

It's Easy to Get In But Hard To Get Out of Records

By ROBNSY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer
WASHINGTON.—At least four of the new senators ought to be able to restrain themselves from increasing the big hot wind of superfluous oratory for which the senate is so justly famous. They are Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky, Carl Hayden of Arizona, Millard Tydings of Maryland and Elmer Thomas of Oklahoma. All are democrats and all have seen long service in the house, where one is taught that democrats should be seen and not heard. Occasionally a member is allowed to speak in the house, but very often he is stopped before he can reach his subject.

These four men, promoted by their states at the expense of distinguished republicans, are all of senatorial calibre and their presence in the upper house will give no comfort to those who would convince us of the stupidity of the electorate.

Hayden explains that he learned his lesson very early in the game. He was elected to the house 16 years ago. For a whole month he kept perfectly still. Then one day up came some legislation affecting forest conservation. Hayden, Arizona's only congressman, thought he knew something about forests and forest fires and, under the five-minute rule, undertook to compress what he knew into a measly little five minute speech.

No sooner had he finished than former Congressman W. J. Talbert, of South Carolina, an old Confederate veteran, came over to him and said in kindly tones:

"Well, I see you finally had to make a speech. Every young fellow here feels he has to get into the Record. I'll give you a tip. It's easy to get into the Record, but it's mighty hard to get out."

Hayden says he has always remembered the advice and threatens to be the silent sphynx of the next session in the senate.

Barkley recently returned from a Chautauqua tour through Texas, Arizona, New Mexico and California, during which he spoke at one-night stands on public questions of current interest. Apparently he is not unduly impressed by the dignity of his new job. Here's one of the stories he told his audiences:

A school teacher in a District of Columbia school, handling a class in government, asked a pupil "How is congress composed?"

"It's composed of the senate," replied the bright boy.

"Isn't there a lower body than the senate?"

"There certainly is not!"

BLIND WOMAN MAKES TOUR OF EUROPE ALONE, CLIMBS ALPS TO GET THE VIEW

Spent Entire Year Touring Continent Unattended, Says People Were Very Kind to Her.

By ALLENE SUMNER
NEA Service Writer
(Copyright, 1927, NEA Service, Inc.)
CLEVELAND, O.—The only person in the world who has ever really seen Raphael's Sistine Madonna is a blind woman, "an old maid singing teacher," who has never seen sun or moon or any loved face since she was a six-months-old baby.

This is the verdict of an old guide in the Dresden gallery where the tenderest of all madonnas dwells. He guided the hand of the blind woman over the immortal canvas as she told him what she saw; awed, he told the guides to keep silent, and bade all the visitors be still while a blind woman told them what the madonna was.

leave. The proprietor forbade any servant to help her find her way down three flights of stairs and out of the pension.

"I was too American to stand that," says Miss Davis, giggling at the memory, "so I threw a bluff. I started out by myself, knowing that I did not have the slightest idea where the door was. That frightened them, as they knew they would get into trouble if I fell. They almost pushed me into the street and insisted that I give them 100 lire for their trouble. I had intended to give them something reasonable, but that maddened me. I had nothing smaller than 100 lire in change, however, and I started prawling about looking for a wine shop or owe the world a double amount of service yourself."

And the little girl never again was afraid, sorry for herself, or willing to admit that she couldn't "do everything that everyone else can do."

But other people did not take this spectacle of a blind woman wandering over a strange country so much for granted.

The Pope himself pronounced a special blessing upon her, placing his hands upon her head, praying "that for the blind one God may enlighten her sight."

It was the Pope himself who gave a special order that everything in the Vatican, including the choicest treasures, be presented for her touch. Blind Miss Adams did not miss a single thrill.

She descended into the catacombs with her flickering wax taper while other women screamed and turned back.

"They were gruesome and black," she says, "But I loved the experience."

She climbed Mt. Blanc, roped to a guide and thrilling at the view.

She has a smile for the memory of the cemetery of the Capuccini where the monks' bones make chandeliers and vases and frescoed walls.

"It is as if they were laughing at death," she says—"as if they knew their mere bones didn't matter and as if they were having a roguish time at seeing their bones used in this queer way."

She flew from Paris to London and back again. No memory so lives as this, perhaps—"The view was superb!" the blind woman says.

She climbed the 560 steps to the top of Milan cathedral, clinging to a hand rail along the narrow steep flight.

She wandered through the Paris shops, buying the things any woman loves.

"Seeing" to this blind woman is an extra sense which we with sight cannot quite understand.

A Matter of Concentration
"Perhaps if I ever saw in the normal sense I would know that I had never seen before at all," she says, "but it does me very well."

