NEW YORK STRIKE THREATENS TO SPREAD

"DRY CZAR" PROMULGATES STRICT ORDERS FOR ENFORCEMENT

GRAVER TIEUPS ARE EXPECTED IN SHORT TIME

Strong Efforts Are Being Made to Get All Parties Together

By United Press.
NEW YORK, July 6.—The nation's largest city struggled uncertainly to work today, as the strike of 700 subway and motormen of the Interborough Rapid Transit company became at least partially effective and threatened graver tieups of the 316 miles of road the lines operate.

New York's workers, approximately 2,000,000 persons, were getting back to the job at the far end of a holiday. The holiday itself had seen the most terrible congestion of motor, rail and terminal lines ever seen in the city.

The transit company over-burdened by their job of handling a population of 7,000,000 were taxed to the fullest in today's jam as under a drizzling rain the trek to the offices began.

By 9 a. m., when the peak load of morning was thrown on the transportation lines, traffic began piling up. Thousands were delayed but no disturbances were reported.

That the city is feeling the effects of the strike and that it may spread to their lines was evident today. Mayor Walker is doing everything possible and is commanding where it can be done all vehicles of transportation.

Business also is feeling the effects of the strike. However, efforts are being made and all kinds of pressure is being brought to bear to have the differences adjusted. Labor is standing firm for a raise because of the high cost of living.

Something is expected to be done by tomorrow noon, probably late this afternoon.

TRAFFIC IS ALMOST PARALYZED

The strike of motormen and switchmen on the Interborough Rapid Transit subway lines, which started at midnight delayed hundreds of thousands of New Yorkers today, but at noon it seemed certain that traffic was far from paralyzed.

The first crisis faced by the transit company came in moving the peak loads this morning when workers poured in over Manhattan into offices, stores and factories. Curtailed service operated by emergency men on the Interborough Rapid Transit lines took the overflow which the subway and elevated could not carry, and handled several thousand people on to their way to work.

More came on elevated lines, on several hundred busses and service lines which ran all available cars on curtailed express schedule.

Congestion of automobiles, taxis, and busses in the streets was tremendous, sometimes traffic on Broadway stood still as long as ten minutes while police tried to unsmear the tangle.

TRIAL OF DOTY FOR DESERTION IS CALLED OFF

By United Press.
LONDON, July 6.—Trial of Bennett J. Doty, of Memphis, Tenn., for desertion from the foreign legion in Syria, has been indefinitely postponed according to Exchange dispatches from Beirut.

Doty was charged with desertion in face of the enemy, early in June. The United States department of state requested leniency, although Doty had lost his American citizenship and the French government promised special treatment. Consequently the charge was reduced to one of being absent without leave.

Doty's father lives in Fort Worth, and the young man served his country during the world war, and was severely gassed. It is thought that his wound caused him to act as he did since he joined the foreign legion of France.

ROCKEFELLERS GAVE $20,000 TO DRY CAUSE

Investigation Makes Public List of Those Who Gave to the Fund

By United Press.
WASHINGTON, July 6.—John D. Rockefeller Jr. and John D. Rockefeller Sr., contributed $20,000 to the Anti-Saloon league on April 11, 1925, it was revealed today when the senate primary investigating committee made public a list of contributors of more than $500, in 1925-26 today.

The committee refused to make public the list of contributors before 1925, although the records were submitted as far back as 1917. The Rockefeller's contribution was the largest single donation received.

After the records of the drys have been investigated and gone over, it is planned to have the wet forces bring in their books and donors to the wet side for the years 1925-26 will be made public.

In the meantime, other witnesses will be called to shed more light on the Pennsylvania situation.

It is also planned to make a thorough probe into the elections held in Illinois and Iowa, although the Iowa primary was a fight against the administration. Something else might be done with the North Dakota situation.

BORAH OPENS 2 UNMASKED MEN STAGE A ROBBERY

By United Press.
TULSA, Okla., July 6.—Two unmasked bandits this morning staged a spectacular robbery in the heart of the city as pedestrians and automobiles placed the thoroughfare in a traffic jam, and escaped with $5,541, week-end receipts of the Peoples Ice company.

A meeting of the directors from the three cities represented in the Eastland County Auto Club, will be held in the near future. A letter has been sent out by C. C. Patterson, secretary of the club to all members requesting that they fill out an application enclosed and return to his office so that a membership card could be issued. If annual dues have already been paid, members are requested to fill out and sign card and mail to Mr. Patterson.

