The jailer, weighs 300 pounds and is nearly seven feet tall. As large as two ordinary men he was able to whip off the entire six in the attempted break.

Waiting for the Gun in the Great Pacific Aerial Derby

Here are eight entries in the San Francisco-Honolulu air derby lined up on the field at Oakland, Calif., ready for the start. Number 1, in the foreground by the starting circle, is the plane flown by Jack Frost. The other planes are: No. 2, Art Goebel; No. 3, Auggie Peddler; No. 4, Major Livingston Irving; No. 5, Martin Jensen; No. 6, Lieutenant N. A. Goddard; No. 7, Charles W. ## Woolaroc Appears To Be Leading Big Air Race Across Pacific

Latest Reports From Goebel Gave His Position As 2,187 Miles Out From San Francisco Or Within Two and Half or Three Hours of Honolulu. Other Planes Not Heard From

DALLAS SPIRIT MAY LEAVE YET

Pursuit Squadron at Honolulu Prepared Early In Day To Take Off On Reconnoitering Expedition In Search of Planes. Weather at Honolulu Reported Perfect for Landing Of Planes

At 8:40 a. m., Honolulu time, Goebel reported his position to the Mutual Wireless company as 2,187 miles from the Golden Gate.

FATE OF THREE PLANES STILL UNKNOWN AS ARRIVAL TIME NEAR

OAKLAND AIRPORT, OAKLAND, Calif., Aug. 17.—The fate of three planes which essayed the trans-Pacific flight for a $35,000 purse may be known today and may not be known for days.

With the approach of the scheduled arriving time of the first plane at Wheeler field, officials of fields both here and on the islands gave hint of apprehension that disaster might overcome some of the entrants.

The monoplane Woolaroc, one of the four planes over the Pacific, was reporting its position at half-hour intervals. It is the only plane of the four equipped with sending radio.

All was quiet at the airport here, though three planes remained as possible entrants to the Dole prize flight. The monoplane "Dallas Spirit" of Captain William P. Erwin, was undergoing minor repairs. It was believed it might be started down the runway again today.

The monoplane of Bennett Griffin, the "Oklahoma," was undergoing extensive repairs and it was believed it was possible that it would make another take-off attempt.

The "Air King," disqualified because of insufficient gas capacity, was still at the head of the runway awaiting possible test flights by either Richard Grace or Ernest Smith.

Grace, southern California stunt flier, was unsuccessful in a take-off for Honolulu.

Ranger Men Get New Well North Of Parsons Pool

A northern extension of the Parsons pool, south of Oden, was definitely established by the coming in of a producer of the W. U. Fox No. 1 of Fleweller, Vanderford, Hudsonett et al. of Ranger, one and one half miles south of Oden, late yesterday. The well is spraying oil at the rate of 50 barrels a day and making 3,000,000 cubic feet of gas. The pay was found at 1600 feet.

On account of the lack of storage and pipe line facilities the new producer will not be drilled in until Thursday.

At 1,600 feet the drill had just touched the sand and may produce more if drilled deeper.

This is the most important discovery in the Old-Parsons area since the coming in during the summer of 1926 of a number of good producers in the Parsons pool. The pay in the Parsen and Green Wright wells was found at a slightly lesser depth than the Fox and practically all of them came in for 100 barrels, some for more.

J. D. Parsons No. 1-A, a 100 barrel well came in late in June last year at a depth of 1526-31 feet. Parsons No. 2 came in on July 6, for 100 barrels at a depth of 1,543 feet, while No. 4 found the pay at a much lesser depth, 1224 feet. In Gulf No. 3, the 1500 foot sand was tested out and produced a 100 barrel well.

The biggest part of the interests in the new well are owned by Ranger people, and quite a bit of business was evidenced this morning in local oil circles when the new well's advent was announced.

Dividing interest with Fox No. 1, is the Panhandle No. 1, on the South Hightower, an offset to Webb No. 2, which came in yesterday for 30 barrels at a depth of 1175 to 1199 feet. This is the first producer in this end of the Hightower. It is said that a test was made near it during the boom, which was a disappointment, so its extension is considered a most valuable one by Ranger oil men.

BERTOUD PLANS LEAVING TODAY IN HOP TO ROME

Weather Conditions Are Described as Favorable For Flyer's Hop Off to Eternal City Late Today.

By United Press.
CURTIS FIELD, N. Y., Aug. 17.—Lloyd W. Bertoud today announced he would leave tonight in the monoplane "Old Glory" for Rome if the radio could be put in proper working order.

Bertoud said he would leave at 5 p. m. eastern daylight saving time. The announcement was made at 1 p. m. as mechanics made final adjustments to the radio equipment.

James De Witt Hill, will be Bertoud's companion in the flight, which has planned to extend to Rome and return.

Today's weather report indicated favorable conditions throughout the route to Rome except for local disturbances off New Foundland. Conditions here, were excellent.

Three Honolulu Soldiers Hurt By Ambulance

By United Press.
HONOLULU, Aug. 17.—Three soldiers who fell asleep in the road leading to Wheeler field while awaiting arrival of the Dole fliers, were run over by an ambulance at daybreak and seriously injured. They were taken to a hospital in the ambulance that struck them.
The ambulance was en route to the field to be ready for any emergency. Roads leading to the field are jammed with traffic and at 6 a. m. the crowd on the field had increased to 30,000.

Invisible Rays Real Cause of Sunburn

By CHARLES M. WILLIAMS, M. D. New York City
Member Gorgas Memorial Institute (Written for United Press)

What is it that causes sunburn? It is the part of the sun's rays at the blue end of the spectrum, and the invisible rays beyond the blue.
The red rays of the sun have little chemical action, and little effect on the skin beyond making it feel warm, while the rays at the other end of the spectrum, the blue end, and those beyond them, have a powerful action and a very decided effect on the skin. It is these rays that cause sunburn.

These violet and ultraviolet rays, powerful as they are, have little penetrating power. They are much more easily stopped than the red rays.
Mountain climbers can be sunburned when the temperature is away below freezing but the mystery vanishes when we remember that the presence or absence of heat rays does not count. It is the blue rays that are important, and on a snow-capped peak the air is thin and pure, so that there is nothing to stop the light. And besides that, the white snow reflects the light almost as would a mirror.

Whenever the light is clear and the region about one reflects light strongly, one sees the same result. The seashore is notorious for sunburn, partly on account of the pure air, partly on account of light reflected from the water and the white sand, and partly also because it is a region where people love to dispense with the protection of clothing.
Light reflected from rocks and sand of the desert and arid mountain regions is very powerful, while the softer light reflected from green

JAMES DOLE SPONSOR OF FLIGHT WORRIED

James Dole, sponsor of the flight appeared exceedingly haggard and wearied here today. Other officials of flight committee were apparently certain of a successful conclusion and did not appear disturbed.
Mrs. Martin Jensen was at the field sobbing and gazing to the westward horizon, her husband piloting the monoplane Aloha had not been reported for hours.

Mrs. Malloska sat quietly near Mrs. Jensen scanning the sky through field glasses and entirely confident that the biplane "Miss Doran" of which he is one of the backers would land safely.

The Miss Doran was unreported since passing the Farallon islands off the California coast an hour and half behind the Aloha, Golden Eagle and Woolaroc.

UNKNOWN PLANE SEEN

By United Press.
KAUKAU, Island of Maui, Aug. 17.—An unidentified plane was sighted here at 9:02 a. m., Hawaiian time, or 11:32 Pacific coast time.
Kaukau is near the northern shore of Maui, midway between the two extremes.

BELIEF ALL PLANES ARE STILL IN AIR EXPRESSED

By United Press.
OAKLAND AIRPORT, Aug. 17.—Four planes were believed to be tearing the Pacific toward Hawaii early today but the position of only one could be determined.

The monoplane Woolaroc, only one of the four equipped for sending radio at 6 a. m. reported its position as 1,590 miles out of the Golden Gate.

The monoplanes Golden Eagle and Aloha and the biplane Miss Doran carrying the fair girl after whom it is named were believed in the air also. The belief though was based solely on the conviction of radio experts here that "they'll get there."

The position given by the Woolaroc would mean that it had covered approximately 1,600 miles in about 18 hours of flying, an average of about 88 miles per hour. About ten hours flying at that speed would remain between the ship and Honolulu which would bring the Woolaroc in about 2 p. m. Pacific Coast standard time.

FARMER-TRANSPORTATION

"While in point of time development of transportation facilities has brought the farmer closer to his market, geographically it has carried him farther and farther from it. Even for perishables the significance of time and distance has been greatly reduced by refrigeration. These very factors which have enabled the farmer to reach more distant markets have made possible the expansion of those markets through concentration of industrial population. This, in turn encouraging the use of more and more remote areas for agricultural production. The result has been to attenuate if not to destroy the farmer's contact with the consumer.

"Not only was the field of competition extended by the opening up of new regions to commercial agriculture, but its force was intensified by improved technique of production, which tended to outrun increasing demand. To relieve this situation, the farmer is compelled more and more to turn his attention to distribution, seeking to cheapen the process, shorten the route, economically if not physically, and renew his contact with the consumer.

