Eastland Elks Hear Rev. Green Thursday Night

A very complimentary delegation of Elks attended the meeting last night, being held on the Eastland high school grounds by Col. Guy W. Green of Kansas. Seats had been roped off for the Elks and had been decorated in their colors, purple and white. Col. Green suggested, when rain began to fall, that the congregation retire to the Methodist church, which was done.

Col. Green spoke in part as follows: "The last Tuesday of the ministry of Jesus was a busy day. The Master did much teaching and answered many important questions. As evening fell He went with some of his close followers to Olivet, and sitting with them upon the slope of that historic mountain He looked out across the valley of Kedron to Jerusalem, which was disappearing in the fading light. Then Jesus in reply to a question as to when He should come again told two parables and drew his prophetic picture of the last judgment.

"Jesus said, 'Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, ye have done it unto me.' These are the words, said Jesus, 'that ye will hear from my lips in the day of the last judgment.' What Jesus meant was this: First, There will be a final judgment, second, A wise and just judge will preside in the great court of destiny. Third, We shall be rewarded in that final judgment according to the deeds done in the flesh, if we accept Christ and follow Him, and feed the hungry, clothe the naked, and minister to the suffering, we shall receive life eternal. If we neglect these things we shall be sent away into everlasting punishment. We cannot be neutral, we cannot stand on the side lines and do nothing, we must affirmatively do the will of God. Men are punished for their neglect.

Mook Texas Well Making 1700 And States 800 Daily

Reports from the Sibley Pool today are that the Mook-Texas Sibley No. 4, is making around 1,700 barrels and the States Oil Corporation Sibley No. 2, a little better than 800 barrels, Sibley No. 3 of the Mook Texas which came in some months ago as a big well, then ceased producing, to begin again later is reported to be making 120 barrels a day now.

Oil men in and around Ranger seem to think that this pool is a good one and will be the opening wedge in a drilling campaign that will get under headway as soon as the price of oil loosens up a little bit.

Taylor Discusses Controversy Over Granting Permits

AUSTIN, Aug. 12.—Controversy over water in Texas streams promises to be one of the most momentous problems of the period, according to Prof. T. U. Taylor, dean of the school of engineering at the University of Texas. The state has made appropriations for topographic surveys to determine the flood waters. If permits are to be issued to rights to all the flood water held in reservoirs there is no advantage to the state in conducting the surveys, he said.

The Griffin-Herley plane "Oklahoma" was expected to be able to complete the tests early today.

MR. PRESIDENT?
Whatever Mr. Coolidge intended when he said he did not choose to run for president, it seems that he is just about to be counted out of the running. In other words the people of this country seem to be deciding for him, since he made such an illusive statement.

The talk now is Hoover, Dawes, Hughes and Lowden, that is on the republican side of the fence. Each of these has something to recommend him as a candidate for the presidency. Hoover is almost an idol among the rank and file of American people, except that he may not prove so popular with the farmer, since it is reported he was opposed to the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill. It is also hinted that big business is very favorably inclined to Mr. Hoover.

Dawes is the type of man for whom almost everyone has a personal admiration. He is the type of man who doesn't believe in soft soaping anybody or anything. He has the courage of his convictions and the nerve to say what he believes to be true. If he were elected he probably would be about as free from any entangling alliances as any man in the United States.

Hughes is the exact opposite of Dawes. He is the scholarly diplomatic type and is regarded generally as about the most thoroughly informed man in national politics.

As for the democrats they are still fussing over whether it shall be Al Smith or Bill McAdoo. It appears that neither of these men can be elected but the democratic party probably will be fussing over whether to make it Smith or McAdoo long after the national democratic convention opens.

A number of communities in Eastland county will hold community fairs this fall at which the various farm products of the community will be exhibited. The county agricultural agent and the home demonstration agent are taking active hand in these fairs and are making an earnest effort to show the farmers of the county the very best things that can be done on the farm for the farm family. After all that is the main object. It is to make the farm home more comfortable, more attractive and to entice the younger generation for life on the farm.

We are glad to hear that the Ranger city commission has ordered a thorough cleanup of the city before the Home-coming and Jubilee. If all the trash and rubbish in town could be placed on a city block or two and exhibited at the jubilee it would revive old memories for the home-coming.

Name Contest For Swimming Pool Has Been Closed

The park-naming contest has been closed and the names that were so generously sent in turned over to the park owner. It is not known just when the name will be announced.

Work on Ranger's new park continues unabated and while things are still more or less chaotic, they are shaping up each day better and better and hopes are held that the opening will be on or about the twenty-fifth of this month, as first announced.

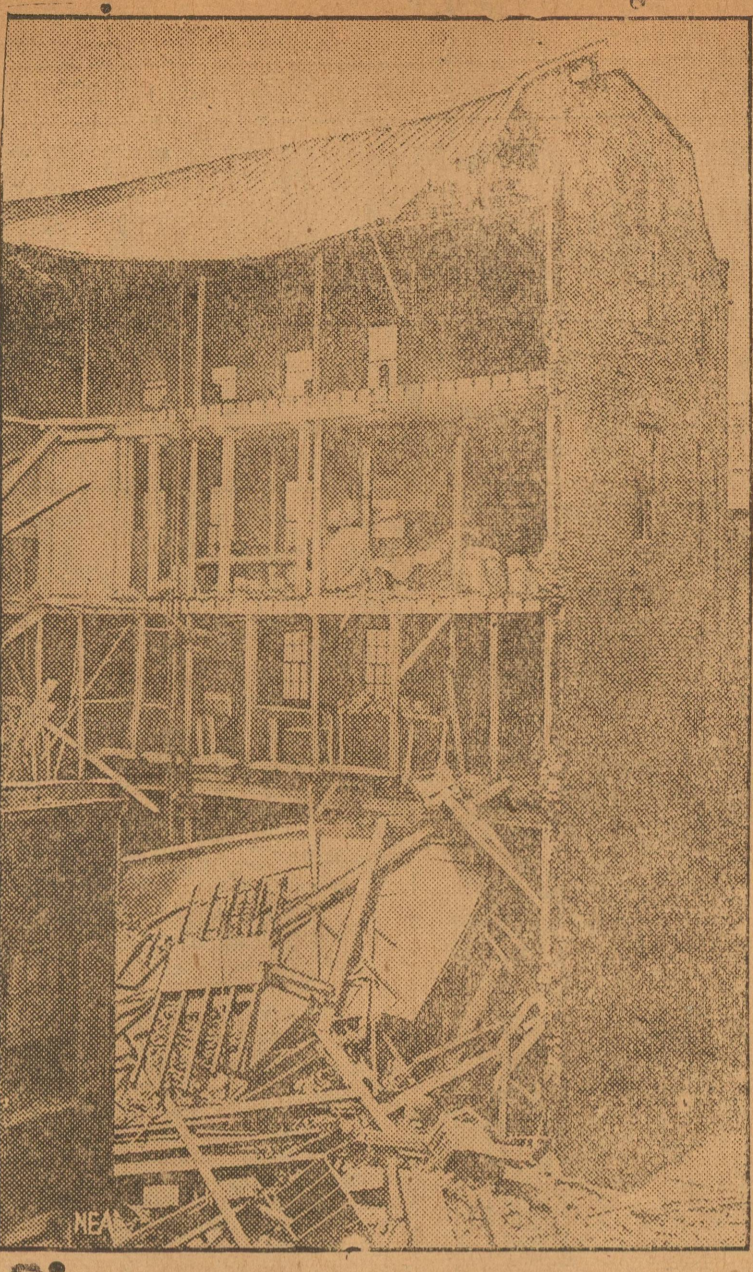

A large number of names have been sent in. Many of them were similar, and many were pretty. Its name will probably be announced prior to the opening.

