This is the third producer in that pool, with two dry holes, and this well along with the Watson well is proving up the field to the north, and east to north, according to the talent.

Just what it will make is as yet problematical, and will not be known for several days. Its development brought joy to the hearts of the clerical force of the West Adams Petroleum company, Colonel R. D. Gordon's corporation. The Colonel is on the Pacific coast, but his clerical force has been keeping a close tab on the McLester test.

The Watson well according to the marines en route to China was saved from probable death or serious injury yesterday by two Walnut men. Sam Plum, a farmer, waded the raging little walnut creek to flag the oncoming military train.

At the same time E. B. Carlos, Katy railroad agent at Walnut, ran for half, a mile to give the danger signal. At the same time E. B. Carlos, Katy railroad agent at Walnut, ran for half, a mile to give the danger signal. The engineer of the marine special halted the locomotive a few feet from the washout, otherwise it would have gone into the stream.

The pay was struck in the Ranger sand level, and is expected to make a good showing. A new location was made by the West Adams Petroleum company Thursday afternoon, to the east and a little to the north of the discovery well about 950 feet. This well will be spudded in immediately after the rig from the Ramsower No. 2 has been moved. It is the purpose of the West Adams to drill down to the sand and then shut down.

Saturday afternoon the new well was reported flowing by heads every thirty minutes at the rate of thirty barrels per head, which would mean something over 1400 barrels a day.

Miss Murray told of two little girls who ran away from Boston to live in New York. The older one had won a prize, dancing at an "Opportunity night" in a movie show, and decided that was the life for her.. Selecting one of the most exclusive and expensive dancing schools uptown in the 70's she planned to study there. Her chief drawback to polishing off her dancing education and living in New York was that the two children had only a dollar in dimes left after they had raid their force to New York. had paid their fare to New York. It was not easy to persuade them to return home, fore one of them told a Traveler Aid worker, "we were going to make a home here and send for mother to come and live with us.' Mother, when communicated with however, thought perhaps she had better wait a while before coming on and now the girls are back with her and struggling along with the terpsichorean facilities which Boston has

In Evening Dress.

A Travelers Aid worker in Grand Central station one afternoon noticed a girl of sixteen or seventeen in a light colored georgette evening dress. It seemed a little early in the day for evening dresses and the girl was minus a wrap of any kind. Indeed, she was minus much of anything but the georgette dress, as several travelers waiting for their trains eral travelers waiting for their trains noticed as the girl stood betwee them and the afternoon sun which streamed in the west windows. She was going to visit an uncle, she said, 'somewhere in Brooklyn."

"What is his name?"

"My uncle's name is Patrick Delaner."

Neither the girl's appearance nor her name indicated Celtic ancestry. She was Mary Soldolksi whose progenitors were plainly Polish. She finally admitted that she had come to New York because she had always wanted to see the city. But now she is back in Wilkes Barre with her father and mother.

York.

"I did not steal the money," she explained later to the Travelers Aid worker, who found her in the Pennsylvania station, "I just borrowed it."

She was persuaded to return home and help fill up the sisters' bank

Another child who had finished grammar school and started to learn dress making, decided that was the last thing in the world she wanted to stock to for life, and anyhow she thought New York would be much more interesting than Bridgeport, Conn. When a Travelers Aid work-er found her here she notified the father and mother and it was fairly plain that a vigorous spanking was instore for her if she returned. The instore for her if she returned. The girl disliked spanking as much as she did dressmaking, and it was not until the society here had arranged for a Bridgeport Travelers Aid worker to interview the parents and induce them to kill the fatted calf or something, instead of getting father's slipper ready for action that she was persuaded to go home.

In Peking, Chen entered the government service but in 1914 he edited wall. the Peking Gazette of which he later became proprietor. A master of the most trenchant English, Chen's leading articles created wide-spread interest and the lash of his fearless philippics fell on many a back. In a country such as China was at this period increasingly chaotic, with graft and secret politics rampant in Peking this procedure could have bun toe out come, and in November of 1917 Cher was imprisoned as a result of attacks upon the policies behind, and the per sons involved in, the notorious Nishi hara loans by which Japanese inter endeavored to "back a winning horse" in China. The subsequent disrepute of these loans, and the troubles of various sorts occasioned by them, proved Chen right in his ideas but he was not released until he was pardoned by President Li Yuan-hung several months later. In this connection it has been frequently said that Chen has been frequently said that Chen obtained his release by claiming ex-traterritorial rights as a British cititraterritorial rights as a British Citizen, but the tale is not true.

