FROM THE BIBLE.
Redemption: The Lord redeemeth the soul of his servants; and none of them that trust in him shall be desolate.—Psalm 34:22
Prayer: "I know that my Redeemer lives and ever prays for me."

BUSINESS FARMING.
Almost any locality can make its own place in national or international life. Petaluma, Calif., did it with white leghorn hens. Tillamook, Ore., did it with cheese. Jericho, Utah, did it with the great Jericho wool pool, that sells only top wool in one prize sale. Idaho Falls, Idaho, does it with potatoes. Wenatchee, Wash., apples are internationally famous, and so on through a long specialized list.

In every case the profits result from high grade uniformity. The producers do not trust to luck, or to individual idiosyncracies; they agree on a standard, and enforce it. The "independence" of the farmer becomes a myth in every one of these high priced specialty products; independence, that is, to produce freak stuff by freak methods. But they become independently rich; which is better than mere license to do foolish things in a foolish way.

A grain company that was urged to buy in one of the most fertile sections of the mountain west, refused to buy grain there. "We want standard grains," it said, "and no two of you raise the same kind of stuff. Your wheat is mongrel; your oats are all the way from white or red, to black; your barley is piebald and will not grade in any market. We'll go out of business before we'll buy in such a district."

The adoption of a high standard product, and the cumulative aid of every affiliated grower to keep up the standard and make the supply adequate to fill the market every year, is one sure way out of the agricultural doldrums.

ADVERTISING.
Industry is rendering a service to states and nation which is not generally appreciated for the simple reason that the public does not realize what industry is doing. The modern American industry takes great pride in its product, the territory in which it operates, and the service or commodity it furnishes its customers. It realizes that its success depends primarily upon the growth and prosperity of the territory in which it operates.

An example of constructive industrial publicity has been furnished by the Alabama Power company. It has carried advertising not only in the local papers in the state in which it operates, but in eastern and middle west newspapers, in trade journals and in magazines of national circulation. The purpose of this advertising is to secure new population and new business for the south.

The Alabama Power company maintains a new industries division which follows the magazine and newspaper advertising, maintains contact with prospective Alabama industries, makes surveys for new plants and furnishes specific data on request. Its endeavor is to attract industries which can be assured of successful operation in its territory.

More industries naturally mean the sale of more power; but more industries and more population also mean the sale of more land, more groceries, more lumber and more of every product sold in Alabama. This is constructive, community-building advertising and it is typical of advertising that is being done by big industries in different parts of the country.

It is impossible to estimate the great value of such publicity to a state. But in the case of Alabama, it has been definitely shown that in seven years the state's payrolls have increased $75,000,000 annually. Without constructive industrial advertising, it is safe to say that no such growth could be recorded.

All circles report a good meeting and refreshments were served at all meetings.

SUNRISE BREAKFASTS AT SHAMROCK PARK.
Mrs. J. M. Edwards entertained the members of the junior league of the Methodist church with a sunrise breakfast Tuesday morning at Shamrock Park. An appetizing breakfast of bacon, eggs and other good things was cooked over an open fire and it needless to say that it was not enjoyed to the limit as the juniors were ravenous by the time breakfast was called.

There were some sixteen participating in this happy event. Mrs. Edwards was assisted by Mrs. J. T. Gray and Mrs. Bishop in entertaining and serving the children.

MRS. W. D. CONWAY HONORS MRS. LAYMAN WITH LUNCHEON.
Mrs. W. D. Conway at her home on Young street, honored Mrs. H. E. Layman, guest of Mrs. Frank Brahaney with a luncheon yesterday.
Bridge was played in the morning and followed by a beautifully appointed three course luncheon at noon. In bridge, Mrs. C. C. Craig won the high score prize and Mrs. W. C. Palmer the low, while Mrs. Conway presented the honor guest with two pieces of Madeira. There were eight present.

P. A. L. CLUB TAKES DECIDED STAND ON MORALS.
Members of the P. A. L. club at a meeting last night decided that girls who participate in drinking parties would not be eligible for membership in their club. This decision was embodied as part of their code of aims and purposes for the uplifting of business women in a business and social way. The by-laws were drawn up and will be voted on at the next meeting. Two new members were voted to membership, namely Miss Dorothea Plumley and Miss Mittie Mae.