Hatching lady bugs in potatoes is aided by electric heat to keep the cellar hatchery at a uniform temperature of 80 degrees Fahrenheit. The bugs are then loosed in grape vineyards where they consume mealy bugs, enemies of the grape crop.

BRITISH ROYAL FAMILY RISKS CHANCE OF ASSASSINATION

By SIDNEY J. WILLIAMS
(United Press Staff Correspondent, LONDON.—The British Royal family, generally acknowledged to be the only members of our European royalty practically immune from the danger of attempted assassination, nevertheless, by their own acts, frequently court violent death.

The simple act of inviting any member of foreign royalty to Britain increases manifestly the chances of tragedy to British royalty.

The foreign visitor is accorded a royal welcome with its accompanying drive in an open carriage through the crowded streets of London. The danger is always there of a foreign fanatic, nursing a supposed grievance against the royal visitor, bringing a member of the cheering crowds.

This apparent danger to the reigning house of Britain on the occasion of state visits was impressed sharply on the public mind during the visit of King Fuad of Egypt. The troops and police escorting King Fuad, King George, the Prince of Wales and the Duke of York from Victoria Station to Buckingham Palace, were startled to hear two loud reports resembling revolver shots from a section of the crowd lining the route. Surrounding the crowd they arrested a youth who had discharged a toy revolver. A trivial incident, happily, but it might easily have been serious.

Also during this visit, Scotland Yard was further disturbed when it was reported from Paris that an Egyptian extremist had escaped the vigilance of the native police and was heading for England for the alleged purpose of wreaking his vengeance on King Fuad.

King Alfonso of Spain is a frequent visitor to London. The numerous attempts to assassinate him are legend. The special branch of Scotland Yard is taxed to the utmost whenever this monarch pays a visit to his royal cousin, King George.

The safety of royalty, is perhaps the most efficient organization in the world and it has accomplished wonders in preventing attempts to get at royal visitors, but there is always the danger for a slip.

British royalty fears nothing from its own public. It has long been the admiration of the public and foreign visitors have been awed by the manner in which members of the British royal family mingle with the people. Especially is this illustrated on the race track. King George and the Prince of Wales delight in escaping from their escort and retinue to join fray with throngs playing their particular pony.

High and low, members of the exclusive Jockey Club, racketeers, statesmen and thugs—all combine to give them a royal welcome should they recognize a royal visitor among them.

It is safe to say that not one member of the racing fraternity here, no matter how bad his record, would think of lifting a finger to do harm to any member of the British royal family. It was a favorite trick of King Edward's—and incidentally the despair of his escort—for him to dart away unseen and mix with the gypsies on Epsom Downs during derby race week.

It will be recalled that only last year an American visitor shook hands with King George during the Wembley exhibition. The prince of Wales is continually "slumming" in the East end of London.

Foreign monarchs sitting on tottering thrones view with envy this—in their eyes—remarkable freedom. If and when they are deposed they have no re-creation in making for the hospitable shores of Britain to renew the threads of their broken life under less pompous conditions, but with a great deal more safety.

Ex-King Manoel of Portugal has for many years found it to be a haven of rest. Napoleon III of France set up household in Britain following the revolution in France in 1870. Ex-King George of Greece deposed by popular vote in 1924, is now engaged in seeking an estate in rural England.

The ex-Kaiser would undoubtedly be residing in Britain today—a desire he has often expressed—but for the fact that several British judges have brought in charges of wilful murder against him in consequence of the deaths caused through German air raids.

British royalty are experiencing an exceptionally busy time this year welcoming foreign rulers to Britain. President Doumergue of France, the King of Spain and King Fuad of Egypt have already come and departed. The president of Liberia has just arrived, while King Boris of Bulgaria contemplates a visit in the near future.

year. An acre foot of water is enough to cover an acre of land a foot deep.

Later applications from San Saba and Brownwood for permits for dams on the San Saba river and Jim Ned creek were received. Both flow into the Colorado. The question arose as to whether their applications would appropriate water already granted to the power syndicate.

Senator Wirtz Idea.
People on the headwaters of other rivers have joined with those on the Colorado. They plan a general conference at Abilene on the subject.

A third angle has been provided by users of water far down the river where it is used for rice irrigation. A. J. Wirtz, Seguin, counsel for the Garwood Irrigation company, said his company and a number of other rice irrigation interests are the ones protesting the Brownwood grant—not the power syndicate.

"More than a quarter century ago," said Wirtz, "rice irrigation companies acting under a law then in force, appropriated water from the Colorado river in Colorado, Matagorda and Wharton counties and began rice irrigation. We feel that if the Abilene meeting results in a grant to Brownwood, the river flow will be so reduced as to threaten destruction of the rice industry."

Wirtz charged that an effort has been made to make it appear that the controversy is between farmers and power syndicates. He claimed it is a contest between ranching interests on the upper river and farming interests on the lower river.

The Brownwood application is set for hearing Sept. 1. The San Saba application has not been acted upon.

CROWDED AIRWAYS MAY BE PROBLEM IN FUTURE

Cartoons of Today Picturing Congested Airways And Plane Collisions May Be Reality In Short Time

By THOMAS L. STOKES (United Press Staff Correspondent) AVIATION SERIES No. 4

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—Congestion on airways with increased danger of collision, will be a problem of the future, so that the boy of today who becomes a pilot of tomorrow probably will have to master a much more delicate technique in handling an airplane and his book of traffic rules will be more voluminous than those of today.

Flying is in its early childhood today, but in spite of the uncrowded highway of the air, collisions occur and many have ended fatally. Lindbergh, when a stunt flier, was compelled to jump with his parachute from his army plane when another plane collided with his in a military maneuver. That indicates the danger faced even by experienced fliers, and as aviation becomes better established, there will be still greater chance of mishap, not only collisions, but falling in planes in thickly populated sections, with danger to life.

To meet the situation as it exists today, the commerce department has established a set of traffic rules for the air. The young man who aspires to become a pilot must learn a code which rivals in complexity those in the average large city whose streets are thronged with automobiles. Officials expect to add to this set of rules from time to time, so that the air traffic rules of the future probably will be encased in a fair-sized volume.

Cartoons about policemen of the air are humorous now, but the air traffic cop may become a reality. An appeal for an air traffic cop went up here recently when an aviator took the opportunity offered by a pleasant Sunday afternoon to fly low over homes and apartment houses in a residential district, loop the loop and barrel-rolling almost on top of chimneys.