Joins Yat Sen.

Journeying to "revolutionary Canton" in the south, Chen joined the cause of Dr. Yat-Sen and later became his personal secretary, a closeness of association which was later to have fruit after Dr. Sun's death. Chen accompanied Dr. C. C. Wu, the dele gate of the then Canton government to the peace conference at Paris, in 1019, and from 1922 to 1924 he was foreign advisor to the Canton govern-

A new chapter in Chen's life opened when he accompanied Dr. Sun Yat-sen, at the time a very sick man, to Peking in 1924. It was Dr. Sun's hope that he might achieve a unifica-tion of the Canton nationalists with the so-called central government, or at least bring about a nation-wide conference, for the "Christian gen-eral" Feng Yu-hsiang had staged a coup d'etat the previous autumn

But presently came another turn of the wheel. Feng and Chang had fallen out again, Feng's men captured Tien-tsin, and the captors of Chen were forced to flee. Chen was free once more, and again he turned his interests toward journalism. After assisting in the establishment of a new "People's Tribune" in Peking, Chen went to Canton where in April of 1926 he was appointed minister for foreign affairs just before the great reached in February between repre- light saving. In the story related sentatives of these governments, as here, a forgetful maid omitted to close the shutters of his bedroom window Franklin was awakened by sunlight streaming into his room. He was naively astonished at such an hour and he was also greatly pleased with his discovery. In consequence he promptly worked out a scheme to nake everybody get up at 4 a. m. during the summer months.

To enforce his scheme he suggested that all shuttered windows should be the drive for funds to complete the ed, and that candles should be rationrung loudly on the appointed hour of rising. Further he promised that if there were sleepy-heads that slept through the church-bells, "cannon should be fired in every street to wake the sluggards effectually." Under his scheme no-one "regardless of rank, wealth or privilege" was to be exempted from early rising.

Is Marriage To Be Treated As Business Contract

By RENA B. CAMPBELL

Divorce or not to divorce, seems to be the mooted question among so many married folks today. In fact, most young people marry with one eye on the marriage altar and the other on the divorce court.

Not Noticable

The casual tourist does not pre-ceive the hostility. He might travel weeks in Europe and return to report that there is no anti-American feeling. But American residents reading European newspapers day after day, year after year, attending theatres and "movies" conversing with acquaintances, overhearing remarks in public places, is left with no doubt of the bitterness of feeling in the ex-Allied countries.

At a banquet recently I sat opposite the London correspondent of a great Paris newspaper. During the war he was an interpreter on the staff of Marshal Foch. His greetings was "American, eh? Well, your country certainly made a mess of things. We wish to Heaven they had never come into the war!" This is typical of the sentiment of the most extreme element.

Little Appreciation Except from professional "hands-across-the-sea" propagandists, few appreciative references are heard to-day regarding the part the United States in the war and after. Al-though I have traveled six times through the devastated regions in France since the war, talked to scores of the inhabitants, and lived nearly five years in France and five in England. I have never yet heard a voluntary reference to the immense relief work and the expenditure of millions by the American Red Cross and other organizations from any except interested sources. On the other hand, I have heard the work of these organizations attacked upon the grounds that their officials were "acting as agents of American big business," gathering statistical and other information for the use of ommercial firms after the war. During two weeks spent in Belgium I was continually surprised to learn how little apparent impression was left in the minds of the people by the vast relief efforts of the American and the millions spent for humanitarian works. One cynical observer said: "Those who got nothing are sore, and those who got something are sore because they didn't get more." That is unjust to many thousands of grateful peasants, but it is sufficiently applicable to warrant quotations.

Reasons Cited.
Here are a few of the reasons for the present attitude of Europe toward the United States. They were col-lected by United Press correspond-ents who have lived years in the re-ents who have lived years in the respective countries.

England: Resentment of the Baldwin debt settlement which brought increased taxes. Capture of some of England's foreign trade, notably in South America. American domination of the "movie" field, the theatre, and popular music. Envy of American prosperity. Suspicion that Coolidge's naval limitation is aimed at curbing England's cruiser fleets. Ridicule of prohibition. Bitterness concerning the cry for disarmament. Germany: The feeling that Ger-

LONDON, April 7.—Ten years ago America was hailed by millions in Europe with adulation unequalled in history. Today America is perhaps the most unpopular nation in the world.