Only those that have not paid annual dues are expected to remit. It will be necessary for any member to have a membership card before obtaining service furnished by this of any of the 850 affiliated clubs in the association. So all members are requested to fill out the blank and return same at once to Secretary Patterson, there being no need to send a check if you have already paid. The club has nearly 200 members at present, and when the drive for members at Cisco is completed, a total of 300 members is expected, which will make the Eastland County Auto Club one of the largest in the state.

EASTLAND LIONS TO AID EL PASO GET CONVENTION

By United Press.
TULSA, Okla., July 6.—Two unmasked bandits this morning staged a spectacular robbery in the heart of the city as pedestrians and automobiles placed the thoroughfare in a traffic jam, and escaped with $5,541, week-end receipts of the Peoples Ice company.

Eastland Lions will give their support to El Paso for the 1927 International Lions convention, according to the sentiment of the noon luncheon of the Lions Tuesday at the Elks Club rooms. Harry DeLane presided in the absence of the president and first vice president.

Lion DeLane at once appointed a committee to send a message of condolence to Lion Clell Baskett, whose wife died on Friday, last. The committee to deal with this are Lions Cunningham, Barr and Cottingham.

Discussion then took place on the expenses that came through the fostering of Lion Judge Rosenquest in his candidature for district governor, at Houston, during the state convention. These bills amounted, according to Secretary Bates, to $225, and first impressions were that this expense was to be split up among other clubs in West Texas.

On a motion of a member it was decided that Eastland Lions bear all the expense and the secretary was instructed to write the assisting clubs, informing them of this fact.

It was also announced that the Lions fountain at the Eastland tourist park has already been dug for the cement foundation and that the stone lion will shortly take place.

The letter from the El Paso Lions club was read. It stated that El Paso had a huge auditorium which would be free to the Lions, and that they would offer the finest program of amusement in the country. There would be a regular Spanish bull fight, while there would also be as guests, the governor of the nearest state on the border as well as many Mexican Lions.

Plans Organization Of Forces to Make The Nation Bone Dry

By United Press.
WASHINGTON, July 6.—General Lincoln C. Andrews, "dry czar," today announced three drastic liquor regulations.

The three new rules require: 1. Liquor prescriptions must be turned in and destroyed every month. 2. Industrial alcohol must be denatured with gasoline. 3. Medicinal spirits may not be transported except by bonded companies.

Assistant Secretary of the Treasury General Lincoln C. Andrews intends to set his task of organizing the national prohibition enforcement army through strict training, he told the United Press today, denying reports that he had resigned.

The dry czar made the categorical denial, just before he left the capital for New York when he will embark for a month's work and vacation in Europe.

He made it plain that it was his purpose to make the country as dry as the Sahara desert, by making it almost impossible to get contraband goods, or material out of which whisky may be distilled.

Baird Girl Is Winner In Cisco Beauty Contest

Cisco ended a great day last night when the Fourth of July celebrations was brought to a close in a whirl of excitement, before a huge crowd. All roads to Eastland and other towns in the district were blocked for hours with visitors trying desperately to unmesh themselves from the traffic. No casualties were reported and few drunks were seen on the streets. Entrants to the bathing beauty contest were entertained to a dinner by the Cisco Chamber of Commerce, after which the party left for the lake.

The revue took place on a huge float specially built for the occasion. It was beautifully decorated with flowers and presented gorgeous spectacle. Eight girls exhibited their beauty for the benefit of the judges and spectators and after it was all over the representative from Baird was chosen as the queen of the gathering. Her name could not be heard in the tumult of cheering that followed.

Rural Murry Wins Races In Breckenridge

Losing only one race out of six, Rural Murry, Ranger man, was the major winner in the motorcycle races, held at the Oil Belt Fair Park at Breckenridge, on the afternoon of July 4 and 5.

The first race was lost by a casing blowing out but in all the other races, Mr. Murry won first place and received a nice purse of around $350 in prize money. Mr. Murry recently won the first prize at Amarillo and Lawton, which in addition to this latest victory is considered most remarkable as he does not follow racing as a profession, just running a race now and then, and in the meantime holding down a most responsible position with Chestnut-Smith Corporation, here.

The crowd at the Breckenridge races was quite large and a great deal of interest was manifested in the motorcycle races, the first held in that city.

ALLRED SPEAKS IN EASTLAND

James V. Allred, attorney of Wichita Falls and candidate for attorney general gave a fine talk Monday afternoon from the Eastland county courthouse steps before a fairly large audience of citizens and friends. Mr. Allred who is a good speaker said:

"In announcing as a candidate for attorney general I am fully conscious of the responsibilities of that high office and appreciate the honor I am asking the people of Texas."