"An essential step toward these ends is standardization of products. In the common language of standardized grades is found the meeting ground with marketing agencies and consumers of which he has been deprived by geographic remoteness. Moreover in standardized grades is found a meeting ground with other agricultural producers, affording the fundamental basis for competition. Through this medium the essential factors of a market can be brought together on a scale commensurate in extent with that of production and consumption without assembling those factors physically. The market can be brought to the farmer when he can no longer carry his produce to it.

"While this step in distribution is being brought upon the farmer by the same economic forces that have induced manufacturers to establish nationally advertised brands and trade-marks and to put up package goods which are carried sealed from factory to consumer, the farmer's response has been somewhat different. In manufacturing industries these distributive devices have been made possible by concentration of management and by production in large-scale units. Because of the nature of one of its raw materials, land, agriculture must remain relatively decentralized in operation.

"Many of the advantages of large scale organization for studying the technique of production are already available to farmers through the service of Federal and State departments of agriculture and agricultural colleges and experiment stations. Benefits of grading and large-scale marketing operations are secured in some instances by cooperative organizations among farmers. There remains for others, however, the need for control of quality and maintenance of standards such as are provided for manufacturers by large-scale organization.

"Grading of produce is a natural step in the effort of cooperative organizations to market against competition from individual producers, and much has been done among their memberships to raise standards of quality. Rather than to develop their own grades, however, the tendency is for cooperative marketing associations to adopt United States standards, where such standards have been established, because of the wide recognition accorded them in the trade.

"There are, on the other hand, some outstanding instances where cooperative associations have established their own grades as well as brands, and by means of extensive advertising have secured for them recognition not only in this country but abroad. Notable among them are organizations for marketing Califor-

DR. J. C. CURRAN Speaker Today At Rotary Club

"Ranger's three greatest assets," Dr. J. C. Curran, of the Curran School of Better Business, N. Y., stated at the weekly luncheon of the Ranger Rotary club at noon today, "are its newspapers, banks and churches.

"The first brings the people here, the second loans them money and helps them along their financial way and the latter is the foundation for all three to build on and grow to greater things."

Dr. Curran's subject was "Making a Greater Success of Your Business" and he said that two things were necessary in any business venture, Love of God and love of those around one.

His lecture was greatly enjoyed by the members of the Rotary club and its visitors for the day, who were F. S. Binger and W. H. Humphrey of Okla., Tom Tishner and H. S. Drumright of Cisco. Billy Burke, A. N. Larson and D. C. DeWitt.

W. C. Hickey was chairman of the program committee.

Dr. Curran has spoken to over 400 Rotary clubs in the United States and over 1,000 service clubs. The Rotary club enjoyed his message so much that they are underwriting his expense to speak before the entire citizenship of Ranger at the Liberty theatre at 8 p. m. Monday.

"Strange as it may sound," Appel said, "good health has killed many people. Those with iron constitutions are prone to become conceited over their vigor and vitality. Nothing hurts me" is their cry. And indeed nothing appears to hurt them until something cracks of a sudden. And their game is up."

The health expert pointed to the fact that many persons who began life with a strong constitution have neglected their health and allowed themselves to lose their vitality, while persons naturally weak who have taken the proper care of their bodies and have passed their robust friends.

"The strong ones worked on the principle that they were extraordinarily endowed with vigor, as indeed they were, became neglectful and flopped," Appel said.

The head of the Pennsylvania health department urged that the naturally endowed "strong ones" stop their boasting and devote their time to keeping their health.

"Boasting about your constitution and punishing daily on the 'nothing-hurts me' theory is a most effective way to be beaten," Appel stated.

H. A. Peabody, an engineer of Dallas, was also present, as was Joe Jones of Eastland, who gave some interesting facts about Eastland's new paving program, which is being carried out in brick.

Billy Burke, who favored Amesite for paving, was also present and made some propositions to the commission, which were not acted on as the commission is not yet acting on any propositions.

A. N. Larson of the Texas Electric Service company, appeared before the commission in behalf of the citizens of Hodges Oak Park, who have been making a strenuous effort to obtain street lights for that section of town and it was finally decided that these lights would be installed as per plans and conditions outlined by the Hodges Oak Park citizens, the commission, and light company.

F. C. Von Zuben, consulting engineer of Fort Worth, notified the commission that he would be present on Monday.

Longworth And Lowden Being Counted Out

By RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer
WASHINGTON. — Excepting Daves, Hoover and Hughes, a study of the strength of the announced or unannounced candidates for the Republican presidential nomination reveals reasons why they can't be nominated rather than reasons why they might.

For purposes of such an analysis, it is to be assumed that President Coolidge will not be an important factor at the next republican national convention.
With Coolidge out, there is an excellent prospect of a gorgeous cat-and-dog fight between the aspirants, with a wealth of favorite sons, dark horses and deals. The party is too well controlled to permit of any such spectacle as the democrats stumbled into at New York in 1924, but there may be a real deadlock which will have to be settled as in 1920 "by a little group of men in a smoky, stuffy, locked room."

Lowden is the farmers' "protest" candidate. If he has an understanding with Daves, as was long ago suggested, he may be able to do a splendid job in rounding up the delegations from agricultural states for delivery at the convention. The main point, however, is that to date Lowden has shown no strength in the east or anywhere else except in predominantly agricultural states.

Longworth comes from Ohio, the "mother of presidents" in recent decades, and he has a strong personal following among members of the house. Many of the congressmen have been boosting his stock for a long time and they will continue to do so with renewed vigor. But despite his conservatism, it is doubtful whether the powers that be in the party regard him as solid enough for the big job. Probably his worst handicap is his reputation as a thorough-going wet. There is no indication yet that the republican party is likely to name a candidate unsatisfactory to the organized dries.

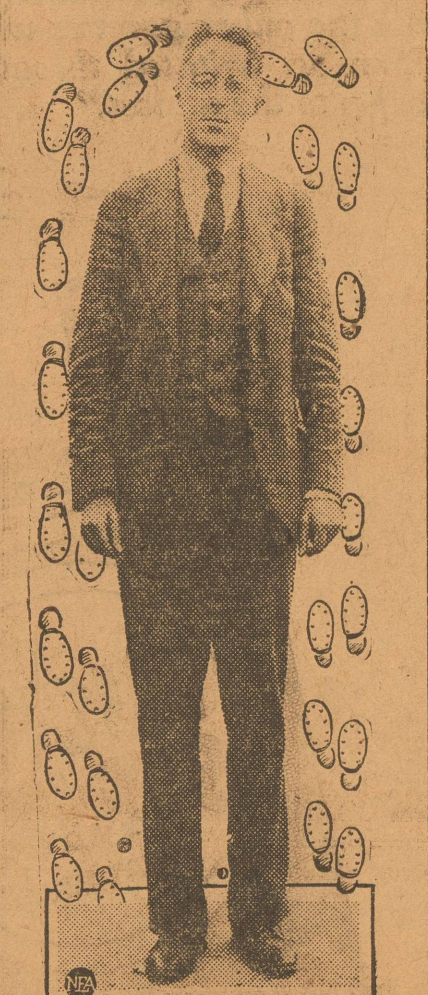

Borah has even less of a chance than Lowden or Longworth. Although he is personally as popular as anyone in the field, the party regulars will not allow him to get anywhere if they can help it—and they almost surely can. Some sort of a Borah-for-president movement may be started by the senator's admirers, but it is even doubtful whether Borah would ever signify his approval of it.

Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska has some enthusiastic support from the party's extreme progressive wing, but that wing is so ineffectual that he must be placed at the foot of the current "possibility" list. Norris has inherited the LaFollette following as much as anyone could inherit it, but he has not set up shop as a leader and probably would refuse a third ticket nomination if it were tendered to him.

Popularity of The Silver Dollar In West Explained

By United Press.
EL PASO, Texas, Aug. 17.—A hang-over from the "wild and woolly" days of the past, is the explanation of local federal reserve bank officials for the popularity of silver dollars in this section.
In the pioneer days it was the custom to pay bills with a "sack of iron" which in mining parlance referred to silver ore. This custom has remained and the average westerner prefers silver to paper money.
Another reason for the prevalence of silver coins here is the gambling at Juarez. Most of the gambling is done with silver and the banks here frequently are visited by gamblers who trade currency for silver dollars.

Footprints

John O. Porter, of Danvers, Mass., plans to leave his footprints on half the world in his contemplated walk westward from New York to Paris, 15,000 miles. His route, which he expects will take him three years to cover, lies across the United States, Canada, Alaska, Siberia and Europe.

HEROES ARE MADE - NOT BORN.

BOY AVIATION ENTHUSIASTS CAN TRY LUCK WITH TOY PLANES

By THOMAS L. STOKES
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—The boy of today who plans to go into aviation should experiment in construction and flying of model airplanes to gain a knowledge of the groundwork and technique of airplanes and flying which model airplane study gives better than anything else.
In such experiments, he will follow not only in the steps of pioneers of aviation, but also will do just what the industry's best engineers today do in searching about for improvements in plane types.