There is a regulation against such flying in the traffic code, and an offender can be prosecuted. The civil fine is $500, and the violator also may be held for criminal action. Over cities and congested areas, a pilot must fly at a sufficient height so that he could make a safe landing beyond the congested area, and at no time can he fly at a height less than 1,000 feet. This applies also to flying assemblies and public gatherings of all kinds, except that special permission may be granted by the secretary of commerce for such flights.

Acrobatic flying, or "stunt" flying as it is more commonly called, is prohibited over congested districts of cities, towns or settlements, and can be done over open-air assemblies only with the permission of the secretary of commerce. It is not allowed over airports or landing fields, or in the immediate vicinity. If a flier stunts on any established airway, he must perform his tricks above 2,000 feet from the ground. No pilot of a regular passenger plane is allowed to stunt.

As in automobile traffic on the city streets, airplanes keep to the right on established airways, and the flier crossing the course from the right has the right of way. When two planes are approaching head-on, and there appears danger of a collision, each plane must change its course so that they will pass on the left of each other. When one plane overtakes another, it must keep out of the way of the plane overtaken.

There is a code for the landing field, which must be strictly observed to prevent accidents at the place where there is continual activity. A plane that is landing has the right of way over planes moving on the ground or taking off. When two planes are landing or maneuvering in preparation to land, the plane at the greater height is responsible for avoiding the plane below, and must keep out of the way.

Airplanes, like automobiles, must carry lights. They must be on between one-half hour before sunset and one-half hour after sunrise. The plane carries three lights, a green light on the right side and a red light on the left, and toward the back a white light shining in the rear. The first two must be visible for two miles, the third for three miles.

When an airplane is forced to land at night at a lighted airport, it must signal its forced landing by firing a red Verry's light or making a series of short flashes with its navigation lights if this is practical.

There are special signals at land-flying fields to indicate to the flier that bad weather is approaching. If the pilot sees one red fuse flare up from the field below him as he passes above he knows it is a sign that bad weather is coming. Two fuses start him to circling around to land. They mean that weather conditions make it imperative for him to bring his plane down and go no further.

Strikes On Wane In Argentina Records Show

BUENOS AIRES (United Press.)—A total of 1,179,762 workers went on strike in Argentina during the last ten years. Wages lost due to the 1,421 strikes that took place from 1917 up to 1927 totaled 78,273,270 paper pesos, or $33,549,549.

Of the total number of strikers during the last decade 1,052,261 were men, 89,219 were women, and the remaining 38,282 were minors of both sexes.

The greatest number of strikes, 367, took place in 1919 and the smallest number, 62, took place in 1926. In 1919 a total of 308,997 workers were affected and in 1926 only 4,737.

The decade's total of 1,321 strikes were declared for the following reasons: wages, 617; organization, 528; questions of hours, 96; unsatisfactory conditions, 51; an miscellaneous, 129.

Garment workers declared the largest number of strikes in any one trade, these affecting 501,192 persons. Next in order were transportation and communications workers with 222 strikes affecting 295,031 persons. Third came the metal trades with 190 strikes affecting 115,963 workers.

Of the total of 1,321 strikes, 381 were won outright by the strikers, 27 were settled by compromise, and 821 produced no results for the strikers.

From a detailed study of the figures of the decade under consideration it can be noted strikes are on the wane in Argentina. Thus, 993 strikes affecting 852,838 men were declared during the second five-year period.

The following table represents the number of men effected by strikes during the last five years:

1923	19,190
1924	275,978
1925	14,057

The disproportionate number of men striking in 1924 was due to a railway strike affecting more than 100,000 workers.

SHANGHAI (United Press.)—In Paris, France, the initiated can find at least one or two shoe-shining stands. In the "Paris of the Orient"—Shanghai, there are none. The stranger arriving with muddy boots is out of luck unless he registers at a hotel and surrenders the boots to the room boy.

SHANGHAI (United Press.)—A dejected ricksha coolie halted on the Garden Bridge and performed a rite which mystified a number of tourists. The coolie had pulled his vehicle for hours and hadn't taken in as much as a copper. Satisfied that evil devils were hovering over his conveyance, the coolie stopped and burned a quantity of joss paper to drive them away. The situation was explained to the tourists by a foreigner who knew. The tourists were impressed, felt sorry for the coolie and took up a collection for him. The coolie trotted off with a grin of appreciation.

Gripings

by Gus

In an attempt to see just how long a pair of shoes would go without shining, we have by careful experimenting found that it is possible to make them go twenty-one days unless something untoward happens. By untoward we mean stepping in the mud or spilling soda pop on them or getting them stepped on.

Outside of the fact that it is a reflection upon the good appearances of the men of Ranger to go without a shine we have about decided that there is no serious objection to the fifteen cent shine.

If they were a dime you could afford to have four shins a week that would cost you $1.20 in three weeks but since they are not a dime and you can't afford to have them shined any more often than is necessary you can make a fifteen cent shine do you three weeks, thereby saving the sum of $1.05.

But, on the other hand, we really prefer to have our shoes looking fairly good.

Seriously speaking, we would like to know whose job it is to look after the Eastland hill road. It is a good road—(to dodge).

We heard it rumored that certain parties were getting sore about us griping about it. They can't get half as sore as those who have to drive over it a couple of times a day. Driving over it makes you sore both physically and mentally.

Hoover, Hughes And Dawes, All Possibilities

By RODNEY DUTCHER
 NEA Service Writer
 WASHINGTON. — Probably Dawes.

Perhaps Hoover. Possibly Hughes. That's a tabloid lineup representing a consensus of the best political weissenheimers as they consider the strange situation in the republican party which has developed since President Coolidge threw the little red apple out on the dawn and left the boys in a quandary whether to scramble for it or to hold off lest it be coated with paris green.

Without definitely eliminating Mr. Coolidge, it may be said that Mr. Coolidge may have eliminated himself whether he meant to or not. Most of the republican politicians are well pleased with what the president said and few tears are being shed among them over the likelihood that he will check out of the white house. Coolidge became president through accident, was re-elected by a force of circumstances and has since built up no personal political following.

That's where Dawes, Hoover and Hughes come in. Hughes Strong in New York.

Hughes would have the backing of powerful interests—banking and oil, for instance. But he does not hold the imagination of the people as do Hoover and Dawes. He would be vulnerable because of his recent law connections, even more so than was John W. Davis in 1924. In the last three years, he has represented many of the very biggest corporations in cases where his arguments, if held up to analysis in a campaign, would not appeal to the average voter.

Hoover Sitting Pretty. Hoover is sitting prettier than he ever sat before. He has the best organized personal machine in the country. Chambers of commerce, manufacturers' associations, Rotarians and Kiwanians, as well as the trade journals, are rooting for him. He is often regarded as a "Mormon man" by those who pretend to know the inside of things, but he certainly is not offensive as such to the ordinary citizen. The financial groups behind the public utilities like Hoover. Early in the game, Hoover made some pronouncements for government operation of Boulder Dam, but lately he has soft-pedalled on that issue.