It's a matter of concentration, she says. She approaches "seeing" much as a mathematician would approach his problem.

She perhaps see more beautiful things than I would with real sight," she says, "for I can eliminate all the ugly things."

Her trip to Europe was beautiful, wonderful, but—"I'm not whining: I've had more than I deserve, but I'd give the rest of my life for just one day of sight in Florence or Rome."

"Everyone Was So Kind"

Miss Almeda C. Adams, blind woman who spent a year touring Europe unattended.

Miss Almeda C. Adams, totally blind "saw" the madonna when on a year's tour of Europe utterly unaccompanied. All alone, she traveled thousands of miles, trusting to passers-by for any necessary help.

Never Had Any Trouble
She brings home with her not only a memory of honors never before given any human being, but also a strong faith in humanity.

In twelve months of wanderings in strange lands and among strange tongues, she had never one second of danger, she says, and very few disagreeable experiences.

There was the time when, in a hotel in Rome, her sensitive fingers found too much dust and dirt about her pension room and she decided to someplace where I could change it. It's a wonder I wasn't robbed of all I had, but I wasn't."

The year's travel trip alone was to Miss Adams just a taken-for-granted thing.

When she was only a baby her mother asked her to bring her a dish towel.

"I can't," she told her mother. "Why not?" asked her mother. "Cause I'm blind."

A smart cuff on the ear followed. "Don't you ever again let me hear and her mother said: you say that you're blind or that you can't do anything that anyone and everyone else can do. You're not blind and the world owes you nothing. You

England Honors George Canning Noted Premier

By United Press.
LONDON—Great Britain today paid homage to the memory of George Canning, a boy who left the poverty of London's slums to become Prime Minister of his country.

Born in London, April 11, 1779, Canning suffered not only under the limited resources of his family, but also under the stigma of social ostracism which his father had incurred by a so-called "marriage beneath his station." The death of his father, while Canning was quite young, was a decided setback in his life, but his mother went on the stage, and, though with little success, she managed to keep the child in food and clothing and to educate him as well as possible.

Canning entered Eton and at the age of 18 passed on to Oxford, where he distinguished himself, especially in the classics. From Oxford he went to Lincoln's Inn, but at the suggestion of Burke, he soon relinquished his career at the bar for one of politics.

He entered the House of Commons in 1794 as the protegee and supporter of Pitt, while two years later he received his first ministerial position as an under-secretary of State. Within the next two years he established his reputation as an orator and a statesman by his speeches in favor of the abolition of the slave trade.

In 1801 Pitt resigned office and Canning joined the opposition against the Addington Ministry. When again became Prime Minister in 1804, Canning was made Treasurer of the Navy, a position which he held until Pitt's death in 1806. When the Portland Ministry was formed in 1807, Canning became Minister for Foreign Affairs. At the close of the Portland Ministry's tenure of office, Canning went out with the rest of the Cabinet.

In February, 1827, a stroke of paralysis forced the resignation of the Earl of Liverpool, and Canning was called upon to form a new ministry, which he did with the aid of the Whigs.

His health, however, gave way under the strain of the cares of the office and he died on August 8 of the year. He was buried near Pitt in Westminster Abbey.

Today, the centenary of his death, was marked with special memorial ceremonies at various places in Great Britain and wreaths were laid on his grave.

FREDDY WELCH.
By HENRY L. FARRELL,
United Press Sports Editor.
New York Aug. 8.—Alone, deserted by his friends, broken hearted and financially flat, Freddy Welch, one time lightweight champion of the world, died recently in a side street New York hotel.

The body was found on the floor by a maid, who was in fact the last and only speaking acquaintance he had.

The doctor said death was caused by heart trouble.

"Heart trouble?" said the wife from whom he had been separated, "yes, heart trouble—a broken heart."

The case of Freddy Welch was just another one of those with which the history of sporting New York is crowded. You're a good fellow when you have it.

You have heard arguments from column writers and fiction writers that New York and its Broadway is not hard boiled and cold hearted, that there is always a helping hand and a lift for members of its fraternity who are in distress. In some isolated cases, where there is a chance for a return on the investment, Broadway has a spark of sentiment in the heart but in the majority of cases it is—what have you?—not what do you want?

Freddy Welch was a good fellow when he had it. He was not a carouser. He was of a serious turn of mind and saved much of his money, but he always had a 10 or a 20 for a needy hand. But when the time of need came upon him, there was no one to help him and he lost everything.