COLLEEN MOORE HEADS MARCH OF FILM LOVELINESS

What is so rare as a beautiful fashion show on the screen? Only the day in June, of course.

When the show comes, however, as it did last night in the premiere at the Lamb of Colleen Moore's "Irene," it is worthy of all praise. This reviewer is delighted to give it.

Gowns on beautiful women are like petals on a rose. Colleen Moore and a troupe of rapturously beautiful Hollywood coryphees parade in dress creations that give them the semblance of gorgeous flowers.

Miss Moore herself is a thing of beauty and a joy forever.

"Irene," like Miss Moore's former triumph, "Sally," is based on a musical comedy hit. Lloyd Hughes, George K. Arthur and Charles Murray are featured. The picture was produced by John McCormick, directed by Alfred E. Green and released through First National. This picture will be shown again today for the last time.

IRWIN WILL TALK WEDNESDAY

T. K. Irwin, candidate for attorney general, will speak from the courthouse steps on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, according to information from friends here.

Mr. Irwin is a prominent Dallas attorney and well known throughout the South.

There never was a smoke so pleasing as Camel

IN LIFE'S supreme moments no cigarette can compare with Camel. No other cigarette ever was made so good, for Camel excellence is the result of skill. Skill in finding the world's choicest tobaccos—in blending, as only the world's largest organization of experts can.

Camel quality has been rewarded with the greatest demand, the largest sales any cigarette ever enjoyed. Since smoking began, there was never such a growing preference as for Camels. Camel rewards its friends with enjoyment that never ends, for Camels never tire the taste, simply never leave a cigaretty after-taste.

From the beginning Camel took its stand on the quality platform, and nothing could ever induce its makers to change Camel tobaccos. No expense is spared, no care is too great to make Camel the world's most satisfying smoke, regardless of price.

If you have never tried Camels, if you do not know how good, how satisfying a cigarette can be, we invite you to try them now for the utmost in smoking pleasure. Have the best that's made—we invite you—

Have a Camel!

Oil Belt League
On the Rocks; Two Teams Have Quit

The glorious Fourth and fifth made history in the Oil Belt Baseball League. Ranger Magnolias went over to Breckenridge on Sunday and beat the Dynamos 4 to 3, and on Monday at Ranger, they slugged the Eastland Tigers plum out of running when they ran up a score of 20 to the Tigers 8.

In fact the games of the double holiday celebrating American Independence may result in Breckenridge and Eastland quitting the league and leaving the Miners and the Magnolias as the only contending teams.

Manager McGarvey of the Ranger Magnolias said today that these two teams would play ball right along until the end of the season and felt that they could put up some interesting games.

Sunday they will play the coal diggers at Thurber and the next Sunday the game will be at Ranger.

"Stop That Ad!" Too Many Replies, Is Message To Paper

A rush call came in to this office today from a classified ad advertiser. "Stop that ad. I've got too many applicants," was the terse order and the ad which was for a man and his wife to act as caretaker of the Country club was stopped.

The response indicated two things. The first was the efficacy of wantads and the second was that there are still some unemployed folks around Ranger, or some who are wanting to better their conditions.

Magnolias Defeat Tigers In Poorly Played Game; 20-8

For three innings it was a ball game at Nitro park Monday afternoon, when a fair sized crowd greeted the Magnolias and Tigers in a Fourth of July tangle. In the fourth inning, Fairbairn of the Eastland Tigers weakened from the heat, and the Magnolias jumped on his delivery for several hits and five runs. After that one inning, it was as laughter of the innocence. Fairbairn was relieved in the box by "Unknown Grandpa" who pitched baseball when "Pop" Anson was in his prime.

To end the misery, the game was called in the seventh with the score 20 to 8 in favor of the Magnolias.

Koch was moundsman for the Magnolias at the start and lasted three innings when he was relieved by Browning, who kept the Tigers in check. Koch pitched fairly good ball, but was given poor support both in the infield and outfield. Four of the runs made by Eastland was due to errors. Practically all the scores made by the Tigers came as a result of boots and a hit.

In the Sunday game, at Breckenridge, the Magnolias trimmed the Dynamos in a real ball game, 4 to 3.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

John and Fay Millburn buy a home when their baby girl is born and the advertising agency in which John is partner and copy writer lands a new contract. Among their acquaintances are—

Noel and Vera Boyd, whose marriage is strictly "modern."
Pat and Marian Forbes, who have three children and whose domestic life is unhappy because of Pat's roving tendencies. Previous chapters told how:
John was fascinated on meeting Nell Orme, of whom Pat Forbes hints that she is having trouble with her husband.