"The Wright brothers first became interested in aviation through a model airplane their father brought home to them one day," explained Paul E. Garber, of the Smithsonian Institution here, who has prepared instructions on how to construct model airplanes for the contest among boys of the country to be conducted by the National Playground and Recreation Association.
"The model airplane broke in time, and the two boys experimented trying to fix it. Out of these experiments grew their interest in flying and later they built other models, learning more and more about the science of aviation."

The first known experiment in aviation was by a model airplane, and all developments in aviation until comparatively recent years were by means of small models as there was no power for propelling large flying machines for carrying men. The first known experiment was related by Garber.
"Archytas of Tarentum, who lived about 400 B. C., is reputed to have made a wooden bird, about the size of a pigeon, which propelled itself some fifty feet by the use of 'the real air.' Perhaps referred to 'em-presse' in the 'No one knows'."

Garber, who organized a boys model airplane club here 15 years ago, has had many requests from aeronautical engineers experimenting with new types for models embodying their ideas. He advocates airplane model experiments among boys as the ideal groundwork for a future in aviation. Boys of the country will have an excellent chance to learn airplane modeling through the contest of the National Playground and Recreation Association.

Plans for the contest, which are being sent out to playgrounds, whose directors will teach the boys how to make model planes, in preparation for the contest, the finals of which are to be held in Memphis, Tenn., in October. Boys can secure information from the playground directors in their neighborhoods. They tell how to make numbers of types of model airplanes.
There are two classes of aircraft models, the scientific or frame models, consisting of the bare essentials for flight, and the scale model, which is a copy of types of regular airplanes. It is expected that in the latter class, models of "The Spirit of St. Louis," Lindbergh's plane, will be most popular. The scientific or frame models are very light and can be flown for great distances, even as far as a mile. The scale models, necessarily, are heavier, and will not fly as far.
For the boy who wants to go thoroughly into the subject, there are some books to which he may turn in addition to the playground instructions. Garber, himself, is preparing a book which will be out in a few weeks, containing up-to-date information from his recent experiments.
The books are as follows:
Model Airplanes and Their Motors, by George A. Cavanaugh. This book is out of print, but copies may be available libraries.
The Boys' Book of Model Airplanes, by F. A. Collins.
Harper's Aircraft Book.
Things Worth Making, by Archibald Williams.
Every Boy's Book of Hobbies, by Cecil Billivant.
Practical Aviation, by Charles B. Hayward.

In addition, aviation magazines contain suggestions. The U. S. Air Services Magazine, Washington, D. C., which has conducted a model department for about three years, contains instructions in back issues of May of 1925, 1926 and 1927, which may be purchased for 25 cents each.
The Model Maker and The Model Engineer, published monthly by Spout and Chamberlain, 120-22 Liberty St., N. Y., frequently devote space to model aircraft. The June and July issues of The Model Maker contain plans for a scale model of the British S. E. 5 A. single-seater fighting plane.
Drawings of model aircraft as well as parts for their construction may be secured from The Ideal Model Airplane and Supplies Company, 165-67 Spring Street, New York City. In the appendix of the series of Aircraft Year Books published since 1919 by the Manufacturers' Aircraft Association of New York are a number of outline drawings of contemporary airplanes. The drawings can be used in producing scale models.
Large manufacturers of aircraft, a list of whom may be secured from the Commerce Department here, furnish photographs, blue prints and specifications of their types. Many of these, eager to develop interest in aviation, will supply boys with these prints free.
Few tools are required in making model airplanes. A good pen knife is the most useful, and it should be sharp with one well pointed blade. A razor blade is preferable for some delicate cutting. A ruler is essential. Two pairs of pliers should be procured, one of the round nose variety for forming hooks and wire fittings, and a flat nose pair with a cutting edge. A small sharp plane is handy for dressing down wood. A number 60 drill is used for drilling propeller holes. Two other requisites are a candle and a piece of sandpaper of Num-O-Grade.

Materials are wood, metal, fabric and liquid. The woods used are pine, which is easily secured; spruce, which may be purchased at lumber yards; bamboo, which comes in fishing poles or rug poles, and balsa, which is difficult to procure, but may be secured at a flying field, if the boys lives near one, or may be bought in large pieces from John Wilde, 510 E. Eleventh Street, New York City; The Air Service Publishing Company, Washington, D. C., which sells it already cut to size, or from the Fleishmann Company, 701 Washington St., New York City. For the boy near a playground, the director will purchase these materials in large lots.
The metal material consists of small nails and sizes 10 and 15 piano wire. Paper clips, hairpins and hatpins, which the boy can find about home, are useful in some of the fittings. Fine steel wire, about number 32, will come in handy.

Fabric is used in the wing coverings. China silk, which can be purchased at notions stores, Japanese tissue paper, which may be found at Chinese and Japanese curio establishments and rice paper, which is sold by draughtsman supply house, are materials that may be used in the wings.
Rubber bands for running the propeller may be secured from local supply houses, while silk thread A, used for binding the parts of a model together, is sold at notions stores. Liquids used for two purposes, as adhesives and as wing coating preparation. A suitable adhesive is a cement known as Ambroid, which may be purchased from hardware stores or stores which sell boat supplies. Commercial Airplane "dope" and banana oil, the latter sold by drug stores, are used for fastening the fabric to the wing frames. Calodion, sold by drug stores, can be used to coat the wings.

Ball Fans, Usually Impatient, Waited For Johnson

(By BILLIE EVANS)
 In no sport does the spectator get as close to the active participants as in baseball. Perhaps that is one reason for the great popularity of the game.

In golf, the gallery follows the stars over the course with bated breath. To do anything that would tend to disconcert the player is the worst breach of golf etiquette possible. A perfectly proper gallery does the deaf and dumb act.

In tennis, the gallery applauds at certain spots, but while the ball is in play, there is never any wisecracking comment from the crowd.

The football audience is just as demonstrative as the baseball crowd, more so as a steady diet, but the noise-making is confined entirely to cheering rather than an exchange of remarks.

Fistic audiences come closer to the baseball species than in any other form of sport. Often they are more brutally frank in expressing their opinions.

Many of the best bits of repartee I have heard at ball games have been broadcast by the spectators rather than the athletes or umpire.

Waited On Johnson
 As a rule baseball crowds are not keen for long winded speeches when some player is called to the home plate to receive a gift from the admiring home folks.

"Play ball. Cut the conversation. Start the game. Give us less words and more base hits."

Such are just a few of the phrases flung at the speaker and invariably the attitude of the fans spoils many a speech that has taken hours to prepare.

Only one in all the 22 years that I have been in baseball have I seen a crowd sit through 30 minutes of speech-making and presentations without yelling for the game to start. I have reference to the 20th anniversary of Walter Johnson in the American League, which was recently properly celebrated in Washington.

Yet as gift after gift was being heaped upon Johnson, with the donor expressing a few words of good wishes, some mighty funny cracks were wafted from the stand to the playing field.

Cracks From Fans
 When the master of the ceremonies made his first few remarks much after the manner of the announcer making known the batteries, it was only natural that some wag should yell:

"Who did you say was pitching for Washington?" It being known for weeks in advance that Johnson would perform, the wise-crack got a big laugh.

As Secretary of State Kellogg came on the field to present Walter Johnson with the American League distinguished service medal, someone yelled:

"Who is that guy? What league did he ever play in?" Even Mr. Kellogg enjoyed a hearty laugh at the quip nullified at his expense.

Walter Johnson likes golf next to baseball. Several of the Washington professionals presented him with golf clubs, which inspired some to shout:

Calls Umpire a Bandit
 "Why not give him a baseball bat? He can't make any hits with those things."

When the master of ceremonies said "a bottle of perfume from Miss So and So," it brought forth this remark from the stands:

"I hope Mrs. Johnson didn't hear that one, Walter," but the great pitcher was equal to the occasion for he replied:

"That's the first gift I will turn over to her."

However, the biggest laugh of the day came as Walter turned his medal studded with 20 diamonds over to Umpire George Hildebrand to show to the rest of the players. As he did so came the warning:

"Keep your eye on that bandit, Barney. You're taking a long chance."

The summer fur sales have made the demand for sealskin coats made of rabbit skin so great that artificial sealskin coats may have to be made of sealskin.

A trainload of automobiles burned on a siding near Detroit. Dozens of pedestrians were saved.

King Ahoy!

Avast lubber, 'tis good King George himself in oilskins! And this seaman's slicker means merely that it was wet going on the royal yacht Britannia during the Cowes regatta.

Frisco to Hawaii—Under Sail

While aviators are planning flights from San Francisco to Honolulu, Captain Charles Wood is making the same trip in a manner much more old-fashioned, but nearly as perilous. He is making the trip in a 35-foot sloop and expects to make it in 25 days.

MANILA—Local student organizations are preparing to welcome a delegation of Japanese students from Toa Dobun Shoin college of Shanghai who are making an educational tour of the Far East. The Japanese consulate received a message saying that the students would spend several days in Manila inspecting universities and academies before proceeding on their way to Java.

Yes, September will be a fine, warm month, weather permitting.