MRS. RALSTON GIVES PARTY BRIDE PARTY.
Mrs. J. M. Ralston entertained several friends at her home yesterday afternoon with a pretty bride party for which home grown flowers were used in profusion, lending beauty and fragrance to the scene.

Mrs. E. E. Crawford won the high score prize, a handsome pillow, Mrs. Saunders Gregg the low score prize, an embroidered apron and Mrs. H. E. Layman of Cushing, Ok., was presented a vanity by her hostess.
A novel thrill was added to the party by each table cut for prize and the lucky winners, Misses Frank Brahaney, J. T. Gullahorn and P. E. Nicols, were awarded novelty kitchen sets.

Chicken salad, cheese straws and potato chips were followed by angel food stuffed with fruit gelatine, and ice tea which toothsome food was served to Misses John Thurman, A. N. Harkrider, Saunders Gregg, Frank Brahaney, K. C. Jones, J. T. Gullahorn, Boyd Davenport, Roy Jameson, H. E. Layman, E. E. Crawford, P. E. Nicol and Harry Logsdon.

LEAGUE LABOR CONFERENCE IN CONFLICT WITH MUSSOLINI

By HENRY WOOD
By United Press.

GENEVA.—A show down fight with Italy on the question of Fascism and its relations with labor was expected with the convening here today of the tenth international labor conference.

Interest in the question on the conference's agenda was superseded by that in the impending conflict between the three Fascisti delegations—governmental, employers and workmen—and the remainder of the conference. There were rumors that Italy might withdraw entirely not only from the present labor conference but from the international labor bureau as well.

In the latter event, Italy's position in the league of nations itself might even become involved.
The fight between Mussolini's solid Fascisti organization and the remainder of the conference will center on four principal questions.

The first of these will be the fight that has been led by all of the big international labor leaders, such as Jouhaux of France, Oudegeest of Holland, and the seating of the delegates representing the Fascisti labor organizations. This fight has always been led on the grounds that as both employers and employees are included in the Fascisti labor unions they do not represent strictly employed unions which alone have a right to send workers delegates to the conference.

Up to the present time, while the conference as a whole, thanks to the fact that it is composed of three groups of delegates representing governments, employers' organizations and workers' unions, has always seated the Fascisti workers' groups the latter has been steadily boycotted by all of the other workers' delegations and never given places on the various workers' commissions.

The second point of conflict will be relative to the eight-hour day. Mussolini in his efforts to attain the fullest degree of Italian reconstruction and economic development, insist on the right to reserve for the Fascisti workers a nine-hour day when conditions render it necessary. This, according to the workers delegates from other countries, will retard the general adoption of the eight hour day as other countries cannot compete on that basis with Italy working nine hours.

The third point of conflict, and one of the most serious, will be Mussolini's new orders that it is impossible for an Italian citizen to accept employment from a foreign government or any international institution without having the "nulla osta" of the Italian government, and which even when once granted can be withdrawn at a moment's notice. This means that any Italian citizen, secretary of the League of Nations or the International Labor Bureau must be a Fascisti in good standing with the Mussolini government, and is a violation of the league principle that all league employees should be international in character and without obligations to their respective governments.

Finally the fourth and biggest point of dispute will be the question of "freedom of associations" wherein it is charged that the Fascisti government and labor organizations are putting out of business all workers' unions not affiliated with the Fascisti organization.
The particular case that has been called to the attention of the international labor bureau and conference is that of an association of agricultural workers at Bologna which refused all allegiance with the Fascisti. It is alleged that they were persecuted, imprisoned, separated from their families and deprived of all possibility of finding work. Against this charge Italy insists that the organization was really political in character and was exercising a subversive propaganda in Italy.

The annual report of Albert Thomas director of the international labor bureau, showed that during the past year the bureau was in correspondence with no less than ninety-seven different states, protectorates, colonies and mandated territories.
The correspondence, which was conducted in twenty-three different languages, had for its principal object the improvement of social legislation and labor conditions.

During the past year the total number of letters received by the bureau was 33,250, and the total number of letters sent out was 40,000.
The convention, which opened today with over fifty nations present, has three principal questions on its agenda.

