MOODY'S MESSAGE.

Judging Dan Moody from his first Judging Dan Moody from his first message, Texas will have a business administration. The new governor has adopted the motto of make haste slowly. He stresses 11 needs for Texas and chief among them a revision of the taxation system and the remedying of the evils that now exist by the adoption of a scientific system. The needs for remedying the existing system has been pointed out by President Duggan of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce. The present system is abused and to a great extent very much resembles class legislation. The taxes should be made to fall equally on all. The corporations should not be made to bear and the text of the state of t class legislation. The taxes should be made to fall equally on all. they can be reached.

Another vital and needed change suggested by our youthful executive is the enactment of a classified civil service law, taking some offices, such as clerks in some of the departments out of politics. It very often happens that competent and efficient help loses out with changes in administrations and the taxpayers are then made to suffer.

need of changing the existing pardoning law. That is too patent.

Recommendations also are made for a drastic revision in the laws governing the highway system of the state and providing equitable means for their upkeep on an economical basis.

We want to see the existing laws changed. Texas pays out more and grets less in return for expenditures. gets less in return for expenditures ing room of the house by the use of than any other state in the union.

California with the best system of highways in the nation taxes an autoist only $3 a year, while in Texas the taxes range from more than $10 on up, and still we have no roads, or at least they are not kept up as they should be.

The election laws could be improved some. They need improvement.

Mondy suggests changes in the aduation of the dining table decoration, had its lovely colorings intensified by pink candles in yellow holders.

As Mrs. J. Baldwin of Eastland played a pretty march, the little ones filed into the dining room and took their places around the pretty birth-day table, and after Mrs. Bob Hodges had asked God's blessing on them, they were served pink ice cream and cake, and home-made candies.

This situation confronted the family of Thomas Riley, retired stockman—the beloved "Uncle Tom" of the entire neighborhood around 1304 Vernon Castle Boulevard, Ft. Worth,

Vernon Castle Boulevard, Ft. Worth, Texas—when his wife Bridget began to break down in 1922.

"I lost my appetite," writes Mrs.
Riley, "and when I did eat I suffered a great deal from indigestion. I frequently had splitting headaches, couldn't sleep well, and was nervous.
Nothing tasted good to me—not even water. I lost energy and ambition, and had to give up housework.

"When I was down flat on my back, my daughter, Mrs. Annie Croughen, insisted that I try Tanlac.
Before I had finished the first bottle,
I was back on my feet and able to do all my housework. My appetite picked up. Nervousness disappeared. I gained 10 lbs. and felt like a new person."

Mr. Riley, with muscles of steel even at his age, toek Tanlac at the first touch of rheumatism, and looks as if he had never had an ill in his life. Texas is full of men and women who have taken Tanlac at the right time and are now enjoying the blessings of good health and strength.

He goes back to a creek for water and a shell obliterates their nest, killing his men, including John Powell, whom Jim had promised to mail some letters for in the event of his death. Jim removes Powell's coat containing the letters, puts it on and another shell explodes nearby, destroying his memory. He is taken to a hospital as John Powell, and James Elwell is reported dead.

He is discharged again and shell in joyful anticipation of that happy day when their Jim should return from the war all safe and sound.

But they did not know. . . The soldier called John Powell in the hospital at Metz didn't die as the doctor had thought he would. That is, his body remained alive and he ate when Nurse Downing put food in his mouth and he drank when fluid was poured down his throat. But so far as there being any sign of a living intellect, he had died the instant the big shell hit the ground on the hill-

Elwell is an artist. He has a son, Jim, aged 5. Late that night twin girls are born to the woman, who dies without revealing her name. The Elwells adopt the girls.

The story then moves forward 18 years. The twins, now growing to be autiful womanhood, have been named Margaret and Elizabeth and nicknamed Rusty and Betty.

America enters the world war and Jim Elwell enlists. He then discovers that one of the twins loves him and he loves her. He tells his mother this but does not tell her which one.

Over in France he is wounded in his first big battle and sent to the hospital. He is discharged again and sent to the front and put in charge of a machine gun detail. He goes back to turn out.

And so, because of the kindness and pity in the heart of the young nurse from New York. four letters, two addressed to Mrs. John W. Powell, Newark, N. J., and two to Helen R. Craig, reached their destinations on Nov. 27 and brought joy and thanksgiving to the hearts of two who were close to despair. Thus did destiny place her pawns in the strange tiny place her pawns in the strange as soldier in France and a mother and pit in Newark.

And at the same hour in the Elwell home out in Indiana four hearts were beating in joyful anticipation of that what you mean? Oh, tell me!"

"I am very sorry, madam," the nurse said, recovering her calm bearing and taking the woman's hand in hers, "but I have told you nothing but the truth. The returned soldier, John Powell, is helpless, both physically and mentally. He has to be fed even. You might better learn the truth before you go in to see him."

big shell hit the ground on the hill NOW BEGIN THE STORY:

CHAPTER XVII.

The package left by the doctor consmile. In his eyes was that vacant

The package left by the doctor contained two addressed but unsealed letters and two small photographs. One of the photos was that of a woman of 50 and the other a pretty girl Downing. And this was something about him Downing. And this was something she could not account for. She had of 20 or thereabouts. of 20 or thereabouts.

The nurse turned them over. On the back of the first was written in ink, "From Mother to Son—John W. Powell, Jr., Newark, N. J., U. S. A." On the other was the name, Helen R. Craig.

On the other was the had been defined by the control of her tenderness in this merciful yet terrible work of hers, but she had learned to shut her eyes to certain this merciful yet terrible work of hers, but she had learned to shut her eyes to certain this merciful yet.

But this poor young soldier with the fine, pale, delicate face, and those pitiful eyes. The thick hair waving back from his forehead and the constantly moving hands. The deadness of him. He had struck a strange cord in the young nurse's heart and she found herself spending a good deal of her time at his bedside, stroking forehead, holding the restless hands to soothe them, trying to get him to sleep sometimes after he had lain there for hours with unblinking lids turned toward the ceiling.

dition was in no manner improved when the transport on board which he was placed at Brest docked at her wharf in East River, New York, on Dec. 30.

From here this living dead man From he explained to the nurses, he was made as comfortable as they could make him and left to await the arrival of "But I tell you there IS a mistake!"

"Oh, Nurse," was the tremulous cry of a sweet-faced little woman who introduced herself a little later as the mother of John Powell, soldier, as mother of John Powell, soldier, as she and her companion were being escorted through the corridor on the way to the main ward, "tell me, is my boy very weak yet? Will he be able to sit up and talk to us? That dear nurse over in France who wrote us said he was very ill but probably would be better by the time he reached New York.