Town of Perryton To Celebrate Her Eighth Birthday

Special Correspondence.
PERRYTON, Aug. 17.—Perryton will celebrate her eighth birthday anniversary here Aug. 22 and 23 when she will be host to thousands of visitors and citizens of Ochiltree county. Rodeo Stunts Will Feature Show On Ranch Near Denton

By United Press.
DENTON, Texas, Aug. 17.—Revival of the old time Texas ranch ride will be staged September 4 on the IX ranch, near here, by a group of Dallas business men who have purchased the ranch.

The ranch is one of the few remaining landmarks in this section. It is being restored to its pioneer appearance in every detail and will be maintained as a show spot for visitors to Dallas.

Bulldozing, rough riding and other "wild west" stunts will make up the program for the day. The judges will be selected from the pioneer ranchers living in this section.

They Shall Not Parade

In Boston the police tolerated no Sacco-Vanzetti demonstration as approach of the execution hour found sympathizers active everywhere. Among more than forty persons arrested while picketing the state house were Harry Canter, of New York (left) and Alfred Baker Lewis of Boston here shown on their way to the station house.

MANILA.—The insular bureau of labor has received authoritative information from Honolulu saying that Filipino laborers ought not to come to the Hawaiian islands without previous arrangements for employment. The bureau is circulating a warning throughout the archipelago calling attention to the danger of arriving in Honolulu penniless and without employment. The wisdom of the older generation is in doing what the younger generation is doing before it did them.

"I owe this idea to Herbert Brenon"

Alton Hamilton remarks to his friend Carl de Mel as he offers him a Lucky Strike at the Manor Country Club.

Herbert Brenon, noted Film Director, writes:

"During the pandemonium of motion picture production—as in my direction of 'Beau Geste'—I find Lucky Strikes are not only soothing to tired vocal chords, but they have the best flavor. The constant use of my voice in my work demands that I keep it in condition. Lucky Strikes are the only cigarettes which protect me from an irritated throat, and which I enjoy to the utmost."

Herbert Brenon

You, too, will find that Lucky Strikes are mild and mellow—the finest cigarettes you ever smoked, made of the finest Turkish and domestic tobaccos, properly aged and blended with great skill, and there is an extra process—"It's toasted"—no harshness, not a bit of bite.

Assure Low Rates To Exposition At Tulsa This Fall

TULSA, Okla., Aug. 17.—The open rate radius for Texas travel for the International Petroleum Exposition here on one and one-third fare has been extended by railroads, it was announced by exposition officials. The new low rate is available from points from which the regular fare to Tulsa is $30 or less. The extension is from the $10 class to the $30 class.

The open rate means that the certificate requirement is omitted. Under the first announcement the non-certificate plan applied only to points from which the regular fare is $10. The railway passenger associations of the United States, in five zones, are in the agreement for low round trip rates for the exposition here, Sept. 24 to Oct. 1. The arrangement includes practically all Canadian roads.

SPORTS, ODDS AND ENDS

ABOUT SHARKEY STORIES

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—Ever since Jack Sharkey disappointed those who had picked him to beat Jack Dempsey and those who had bet on him as the winner, stories have been circulated that he can't take it and that he is yellow.

It is true that he can't take it but no other fighter with the stoutest heart in the world could have taken the body punishment he took from Dempsey and stand up under it. The inference that he is yellow is unwarranted and grossly unfair.

The records do show that Sharkey claimed fouls in a number of fights but it is no trait of cowardice and it is no crime to claim anything if you can get away from it.

It did appear in his fight with Dempsey that he curled up and stepped back but he couldn't do anything else under the punishment he was forced to take.

Sharkey is not yellow and he doesn't lack a fighting heart.

He couldn't have been yellow when he went after Harry Wills. The big negro heavyweight had been dodged by every heavyweight in the division for years. The impression always will remain that Dempsey was afraid of him but that also is untrue. Dempsey never fought Wills because the match couldn't be staked for some reason that can only be guessed at.

After the Tunney-Dempsey battle, Sharkey decided that his time had come and he told his manager, John Buckley to get a match with Wills. Nearly everyone thought that it was a sucker match for him and that his future would be ruined. But Sharkey showing the courage of a fighter, carried the fight to Wills and beat him up so badly that he sneaked out on a foul.

Sharkey also fought and beat George Godfrey when he was considered bad news by all the other fighters. A good many smart managers regard Godfrey now as one of the best heavyweights in the division. Sharkey didn't have to fight Dempsey. It is well to consider that.

After he had won a decisive victory of Jim Maloney, Tex Rickard decided that he was ready for a big shot but he had doubts about his drawing power against Tunney. He was willing to match them regardless and Sharkey was willing.

When Dempsey decided to return to the ring, Rickard suggested the match to Sharkey. He didn't have to take it but he did and the result gave him a setback and much less money than he might have secured in a championship match.

One of the stoutest defenders of Sharkey against the charge that he lacks courage is William A. Muldoon, veteran member of the New York boxing commission.

Muldoon, although a great admirer of Sharkey, would not let his opinion be influenced by sentiment. He thinks too much of his judgment.

"It is unfair and almost damnable to call Sharkey yellow," he said. "I would like to see some of those who are accusing him of cowardice enter the ring and stand up under just one of the dozens of punches Sharkey took to his body. The blows to the solar plexus that Dempsey landed would have stopped any man alive. I know of what I am speaking. Sharkey's a game fighter or he could not have gone as long as he did."

It's impossible to show a lot of fighting spirit when you're badly hurt and dog tired. The spirit is there but the flesh will not respond. It may be that despair did overcome him in the first round when he hit Dempsey with everything he had and failed to drop him, but there was certainly nothing to indicate that it put fear in his heart.

It is more reasonable to assume that Sharkey was the victim of his own inordinate vanity instead of a yellow heart. He had enough courage to ignore the instructions of his corner to box Dempsey and stay away from him. He knew that he might win that way as Tunney won but he feared that he would be charged with bicycle riding.

He had enough courage to go out and swap punches with Dempsey in the hope that he could prove his class and his heart by winning with a quick knockout and he just about did that in the first round.

Sharkey had the heart in the Dempsey fight but he didn't have anything to go with it after the first round and the body punishment Dempsey gave him caved him in.

NATIONAL AMATEUR GOLF

By United Press.

MINNEAPOLIS.—The Minnikahda club, where the national amateur golf championship will be decided the week of August 22, has been combed, brushed, sprinkled and anointed with such unguents as to bring it to perfection for the tournament.

The Minnikahda is an eminently fair course. It has no trick or freak holes, but is so constructed that the golfer who loses a stroke will have a pretty hard time catching up with himself.

Par for the 6,669 yard course is 72, 35 out and 37 in. The longest hole is the par 5 13th—147 yards, the shortest—the par three third—141 yards.

Following is a description of the course:

First hole: Par 4; 326 yards; The fairway is cupped between large bunkers and mounds on the right and left with a steep bank dropping off on the right. The rough is thick on both sides. The green is well trapped and bunkered on all sides.

Second hole: Par 4; 444 yards; This fairway is bounded by rough and out of bounds on the right with bunkers and sand traps on the left. An elevated green is sentinelled by bunkers on all sides, with a very narrow opening in front. The green has been given a permanent wave.

Third hole: Par 3; 141 yards; a tough one. A deep ravine through which flows a tiny creek lies between the tee and the cup. The tee shot must be perfect or the player will go out of bounds or into well-built trap.

Fourth hole: Par 5; 524 yards. The fairway is hilly. A large bunker guards the left side of the face of the hill for the second shot; the green is bounded by traps and hollows. The difficult second shot makes this a tough one.

Fifth hole: Par 4; 309 yards. Wood and bunkers on the right and deep rough on the left bother the golfer on this one. The green is sloping, and approached only through a small cleft.

Sixth hole: Par 3; 195 yards. This one is a mashie shot over Lake Calhoun to a green wallowing in mounds and deep rough.

Seventh hole: Par 3; 455 yards. On the right are woods and the out of bounds; mounds, deep rough and woods guard the left. The elevated green is again amid a dangerous-looking set of bunkers and heavy rough.

Eighth hole: Par 3, 232 yards. The worst one drive hole on the course. The fairway lies between ditches, timber and rough, and the small green is wedged in between long tough grass. The opening leading to the green is 16 feet wide.

Ninth hole: Par 5, 512 yards. Another dogleg. The first long shot is tee-high. The second is uphill. Two terrific line drives will make the green in two. Most golfers don't.

Tenth hole: Par 4, 419 yards. A pretty down hill drive, with large bunkers on both sides of the second shot. A steep, sloping green.

Eleventh hole: Par 3, 177 yards. A fine one shot hole. Giant bunkers line the fairway as it approaches the green. Hollows and sandtraps behind it.

Twelfth hole: Par 4, 384 yards. An undulating hilly fairway, with the second shot uphill and blind. The green slopes sharply to the left.

Thirteenth hole: Par 5, 547 yards. Tough luck for the man without a super drive. Another rolling fairway, with a lone second necessary to clear the creek. The green is double terraced and set in a nest of traps.

Fourteenth hole: Par 5, 473 yards. Sandtraps and rough line this fairway, and there are two bunkers and a hill to catch the second shot.

Fifteenth hole: Par 4, 386 yards. Still another dogleg, lined with bunkers and sandtraps, from the tee to the elevated green.