CONGRESSMEN GET DOZENS OF ODD REQUESTS

By RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON.—If you must have triplets instead of mere twins or singletons, don't count on any consolation from your Uncle Sammy. Such warning is obviously only fair to many ambitious parents for one of the great American delusions is that the federal government offers a prize, reward or compensation for every set of triplets.

There is hardly a member of congress who hasn't heard at one time or other from proud and triumphant parents who wanted the money sent right along and enclosed birth certificates to prove title.
And of course all the congressman can do is to send back his heartiest congratulations. Nobody seems to know just how the story started that the government made awards in case of triplets, but it is a companion yarn to the old one about the government offering big money for bur-falo nickels.

One letter that arrived recently on capital hill came by express and was insured for $50. The reason for this, according to the writer, was that the postoffice department was dominated by the Pope of Rome and that the letter would never get through if sent in the regular manner. The first four or five pages were of similar tenor and no one has yet read the rest of it.

When a correspondent doesn't ask for legislation or information, he often asks for money. It seems to be a favorite trick in some congressional districts to send the congressman tickets to every clambake, beef-stake orgy, Sunday school picnic, black bottom marathon and stereotypical lecture that takes place in his absence.
Sometimes six or eight tickets are enclosed with a word of assurance that it's a splendid cause. If the senator or representative doesn't dig down and do his stuff he's an egg. As often as not, he does. And with some of the unhappy boys on the hill this is a considerable item of annual expense.

TIPS TO TOURISTS
England
If you go out into the suburbs of London, intending to rent a cottage and garden for a pleasant summer stay near the city, don't ask the way to the nearest real estate office. Firms which deal in real estate and buy, sell or rent houses or apartments in this country are called "estate agents."

American tobacco smokers will doubtless be disappointed when they arrive in London on a Sunday, finding all their favorite stores closed. Yet, those who smoke cigarettes will not be so hard hit in front of nearly every tobacconist's there is an automatic machine which supplies any of two or three different brands of the "weed" in packages of ten or twenty, to all those who insert six-pence or one shilling in the apparatus. There are similar machines in the lobbies of practically every hotel and boarding house in the city.

If you want to get a shine in London, don't ask the way to the nearest shine "parlor." Ask for a "bootpolish" and you will be referred to the nearest street bootblack.

All the world swims in

Jantzen
THE SUIT THAT CHANGED BATHING TO SWIMMING
Throughout North and South America and at the pools and shores of other lands, Jantzens are notably popular with folks who swim.
Indeed "Swimming's the thing" these days almost everywhere. And it's so much easier to swim in a Jantzen, warm, snug, flexible. You'll marvel at the matchless, wrinkleless fit.
Jantzen material, consisting entirely of long-fibred wool, is tightly knitted by a process called Jantzen-stitch. It is extremely elastic.
And Jantzen's system of sizing by weight assures you the right size to start with. We have all the popular colors and styles in every size. And being dyed-in-the-wool, they're color-fast.

Out Our Way

MEN ARE MORE ACCURATE IN THE SPORTING WORLD THAN WOMEN

By MARY K. BROWNE.
 When Gertrude Ederle swam the English channel and temporarily defeated the best record among five men, there appeared in print the flaring line, "Women set the pace, men aspire." But Miss Ederle's record stood for only a fleeting moment. Before she could reach the shores of her own country, a man negotiated the channel in less time. It was exceedingly ungallant but, to my mind, consistent with the superiority of men's athletic ability over women's.

Women will never set the pace, for while she may be an exception in relative strength, she is none the less a woman and while so constructed will never be able to consistently defeat men's athletic records. It appears to me a foolish abuse of a remarkably endowed physique to put it to such an unfair test.

There is every reason why men should make lower scores than women in golf for no other reason than their superior strength. But more than that if we make allowance for their relative strength and place women's par at a difference of a dozen strokes, still we will find that the women's scores will fluctuate more than the men's.

Glenna Collett, former national champion and still the outstanding woman golfer of America, is up one day and down the next. Her scores race from 76 to 86, 10 strokes difference, while the best men's scores will vary by half that margin.