He had saved $200,000 up to the time that he lost the championship to Benny Leonard. With a part of the money he bought 162 acres of valuable land in Summit, N. J., and opened a health farm. He had taken up physical culture before he turned to professional boxing and his health farm became a success. He was making money on his investment and the value of the land was jumping year by year.

Then came the war. Although he was a British subject, Welch enlisted in the United States army and because of his technical training he was assigned to the medical corps and rose to the rank of captain. The work he did among the returned wounded in the hospital was said by chiefs of the service to have been almost miraculous.

But while he was giving his time to the service of his adopted country his business had slipped and when he was discharged from the army he found that he had to start all over again.

It was difficult to get his business back because competition had become much stronger and he finally was forced to place heavy mortgages on his property. His business failed to pick up and he had to call on wealthy friends for assistance. They promised help but when the time came they failed and his farm had to be sold.

He was flat broke and had to look for work. He couldn't find it in his own line and he knew no other line. "Everybody left him flat," his wife said. "Why they wouldn't even give him a complimentary ticket to a fight."

Welch was a sensitive sort of a fellow and proud, too. He didn't want to make himself an object of charity and when he was given the cold shoulder as such it broke his heart.

The last time we saw Welch he was in an uptown club drinking—near beer.

"How's things, Freddy?" we asked. "Might be worse," he replied with a wistful sort of a smile.

"Say," he then went on, "there are some big fights coming on this summer. Don't you suppose you could get me a job doing some experting? I see a lot of the fellows are doing it. I need money but I want to work for it."

When we found an experting assignment for him, we couldn't locate him and the next thing we heard he was dead.

He had a game heart in the ring and a game heart in business but it could not stand up under the punishment of ingratitude and the painful lesson that when you haven't got it you're not a good fellow.

Detective Says It With Plane

Ordinarily it would take several days for a man to travel from Bradford, Pa., to Harrisburg, to Albany, N. Y., and then back to Bradford, stopping to interview two governors on the way. But County Detective Jack J. Allison (below) in a plane piloted by Harri Emery (top), cut the journey down to a few hours. He had to get the signatures of Governor Fisher and Governor A. I. Smith on extradition papers.

MERRIMAN CEMETERY CONTRACT GIVEN WOODS

The Merriman Cemetery association committee met Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. N. Poe and after considering bids for contract work on the cemetery, S. J. Woods was given the contract to clean the cemetery.

Mrs. J. N. Poe, speaking of the future of the work to be done on Merriman's "million-dollar churchyard" today said, "when you see the work being done we feel sure you will contribute of your means in order that we may hire a man for all time. As soon as the work is under headway we want friends of the churchyard to visit it and look over what will have been accomplished."

John Clemmer and Mrs. Charles Hise served ice cream and cake to the following committee members: Mrs. Henry Davenport and mother, Mrs. Mahen, Mrs. Joe Fox of Olden, Mrs. Nevil Cauley of Staff, Mrs. Houston Brashiers of Lone Cedar, Mrs. Charles Hise, and Messrs. Wood, Capps, Pace, Clemmer, and the hostess.

Gripings by Gus

Griping gets results. The other day we suggested that if anybody wanted to play the cotton market it would be all right and the next day it went up 10 bucks a bale.

Cul Moorman joins us in our opinion with regard to the price of shines.

Some guy with a couple of stalks of cotton in his front yard is yelling for cotton pickers. The three dollars did not accompany the request and hence his name cannot be mentioned.

Nobody wants to bet it won't rain tomorrow. That goes to prove that we are purty good weather profits.

In case you think the big Oil Jubilee is going to be a small fry let us take this occasion to remove whatever illusion you may have. You may have been around some big doings in your time but this will be the biggest yet in this part of the country, bar none.

If you have the name of anybody that has ever lived here, please send it in so they can be mailed an invitation. The list is already started and is growing hourly. John Gholson has retained a special secretary to handle a part of the work in his office and it will be put over in sure 'nuff big style.

NOTHING complicated about this formula. Just get yourself some Prince Albert and some makin's papers. Then go ahead and roll the best little cigarette that ever took form in your fingers. "Never did a home-rolled cigarette taste so good," you'll say.

You get an idea in advance that it's going to taste mighty good when you get your first whiff of P.A. Such fragrances! Like a breath of pine forest. Then you roll one and light up. Here's the big thrill: that wonderful, class-by-itself taste of Prince Albert.

Cool as a cucumber right off the ice. Sweet as a melon from the same place. Mild as a sisterly kiss. Mild, but with that full cigarette body that satisfies to the limit in every marvelous puff. If you've never rolled 'em with P.A., you've been holding out on yourself.