Sixteenth hole: Par 4, 419 yards. A new elevated tee has been installed, 50 yards back of the old one. The fairway twists around bunkers, traps and mounds. The green is elevated and well trapped.

Seventeenth hole: Par 4, 347 yards. In addition to the usual hazards, a diagonal bunker rolls across the fairway at the left. The green is an island surrounded by woe, and is itself a rolling one, needing a most accurate second shot.

Eighteenth hole: Par 4, 379 yards. With beautiful Lake Calhoun in the background, this is a picturesque hole. A diagonal road winds across the right side of the fairway, and colossal bunkers are on the left. The second shot must be just right or it is short or over.

Over in the bunkhouse the boys of the Bar-C outfit have Kansas City on the radio. In her Park Avenue apartment, the slim fingers of a famous actress turn the dials, and the same music leaps forth. Forty miles north of Milwaukee, Chris Jonsen, the dirt farmer, is listening in on the same wave-length.

The same sort of thing is going on everywhere, all over the country, at all hours of the day and night. Folks in Los Angeles see the same movies and ride in the same automobiles that New Yorkers enjoy. The resident of Seattle wears the same sort of clothes, eats the same brand of bacon and lives in the same kind of house as his neighbor in Portland, Maine.

CHAPTER I

"Good morning, Aunt Flora," Vera Victoria Cameron raised her glass-shed eyes from the morning paper she had been reading as she ate her breakfast, and allowed them to rest with gravity and forbearance upon her pretty but slightly time-worn aunt, who was trailing pink chiffon draperies into the small dining room of the apartment which Mrs. Cartwright shared, because of temporary loneliness, with her young niece.

"Good morning Vee-Vee," Flora Cartwright sighed, laying a delicate, highly manicured hand against her tired blue eyes. "But do you mind if I ask you not to use that brisk, cheerful, business-like voice this morning? It is really more than I can bear, darling. What are you eating? Prunes? Coddled eggs? Whole wheat toast? It is positively amazing to me that you can stand the sight of so much food so early in the morning."

"It is a quarter past eight, Aunt Flora," Vera Cameron began, a flush rising from her throat to her brow, against which that wide brim of hair but uninteresting brown hair lay like a crown of virtue. Behind the sparkling lenses of her horn-rim spectacles her eyes, their color disguised by the amber tint of the glasses, filled with treacherous tears.

"Oh, good heavens, child, spare me!" Flora Cartwright pleaded, then broke into an amused, indulgent chuckle. "I know the whole story. You've been up since seven o'clock. You woke exactly on the dot, sprang right out of bed, did calisthenics for exactly fifteen minutes, took an ice-cold shower, brushed that indecently and unfashionably long brown hair of yours exactly one hundred strokes of a stiff-bristled brush, timed yourself while you plaited it, gave yourself a ten-minute manicure, dressed yourself in what the 'Business Woman's Magazine' prescribes as a suitable costume for the efficient young secretary, made your bed, straightened your room to apple-pie order, cooked your breakfast, and ate it—all on schedule to the half minute. You are a great trial to me, Vee-Vee," she sighed humorously. "But how you made me some good strong coffee and squeeze a couple of oranges into a glass and set it in a bowl of cracked ice for me. I could forgive you anything—even for being the world's most efficient and perfect private secretary—if you did those two things for me."

Vera Cameron's grave, unsmiling mouth twitched in a half-smile as she rose and walked toward the kitchenette. Not even the severe lines of her black serge suit, the skirt of which reached halfway to her modest black silk ankles, could conceal the natural youth and buoyancy and slenderness of her tall body.

"Thank you, darling, Flora Cartwright sighed gratefully, when her niece set coffee and a glass of orange juice before her. "Has the mail come yet? Wild horses couldn't drag me out of bed at this ungodly hour if it were not the first of the month."

"Not yet," Vera answered briefly, her eyes straying again to the morning paper as she raised her cup of tea to her lips.

"I can never make up my mind whether to hate the first of the month or adore it," Flora Cartwright remarked, her voice becoming chatty cheerful as the hot coffee took effect. "The bundle of bills—I'm sure I can't possibly spend as much as the shops charge me with—offset by one long, slim legal envelope with my alimony check in it. Be very sure, my darling, that the man you marry has no conscientious objections to paying alimony. Men are becoming so—so materialistic these days."

"My suitors are not so numerous that I have reached the necessity of classifying them according to whether they will or will not pay alimony," Vera Cameron retorted witheringly. "And I might add that I should never dream of asking alimony if my marriage—purely problematical as that event is—should prove disastrous."

"Oh, my lord!" Flora Cartwright groaned, then laughed a throaty, delicious chuckle. "Do you talk to your boss like that, darling? I should think the poor dear would try to arrange to spend all his time playing golf if you do."

"I certainly don't discuss alimony and my matrimonial prospects with my employer," Vera countered sharply, but her mouth, frequently annoyed by being childish and self-indulgent unless she held it in very firm, trembled betrayingly.

"I was reading the Vee-Vee, to the tones of your voice, the exalted character of your rhetoric, and not to the subject matter of your discourse. I assure you, my dear girl, I'm talking like you! Vee Vee, if you don't reform, you're going to ruin me. I'm such an imitative monkey. Do you know what I said to Peter Darrow last night, the poor darling?"

"I haven't an idea," Vera said, setting her tea cup down with a clatter. "But I do think you ought to be ashamed of yourself for getting that infant into such a state about you that he hangs around here every night in the week."