The farmers haven't any love for Hoover. He opposed the McNary-Haugen bill and the farmers accuse him of fixing grain prices during the war while others were allowed to profiteer.

A NEW PUZZLE CRAZE
 By United Press.
NEW YORK—New York is in the throes of another puzzle craze, which threatens to take the country by storm. Puzzle fans who turned from crosswords to questionnaires and from questionnaires to Guggenheims are plunging into a new word-pastime, a Laddergram.

The latest verbal magic makes possible almost anything. Lead becomes gold, black turns white, the poor are made rich, stars come down to earth. The game of Laddergram consists in changing one word into another of the same number of letters, making the change in a minimum number of steps. One word is placed on the top rung of the ladder and the other on the bottom. The player climbs down one rung at a time by changing a single letter of the word, thus making a new word which forms the next rung. The last change must give him the word on the bottom rung.

For example, in the Laddergram for changing lead to gold the steps are: (1) lead, (2) load, (3) gaod, (4) gold.

Martin Wins $5 Gives Name To Celebration

E. L. Martin, of the Boston Store, Ranger, wins the $5 prize offered by the committee of Ranger's home coming oil jubilee, for naming the great event. At a meeting of the committee on Tuesday night the name "Ranger's Home Coming Oil Jubilee" was definitely decided upon and a careful survey and summation of names suggested shows that the name set in by Mr. Martin was the only one that exactly filled the bill.

A large number of names were received, many of them very good and it was no easy matter to determine just which one to use but the committee finally accepted "Ranger's Home Coming Oil Jubilee," and its stationery will bear that name as a headliner with the following explanatory matter: "October 21-22, 1927, Celebrating the Tenth Anniversary of the Discovery of Oil in Eastland count, October 21, 1917."

Income Tax Cut On Program Of Next Congress

By HERBERT LITTLE
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
CONGRESSIONAL SERIES

WASHINGTON. — The principal political and economic battles of the winter session of the Seventieth Congress are expected to center around federal taxes, with Republicans and Democrats both seeking to convince taxpayers of the merits of their contentions.

With the treasury estimating that the government will have a $338,000,000 surplus available next June 30, both parties will have one or more tax reduction plans designed to reduce the national tax bill anywhere from $250,000,000 to $500,000,000 a year.

The house ways and means committee will officially start work on drafting this bill five weeks before the session is scheduled to start, meeting Oct. 30 to draft plans for revision and simplification of the revenue laws.

Indications here so far are that the greatest pressure will be brought for a considerable reduction of the corporation income tax, now fixed at a flat rate of 1 1/2 per cent.

Actuaries calculate that a one per cent reduction of this tax would decrease revenue by $100,000,000 a year. Hence, such a reduction as proposed would wipe out the expected surplus, and more. The chief organ of the business men, the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, argues, however, that a moderate deficit under the present conditions would not hurt the government, and adds that the war-time excise taxes, including the $85,000,000 a year automobile tax and the theatre admission taxes, should be repealed.

Administration leaders, such as Secretary of the Treasury Mellon and Chairman Green of the ways and means committee, however, argue the entire surplus in view, or safety's sake that the reduction should not absorb.

The Democrats have indicated that they will seek a reduction of $140,000,000 to $500,000,000, with reduction of the corporation rate a principal feature. Attempts may be made by them to reduce some of the individual income rates as well. The minority party members expressed critical attitudes towards the expenditure of the last fiscal year's $630,000,000 surplus for reduction of the public debt.

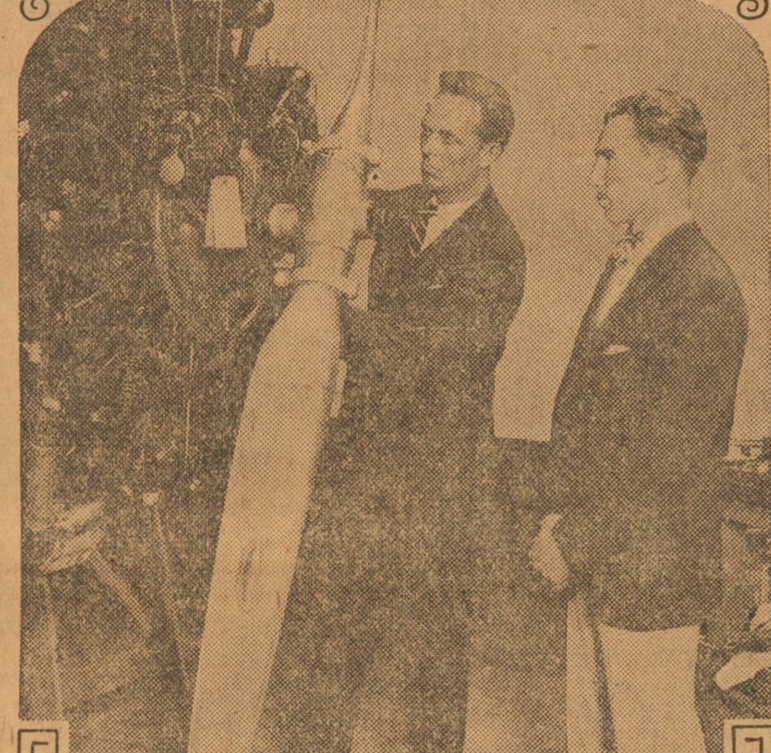

Chairman Green and Senator Smoot, Utah, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, are expected to lead the administration tax fight, with Secretary Mellon and under Secretary of the Treasury Ogden Mills taking some part.

On the Democratic side Sen. Furnifold Simmons, North Carolina, and Rep. John Barner, Texas, will lead the battles on this subject.

Record Air Jaunt Their Plan

A flight from Long Beach, Calif., to Tokio, Japan, or to Melbourne, Australia, is the aim of Captain James L. Giffin (right) and his navigator, Theodore Lundgren. The two men are shown inspecting one of the twin motors of their giant triplane. If Australia finally is decided upon, their flight over the 7000-mile route, with a stop probably at Guam for fueling, would be a record. The Hawaiian Islands would be their first stop on a journey to Japan.

MOTHERS NEED HELP AFTER STORK'S VISIT

Women are often robbed of the happiness Motherhood should bring, because of a weakened and run-down condition which often follows this wonderful event of bringing a new life into the world.

Nature foreseeing this, provided certain roots and herbs of peculiar strengthening properties, such as Blessed Thistle, Blue Cohosh Root, Squaw Vine, Life Root Plant, Helonias Root, Star Grass, Cramp Bark, etc., which the makers of St. Joseph's G. F. P. combined into a vegetable compound and which women and girls have been using for more than fifty years.

How successful G. F. P. is proving is best shown by the words of thousands of women and girls who are now coming out in public to praise it.

Mrs. Pearl Conn, of 7639 Avenue F., in Houston, Texas, says, "I started using G. F. P. right after my baby came and now I am as strong and healthy as I ever was. I wish every Mother knew about St. Joseph's G. F. P."