With the declaration of war ten years ago, the United States reached the zenith of her prestige in Europe. Never was a political act of any nation greeted with such an outburst of joy and relief by disheartened millions of Allies. To them, the United States appeared as a savior. Wilson was virtually worshipped and Americans generally were lionized. Today the prestige of the United States is pear nadir and still going. The wine growers dislike American prohibition because it is shipping laws, which hit British shipping. Efforts to restrict cotton production which strikes big British business interests.

France: America's insistence uppopularly believed to have caused collapse of the franc and increase of the franc and increase of the united States promise of Wilson's promise of Wilson's promise of pack against German aggression. Bit termess, because Americans with depreciated francs buy up choice sites in Paris at low prices. Skepticism and modern technology. Tourists still occasionally display relics of war popularity is generally ransferred to America. In many fields, in which Germany formerly enjoyed supremacy, United States has now surpassed her—notably in scientific education and modern technology. The League of Nations: The early resentment of criticism of France's big land armies. The wine growers dislike American prohibition because it

Russian Sentiment.

Russia: There is no active general dislike of the United States. The anti-American sentiment that exists is based on the refusal to grant recognition to soviet Russia; the official slights to soviets such as refusal of a transit visa to Madame Kolantai, the general difficulty of Russians in general to secure admission to the United States and the charges by Kellogg that the soviets are plotting in Mexico and Central America, the "Caribbean imperialism" of the United States.

Spain: Although there are fairly recent historical reasons for dislike of the United States, there are few manifestations of it. Recently, the pressunanimously has condemned intervention in Nicaragua and attacked the "imperialismo Yanqui." Fruit exporters resent the embargo on Spanish grapes which hits their markets hard. Wine growers dislike prohibition for the same reason.

and performance so smooth that only a stop watch shows how swift

The smoothness with which the Super-Six glides from standing start to high speed is totally different from the violent lunge with which high powered cars usually get under way.

And so in all it does there is such effortless ease that driver and passengers hardly realize how great is their performance supremacy.

The smooth, silent and elastic flow of power from the released Super-Six principle has set a new standard of unusual performance. At any speed and for any distance you demand you will never feel the slightest effort is exerted by motor or chassis.

You may never require such speed or power. But it is important that this ability results from absolute smoothness and freedom from vibration. The over-capacity means reserve ability for any task. It means minimum wear and repair need. It means easy riding without fatigue.

Until you ride in the Hudson Super-Six there is a motoring thrill you never can know.

THRILLING ACCOUNT OF AVIATION'S GREAT ACHIEVEMEN

PINEDO TELLS OF HIS FLIGHT FROM ITALY TO UNITED STATES

Editor's note: Admittedly one of the most daring and skillful aviators of modern times is Commander Francesco Marquis de Pinedo of Italy. A few years ago he startled the world by flying from Italy to Janen by way. by flying from Italy to Japan by way of Australia.

They had given us the name of a place to land and told us there was all the water.

after flying from Italy, across the Atlantic, over the Brazilian jungle and then up north to Cuba and New Orleans. It was a daring stunt to fly across the Atlantic; probably greater courage was required to take the plane over the deadly jungle; but few

de Pinedo

As told to NEA Service (Copyright, 1927, NEA Service) We started from Italy. We are the United States. We had no in the United States. We had no trouble that we have not been able to

There was nothing but smooth going from Cagliari to Sardinia to Rabat in Morocco. We made that flight in one day. It took us another day to go from Rabat to Vila Gisneros on the African Gold Coast. In another day we had flown to Bolama in Portuguese Guiana. Three days later we were at Dakkar in West Africa.

For three days we tried to get off

For three days we tried to get off the water with a heavy load of gasothe water with a heavy load of gasoline that would carry us across the Atlantic at one hop. The Santa Maria was carrying th heaviest load she had ever carried. But at last, on February 18, we took off from Dakkar to Port Praya in the Cape Verde Islands and landed there next day. Then we flew straight across the South Atlantic to Fernando do Noronha Island. From there we flew to Port Nalantic to Fernando do Noronna Island. From there we flew to Port Natal in Brazil, next to Sao Paulo and Santas, next to Porto Alegre, which we reached March 1. And then we flew to Buenos Aires.

Flying as Low as 20 Feet.