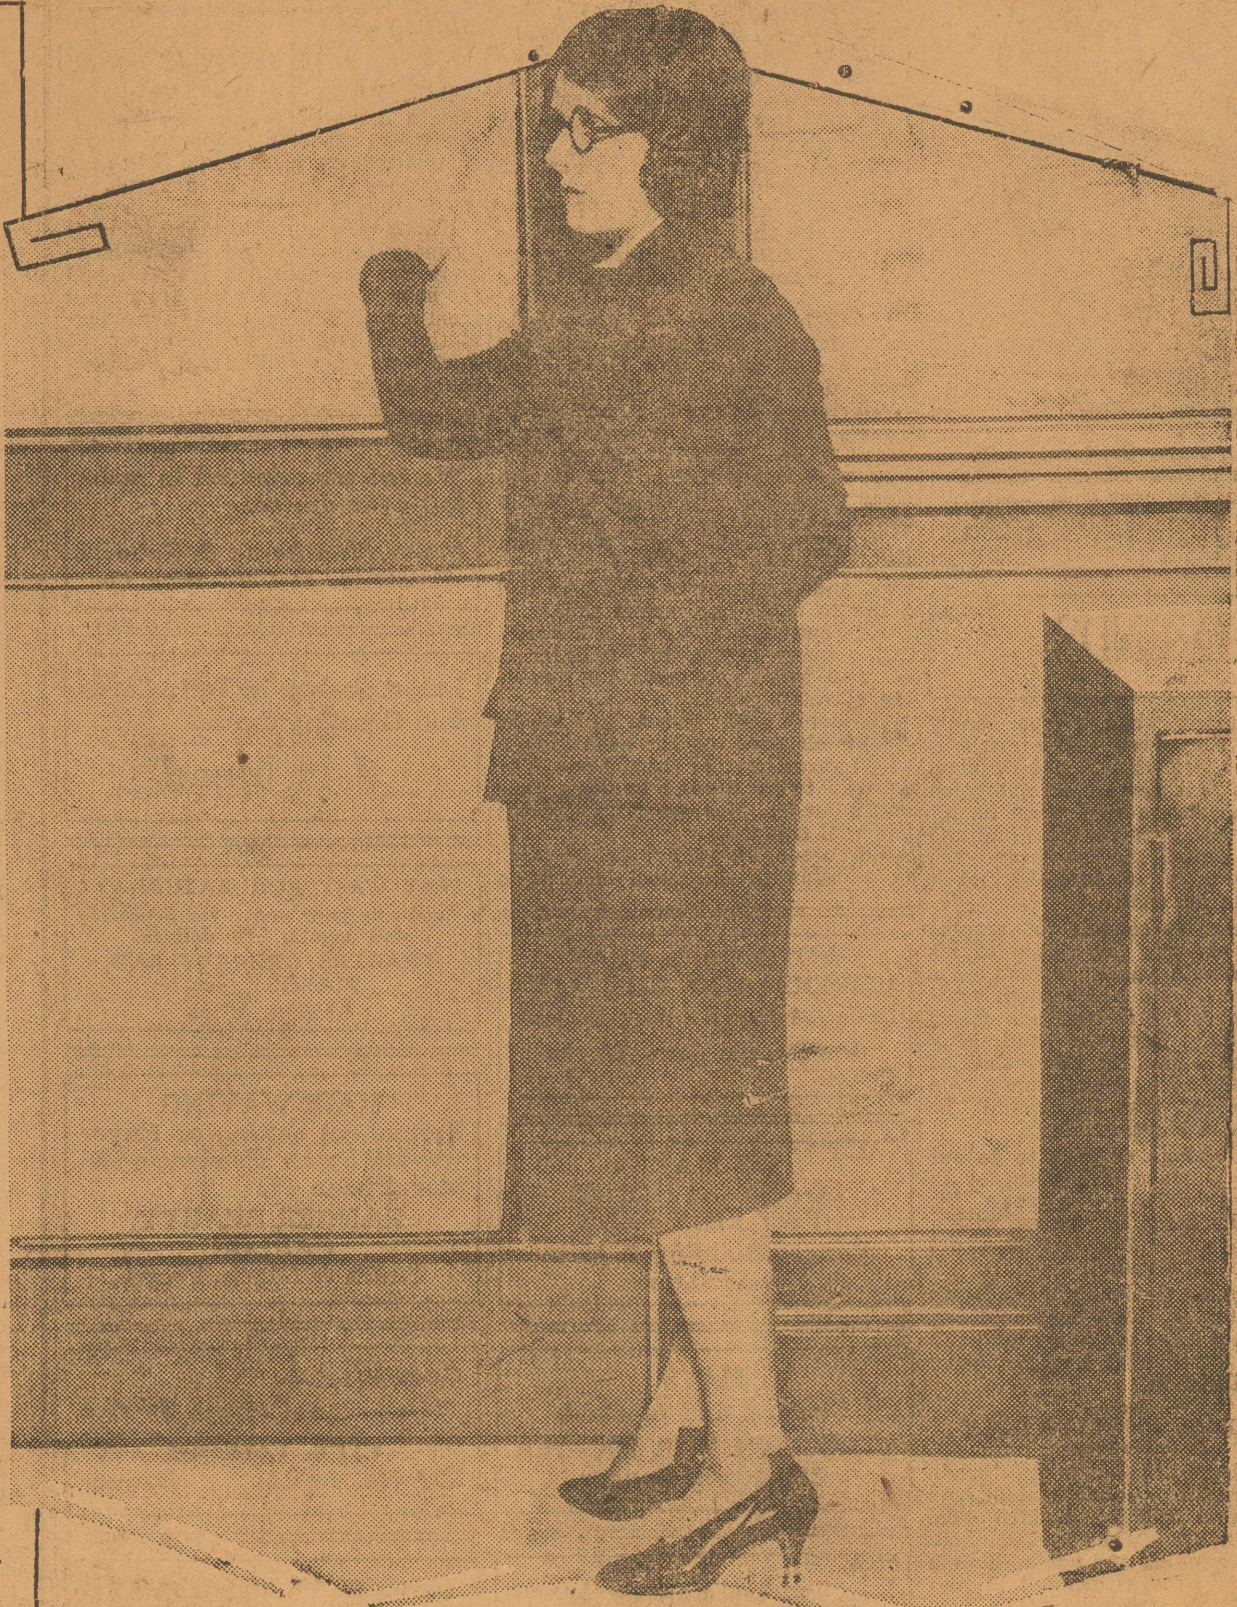

"You exaggerate, dearest," Flora Cartwright grinned at her, her delicate little hand patting the deep, flat mare's wave in her tinted bobbed hair. "He isn't here every night. Husband number two insists on two evenings a week. If he hadn't been such an awfully poor sport about alimony I'd marry him again. But let me tell you what I said to Peter, the poor dear."

"There's the postman's ring," Vera interrupted, rising hastily from the table. "I'll bring you your mail, but I'll have to run then, or I'll be late at the office."

When Vera returned with the mail, she carried her black felt hat and her dull-kid black leather handbag and a well-filled brief case in her hands.

"Did my alimony check come?" Flora demanded eagerly. "Oh, thank the god of widows and orphans! Toss

With a strange new hope in her heart she lifted her hand to knock on the door beyond which Jerry Macklyn was no doubt awaiting her impatiently.

those bills to the sideboard, darling. I don't want to spoil my hour of gloating by the sight of them. Nicky isn't such a bad old scout, is he? I wonder if he's happy with that new wife of his? She's a red-head, I hear. Poor Nicky!" she signed affectionately, as her pretty fingers tore at the long legal envelope. "It's dated April 29!" she commented, as she scanned the check. "April 29! That's an anniversary of mine, I'm almost positive! Let's see—did I marry Nicky on April 29 or was it Leon? When a woman has been married four times, oh, must you go, darling? Will you be home for dinner?"

"Why do you ask?" Vera demanded bitterly. "Of course I shall be home for dinner unless I eat at the Automat alone! But if you're going out—"

"Peter wants me to dine with him, go to a theatre, then to a night club!" her aunt admitted, sighing a little from last night's weariness, but there was a tender smile on her lips—lips that her niece had never seen without rouge. "Bring home one of the young men from the office and go out with us, darling. It would do you good."

"I'm afraid my employers wouldn't agree with you that it does a secretary good to dance till all hours of the night," Vera retorted, but her aunt understood the blush that swept over Vera's sooth, freckled cheeks to which rouge was a stranger. If Vera could conceivably so far forget herself as to ask one of her fellow workers to spend an evening with her, he would almost certainly refuse the invitation.

"Besides," Vera added, "I have every hope of stepping into a promotion today. Gladys Holmes, who has been secretary to Mr. Canfield, the president, for more than a year, left Saturday to be married, and I expect to get her position. The job pays fifty a week, ten more than I'm getting now."

"You say her name was Gladys?" Mrs. Cartwright mused. "Was she a lady sort of person, dear? A cuddly little blond, perhaps?"

"She is very pretty—chestnut hair and blue eyes," Vera admitted. "But I don't see what that has to do with it."

"Don't you, darling? I'm afraid you may find out. But don't mind me. After all, I'm only a pretty parasite, as you've so often reminded me, dear—a shameless, useless creature who has buried two husbands and divorced two others. I hope you get the job, and that you spend the extra ten a week on peach-colored silk underwear for the good of your soul."

"You know I'm trying to save money—" Vera began resentfully, but her eyes betrayed her for an instant by becoming misty.

"And succeeding nobly," her aunt reminded her, laughing. "You must have at least three thousand dollars saved toward your retirement to the old ladies' home, and you're still only twenty-four years old. My dear, when I was twenty-four I had buried my first husband and divorced my second—and was engaged to my third, if memory serves me rightly. And I was handicapped by this horrible little nose—" she tapped the maligned feature with a scornful forefinger. "If I had had a nose like yours, that is absolutely wasted on you, because you refuse to make the most of it—"

"Oh, you quit picking on me, Aunt Flora!"

"And your mouth, if you'd listen to reason and put just a tiny touch of lip rouge on it, would be absolutely the most kissable I've ever seen—" her aunt's laughing drawl followed the girl as she fled from the dining room.

Vera Cameron ran gracefully and fleetly across Riverside Drive, swung to the steps of a great lumbering green bus, climbed up the winding staircase and found a seat beside a young man, who glanced up hopefully from his paper.

There was no reason, Vera told herself angrily, why she should blanch like an idiotic school girl or like a sex-starved old maid, just because an anemic youth who probably made less than she did dropped his seeking eyes hastily to his newspaper. If he had dared to try to flirt with her she would have squelched him. But would she? She was startled at the question which elapsed its impudent way through the well-trained grooves of her mind. Anyone would think she was repulsive, the way that odious young man had looked her over and declined her—

But she sighed and settled back into her seat resignedly—she did have to wear glasses, and she was freckle-faced, and her hair was mossy. So the only thing left for her to do was to be the best efficient secretary in the Peach Bloom Cosmetics Company's offices. Ever since she had graduated from business college, when she was nineteen, she had devoted herself with deep seriousness to making herself a business success. She held positions in three companies, had started work at fifteen dollars a week and was now getting forty. Today she would be promoted to fifty a week.

From fifteen to fifty dollars a week in five years had not been easy, and she had not always been happy, but she was succeeding. She had taken business so very seriously. She had been a member of a business woman's club for four years, had subscribed to all the business women's magazines and to all the other magazines which were designed to fit earnest young workers for bigger and better things.

She had been taking an extension course in chemistry, the better to understand the business of the Peach Bloom Cosmetics Company. She had watched her health, knowing that health meant efficiency. She walked the prescribed hour a day, did setting-up exercises night and morning with religious regularity, ate foods that contained the largest percentage of vitamins, went to bed early and rose early. She had repressed her desires for pretty and fashionable clothes with the sternness of a nun and had dressed according to the laws laid down by the business women's magazine. She did not waste her time at the office in gossip and in making up her face in the girls' rest room. She did not watch the clock, thought nothing of working overtime, had the interest of her firm at heart always—

A pair of large, round tears welling out of her eyes and slipped down her cheeks. The moisture misted her glasses, so that she had to fumble helplessly for a handkerchief. What in the world was the matter with her? Was she getting an attack of spring fever? She had learned to hate did not even pat the smooth, flat spring—the season of gay, flattery dresses, which the other girls shamelessly wore to the office, the season of sweethearts, cooing at each other on the green iron benches all up and down Riverside Drive park.

She had never had a real sweetheart. Calvin Trumble, who had wanted a "helpmeet" who could earn more than her half of the expenses, didn't count, neither did Aunt Flora's discarded suitor, middle-aged Mr. Perdue, who had talked pathetically of his broken heart and his motherless little children. How did Aunt Flora do it? She had had four husbands, could marry again tomorrow if she wanted to. And Aunt Flora was useless, a spendthrift, a pleasure-mad, vain woman.