When Fay took Judith, the baby, to visit her parents, John "sneaked" a good deal, mostly with Pat Forbes.

When Fay returned, gossip had related some of his doings, and sharp quarrels between him and Fay followed, one of which drove him "out on a tear." Fay, learning he had been out again with other women, threatened to leave him if it was repeated.

John becomes aware that people are talking about him, and Nat Graham, his partner, blames the loss of a client on the "damaged reputation" he charges John was bringing the firm.

Vera Boyd invites him to tea and overcomes his objections by holding out a "surprise" for him. It is a real surprise, for there he finds Nell Orme. He resolves not to go again, as she is aware of Vera's propensity for promoting "affairs." Nevertheless, he does, and this time he madly takes Nell in his arms, and Marian Forbes comes in on them.

Fay learns of it and announces her intention of leaving him. He tries to dissuade her, then finally insults her, and she smacks him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY (The names and situations in this story are fictitious.)

CHAPTER XLIV

The blow left a glowing red print on his face. It had taken him by surprise, and he had involuntarily recoiled, but after the shock of it he stood looking at her, wordlessly, his eyes smoldering. A long time he stood that way, and there was nothing said between them. Then calmly turned on his heel, grabbed his hat and walked out of the house. Once outside, and away from Fay, self-pity took hold of him. What right, he reflected, had Fay to assume that, just because he had married Nell Orme a couple of times, he was a low cad? Hang it all, were all women alike in thinking the worst of their husbands? And Marian Forbes—she had had a lot to do, to go running to Fay with a report of what she had seen in Vera Boyd's house. Of course, he was classified by Marian, no doubt, in the same category with Pat—a well-a rounder.

If people only would keep their mouths shut and tend to their own business. He reflected that nearly all the quarrels he and Fay had had—certainly all their serious ones—had been the result of some busybody's tattling something about him to Fay.

"My God!" he burst forth bitterly, "why doesn't she give me an even break? Why does she always think the worst of me? The worst I've ever done since getting married is to take a few drinks and kiss a few women. Of course, she doesn't approve of it, and I can't expect her to—but by the Lord Harry I'm so drunkard, and I'm no—no adulterer. But Fay thinks I'm both. It would serve her right if I did leave her."

And then he was suddenly reminded of what Fay had said about leaving him. But he shook his head at the thought of it, although a sudden vanicky feeling had gripped his heart. Surely, she couldn't mean it. She had spoken in the heat of anger. She was hurt, mad—and she was trying to wound him in return.

Well, he thought, he'd walk around until her anger, and his own, had had time to cool. To think that she had struck him! He could feel the blow, could see the cold fury in her eyes as plainly as if the scene were being re-enacted. Peculiar thing, that. That is his own emotions when Fay had hit him were peculiar. He had been surprised, but, oddly enough, it had not increased his anger. He had had no desire to strike back, which would have been perfectly normal, he thought, even where the other person was a woman. Rather, he had felt a little pity for Fay, and it had served her right to walk out on her as he had done.

A street car came rumbling by and on a sudden impulse he boarded it and rode all the way down town, where he walked the streets aimlessly for a couple of hours, mumbing to himself like an old man. He felt an uncomfortable sensation in his stomach and glanced at his watch. Nine o'clock! And he had had no dinner. He found a restaurant and ordered a big meal, but when it was served a few bites satisfied him and he merely toyed with the rest.

"Wasn't it just right, sir?" the waiter was asking at his elbow. "El?" He looked at the other question. "Oh, sure. Everything was all right," John assured him. "Just wasn't as hungry as I thought." He left a large beside his plate, and the waiter was obsequiousness itself in showing him out.

At any rate, John thought, it was nice to know that not everyone was inconsiderate of him. Even if it was a waiter—who doubtless expected to be tipped for it—it was good to see thoughtfulness in others.

A pale moon was riding the sky, and it seemed cold. He shivered a little in the early autumn air and wished that he had taken time to snatch his topcoat on his way out of the house. Well, it was Fay's fault. And if he caught cold and developed pneumonia or something she'd have herself to blame for striking him and virtually driving him out of his own house.

Fay, if you only knew! He loved you, Fay. Even with all his faults, he loved you as something more precious than life.

He found himself repeated that over and over again, and self-pity now was nearly overwhelming him. To speak of himself in the third person like that made the thing he was repeating sound like an epitaph, and he found himself visualizing a gray slab over his grave, with a tearful Fay kneeling at the foot of it with upturned eyes asking for his forgiveness.