Religious Cult In Philippines Threaten War

By WILLIAM R. KUHN
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
MANILA.—Fifty thousand Colorums, members of a fanatical and believer religious cult, are once more showing signs of restlessness.

With the "Emperor" intrincader ruling his empire from a throne in the Manila insane asylum and his lieutenants behind prison bars for life, the constabulary turns to face a threatened outbreak of Colorums.

The situation is aggravated by an alliance just formed between the Colorums and the Pulahanes and their combined force is sufficient to cause serious trouble. The last rebellion of Colorums was three years ago and the constabulary lost many lives and learned valuable lessons in the campaign required to suppress the fanatics.

The province Surigao, north Mindanao, appears to be the center of the new menace. Thousands of Colorums with their new allies, are reported to be assembling in several localities and their actions cause apprehension. The Colorum organization now extends all over the Philippines but is especially powerful in Mindanao. Only scattered settlements exist in Luzon, some of them within a few miles of Manila.

Constabulary reinforcements are already on their way south. The cause of the new restlessness was the arrest of Laureano Solar, Supreme Mogul of the Colorums. The authorities of Bicol province made the arrest because Solar was refusing to recognize their power.

The specific charge against Solar is swindling and the intention is to keep him in a cell for a long time. The Colorums are determined to rescue him and to this end are expected to launch a campaign against the government.

Nobody knows what the Colorums are but the fanatics themselves and they refuse to uncover the mystery. Weird age-old beliefs and superstitions appear to underlie their midnight ceremonies. These are always secret or as secluded as possible, and marked by pagan rites.

The appear to have borrowed much of their religion from Mohammedanism, including the assurance of immortality if killed while defending the organization.

EASTLAND COUNTY GROWS
YELLOW MEATED MELONS
Thirty one yellow meated water-melons filled a truck body 7x4 1-2 feet in size and averaging 30 pounds each, here today, obvious proof that Parker county is not the only county in West Texas that can produce Jumbo melons. This truck load of melons was raised on the Bob Pitcock farm one and one-half miles southwest of Ranger by S. J. Holder and were seen on the streets of Ranger today as they were brought to a Ranger grocery store.

All the melons were round, light green in color and uniform in size.

Randolph Clark Family Reunion Be Held Sunday

With five of his children, one brother and scores of grandchildren gathered about him, Randolph Clark, pioneer educator and veteran minister of the gospel, will on Sunday, at the home of Prof. and Mrs. R. F. Holloway, Homer Street, Ranger, celebrate his 83rd birthday.

Having served almost four score years in the service of Christ, as he became a follower after Him in his tender years, Rev. Mr. Clark will on Sunday morning, at the First Christian Church, preach on "What Do You Think of Christ?"

While the aged minister's birthday is really on Monday, the celebration will be held on Sunday. The celebration is rather a triple event, as Rev. Clark's granddaughter, Miss Esther Sue Hassler of Stephenville, will be 17 on her grandfather's birthday and his youngest brother, Dr. Frank Clark, of Iowa Park, will be 67 on Sunday.

Two of Rev. Mr. Clark's children could not be here. Prof. Joe L. Clark, who has the department of History in the Sam Houston Teacher's College at Huntsville, will be unable to come on account of summer school closing just now and a daughter, Mrs. Talmadge Chandler, of Stephenville, is out of the state on a vacation.

Other children to be present will be Mrs. R. F. Holloway of Ranger, Prof. Leo Clark, Gainesville, John Clark, Stephenville, and Mmes. Fred Chandler and D. M. Hassler of Stephenville.

This will be the first reunion of the Clark family held in six years. Dr. Frank Clark and wife of Iowa Park will be present and the only one of the family guests who will share this eventful day, will be Rev. and Mrs. H. B. Johnson of Ranger.

London Observes Anniversary Of Death of Mystic

LONDON.—All England is today commemorating the centenary of the death of William Blake, famous mystic, poet and painter, who died in London, August 12, 1827, "singing of the things he saw in heaven."

Many literary societies and intellectual organizations throughout the country will today hold special meetings dedicated to discussions of the work and life of William Blake, whose fantastical visions of God and angels caused his contemporaries to think him crazy but whose works have since been accepted as the products of a genius. During the past few months, in connection with his centenary year, his paintings, writings and visions have been the subject of many themes in newspapers, magazines and literary journals. Just a few weeks ago a memorial was unveiled in St. Paul's Cathedral to the memory of this strange visionary and artist.

He was born November 28, 1757 in London, the son of a hosier. At the age of four the child declared that he "saw God put his forehead to the window." After studying drawing at school he became apprenticed to an engraver at the age of ten, making drawings in the Abbey and other churches. When he became 25 he married Catherine Boucher, a poor and illiterate girl whom he taught to read and write. He found great comfort in her faithful and admiring companionship and would often say to her when publishers rejected his mystical allegories:

"Well, dear, they are printed elsewhere and beautifully bound."
Charles Lamb, Swinburne and Thomas Griffith Wainwright were the first to hail his efforts as the work of a genius.

Leads Strike

When the gas company in Wichita, Kas., decided to raise its rates, the city's Federation of Women's Clubs, headed by Mrs. John Malbis (above) called a gas strike. A day was set aside to keep the ranges idle, and a survey showed that 75 per cent of Wichita's 20,000 homes burned no gas for 24 hours. Now housewives have decided to make every Tuesday this summer a gasless day.

QUEEN MARY'S BROTHER CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY

LONDON, Aug. 13.—The peer who relinquished the title of Duke to become a mere Marquess celebrated his 9th birthday today.

The Marquess of Cambridge received his title from King George in 1917 after he renounced his right to the title of the German Duchy of Teck. Of course as even a foreign Duke, Cambridge held higher rank than he does at the present time and now he is heard little of, except as the oldest brother of Queen Mary.

He holds no official positions other than those which King George has given him in the direction of the royal households. His principal occupation is filling his meagre duties as Governor and Constable of Windsor Castle, King's summer residence up the Thames. He is also a personal Aide-de-Camp to the King.

Airy Fairy Flour To Be Changed To Little Princess

The Larabee Flour Mills Company of Kansas City, Mo., represented in this district by J. B. Webster & Sons, at Cisco, have selected the Ranger Times and the Eastland Telegram to announce the changing of the name of its former "Airy Fairy" Flour to "Little Princess" Flour.

"Little Princess" is a new name for an old friend, but the change is in name only as the quality that has characterized "Airy Fairy" Flour and made it a household favorite in thousands of American homes, will remain unchanged.

"Airy Fairy" Flour is now to be used only on "Airy Fairy Cake Flour which will be sold in two and three-fourths pound packages, so a new name had to be chosen for the flour formerly known as "Airy Fairy."

When the flour bin gets low and the present supply of "Airy Fairy" Flour becomes exhausted, just ask for "Little Princess" Flour, which represents the same flour—same quality—and insurance of baking success—but has been rechristened.

MANY VISIT WILSON DAM

FLORENCE.—Visitors numbering 18,500 taking advantage of the government's hospitality in opening Wilson Dam and its subsidiary power plants for inspection, have inspected the power project since Jan. 1. Prior to that time visitors were allowed only when they had a special permit.