That Atlantic expession was rough

That Atlantic crossing was rough. There was a high sea and high winds. The shifting winds forced us change our altitude many times. Some times we were flying as low as twenwould be flying two thousand feet above the surface.

None of us got any sleep in the thirteen hours and forty minutes be-tween Cape Verde Islands and Fern-

We sighted seven ships were crossing the Atlantic. But I did not try to signal any of them, and I did not notice any signalling by them.

Engine Never Faltered.

The Santa Maria is the greatest boat I have ever flown. Those marvellous engines never faltered once from the time we started them till the time we landed. If they had, of course no man could tell what would have happened.

We were very comfortable on the trip. We cooked our food in an arrangement on the exhaust. I even stopped to shave once, when things were going smoothly. I have a fine arrangement for shaving on board. I have a pet-cock that draws water out of our water cooling system, where of our water cooling system, where it is just under the boiling point. Here is the giant monoplane in which Pinedo made nis epoch-making flight from Italy to the United States across the Atlantic; probably greater courage was required to take the plane over the deadly jungle; but few people realize his flight over the United States is also a unique test of the little Italian's bravery.

In the following story, Pinedo tells in his own words the dramatic story of his flight from Italy to the United States. The story was given to a representative of NEA service just before he left New Orleans for his American tour.

Down below in the jungle there was not a landing place in sight. Just mile after mile of green jungle growth above the deep, slimy swamp and gracefully.

Down below in the jungle when one pistol shot spice could bring the end quickly and gracefully.

Santa Maria Flies Herself.

But we came through safely. The simple of the flight thus far has been simple. From Para in Brazil to Britis Guiana, then Haiti, Cuba and New Orleans.

The swarms of Insects.

Dut if we had no man could walk

Those Swarms of Insects.

But if we had, no man could walk through those jungles, even if you leave out of your calculations the poisonous reptiles and the swarms and clouds of stinging insects. Our only preparation for such an emergency was a fishing kit and a medicine kit, containing some lotion that might have kept off those stinging insects.

In fact, any aviator forced down in that jungle would be lucky if he were killed in the crash.

I had my Mauser automatic pistol along. We would have used it. Suicide? Of course. That would have been our last resort. Why should we leave the flight from Havana to New Orleans was just a pleasant little six-hour ride. We breakfasted in Havana, and could have lunched in New Orleans was just a pleasant little six-hour ride. We breakfasted in Havana, and could have lunched in New Orleans was just a pleasant little six-hour ride. We breakfasted in Havana, and could have lunched in New Orleans was just a pleasant little six-hour ride. We breakfasted in Havana to New Orleans was just a pleasant little six-hour ride. We breakfasted in Havana to New Orleans was just a pleasant little six-hour ride. We breakfasted in Havana to New Orleans was just a pleasant little six-hour ride. We breakfasted in Havana to New Orleans was just a pleasant little six-hour ride. We breakfasted in Havana to New Orleans had we been hungry, enough.

The flight from Havana to New Orleans had we been hungry, enough.

The Santa Maria almost flies herself. Time after time when the weathed probable with me, Captain del Prete and Vitale Zacchetti, have done their work splendidly. The Santa Maria is a fine advertisement of the airships and the engines we are building in Italy today. I look on this flight as much less difficult than the flight to Australia and Japan and back that I took before I started on this trip. Fly-look on the started on the wery heroic about this flight. I have sat back and taken my hands of the engines we are building in Italy today. I look on this flight to Australia and Japan and bac

"Those things are all required,"
Stone said, smiling a little at the glib repetition of the hackneyed terms, "but there are other things to be considered. A murder such as this one we are considering is the result of careful planning and preparation. Your ordinary bather does not carry a sharp knife around in his pocket on the chance of wanting to kill somebody in a hurry. Nor is that sharp knife easily come by or easily carried about. It means premeditation and that means a long time and definite purpose. Now, Mr. Folsom only arrived here the night before, so whoever killed him prepared for it in a hurry. I mean, in a hurry at the last.

"That he then laid his plans and the next morning carried them out with such cleverness that he left no clue."

"The knife?" said Croydon Sears, who, saying little, was listening to Stone.

"That wand I think it was bought at the auction room—was a clever dodge. I am not sure it was one of the knives bought that night; it may have been bought at any time, or, indeed, brought here from elsewhere. But it does seem to indicate a lector would use any weapon rather than row of his own curios."

"Yes," agreed Croydon Sears, "I certainly should have done so."