Of course the vicissitudes of men's lives are not so pronounced. Their nervous systems are not so apt to be upset. Their minds seem to be more orderly and their manner of playing the game more methodical.

It might behoove the women to study men's methods from 50 yards off the green and into the cup, for in this department of the game, where skill counts more than strength, women have the chance to approach men's perfection.

There is, however, only one woman in the world of whom it has been said, "she can hold her own in this, the short game, with the best man." She is Joyce Wethered, former British champion. She is deadly accurate and consistently so. Francis Ouimet has said she is as fine a shot-maker as he has ever seen from 50 yards and down. Glenna Collett said, when she played Miss Wethered in the British championship, three years ago, that Miss Wethered was so accurate, she never seemed to have to struggle with putts.

It seems to me that men figure out to the ninth degree the best method for them, as to stance, best manner to hit the ball, etc., then stick to their method until they have developed accuracy, while the majority of women seem to change their minds every other day as to the best method to play these shots. Consequently this can not hope to become accurate. I do not mean to be unkind in my criticism. I am merely hopeful of shaking the women from their apathy.

There is one more thing to be taken into consideration when it comes to women scoring on the average course. These courses are laid out for men.

On a hole 400 to 420 yards in length men can usually play their second shot with an iron club, while the women must be awfully good, with all she has, to reach the green with two wood shots. Can you expect her to be as accurate approaching a small well trapped green with a wooden club as a man with his iron shot?

Then, too, the hazards are placed

EASTLAND MAN LOSES TRUCK, STRIPPED OF TIRES
 Thieves stole the Ford truck belonging to I. D. Van Dyke of the Hall Music company last night and stripped it of five tires and the battery. Mr. Van Dyke, who lives at the Cornelius residence on East Main street, missed the truck, which was parked in front of his house, at about 3 o'clock this morning. He notified the night watchman and the two made a search for the truck, but failed to find it. This morning Mr. Van Dyke found the car about two miles northeast of town.

Folks Shudder At "Broken Out" Faces

Folks simply can't help showing that pimply, blotchy or rough faces are unpleasant for them to look at, much less associate and become intimate with people who are so careless about their appearance as to let these skin blemishes rule their destiny. No wonder it seems like "cold chills" run down their backs as they pass you by.

Black and White Ointment and Skin Soap by healing the skin tissue, remove such skin disfigurers, and the way they quickly get rid of them is responsible for their popularity and tremendous sale of more than two million packages a year. Your dealer has them both. They are economically priced, in liberal packages. The 50c size Black and White Ointment contains three times as much as the 25c size.

THEY DO THINGS TO OILS

If you are one who scoffs at OOTS because you never saw them, we'll give you close-ups of the brutes. . . . we'll sit right down and draw you a picture of them. Let's start with DIL. His work is slick. DIL thins out oil and thins it quick! His ornery name's DIL-ution. What DIL does to a fliv is tough; but the other Oot's the guy that's rough. He alters lube to goo. He draws in dust and grabs up grit, and filthies good oil foul with it. He checks in as POLL-ution.

Tho' you treat your Ford the best you can (and so does everyone's old man) these cuss-ed Oots can jam it. What thins out lube or dirties oil wastes gobs of dough and slews of toil. . . . and brings forth talk like b-l-a-m-i-t! Yet all the time the cure's in sight! It's printed plainly at the right. Just you do that with FLIVOLENE. Then Poll and Dil. . . . these Oots we mean. . . . will flee your fliv in sorrow. He Doesn't Seem to Let Loose

BULLDOG

By ERNEST SHELTON
"The good ole summer time" doesn't necessarily suggest that the mind should think only of swimming and vacations.

Because of the growing popularity of the gridiron as each season passes, school boys and football fans begin a sporting discussion on "who is going to make the team."

Baseball has attracted considerably more attention this season than last but the Bulldogs are looking forward to August when strenuous pre-school football training begins.

With a bright prospect in sight for the Junior College next year, scholastically speaking, athletics in this division of the local educational system will get its proportion of local football attention.

The Junior College Council which met last night thrashed out a few things in general but plans for college athletics are being withheld. The "Texas Rangers" as the Junior College boys term their athletic teams has been admitted to the Inter-Colligate Association of Texas Junior Colleges. This will establish more local enthusiasm in college sports next year, and particularly this fall.