Do you like a pipe? You will, with P.A. for packing. The most contented bunch of pipe-smokers in the world will tell you that pipes were born for just such tobacco. Men who were pipe-shy for years have found that they can smoke a pipe now—and enjoy it. You try it.

RACE TRACK GIVES WAY TO GOLF LINKS, HORSE PULLS MILK CART

By GEORGE D. CRISSEY
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
PORTLAND, Ore.—As sad as a humble bee with a broken stinger which is hovering in the vicinity of your personal enemy is the pathetic drop which today prevails about the eyes of Bonnie Bess once pride of racing fans but now relegated to labor ahead of a milk cart.

For Bonnie Bess, known as a Queen in that by-gone day when sporting men gathered at the Portland race track, has finally become convinced that while life may be real and earnest the sweetness which comes only from the roar of the crowd is no more.

Golf is responsible for this sad expression in the eyes of the old mare, and the acquisition of it was comparatively recent, even though it has been a decade since she raced. The Portland race track, during that interval, became the Rose City Speedway, and is now the Rose City Golf Course.

In those days of a dozen years ago when gallants of the Pacific Northwest placed their money on the nose of a pony, Bonnie Bess was seen on the one-mile track, sometimes she won. She always tried.

Now she hauls a milk wagon for a Multnomah county farmer. Her fame is forgotten and her frame, once graced by beauty, is now racked by pain and the infirmities of age.

Not so long ago, Bonnie Bess was pulling her wagon over new hard-surfaced roads, which never were a hit with horses and which are specially unkind to tender hoofs, bringing wince of pain to the eyes of a Lady of Royal breeding who now suffers from spavins and quarter-cracks.

Suddenly the old mare's eyes lighted; her nostrils sucked in huge quantities of air, and with a leap she was gone down the highway. The unexpected jerk threw her driver from his seat. He lit on the road uttering an oath while viewing the strange spectacle of an ancient steed doing a real job of sprinting.

Past automobiles, of which she does not approve, her spavins and quarter-cracks forgotten, flew Bonnie Bess.

For half a mile she ran, straight toward the race track, with something akin to the hot urge of youthful blood driving her forward. Away she sped, even as in the days of yore when maintaining a certain pace meant honor, praise and bets won. She seemed to feel that daylight must be visible between her foam crest cupper and the panting nostrils of an imaginary horse which she apparently thought was following in her wake.

This was the first time she had been near the old track in years and her course toward it was straight. But upon arrival her newly found spirit lied as quickly as it was born. Instead of a wild scene of racing addicts, flavored with the odor of sweating horses, she was a green pasture, decked with funny looking boxes. Here and there parties of men battled a little white ball with queer crooked sticks—much different from whips. It was then Bonnie Bess quit. She could run no more, and didn't even feel like trying.

Bonnie Bess was once a race horse. She hauls a farmer's wagon now. Once Portland had a race track. Now it has golf courses.

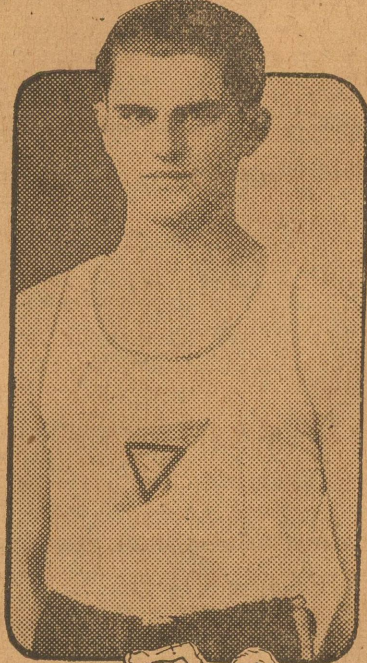

So, from the viewpoint of Bonnie Bess, why not go back to the milk wagon?

But there was expression in the old mare's eyes as she ended her last race, unopposed. She seemed to be thinking that change does not always represent betterment and what army-men call "silent contempt" was betrayed as a pair of plus-fours appeared in sight.

Now the question is: What broke the spirit of Bonnie Bess after her unusual revival and caused her to torture her ancient bones? Which does she regret the most—the wooly color of golf clothes in place of the sheen of silk, or the degrading event of golf replacing horse races? It was bad enough when the track became a speedway.