"Hell!" He dashed his hand against his eyes and was angry with himself when he found moisture there. He looked again at his watch. Ten-thirty. He wondered whether Fay would be waiting up for him and whether there would be reconciliation. She certainly couldn't be serious about leaving him. The thing was so impossible. It happened in books, and it happened sometimes to other men, but it couldn't happen to him. Why, what would become of Judith? No, she had merely been threatening.

"I suppose," he said, "I ought to be more careful and a little more considerate of her. This Nell Orme thing is just plain dam foolishness. It's not getting me anywhere. I've got to cut it out. I'll tell Fay when I get home—explain the whole thing to her, about Vera and all—Lord! suppose she did leave me."

Again and again the thought recurred, but he kept shaking his head at it. Fay wouldn't do that. She was high-spirited and independent and all of that, but she couldn't be serious about breaking up their life-long home. Why, hang it, he was just beginning to make some money, and things were starting to come their way. Things would be just about perfect if it weren't for Nat Graham, the old kill-joy. He'd have to do something sometime about breaking up partnership with Graham and taking on someone a little more congenial. Buy Nat out—that was it. Of course, he didn't have the money now, but he could raise it if he had a little time. That was it, break with Nat Graham and start all over again with a clean slate, and cut out all his foolishness—these doggone flirtations that didn't get anywhere.

He wondered how Fay would take it when he told her that he had decided to break up his partnership with Nat Graham. Fay didn't like him; maybe she'd see that with Graham out of their lives they could start all over again without any handicaps. But how had Graham handicapped them? Fay would be sure to ask. Oh, in lots of ways! When conditions at the office were disagreeable they made other conditions equally as bad. A man ought to be perfectly happy in his work if he wanted to be happy in his home life. That was it, by golly! How could Fay expect him to be a hundred per cent when things down at the office lately were so disagreeable?

No, Fay couldn't have been serious when she said she was leaving—even though she had hit him. But hold on, now, she might have been serious at that. Fay was never one to put up an empty bluff, and she had promised some time ago to leave him if he did anything more to hurt her. Oh, well, no use to walk the streets all night thinking about it! Might as well go home, and Fay most likely would be ready to patch it up. She ought to be feeling pretty mean about now on account of that slap in the face.

The little house, when he went up the front walk, was bathed in austere moonlight, and something about its appearance—the cold, silvery sheen of its white paint—chilled him. A light was burning in the front bedroom—his and Fay's room. He could see a shadowy figure moving slowly about. . . . Hesitantly he opened the front door and went in.

Fay had time to regret striking John, but there burned within her a resoluteness of purpose and a fortitude that had dwelt in the hardy breasts of her Puritan ancestors. She had declared herself, and she was going to go through with it.

She cried a little with remorse for having slapped him, and she cried a good deal more when she had put Judith to sleep and then gone upstairs and started packing her trunk. . . . There in the bottom of the trunk was her wedding dress, and the beautiful white satin petticoat and underthings that had been worn only once. And here in a tray was their marriage certificate. Every-where, it seemed, were reminders that she and John belonged to each other and she was leaving him. The thought was almost more than she could bear, but she continued with her task, although her eyes were streaming tears.

She did not hear the front door open downstairs, but she heard John's footfalls ascending the stairs, and suddenly he was framed in the doorway.

"Fay," he said gently, and she looked up, steeling her heart against the softness that seemed to be flooding her. "This big boy . . . " "Yes?" she said coldly. "What are you doing?" "What do you suppose? I'm packing." She got up from her position in front of the trunk and moved over to the vanity dresser, where she started exploring the drawers and piling their contents on the floor.

"You—you're not serious, Fay?" She made no answer, and John said, "You don't mean you're really going through with it—that you're actually leaving? Fay, be serious."

"I won't argue the point." "But I will interfere. I've been a—good husband, even if you do think horrible things of me."

"But I will interfere. I've been a—good husband, even if you do think horrible things of me."

"But I will interfere. I've been a—good husband, even if you do think horrible things of me."

"But I will interfere. I've been a—good husband, even if you do think horrible things of me."

"But I will interfere. I've been a—good husband, even if you do think horrible things of me."

It's too—too dreadful, this thing you're contemplating."

The silliness of Frost was in her voice as she answered, although her words were false to her true feelings. "Yes, I'm going through with it. I gave you warning once, but now—leaving you to your good times and your petticoats."

"He winced. "Fay, don't say that!" "Very well, I won't say anything. Just don't interfere."

"But I will interfere. I've been a—good husband, even if you do think horrible things of me."

"But I will interfere. I've been a—good husband, even if you do think horrible things of me."