According to a guide at the dam, the largest day for visitors was June 5 when 1,211 people were shown through. Thirty-eight states and one foreign country were represented on that date.

A visitor must register before viewing the dam. By registering, the visitor releases the government of responsibility for any accident that might occur while he is touring the plant.

Jungle Breach by NEA SERVICE Ben Lucien Burman

ILLUSTRATED by Paul Kroesen

THIS HAS HAPPENED Attempts have been made on the life of Elise Marberry, an American girl owning considerable property near the little town of Porto Verde, in west central Brazil.

Living near Porto Verde is one Caylord Prentiss, a strange and forbidding character, who has evinced a hatred for Elise.

Vilak, Elise's two-year old orphaned nephew, is kidnaped. A native reports Prentiss has been seen with the baby. The trail leads into the jungle.

Calamity overtakes the expedition Vilak organizes in pursuit. Native trackers are deserted. Treachery breaks out. Their white friends are fever victims and are left with a friendly tribe.

Elise, Vilak and Nunnally finally emerge from the jungle. Presently they come to the outskirts of a strange city, resembling the old Inca civilization. Here they are made prisoners. They discover they are in the power of Carlos D'Albentara, whom they had known as an engineer back in Porto Verde.

The ruler of the city decides to marry Elise and to put Vilak and Nunnally to death. They are to be tortured at the feast of Raymi. The feast arrives. Vilak is compelled to witness the tortures of other victims. He has succeeded in cutting half way through his bonds when a friendly Indian slips him a dagger.

NOW BEGIN THE STORY CHAPTER XLIV The Indian thrust a copper dagger into Vilak's hand. "Take," he whispered. "White man good Mabini. Keep Mabini from die. Mabini white man's slave. Try see white before. Many times—wait outside window. But always soldiers come. Mabini have to run away. White man take dagger. Good dagger. Sharp. Kill. Kill had people hurt white man. Soldier come again now. Mabini go."

He crawled off into the red-silhouetted obscurity. With the dagger Vilak quickly completed the ring in his thong.

"Wish this chap could have gotten to us a week ago," he grunted. "Doesn't help us much now. Would have been through in a few minutes anyway."

His body was now free. But he made no attempt to disengage the loosened cords around his limbs, only moved his arms slightly to place the dagger in Nunnally's eager hands. "Cut yourself loose, but don't stir. Lie just as you are. We won't be moving for a while. I've got something of a plan. Not a marvelous plan or a sure one by any means. Quite doubtful, really. I've been racking my brain all day, and can't get it to function. But since the plan's all we've got it's worth a try. At dawn Batalagos will go into the temple to receive the first rays of the sun alone. He'll do it every day of the festival. This dawn we'll try to be there with him."

The old man severed the fetters at his wrist. Furtively he tried to retreat the dagger to his friend.

"Vilak pushed his hand away. "Keep it," he whispered. "I've got a better weapon." He began twisting one of the two rings on his finger, a seal ring of conventional pattern. The top screwed off. A large black stone was exposed, half human, half bird, like the grotesque idol with three minute claws protruding. The claws glinted brightly in the firelight.

"It's D'Albentara's ring. I put the stone in this new mounting and used the time-worn trick of hiding it by wearing it in the most conspicuous place I could; on my finger. He looked everywhere for it but there."

Fifteen minutes passed; half an hour; an hour. Vilak made no move to go. The child on the stone a few yards away began to cry lustily.

Its lamentations subsided to a whimper, then died away. A troop of yellow spotted moths floated grace fully over the crackling fire, then wheeled off as if in sudden fright. Two black beetles began crawling over Nunnally's body. With a scarcely perceptible movement of his hand, he brushed them away.

"Isn't it a good—er—time to escape now?" he whispered, his eyes constantly on the sentinel gloomily pacing to and fro some twenty yards away. "The place is almost—er—deserted."

"Just the time not to escape. We'd be missed in a few minutes and caught. We'll wait till the courtyard fills with people again and their interest is concentrated on something else. Then whatever we do won't be noticed. That's an axiom."

The moths fluttered back to the fire; one by one they dropped into the flame. A few floated gracefully away. The crowd commenced to drift slowly into the court once more and Batalagos reappeared in the pavilion. There was another dance. Then D'Albentara, beside the chief, clapped his hands. As they had done the day before, the multitude fell to the ground and lay there groveling, their eyes fixed on the east. Batalagos began waddling toward the temple.

"Now's our chance," Vilak whispered. He crawled out of his thong and slipping noiselessly to the ground crept to the shadows along the outer edges of the court away from the fire and the altar where the prostrate welter of savages was concentrated.

The old man followed. They reached the ruined stone gallery bounding the court on all sides without being detected, then began skirting along its broken pillars toward the temple.

He toppled and began rolling lifelessly down the steps.

The chief slowly climbed the great steps in the center; they climbed quickly, at one of the sides where the gallery protected them from the eyes of the worshippers. Batalagos entered. They followed. They were in a long unroofed hall. On all sides rose ghostly shapes of great ruined stone figures, some with shadowy broken arms upraised, some with flat squat bodies lacking heads. At one end was a broad, elevated stone. Toward this Batalagos made his way. The two others stealthily came after him.

He clambered awkwardly upon the stone and fell to his knees. A streak of crimson appeared atop the red mountain which the temple faced. Batalagos began a monotonous chant, flinging out his arms and striking his head against the stone. In a few moments the entire eastern horizon was flooded with red. The chief arose and clambered down from the stone. His heavy foot touched the floor; he began his waddling return to the court. Vilak was waiting behind a scowling idol. He took a noiseless step forward; caught the chief's arm. Batalagos turned, swiftly recognized his captor and then saw the old man with drawn dagger approaching from behind another idol a few feet away. He was about to scream for help, but the quick descent of Vilak's free hand checked him.

"Do not call out, Batalagos," Vilak grunted. "Do not call out. Or I will kill you quickly." He slowly released the hand which was over the other's mouth and turned it so that the captive's eyes rested on the ring glinting on his finger in the brightening light.

Batalagos paled. His great pulpy body began to quiver. "No kill," he whimpered. "White man no kill. Batalagos no call out. Batalagos do whatever white man say."

"Will Batalagos let the white man and the white girl go?" He held the ring close to the other's shakily breast. The chief nodded quickly. "Will Batalagos let the white boy go also?"

The half-breed hesitated. Vilak brought the ring within half an inch of his quivering flesh. "Yes. Let baby go too," he whined. "Do anything white man say. Only no kill Batalagos."

"That which Batalagos speaks is good," Vilak drew the ring away a little. "Batalagos is wise. Batalagos is very wise. But let Batalagos well remember. If Batalagos breaks his word, quick as the fiery lightning will the white man say. Only no kill Batalagos."

Slowly they moved between rows of sullen-visaged idols to the central door. They reached it; halted. "This is the moment I'm afraid of," Vilak whispered to the old man. "It's here that the plan's weak. We can't tell what's going to happen when the people outside first see us. Certainly we can't trust this chap. From now on we've just got to hope for luck."