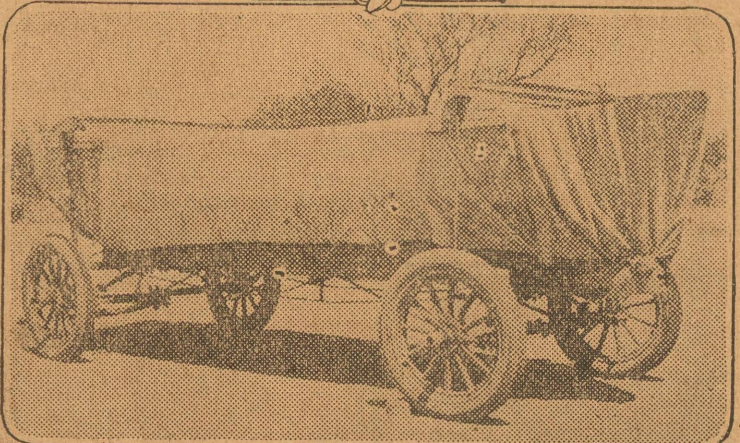

Horizontal stripes in sweaters and blouses are being replaced by vertical stripes of broken geometrical patterns. Horizontal stripes were found to accentuate the breadth of the body, thus the vogue for the vertical lines.

Getting Chili In Original Mexican Cafe Not So Easy

SAN ANTONIO, Aug. 9.—E. A. Harris, William Nix and Coyle Harris, tourists from Dallas, have discovered that getting a bowl of chili in San Antonio isn't such a simple matter. The three men entered the original Mexican restaurant here in their shirt sleeves and ordered a Mexican dinner.

A waiter hurried forward with three black coats and informed them that they would have to don them before they could be served. In the ill-fitting garments which extended to their knees and over their hands they ate their tamales and chili and stole away.

Night Policeman Has Oil Well But Holds on to Job

Tom Jones, Eastland policeman, will not give up his job just because he owns a producing oil well or two and several hundred acres of land in a proven oil field upon which many other wells are to be drilled.

A few months ago Mr. Jones sold an oil lease on lands he owned in the Gholson pool south of Ranger for $20,000. He did not sell any of his royalty, besides he owned additional land on which he did not sell a lease.

Monday, the Gulf Production company brought in a 200-barrel well on land leased by Mr. Jones and doubtless will soon begin drilling other wells on the tract.

Being policeman, and night policeman at that, is not such an easy job, but Mr. Jones is used to work and says that for the present at least he "does not choose to quit."

BABY'S TOUGH LUCK.

"It also is the reason the English 'boes are shunning the workhouse under the new order."

No Gadabout

Mrs. Polly Curlin has spent the last 55 years in her home at Denmark, Tenn., leaving the house only to attend church or to call on relatives. She has never ridden on a train or in an automobile, and has never visited the county seat, 15 miles away. "I never cared about being a gadabout," she says.

THE SUN NEVER SETS ON CHESTERFIELD'S POPULARITY

[Popular in all 4 corners of the Earth...]

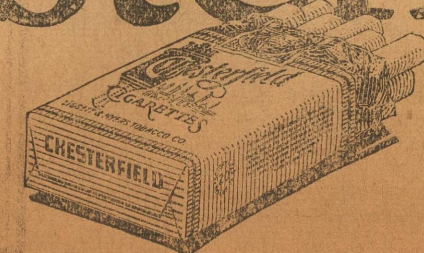

in Paris...

where good taste is born

FROM the brilliant lobby of the Crillon to the obscure little bureaux de tabac in the Quartier Latin, you'll see the familiar Chesterfield package in every corner of Paris.

The marked favoritism shown Chesterfield by this most cosmopolitan city of the Continent is added proof that the appeal of natural tobacco taste and fragrance is universal. And that alone explains Chesterfield's world-wide popularity.

Evans Says Nick Altrock Great Player in Day.

Modern baseball fans know Nick Altrock only as a clown, yet he was one of the great southpaws the game has ever produced. The Herb Pennock of today is the Nick Altrock of 25 years ago.

Recently while sitting in the room of my hotel at Washington, with leg propped high in the air recovering from a knee injury, Altrock dropped in to see me.

"Just learned you might never be able to umpire again," said Nick, as he poked his head through the open door, "and I wanted to ask you to say a good word for me to President Johnson."

"I am about ready to retire as coach, even though I'm just past 50, and I've decided when your eyes are no longer good enough for the duties of coach you immediately become eligible for the umpiring job."

I assured him that I thought he was entirely too young to start umpiring, but I would be glad to give him the requested boost when he made up his mind that he was ready to take up umpiring.

Nick never took life or baseball too seriously! Perhaps that is why he has gotten so much out of both and has always been hale and hearty.

Yanks Too Powerful
Nick having had his little joke, we discussed the fine tribute the people of Washington had paid to Walter Johnson, which naturally caused us to talk past and present conditions in baseball.