Blair Cherry has decided to continue his conquest for more knowledge of football. Where could he find a better school than Notre Dame under a better personal training?

Wallace Davis, assistant coach, will not be idle this summer. The call of the Gridiron turns him toward the University of Michigan where he will receive personal instruction under Fielding Yost, one of the greatest coaches of present-day football.

This twenty-year rule left the Bulldog squad in a terrible muddle. At least, that is the way it appears to "Freshman" Phillips, captain-elect of the '27 hopes; for "Freshmen Phillips will not be eligible next year. The new rule also eliminates the Short brothers from the high school squad this fall. These, however, are not the only ones who will sit on the sidelines watching the Bulldogs to victory; unless, of course, these boys decide to cast their lot with the Junior College eleven next fall. In and out, Ranger fans and the school itself, deeply regret the passing of these prospects from Ranger high school gridiron contests.

And now we wonder who will captain the Bulldogs this fall.

Freak Rules Are Hard for Umpire And Player Too

By BILLIE EVANS
One of the tough plays in baseball for an umpire is the rule governing a home run, which calls for the official to call the ball fair or foul, according to where it was when it disappeared from view.

While it is not a particularly difficult matter to follow the course of the ball accurately, it is a decision that is often accompanied with most unpleasant reactions, since a matter of from one to four runs can be involved.

It was such a decision, made by Umpire Emmett Ormsby that recently resulted in the suspension of Ty Cobb and Al Simmons and caused bitter words to be passed between Connie Mack and President Johnson.

The decision, by the way, showed how quickly a tranquil day for an umpire can be changed into a near riot. There hadn't been a previous dispute.

Decision Makes Trouble. The Boston Red Sox were playing in Philadelphia. Up to the eighth inning, "Lefty" Grove, star southpaw of the Athletics, was pitching most efficiently and enjoying a slender lead by a 2-1 margin.

With one in the eighth, Manager Carrigan sent in Ira Plagstead as pinch hitter and he came through with a much desired home run, putting Boston ahead, 3-2.

In Philadelphia's half of the inning, Ty Cobb, the first man up, drove a ball over the right field wall. Everybody seems agreed that the ball was fair when it passed out of the enclosure. Had the umpire's jurisdiction ended at that point, all would have been lovely for the officials.

However, the rules call for the umpire to follow the ball until it disappears from his view. This Umpire Ormsby did and it so happened that the ball was finally carried foul. He so ruled and thereby wiped out the run that would have tied up the ball game.

If it had been against the visitors, the crowd would have been delighted, but against the home team it was just the opposite. Some of the players kicked, with the usual result, banishment from the game and the decision remained unchanged.

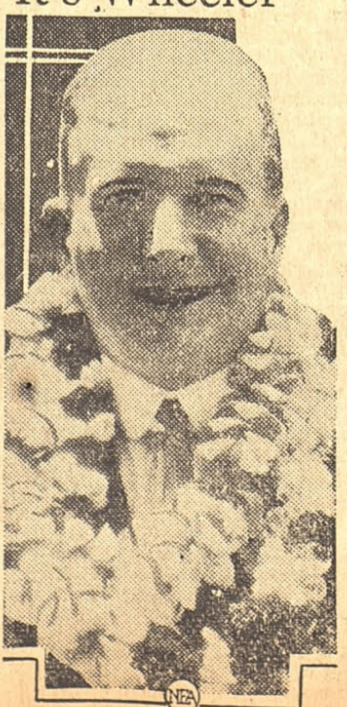

Rather Strange Coincidence. It is a rather strange coincidence that some years back, I figured in a somewhat similar happening, with the Athletics as one of the teams. Playing at Washington, Frank Baker, then the home run king of the American league, hit a ball far over the right field wall. I feel that I am conservative when I say the ball was 30 feet fair when it passed out of the enclosure. Incidentally it cleared the barrier by about that distance.

A high wind was blowing and as I continued to watch the ball, the thought came to me, what an injustice it would be to Baker if the ball was blown foul before it disappeared from my view. That is just what happened. Had it been fair it would have put Philadelphia in front, as two runners were on the bases at the time.

