house a few moments later and walk down to the curbstone with Sally and her swain.

His motor engulfed him and swung away down the street. It disappeared—and the street seemed dreadfully empty.

He was gone out of her life forever, thought May. The knowledge brought a feeling something like pain to her heart.

Why, how terrible it was going to be not to see him again! How dreadful it was to lose that comforting feeling that he was waiting for her when she should tire of being "footloose," and want Journey's End!

She wanted it now—home and the peace of home! Journey's End!

She stood before her mirror looking at her face gone white and haggard, and tried to smile at the reflection while her drooping lips.

"You certainly are the world's prize bonhead!" she told herself miserably.

In the beginning of February, May left the Gregorlys and set herself up in housekeeping rooms. The two tiny squares of space on the top floor of an apartment building were hardly worthy of the word "rooms."

But May made of them a home—the first she had ever made in her life. As a bride she had walked into Dr. John's old home and lived there among his dead mother's belongings, taking no interest in them.

But this was different—this tiny flat filled with painted furniture that May bought on the installment plan. She loved everything in it, from the painted sugar tin in the tiny kitchen to the box couch in the tiny living-room.

The box couch became a bed at night when the living-room took on the aspect of a bed-room, with May's fresh clothes laid out for the morning.

She had to get up early these February mornings, in order to be at the office by 8 o'clock. For May was at work again at a stenographer's desk after 10 years of ease.

She had found her position—a responsible one with a firm of importers—through Dick Gregory.

Mr. Phillimore, the head of the firm, was May's "boss." From him she took orders, and slow dictation. Mr. Phillimore loved to use big words, and he spelled them incorrectly for May, who knew how to spell them herself!

"What an old fogey he is!" she would think as she sat patiently beside his desk with her pad on her knee.

She compared his speech with the crisp, clean-cut sentences of Ulysses Forgan. It would be a joy to take dictation from Ulysses, she thought.

She would sit looking at the egg spots on Mr. Phillimore's tie, at his unshaven jaw and his lack-luster eye—and visualize Ulysses in his clean, white linen, his well-pressed suits and general air of perfect grooming, his air of youth and vigor in spite of his 50 years.

And he would wonder why Herbert Waterbury at 45 had seemed so aged to her, while Ulysses, who was a good five years older, seemed no older than herself!

Sometimes when she went out into the crowded street at noontime she would think that she caught a glimpse of him. But she was always wrong.

The last Saturday in March Mr. Phillimore discharged May. He explained to her that she ought to know how to try to work for importers. And he added that she didn't take the dictation fast enough anyway.

She walked home under the heavy, leaden skies with a heart as heavy as they. No job! And her month's rent due in a couple of days! Not only that, but she owed Dick Gregory $200!

She sighed deeply. What a struggle it was to earn enough money to keep body and soul together! And where was the joy of being alive, anyway?

Life stretched ahead of her like a long dusty road, edged with shadows. Nothing ahead but work, work, work.

And then suddenly something leaped in May's heart like a living flame.

Coming straight toward her down the sordid street was Ulysses Forgan! And suddenly life seemed very worth while, and the world a wonderful place to be living in!

All this because a middle-aged man had suddenly turned, the corner of the street and was coming toward her holding out his hand in greeting. He was smiling—and May realized that she was almost running toward him in her eagerness to speak to him.

They stood there, wordless, smiling, shaking hands vigorously for a full minute before either spoke.

Then May said breathlessly: "The last time I saw you I said I hoped I'd never see you again! I didn't mean it!"

"No?" Ulysses asked, replacing his hat, which he had swept off in greeting. "Are you sure you didn't mean it?"

May could only shake her head and laugh like a child that has been naughty and is glad to be forgiven.

"I've been working—you told me I ought to go to work to support myself, you know," she said after a minute or two. "But I just lost my job this afternoon. After 10 years of idleness my typewriting hand has lost its cunning!"

Ulysses looked at her closely. "You're thinner," he said after his long scrutiny. "And too pale. Been shut in too much! Come and work for me. I've a nice sunny office, and I'll make you take two hours off every noon to get out in the air! Will you start work for me Monday morning?"

May shook her head. "No thanks," she said. "You told me once upon a time that I was a grafter! And I'm not going to prove it by 'grafting' on you! I'm no good as a stenographer now. I wouldn't honestly earn even a tiny salary. Goodbye."

She held out her hand and Ulysses took it in a hard grip. "But let me come to see you," he begged, and once more May shook her head.

"No," she said. "I'd rather not see you, somehow—I want to be alone, away from everybody." And with that she went.