Like most of the oldtimers, Altrock insists there isn't as much to the game today as there was 20 or more years back.

"It's largely a matter of power with the lively ball in use," he said. "The Yankees simply have too much stuff in the old power house when they turn loose Ruth, Gehrig, Lazzeri and the rest of that mob."

Nick, lest you have forgotten, was a member of the famous Chicago White Sox of 1906, which won the American League pennant that year and then went on to defeat the supposedly invincible Chicago Cubs in the world series that fall.

It will be recalled that Altrock worked and won the first game of that series, 2-1, defeating Mordcaid Brown. No one figured him as the pitcher to open the series. Ed Walsh was favored by most of the critics, with "Doc" White as second choice.

Nick Altrock told me how it happened and for the first time the real reason why he pitched the first game of the 1906 is revealed.

Had Bet On Game
In those days Nick Altrock was firmly convinced that beer taken in proper quantities was a fine tonic for a pitcher. Being German, Nick favored large portions served in steins.

The night before the first game, Nick spent five or six hours testing the various brews in a Chicago cafe. Late in the evening, or perhaps it was early in the morning, when he tired of hearing some Cub supporters shout the praises of that team, Altrock wagered $100 against $300 that the White Sox would win the first game.

Altrock thought he could beat any team when right. When he knew it was his turn to pitch, he always bet on himself. When the morning of the first game dawned, he learned that he had wagered $100 on the outcome and to his great dismay, he felt he would not be the selection of Manager Fielder Jones.

About an hour before game time, noticing Manager Jones seemed to be in a highly nervous condition, Altrock asked the reason. It seems Jones didn't want to waste his ace, Ed Walsh against Mordcaid Brown, then the star of the Cubs.

"I don't know who to pitch," said Jones.

"Why not me?" said Nick, and Jones replied, "The job is yours."

Altrock pitched and turned in a pitching classic. It won his $300 and started the Cubs on the way to ruin.

THE STATE OF TEXAS.

County of Eastland.

By virtue of an order of sale issued out of the Honorable 88th District Court of Eastland county, on the 6th day of August, 1927, by the clerk of said court, in the case of Citizens State bank of Ranger, a corporation, versus J. B. Whitfield, No. 12872, and to me as constable directed and delivered, I will proceed to sell, within the hours prescribed for judicial sales on the 20th day of August, 1927, at the door of the Citizens State bank of Ranger, in the city of Ranger, in Eastland county, the state of Texas, the following described property, to-wit:

One 2.17 karat diamond ring and one 3/4 karat diamond ring, now in the possession of plaintiff above named and to which the defendant has not the right of exclusive possession.

Levied upon as the property of defendant J. B. Whitfield, to satisfy a judgment amounting to five hundred and seventy-seven 50-100 dollars, ($577.50) in favor of plaintiff Citizens State bank of Ranger, and in foreclosure of a pledgee's or mortgage lien thereon, and costs of suit. Given under my hand this 8th day of August, 1927.

C. C. HAMILTON, Constable, Precinct No. 2, Eastland County, Texas. Aug. 9-18.

Satins and transparent velvets give promise of being the favored dress materials for fall. Crushed velvet, processed so as not to be damaged by pressing or steaming, is expected to be important for both gowns and millinery. Transparent silk velvets will be more promising, however, than printed or crushed effects.

Bows, either of the dress fabric or of velvet, continue to be the leading trimming items of the summer. Not only is the bow worn on the shoulder, but upon the hip, at the rear neckline or three bows may be worn down the side of the bodice.

Fort Worth Host To Ten Thousand At Convention

By United Press.
FORT WORTH, Aug. 9.—Still they come.

Ten thousand Dokeys tramped and played around Fort Worth Monday in an all-day program of music and fun-making preliminary to the formal opening at 9 o'clock this morning of business sessions of the eighteenth biennial convention of the Dramatic Order Knights of Khorassan.

Three hundred and sixty-five accredited delegates from 165 temples throughout the United States and Canada were here this morning ready for the opening of the convention.