"I think that is a bad rule," was Connie Mack's comment to me after the game. "I believe it would be much fairer if the jurisdiction of the umpire ceased when the ball passed out of the playing field." I agreed with him.

Rule Was Once Changed. In 1920 the rule was changed. It was sponsored by Mr. Mack. I was strong for the shift. The new rule made any such hit a home run if it passed into the stands or over the fence. Babe Ruth made 59 home runs in 1921 for a record. As I recall it, seven of them resulted from the new rule.

RELIEF FROM MANAGING JOB AID TO SISLER

By BILLIE EVANS

George Sisler is 50 per cent a better ball player this year than last. Why? Simply because he hasn't the managerial woes of the Browns to shoulder, in addition to playing first base and trying to bat .350 or better.

I doubt if George Sisler has the proper temperament to be a major league manager. Modest and retiring, he is prone to take upon himself the entire responsibility when the team he is piloting fails to win.

There is nothing like worry to kill off base hits. During the seasons of 1925-26, George Sisler had plenty to worry about as leader of the St. Louis Browns. It soon reacted, particularly on his batting.

This year, George Sisler, minus the managerial title, is a different person. With nothing to worry about he is playing the game that caused him to be rated the greatest first sacker of all time. His batting would be hard to improve upon, his fielding brilliant, and he seems as fast as ever. George Sisler as a player is far more valuable to the St. Louis Browns than George Sisler as manager. As I said before, his efficiency is at least 50 per cent greater this year than last.

One Delivery Not Enough. No pitcher can depend almost entirely on one style of delivery and be successful for any great length of time. I have in mind Southpaw Pruett, now starring with the Philadelphia Nationals.

About four years back the St. Louis Browns signed Herb Pruett, who had little to recommend him other than the fact that he had pitched some pretty good baseball for the University of Missouri.

During his stay in the American League, Pruett showed little ability, other than to strike out Babe Ruth and pitch effectively against the New York Yankees.

Pruett in the first 17 times that he faced Ruth, struck out the Yankee slugger on something like 14 occasions. That in itself brought him great fame.

His great success against Ruth, likewise against the Yanks, was due to the almost exclusive use of a fade-away curve. Such a delivery thrown by a southpaw, is poison to left-handed batters, also free swingers, and the Yanks had plenty of both.

However, proficiency in only one style of delivery, more or less freaky, isn't enough to get by in the majors, as Pruett soon learned.

Pruett Stages Comeback. Sent to the Pacific Coast League in a trade, Pruett worked for a fast ball and did a lot of experimenting with a curve. Nature added 15 pounds, which helped him to develop more speed. Instead of using the fade-away as a constant weapon, he held it in reserve as a threat. His fast ball was called upon oftenest. The batters, knowing his fade-away was almost unhittable, constantly looked for it, and were outguessed most of the time.

Last season Pruett won 22 games in the coast league. He is back in the majors as a member of the Philadelphia Nationals and pitching sensationally.

He makes every effort to get by with his fast ball and curve, plus good control. When in the old pinch, the fade-away is called upon to get him out of trouble. He has been delivering in great style.

The other day some one called Babe Ruth's attention to the fact that Pruett had beat the Chicago Cubs, allowing only three hits, to which Babe replied:

"That guy isn't a pitcher, he's a magician. He goes through all the motions of throwing the ball and then doesn't. The batter swings at nothing but air."