The chief waddled through the doorway. A shout of joy went up from the worshippers, changing to a murmur of astonishment and dismay as the two white men emerged from the temple and took places beside him.

Vilak pressed the ring close to his nose. "Speak to them, Batalagos," he muttered. "Tell them the sun-god has spoken to Batalagos and told him that the white men are good. Tell them many things like this. Batalagos. And say no things of evil against them, for I shall hear. And the lightning shall strike."

The chief began to speak, unwillingly, plaintively, like a child forced to apologize to some indignant relative whose tidbit it had filched at dinner. His captor watched him closely, the ring at his shoulder.

Suddenly Vilak saw Nunnally wheel round with the dagger in his hand and take a position of defense. He wheeled also; saw racing across the steps from the gallery opposite him the stunted Indian of the enormous nose. The old man struck; the half-breed leaped past and hurled himself upon Vilak. He snatched at the white man's hand which bore the ring. There was a struggle; his wrist scratched against it. He tumbled and began rolling lifelessly down the steps.

The attack ended as suddenly as it had begun; yet brief as it was it had afforded Batalagos an opportunity to waddle frantically down the steps to safety. Here behind a triple row of his spear-armed soldiers he halted, and still quivering with fright, gaped up at the two Americans, who had retreated to the doorway in the temple, ready to dart behind its shelter should a spear be hurled or an arrow shot.

D'Albentara, who had dispatched the stunted half-breed on his errand, came forward to join Batalagos. They began to talk and argue excitedly. Vilak stooped and coolly laced one of his boots which had come untied. "Failed," he said. "Afraid it would. Still two facts in our favor, though. They're afraid of hand-to-hand fighting as long as I've got this ring, and it would be suicide to send spears or arrows as long as we're in the temple. Otherwise I'd say we're in a damned deep hole. I'm going to smoke. First chance I've had for a week."

He topped and began rolling lifelessly down the steps. Again they gave no heed. He descended two more steps. They were now only 20 feet away. "Halt!" he called again. At the same instance he whipped a box of matches from his pocket and struck a match upon the sandy paper along its edge. It lighted. He tossed the flaming match over his head. In quick succession he lighted all the matches the box contained and tossed them dexterously in a circle over him, so that at moments his head appeared to be surrounded by a fiery halo.

This time the soldiers halted. While they did not flee in panic as had done the Indians in the camp of Bagarundi, and though the expression of their gloomy faces indicated that this was not the first time they had seen fire thus artificially produced, yet they were undoubtedly impressed. A few prostrated themselves. The face of Batalagos was that of a puzzled, dull-witted child. Vilak continued to light the boxes until all but one of the boxes were exhausted. Then he drew himself up regally. "Listen, O people. Listen O soldiers. Listen, O Batalagos," he roared in a voice of thunder. Batalagos backed farther away. A fat Indian prostrated himself.

"Listen, O people. Listen, O soldiers. Listen, O chief. It is the voice of the fire who speaks to you. For I am the son of the fire. I and those who came with me to this land, all, all are children of the fire, sons and daughters of the fire. Harm us and the fire shall sweep down from the heavens and slay you swift as the eagle slays the dove. For we are the children of the fire. Yea, more, we are the misters of the fire. In our land of the gods where we dwell far, far away, there fire paddles our canoes swifter than the arrow and fire drives our ox-carts faster than the wind. These are true things, O people. Those of you who have wandered to the land of the gods have seen. The nature of the fire is two. It is good, it is evil. Harm us, and the fire shall wither and destroy you; obey us, and the fire shall bless you."

He paused a moment. The savages stirred restlessly. The chief's bewilderment increased. He turned to the Portuguese and gazed at him questioningly. D'Albentara smiled affably. "Batalagos is wise," he said. "Batalagos has before seen the little sticks which flash into fire. These have I brought to Batalagos when I first come to this city. Batalagos knows the truth from the false. Batalagos knows that this is not a god, but a man. A man full of evil." Batalagos took off his feathered helmet and scratched his kinky head. "Batalagos wise," he muttered. "Yes, Batalagos wise. Batalagos see before little sticks make flame. See iron stick too which high priest have. Iron stick which make flame, kill bird far, far off. All fire sticks magic sticks. Yes, Batalagos wise. Batalagos think man not god. But how Batalagos know? Man got little firestick, maybe man got big fire, iron stick. Maybe man got, too. Got high priests' ring; stand in temple of sun and sun strike. If man god, then what happen to Batalagos?"

D'Albentara was about to reply. He checked himself to listen as Vilak on the steps above went on with his oration. The American stretched out his arms. "Listen, O people. Listen, O soldiers. Listen, O Batalagos," he repeated in deep, powerful tones. "The voice of the sun speaks again, the child of the fire speaks again."

He lighted a few more matches and tossed them about his head. "I hear murmuring; I see faces. There are doubts. 'He is not a god,' say those who thing they are wise. 'He is but a man. But a man.' Let those who so speak beware. Now let there be no more murmuring—let there be no more doubting. For I, the son of the fire, will show that I am the son of the fire. As you sit around your fires when the night grows cool, your wise men tell of the gods who when the world was young walked through the fire."

"Behold, I, this second day of the feast of Raymi, now when the world is old, will walk through the fire as did the gods my brothers in the days when the world was young. For I am the son of the fire, and the fire which destroys man, will only bless and caress me, its son."

A gasp of awe went up from the arms. Vilak continued to light the matches until all but one of the boxes was exhausted.

GRAND PRIX
ZURICH, Aug. 14.—A number of powerful automobiles and motorcycles raced at breakneck speed up, down and around snow-capped mountain roads today, in an effort to win the much coveted International Grand Prix organized by the Swiss Automobile Club and the Swiss Motorcyclists Union.

Thousands of spectators lined the course of the race which is considered to be one of the most dangerous ones in the world, to see daredevil drivers and riders dash over the famous Klausen Pass for a distance of 15 miles, from Linthal to the Col du Klausen.

Some idea of the conditions under which this remarkable event is run off can be had by consulting an ordinary tourist's guide book in which one finds that Linthal is 2,000 feet above sea-level while the Col du Klausen is higher by 4,500 feet. This means that all along the course, the competitors drove their machines over a road of which the average rise is six per cent with a maximum of 9.5 per cent.

Today's entrants for the race included drivers known the world over, not only for their consummate skill, but also for their darings.

GROUSE SEASON OPENS

LONDON, Aug. 14.—London's social season ended today—for the simple reason that no one is left in London to "carry on." Everyone—that is everyone of any social consequence has departed for Scotland for the grouse shooting season which opens today.

All signs point to an excellent season, particularly in Perthshire, while in many of the other 2,400 moors or "shootings" throughout Scotland where grouse abound, the weather has been favorable for hatching and young grouse are reported on the wing in many districts.

England's finest game-shot, the King, will participate in the hunting this season and it is expected that he will follow his annual custom of staying at the famous Balmoral Castle where he does most of his hunting.

American millionaires with the comfortable purses will be much in evidence during the season. Several of them have already been able to outbid Englishmen for the choice shootings. One large deer and grouse sanctuary, it is reported, has been rented for the season for more than $25,000.