She—Vera Victoria Cameron—was certainly an old-fashioned girl, if it was old-fashioned not to expose her knees and bob her hair and paint like a chorus girl and pet like a demimondaine. And yet—men did not "prefer" her, and she was lonely, for all her success, and tears were slipping uncontrollably down her cheeks. If only Aunt Flora would let her alone—stop "flirting" her, let her be herself in peace—

When she entered the foyer of the twenty-four story office building where the Peach Bloom Cosmetics Company occupied an entire floor—the factory was in Jersey—she was again the brisk, business-like young private secretary. A pleasant excitement routed her depression. She was glad her new, smartly tailored black cloth suit had arrived in time for this auspicious day. A glance in the mirror in the elevator told her that the white silk blouse, with its pleated cuffs and its high collar and frilled fichu, was exactly the right thing for the suit. It made her look well-dressed, efficient but not masculine. And the hand-sewn black felt hat looked the eighteen-fifty she had reluctantly paid for it. Mr. Canfield would recognize her eminent fitness for the dignified position of secretary to the president, Gladys Holmes had, that last week, worn powder blue silk crepe, with long tasseled sleeves that must have annoyed Mr. Canfield with their fluttering. And Gladys had chuckled about the offices on absurd, three-inch French heels. The dimples in her shamelessly exposed knees must have been disgusting to a business man like Mr. Canfield.

She went briskly to her office, a little cubicle outside the private office of the sales manager, opened her desk, arranged notebook and pencils ready for a call from her boss when ever he happened to stroll in—late as usual on Mondays, filed a basket of correspondence which she had answered on Saturday, and was, at ten o'clock, making a careful graphic representation of a sales report on business for the month of March when an office boy skidded into the room.

"The old man wants to see you, Miss Cameron," he grunted at her. He was probably the only human being connected with the entire office that did not feel any awe at all of Miss V. V. Cameron.

"Any other girl in the world would powdered her nose before obeying that summons. Vera rose instantly, did not even pat the smooth, flat braids of her brown hair, for she knew that they lay in immaculate order against her brow and over her small ears. She was guilty of one evidence of vanity, however. She took from her hanger the severe little jacket to her new suit, buttoned it snugly over the white silk blouse, arranged collar and cuffs with quick, deft fingers and then walked briskly but unhurriedly down the long corridor to the door marked "Mr. Canfield." As she entered the secretary's office, she cast an appraising and possessive glance at the big mahogany desk which would now be hers. A thick oriental rug lay suavely on the floor. Oh, it would be nice to be mistress of this pleasant place, nice to have the other girls envious, respectful—

She tapped, with fingers slightly cold with nervousness, upon the door labeled "Private." As she opened the door to Mr. Canfield's loud bellow of invitation, a girl almost collided with her, a girl leaving Mr. Canfield's private office with an open notebook in her hand.

"Then why—" Vera interrupted him indignantly.

"Miss Cameron, I'm an old man and I don't want to work as hard as you would make me work," the president of the Peach Bloom Cosmetics Company leaned back in his chair, which creaked under his weight, and regarded her humorously. "Benham warned me about you, said you were a regular slave-driver of a private secretary. Now, listen to me, young lady, you've made a kick, a perfectly legitimate kick, so far as you are concerned, and you have a right to know my reasons for giving the best job from the standpoint of money and dignity, that the concern has to give a stenographer, to a girl that you do no doubt consider incompetent and ridiculously unsuitable."

He paused and Vera knotted her hands tightly in her lap.

"In president of the company, as you know, Miss Cameron, but I don't do a whole lot of work. Got plenty of high-powered executives to do the drudgery for me. Sometimes I don't dictate a dozen letters a day. Most of my appointments are with the big buyers, for social purposes only. I leave the business interviews with Benham and his boys. Why, girl, I couldn't possibly keep a human eye on like you busy and contented. You'd be slaming me into doing a lot of meddling with department heads just to keep me busy, so I could keep you busy. As I said, I'm getting to be an old man—and by the way you did not contradict me, as little Rosemary Fitch would have done—" he grinned at her.

She gasped, started to speak, but Canfield waved a broad, fat hand at her.

"Just one of the duties of my private secretary," he chuckled. "You see that you wouldn't suit at all. I play golf a lot, and I like to have an adoring young audience sit in that chair and ooh and ah when I tell how I went around the course in par. Now I wouldn't dare take up your time telling you how I made the beastly fifth hole in two, or about the party I'd been on the night before with a buyer or how extravagant my daughters are, or lay a bet with you on how a detective story serial was coming out. Don't misunderstand me."

"Of course, I want a secretary who can write an intelligible letter and who won't ball up my appointments for me and one who can make hotel and Pullman reservations without being told. But Miss Fitch has brains enough to do all those things and you're human enough to humiliate an old man and make him feel like a great big congerine hero every minute he's fiddling around on the job. Do you get my point?"

"Why did you send for me, Mr. Canfield? To humiliate me?" Vera rose, trembling so that she could hardly stand.

"Whoa there, child! Don't fly off the handle! But damned if it doesn't make you attractive, to get all flushed up like that. I sent for you because I have a new job for you, one that you'll simply eat up. You're going to be much happier with Jerry Macklyn than you could possibly have been with me—"

"Jerry Macklyn?" Vera was guilty of interrupting her employer again.

"The new advertising manager. Starts to work this morning. He's another demon for work, and the biggest advertising genius in New York. Peach Bloom is simply rotten with luck to get him. You're to be his assistant, or rather, one of his assistants, in addition to being his secretary. Don't think I haven't appreciated you, Miss Cameron. So does Benham. He's done more work with you to nag him than he ever turned out before in his life. I'm afraid sales are going to fall off when you take yours' out of his office. But Benham says he'll give you a $500 bonus for the month of the year. You'll like Macklyn. In fact, he asked for you—"

"Asked for me?" Vera repeated. "Not by name," Canfield disappointed her by saying, "but he asked for the smartest girl in the organization, the girl who knew most about Peach Bloom Cosmetics and the business in general. Benham and I both agreed that he meant you and no one else."

"Thank you, Mr. Canfield," Vera stammered. "D o I report to him this morning?" Her voice was eager, girlish, her adorable mouth flashed a wide smile at the shrewdly observing old man opposite her.

"Sure you do. He's waiting for you. He has Stafford's office, of course. And by the way, the job carries fifty a week, the same as Miss Fitch will get. Feeling better?" He added in a kindly voice, unlike his usually hearty boom.

"Shall I—shall I be allowed to write advertising copy too?" Vera quavered faintly. "I've been taking an advertising course at Columbia two evenings a week, as well as an extension course in chemistry—"

Canfield's laugh boomed out. "I'd have bet that you had," he assured her, but his eyes were very kind. "Sure you'll be allowed to try your hand at copy-writing—booklets, things of that sort. Now, run along and don't think too harshly of the old man."

Vera could have kissed him—but she merely thrust out a cold, timid hand. She almost ran from the office, did not cast a single envious glance at Rosemary Fitch, who was applying lipstick.

Jerry Macklyn! Jerry Macklyn! Jerry! He had asked for her. What if he didn't know her personally? He knew the kind of person she was, had wanted her above all others. Oh, it did pay to study and work hard—What a nice name he had! Jerry Macklyn! Would he be a Jerry sort of person, as Aunt Flora would say? Maybe—She paused outside the door which was still labeled "Mr. Stafford," in honor of Jerry Macklyn's predecessor, and for a moment she thought wildly of rushing back down the corridor to Rosemary Fitch's office, to ask her for the loan of her powder compact and her lipstick. But she knew that she couldn't do that—lay herself open to ridicule, have Rosemary Fitch giggling about her in the rest room—

With head high, and a strange new hope in her heart, she lifted her hand to knock on the inner door beyond which Jerry Macklyn was no doubt awaiting her impatiently.

You Hate to Look At a Pimply Face

There is perhaps nothing more distressing to people who are bothered with them, and surely nothing as displeasing to others who see them, as pimples, blotches, bumps, rash, scrofula, eczema, "breaking out" and similar skin ailments.

But now that Black and White Ointment and Skin Soap, are proving to be so dependable in quickly getting rid of these diseases of the skin, it seems foolish for people to neglect using them and making themselves attractive to others instead of being slighted all the time.

All dealers have Black and White Ointment and Skin Soap, in the convenient, low-priced, liberal packages. The 50c size Ointment contains three times as much as the liberal 25c size.

Construction Of Cheese Factory At Goldthwaite

GOLDTHWAITE, Aug. 17.—The first unit of a series of contemplated cheese factories to be established over Texas is under construction here. Ground has already been broken on the factory site, which was donated by the city, and work is being rushed to completion.

The plant is being built by the Texas Cheese and Butter company, Fort Worth, at the cost of $4,500. The factory will perform all the operations necessary for making common cheese, except the curing process which requires 90 days and which will be done at a central storage plant at Brownwood.

The project is expected to be worth millions of dollars to stock farmers of Mills county. The section is already on the road to successful diversification, and with a cheese factory located here, it is thought more attention than ever before will be devoted to dairying. The plant will be in operation within from forty to sixty days.