Mom'n Pop

DAUGHTERS OF MIDAS by Anne Austin

THIS HAS HAPPENED T. Q. Curtis, millionaire, takes three girls from his department store and places them in his home as his wards for a year, because he believes they have worthy ambitions he wants to further. Billy Wells, who wants to become a concert violinist, is the only one of the three that is sincere. Nyda Lomax and Winnie Shelton are enjoying the old man's generosity under false pretenses. Billy overhears their benefactor say he is going to adopt one of the girls as his daughter when the year is up and in order not to take unfair advantage of the girls, she tells them what she has heard. She is unwillingly drawn into a battle which Nyda and Winnie wage for T. Q.'s affections. This, together with her infatuation for Dal Romaine, nephew of Mrs. Meadows, the hostess, is causing her to lose interest in her violin. In spite of this infatuation she remembers tenderly Clay Curtis, son of her benefactor, who has disinherited himself and is boarding with Mrs. Wells in the poor part of the town, working in the Truman factory in the daytime and writing music at night. Romaine accompanies Billy on a shopping tour. He directs her to Madame Dubois, where she spends more than she should. She is surprised to hear the salesgirl mention his previous trip to the shop with Winnie Shelton. As they drive into the country, they see Nyda Lomax with Eddie Banning, her chauffeur-sweetheart of department store days, and this strengthens Billy's conviction that there is some intrigue between them. Dal takes Billy to a country place owned by a Hindu. They enter and are alone. As they stand before the big open fire-place, Billy succumbs to the spell which she feels Dal has woven around her and she begs him to kiss her. CHAPTER XXXII The strange sound of her incredible words in her own ears brought Billy Wells sharply to her senses. Even as those thin, dark red lips of his were about to touch her mouth, she drew strength from some deep, unsuspected reservoir of her being and wrenched her body out of his arms. "What have you done to me?" she sank limply to the floor and stared up at him, piteously, stricken. "Don't look at me like that!" she moaned. "You've laid a spell on me. Let me go! I'm going mad!" She put her trembling hands to her face, pressing the tips of her fingers tightly into her temples. Dal Romaine's face lost its graven image rigidity. That miraculous smile of his flashed across his face, and in the twinkling of an eye he was kneeling beside her, his brown hands very gently taking her cold trembling fingers from her pale face. "Listen, Billy—my little Mignon." His voice vibrated with a deep tenderness. "I'm sorry. I haven't been fair with you. You say I've cast a spell on you. God help me—I have! I have a power—a gift or a curse, it may be—that I've consciously, deliberately exerted over you. The first time I looked into your eyes I knew you belonged to me. I am psychic, I suppose you would call it. I saw you and knew you instantly."

"When I was nineteen, I murdered a man, Billy." as the one girl in all the world who I could love wholly. I—how shall I put it? I willed you to love me. But, and his voice dropped lower, weighted each slowly spoken word with infinite meaning, "you had to come to me. You had to offer yourself, had to realize the absolute inevitability of this thing which is between us. I have been drawing you into my arms since the day I first looked into your eyes." Billy's hands lay cold and still in his. "Why," she asked swiftly, "why did you do that to me? You've almost killed me—this last month. Why did you do these things to me, if you loved me?" "There is nothing to be afraid of, Billy," he told her in the gentlest of voices. "I am not going to kiss you—now. I want to talk with you. If you don't want to rest in my arms, you can leave them, sit anywhere you please, if you will just listen to me." She did not answer either in words or by moving even a finger. But the tears continued to slip down her ghostly pale cheeks. "I don't belong to modern America, Mignon," he went on after a bit in a voice that was infinitely gentle and soothing. "As I told you, there is gypsy blood in my veins, along with the French and American. But I belong to none of those races, not even the gypsies. I belong to India. Some day I will tell you about reincarnation. I'll lead you into the occult world, and you'll never want to come back. Oh, we have strange adventures ahead of us, Mignon." She shook her head, but the tears had ceased to flow. She was listening, although her eyes were still closed. "I am thirty-six years old, Billy child, and you are—" his voice rose gently on the question. "Twenty-three," she whispered. "When I was twenty-three I had been lecturing on Yogi philosophy in France and England for two years," he smiled. "I have known you, distinctly. I told my friend Travers, the lad who was half Indian and half English what I had done. I asked him to take careful note of what I said. I willed the girl's husband to be stricken with illness on a late exactly three months from that day. He was I told Travers, a free will, you would have died. I head, his arms tightening fiercely about her, his voice ringing out with triumph and exultation. "Take me back to Colfax now, Dal," Billy begged him in a weak, small voice. "Please—I don't want any luncheon. I couldn't eat. Take me back now, Dal—I want my mother." "It shall have its mother," Dal Romaine laughed tenderly. "But it won't tell secrets, will it? Until the year is up, this must be our secret, mustn't it, Mignon?" (To be continued) Billy flies to her mother's arms, ashamed, repentant, and finds solace. But she also finds that Clay is not taking his heart out in loneliness.