Jungle Breath

his perfect Portuguese, taking care to keep well out of reach in case Vilak should make a sudden lunge toward him. "Very clever. But this you cannot do. At once could I kill you. With my revolver, or your own that I have taken from you. But this will I let you try. For when you fail, your death will be even more interesting than I had planned. Interesting and most helpful to me, amirgo. Most helpful." He stepped back into the crowd.

Vilak reached the stone pavement at the foot of the steps. Here he halted a moment. The old man peered at him anxiously. "You can't—er—do it, Vilak. You can't," he murmured. "I know you can do many things. Yes, many. But not this. This is—er—magic—Vilak. Most certainly—er—magic. It's impossible. D'Albentara was right. It'll only make things worse. Worse." He shook his head, then added hesitantly as though half ashamed of his lack of confidence. "You can't do it, can you? You?"

"Don't you worry, Nanny. I can do it. I told you it's a trick. And I happen to know how this trick is worked. I've never done it before, but that's no reason why I can't begin."

They made their way to the one-armed idol. Batalagos, who had followed at a distance, pointed to the sacred fire, burning in its enclosure of triangular stone. "White man, white god, walk through that?" he grunted.

Vilak scowled. "This fire is as nothing in the sight of the son of the fire. He will walk through a fire as long as the bodies of five men stretched head to foot and foot to head upon the ground. Nay, the bodies of 15 men."

Another gasp of awe arose from the spectators. In a few moments he gave a few commands to the soldiers near the bulky chief. A number of rude, shovel-like implements were brought. The stone flags forming the pavement of the court were pried out and a swarm of excited chattering natives were soon digging a trench a foot in depth, eight or 10 feet in width, and 80 feet in length extending from the base of the altar toward the temple.

The noise of the workers frightened the child on the stone; it began to cry. Vilak spoke briskly to Batalagos. After a brisk argument with D'Albentara the child was released and put in the arms of a somberly tattooed black woman. Elise was brought out once more in a litter and took a seat in the pavilion. The wives of the chief who were to officiate at her marriage at sunset grouped themselves about her. She saw Tinky, but perceiving that he was not being injured, made no attempt to reach him, but concentrated her gaze upon her cousin, stalking up and down between the ranks of busy laborers.

The ditch was completed. Vilak ordered it to be filled with great heaps of brush. This done, he mumbled a meaningless ritual and struck a match to the wood. It flamed quickly, then became a mass of glowing embers.

On top of this he carefully supervised the placing of several layers of the lava rock with which the region abounded. Soon this, too, was a glowing expanse of vermillion from which leaped here and there tiny blue flames as some metal in the lava was consumed in the intense heat, or great crackling bursts of fire as some branch of harder texture than the others ignited.

Writing Operetta
Frieda Hempel Has Rest in St. Moritz

By United Press.
ST. MORITZ, Switzerland. — Far from the scene of her so-called "million dollar suit" against August Heckscher, New York millionaire philanthropist, Madame Frieda Hempel, internationally known grand opera star, is busily engaged in completing the score of all operetta while she enjoys the atmosphere of the Swiss mountain country.

Two Viennese waltzes will be written into the score of the operetta which will be produced in Budapest in November. Madame Hempel already has written an interpretation of "The Beautiful Blue Danube," waltz which has received considerable praise.

The operatic star expresses confidence regarding the outcome of her suit against Heckscher which is based on an alleged agreement with him whereby he was to pay her $48,000 a year for the remainder of her life on condition that she devote her time singing for charity.

Yanks Pitching Good Backing Up Heavy Hitters

Last season the New York Yankees early assumed a commanding lead in the American League race because of three sustained winning streaks, lasting over 8, 11 and 16 victories.

This year the Yankees are out in front because of the added power that Lou Gehrig has furnished at the bat. Not only has "Power-House Lou" as his teammates know him, stolen much of Babe Ruth's thunder but he also has been a whale at driving in runs.

Gehrig, a good batsman last season, has been a truly great one this year. His superlative hitting has been the biggest improvement in the play of a club that has made progress in various other features.

Even if Ruth should catch and pass Gehrig in the stretch of the American League Home-Run Derby, the latter's great batting will stand as one of the high lights of the present season.

Gehrig has great power in his shoulders and arms while Ruth gets his distance because of the "swish" of his swing. He bats far back and has a long follow through.

Pitchers Praised
In the spring it was admitted New York had a stronger offense but the defense was questioned, principally the pitching. Now comes Manger Huggins strongly to the front for his pitching staff.

"The credit due to my pitchers has been overlooked because of the great batting of the entire club," says Miller.

"Several weeks back when we beat Washington in a double-header and scored something like 35 runs in the two games, the phenomenal batting of the club was given much space, but no thought was tendered the pitchers. As I recall it, Washington got two runs in one game and one in the other.

"The Yankee pitching in the slaughter of the Washington club was well-nigh perfect, but it was passed over without comment because the entire club went on a batting rampage.

Huggins is right again. New York has had the most consistently good pitching in the American League. The pitching has been on a par with the batting, which is saying considerable.

Senators Hope.
Despite the commanding lead the New York club now boasts, the American League race would have been a bang-up affair had Washington not started so slowly, due to poor pitching.

"They say that 90 games will usually win a big league pennant," said Manager Harris of Washington recently. "Well, we are going to win that many this year and our chances of going over are not very bright.

"That fellow Gehrig is the difference for better between the Yanks of this year and last. If he had been traveling normal this season, Washington would be right on New York's heels.

"Take it from me New York has more than brute strength. It has a fine outfield, a slick working combination around short and second and has been getting smart pitching.

"Don't get the impression that the Nats are out of it. A lot of things can happen in baseball from now to October. However, if we don't get 'em this year, we will next."

At the present time, no club in the majors is playing better ball than Washington and the club is getting good pitching, something that was lacking in the spring.

Touching Up a Few Fences

President Coolidge had no sooner announced that he did not want to run for re-election in 1928 than Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois and considered an outstanding candidate for the G. O. P. presidential nomination, hurried to Chicago from his summer home and went into conference with political leaders. Here he is shown at the telephone getting reports on political prospects.

"Warfield's advice decided me on Luckies"

At the Fairfield Country Club Hugh Beaumont explains to Miss Ethel Burnside how he came to prefer Lucky Strikes.

The Noted Actor, David Warfield, writes:

"Among other things, when young actors come to me for advice, I always say, 'Take care of your voice, cultivate it—and watch your smoking.' Usually they eye the cigarette in my hand with some suspicion. And then, I offer them a Lucky Strike—a cigarette I smoke freely, and have yet to feel the slightest effect on my throat. I've been told that toasting does that for this cigarette. When I smoke 'Luckies' my throat is beautifully clear and unirritated."

David Warfield

You, too, will find that Lucky Strikes are mild and mellow—the finest cigarettes you ever smoked, made of the finest Turkish and domestic tobaccos, properly aged and blended with great skill, and there is an extra process—"It's toasted"—no harshness, not a bit of bite.