FORT WORTH WILL HAVE BUILDING PERMIT CHARGE

By United Press.
FORT WORTH, Texas, Aug. 17.—Expense of enforcing the new building code, soon to be adopted by Fort Worth, will be provided by a fee charged for building permits, according to City Manager Carr.

Carr estimates that $15,000 will be needed annually to enforce the more elaborate system of inspection which the new code requires. A building commissioner will be appointed and several inspectors will be employed to aid him.

THEATRE GOSSIP

The stars of the screen are very much on the move these days. Mayor Will Rogers, Beverly Hills, Cal., is heading a delegation aboard three special cars on its way to Washington for filming the exteriors of "A Texas Steer," in which the former lariat thrower of the Follies is star. It will be a First National picture. The train will arrive in Washington Aug. 26, stopping at Salt Lake City, Denver, Kansas City, Omaha, St. Louis, Indianapolis, Chicago, Columbus, Wheeling, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and New York City.

The Duncan Sisters, who made a successful invasion of New York in 1923, come here to make a success of "Topsy and Eva" after it had taken hold successfully in Chicago. They have arrived here, this time to help make successful the screen version of the same piece. Their screen work, which is shown along with personal appearances of the two sisters, opened Aug. 6 at the Rivoli Theatre, under the banner of United Artists.

Reginald Denny, Universal star, also is traveling here and Mrs. Denny having begun a vacation trip to Europe.

The number of members of the Board of Decision of the Laemmle award was increased by Carl Laemmle just before he sailed for Europe recently. It now includes: Karl A. Bickel, president of the United Press; Kent Cooper, general manager of the Associated Press; M. Koenigsberg, head of the International News Service; Dr. Roland Schacht, German author; Jean Sapene, publisher of Le Matin; Arthur H. Kirchdorfer, president of the National Press Club and James R. Quirk, editor of Photoplay Magazine. Annual prizes totaling $5,000 will be awarded for construction ideas and suggestions for advancement of quality and usefulness of motion pictures.

There is hope for the handsome young shoe salesman, soda dispensers and farm hands who feel they should be shining on the movie screen. Doug Fairbanks, as a youth, wasted his gymnastic genius in the prosaic job of a Wall Street clerk. That was in the early 100's, at about the time that John Barrymore was sitting in the corner of the New York Journal office, making mediocre newspaper illustrations.

And that illustrious duo are only two of the score of filmland's famous who earned their early livelihood in holes far removed from the screen, according to a story in the Photoplay Magazine's September issue.

It reveals that William Boyd, that doughy figure of the war films, working in the California orange groves, and again as a grocer's clerk, before he got his chance at Hollywood. Lloyd Hughes, before he got around to driving racy roadsters, drove a delivery cart for a butcher shop.

Monte Blue was a theatre carpenter before he won his way to stardom.

John Gilbert sold automobile tires, Adolphe Menjou, although college educated, did a turn as gardener on the Astor estate. William Haines sold bonds before a "handsome man" contest landed him in the movies.

Lon Chaney, the versatile gentleman who can become a Zulu chieftain or a Yule log on ten minutes' notice, learned the art of make-up while serving a long apprenticeship as a stage-hand, the article discloses.

Childress County Dairy Farmers Are Planting Sudan

CHILDRESS, Aug. 17.—Idle pastures are being converted into Sudan grass fields for milk profits in Childress county. Dairy farmers of this region have learned that one acre of sudan grass equals about 20 acres of native grass as a milk producing food, and are sowing the plant to make their pasture yield the greatest return.

At the present time it is being planted in rows and cultivated twice during the growing season. The increase in sudan acreage here is concurrent with the impetus given to dairying in this region.

Seven Tons of Piano Playing

Moissaye Boguslawski, Chicago pianist, got to wondering recently how much energy he used in playing a piece of music. So he got out a set of scales to test the force of his fingers' blows on the keyboard. He found that in the four minutes it took him to play Rubenstein's "Staccato Etude" he exerted force of 14,700 pounds.

Sacred Opera To Be Feature At Abilene Fair

ABILENE, August 17.—Presentation of a sacred grand opera, "The Prodigal Son" with the principal roles being sung by noted operatic stars, assisted by a highly trained chorus and interpretative ballet on Sunday, September 25 in the magnificent new auditorium at the West Texas fair park this city, will mark the opening here of a week's engagement for the famous Thaviv band and grand opera pageant.

This famous organization, winner of grand prize at the panama-Pacific exposition at San Francisco and also at the Sesqui-centennial exposition at Philadelphia is being brought to West Texas this year for the first time and will be presented twice daily during the West Texas fair.

During fair week Thaviv will give regular band concerts and in addition will give whole scenes from grand opera, mounted and produced with elaborate stage settings and beautiful costumes. A snappy musical revue and a wonderful male quartet are other adjuncts of his organization.

Acknowledged as having the outstanding organization of its kind in the country, Thaviv will bring to Abilene and West Texas people the greatest musical entertainment ever made available in this section.

In engaging Thaviv and his organization for the fair, directors of that institution feel they have been signally successful in their efforts to give West Texas people an entertainment feature different and better than anything ever offered before.

Programs given by this producer are so arranged as to appeal to everyone, matters not what the individual preference in music and drama may be. Grand opera, jazz, present day popular numbers, ballets and male quartets will be mingled for each performance.

ERATH COUNTY FIGHTS PREDATORY ANIMALS

By United Press.
STEPHENVILLE, Aug. 17.—Efforts are being made to organize Erath county for concerted action in ridding the section of predatory animals that prey upon sheep, goats, turkeys and chickens here. Representatives of the United States department of agriculture and bureau of biology have been in Stephenville conferring with business men and farmers in regard to this work.

Junior College To Get Athletic Team This Fall

An athletic program for the Ranger junior college will be worked out, Prof. R. P. Holloway, superintendent of the Ranger public schools and head of the Ranger junior college stated today and incidentally added that since it was decided to establish athletics in the college interest in the coming year's junior college program has increased.

A coach will be provided and a number of boys who were on the Bulldog team last year, have signified their desire to see the school have a good athletic team this year and some of them are going to work mighty hard to make it the best junior college team in this section.

A meeting of the athletes who will probably form this team will be held in a few days, Prof. Holloway announced.

C. C. HOSPITAL BOARD MET MONDAY NIGHT

Every West Texas town will be asked to send as representatives its mayor, newspaper editors and one young lady. These will be included in the reception committee that will greet "Lindy" when he lands at Kinsolving field, Abilene's municipal airport.

Each of the feminine members of the reception committee will be asked to dress in red, white and blue, the national colors and incidentally the colors of the air mail service, of which Lindbergh is a graduate.

West Texans will not only get to see the young aviator and his ship, "The Spirit of St. Louis," but in addition, the distinguished visitor will be introduced to a number of West Texas celebrities and to the "Spirits" of the different towns of this section. Each of the young lady sponsors will represent the "Spirit" of her home town and as such will participate in a spectacular pageant that will be given during the day of "Lindy's" visit here at the West Texas fair grandstand.

Comanche Farmer Gets $90 Per Acre From Grape Land

Special Correspondence. COMANCHE, Aug. 17.—An acreage set almost solid in Johnson grass, and which had seen no cultivation for three years in succession, is now producing $90 worth of grapes to an acre for a Comanche county farmer.

In August, 1926, J. B. Alcorn, with a handful of cuttings and a heart full of hope, set the vines which were to become the basic stock of his vineyard, five miles east of Comanche. By the spring of 1926, he had 4,000 vines on 14 acres of land. Today those vines are well fruited with grapes and promise at least 50 bushels per acre in yield. Four hundred and fifty bushels in orders have already been booked, and daily inquiries from buyers are received in addition.

Surprise!

Calvin H. Goldard, New York firearms expert, who created a stir by his report to Governor Fuler's Sacco-Vanzetti committee. He's shown here using his special microscope apparatus on one of the murder bullets, which he said was fired from Sacco's revolver.

Borah Fishes and Says Nothing

While presidential bees are starting to buzz in the bonnets of a number of prominent statesmen, Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, himself often mentioned as a possible candidate, fishes for brook trout in the mountain streams of his home state and says nothing. He's shown here landing a beauty—although it is not known whether he used worms or flies.

NEGRO FOLK SONGS NEVER HEARD BEFORE WILL BE SUNG AT MEET

By United Press. DENVER.—Strident melodies and insistent rhythms of the Congo, softened through a long evolution wrought by years of chanting in the back woods of the southern United States, will be heard in Denver, Sept. 7-14.

The occasion will be the National Baptists' convention of America which will bring approximately 3,000 negro church leaders to the city. A series of concerts, made up wholly of negro songs, will comprise one of the principal features of the meeting.

Songs hitherto unknown outside the isolated groups worshipping in little pine churches on the edges of Alabama's swamps, in the depths of Arkansas' forests, and in the midst of Georgia's cotton fields, will be sung for the first time before a representative audience.

CORRAL! Corral! That was the terrible warning cry of the days of '49. Then—thundering hoofs, the wild rush of yelling, painted red men, as round and round sweeps the fiery, bullet-swept circle of death. It's one of a hundred breathless thrills in the greatest romance of them all.