Preserve Your Health for Your Children's Sake! Texarkana, Texas.—"About four years ago my health was very poor and had been so for a long while. I suffered with pain in my side, back and head and nothing gave me any permanent relief until I took Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. A few bottles of the 'Prescription' relieved me of these distressing ailments and pains and my general health became good. I am glad to recommend the 'Favorite Prescription' to other sufferers."—Mrs. F. S. Ray, 1315 Northmen St., All dealers. Write Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, in Buffalo, N. Y., for free advice.

BRITISH AND AMERICAN BANKS FINANCE RUSSIAN INDUSTRY

By J. W. T. MASON (Written for the United Press) NEW YORK, May 21.—Russia is being given a chance to come back to normal conditions, financially, by a group of American and British private banks that have arranged to finance purchases of American machinery, in the United States by the Moscow government. A credit of $5,000,000 has been established as a preliminary amount. If Russia does not try to evade the financial obligation thus entailed, credits will be extended cautiously. Should the plan prove successful, Russia will be able eventually to solve her pressing industrial problem and return to the family of nations with increased economic strength.

Since the ending of the world war, Russians have been making foreign purchases largely through German bankers. The Germans have charged Moscow thirty per cent profit on loans and then have passed the loans largely to financial institutions in the United States, who, in effect, have underwritten them. The Moscow soviet officials have thus had a taste of the price that must be paid for loans by defaulters. Unable to obtain adequate financial means for national rehabilitation in Russia, itself, the Moscow administration has been compelled to appeal to the capitalistic west and accept capitalistic terms. These terms, under German manipulation have been met by the Russians to the present with sufficient promptitude to justify financiers in reducing them, somewhat. That is the meaning of the combination of American and British banks, formed to deal directly with the Russians and eliminating the middleman's profit that the Germans have hitherto been taking. Russia is being progressively trusted to pay back her postwar industrial loans and though bankers are still very cautious and demand high interest rates, as an insurance, nevertheless increasing evidence is forthcoming that Moscow is beginning to realize the value of honor in money dealings.

The machinery which is being purchased in the United States for use in Russia is the most valuable material Russia could buy. The difficulties met by the communistic experiment in Russia have been due not only to the fact that Russia is not an industrial nation and has been unable to provide within herself for the wants of the peasant agriculturists. Machinery has been lacking to make the most basic products and the poverty of the country has made it impossible for the communists to pay cash for their requirements. They have had to live from hand to mouth, buying on the installment plan, with additional middleman's charges. The new arrangement whereby there is to be direct financing by American and British banks of Russian purchases in the United States will mean Russia will get much more for her money and will be able to provide industrial plants for Russian operation. Now these plants work will be the basic factor in setting the pace at which Russia returns to normal health. The Russians themselves, are not good industrial engineers or they would have more successfully industrialized their country before the outbreak of the Bolshevik revolution and might thereby have made the revolution impossible.

Americans do not make good efficiency experts in Russia because they are unfamiliar with the Russian temperament and require more for their service than the Russians can normally afford to pay. If Germans are called in to take over the direction of the new Russian plants, it will be the best outcome for all concerned. The Russians will profit more and the Russian credits expended in the United States on machinery will become more productive and will make more probable the repayment of the loans. The best combination for Russia's rehabilitation, therefore, is a combination of Anglo-American credits, American machinery and German supervision of the machinery once it is delivered to Russia. The Germans have been neighbors of the Russians for so long and have been associated with Russian industry in so many ways that they are competent to get the most possible out of the human material which Russia must provide to man the factories where American machinery will be installed. If these three factors work in harmony, Russia will be brought back to wealth. The world will be much the gainer when the Russian nation ceases to totter and begins to play its natural place in international life, as an adult country seeking success by hard work.

ELEVEN-YEAR-OLD GIRL PROVES MEDICAL PUZZLE

By United Press. BURTON-ON-TRENT, England.—An 11-year-old girl here, the daughter of a miner, is puzzling medical men who have come from all parts of England to study her case. Her bones are so brittle that they break easily and she has already suffered seven bone fractures, five to her legs and two to collar bones. She spent two years in a local infirmary, but had been discharged as cured several weeks ago. Two weeks after she was discharged she stumbled and fractured a leg-bone again.