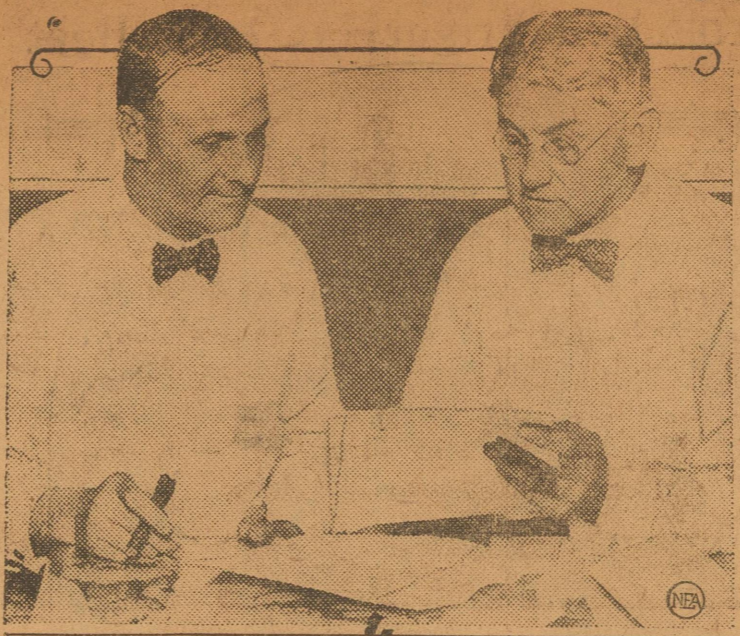

Mayor William Bryce made an address of welcome to the convention at 9:30 a. m. in the assembly hall, and C. M. Wiley, Suadah temple, Barre, Vt., responded.

Crop Conditions Over Most Texas Reported Good

By United Press.
DALLAS, Aug. 9.—Optimism for business conditions in this state is shown in a report of crop conditions compiled by the department of public relations of the Southland Life Insurance company here.

The report shows good prospects for a bumper crop, not only of corn, small grains and feedstuffs but of cotton as well. Conditions have improved remarkably all over the state, the report said. In northeast Texas, central Texas and the big bend country beneficial rains have helped the corn, and in other sections hot dry weather conditions have given the cotton crop exactly what it needed.

They're Behind Fight in Chicago

The boll weevil reports which have come in have been of a local nature and are not frequent enough to cause worry the report said. Estimates are that the corn crop will exceed that of last year and the same will probably be true of hay and potatoes. The slight slump in the amount of spring wheat and oats will be offset by the increase in prices.

T. & P. Brakeman Seriously Hurt On Work Train

Harry Barnhardt, of Fort Worth, a brakeman on a Texas and Pacific Railway work train doing construction work on the tracks near Tiffin, was seriously injured at 7 o'clock this morning when trying to set a brake on a car.

According to reports Barnhardt, while switching at Tiffin, was trying to set a brake, when some way the brake jerked loose and he fell off the car under the train, but managed to get out before being run over. In the accident he sustained injuries to the lower part of his spine and other injuries, all of which will be determined on the development of X-ray pictures.

Barnhardt was taken to the West Texas Clinic for medical attention and thence to the City-County Hospital, Ranger.

This afternoon he was taken to Fort Worth to the company's hospital.

Trap-shooting is another sport wherein getting the breaks is important.

Smoking and Throat Protection

As viewed by 9651* Doctors

WHAT is the quality that so many of those whose voices are precious have found that makes LUCKY STRIKE cigarettes delightful and of no possible injury to those voices?

For the answer, a number of physicians, many of them leading physicians, in various parts of the United States were recently asked these two questions:

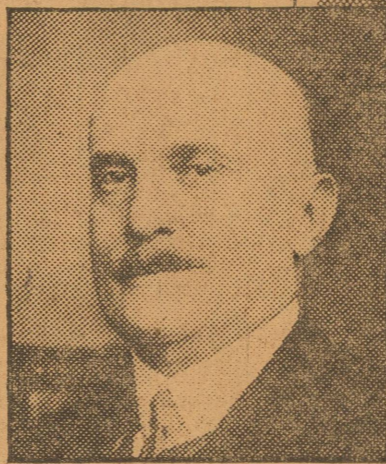

Q 1—In your judgment is the heat treatment or toasting process applied to tobaccos previously aged and cured, likely to free the cigarette from irritation to the throat?

9651 doctors answered this question "YES".

Q 2—Do you think from your experience with LUCKY STRIKE cigarettes that they are less irritating to sensitive or tender throats than other cigarettes, whatever the reason?

11,105 doctors answered this question "YES".

Consider what these figures mean; consider that they represent the opinion and experience of doctors, those whose business it is to know.

"Wings" American Movie Opens In Broadway Show

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—"The Air Age," heralded by trans-Atlantic flyers in the last few weeks and recognized by commerce and war department officials in Washington who each day are receiving letters from would-be American aviators, has brought forth "Wings" a motion picture showing war as it is waged above the clouds.

"Wings" opens at the Criterion theatre in New York, the result of a year and a half of research and film work in which the United States army has given full co-operation to the Paramount-Famous Players-Lasky organization which produced it.

Women Use G. F. P. To Build Them Up. "I feel so much stronger now I'm using St. Joseph's G. F. P.," says Mrs. Isabel Coleman, of 7724 Georgia Road, Birmingham, Ala., "that I want every woman to know about this medicine."

There is hardly a place in city or town nowadays you will not find some woman or girl, like Mrs. Coleman, who is so enthusiastic about the way G. F. P. is building her up, she wants to come right out in public and tell other women about it.

Women have used St. Joseph's G.F.P. for over 50 years!

NOW BEGIN THE STORY CHAPTER XL It was the figure of an enormously fat, half-breed negro, with thick grinning lips, and fat, not unkind face. On his huge shining breast hung a row of Spanish dollars, on his head was one of the steel helmets which Pizarro's men had worn during the conquest. The helmet was now ornamented by a row of tall purple feathers.

chief noticed this, looked at him reproachfully. The Portuguese fingered his tiny mustache. "I have brought them, O August, son of the flaming sun," he announced in a monotonous droning voice, as though the speech were some foolish riddle of which he was long weary. "Your humble slaves have gone to bring the others here also. What is your royal will that I, your slave, do with these two miserable wretches who crawl before you as loathsome snakes crawl at the feet of the mighty jaguar? What is your will, illustrious chief?"

the sacred mountain. I have heard them talk so even now as they lay in their prison. Truly they are evil men. And all things about them are evil. The chief's eyes blazed sunily. "High priest say. Bad men wish kill Batalagos. Batalagos kill bad men first. When Batalagos kill? What say high priest?" "Tonight, O son of the sun. For while they live they are evil and will work evil spells upon Batalagos. While in dead men there is naught but good." The chief twiddled the wand in his fat fingers again and looked thoughtfully. "Batalagos think something else," he said at last. "Batalagos not kill them tonight. Batalagos wait half-enough to understand the purport of the chief's announcement. Her interest, however, centered not on her ludicrous wooer, but on D'Albentara. Her eyes were fixed on him so steadily, so questioningly, that he turned his back to avoid her gaze.

The huge chief helped her to her feet. The Portuguese was facing her once more. Her eyes were no longer questioning; they were bitter, wary. "Was it you then who took my little nephew?" she asked stonily.

He shrugged his shoulders. "Is he dead?"

Again the other made no answer. "I can't understand it. I can't understand anything about you. You helped me find him once. I don't want to misjudge you. I know I'm thinking clearly. I'm all upset, and my head feels as if it would burst. You come of a civilized, cultured race; you have the air and certainly the training of a gentleman. Yet you're here, helping this silly savage who thinks he's a king, make prisoners of myself and my friends. I don't know whether you have taken my baby. I can't know. Perhaps you are as ignorant as I am. But I beg of you, if you know of anything that concerns him, tell me."

D'Albentara put out his hands in a gesture of resignation. "I regret, I regret. Much. But it is business. Business."

He gave a short command; the natives guarding Vilak and the old man jerked them to their feet and led them away. They walked the length of the ruined chamber again, then across a court and into a stone building slightly smaller but otherwise almost the counterpart of the one they had just left.

They were conducted up a flight of wide stone steps into a small prison-like room, their feet bound again, and they were flung to the floor. A heavy wooden door closed behind them; they were left alone.

Nothing for Vilak and his companions to do but await the feast of Raymi—and a horrible death.

State Building At Washington Kept Guarded

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Extraordinary precautions against bombings by cranks or Sacco Vanzetti sympathizers were taken today by state department officials.

Six entrances to the department building were barred leaving only two entrances open under guard. A guard was also stationed at the private "diplomats" entrance. Meantime the police guarded the residence of Secretary Kellogg and other officials.

Building inspectors announced that the collapse of the Fellowship Forum building here was due to improper excavations, not bombs.

If they continue increasing the size of these touring buses, locomotives will have to cross crossings cautiously.

First Anti Mask Trial to Be Held In Tyler On Sept. 1

Texas has made a gain of more than $7,500,000,000 in wealth since 1900. The wealth of the state has increased 324 per cent. The state's total wealth now is estimated at more than $10,000,000,000.

While the fox furpiece is the summer favorite with the cloth or silk costume, feather boas are chosen where the gown is of lace or is lace-trimmed. The boa matches exactly the color of the gown in most instances. Many smart chiffon evening capes are collarless and are worn with harmonizing boas. One especially attractive double cape has a layer of silver chiffon over which is posed a layer of grayish green chiffon and the accompanying feather boa is two-toned, green and gray.
