EASTLAND TO HAVE THREE DAYS AGRICULTURAL FAIR THIS FALL

TO BE HELD IN BUSINESS SECTION OF CITY

Agriculture Will Be Stressed, But Other Features Will Be Had

In order to assist in developing the general agricultural interests of Eastland county, and to encourage the work of the county agricultural agents, especially in their clubs, the Eastland Chamber of Commerce has decided to hold a three days fair, September 22-24. This show, will for this year, take the place of the Central West Texas Fair due to the fact that leases on the fair grounds heretofore used, have expired and could not be renewed.

A unique plan has been worked out, so that the fair will be held in the business district. The merchants have generously donated the use of their windows, so the exhibits will thus become the show window of Eastland county.

An educational agricultural program is being arranged, and several prominent speakers are being invited to attend the fair and give addresses. Ten communities over the county will hold community fairs just previous to the county fair and it is expected that each of these communities will bring a fine exhibition which good premiums will be offered. The work of the Boys and Girls, as well as the Womens Clubs will be shown. And there will be premiums offered for other agricultural lines.

In addition to the agricultural program to be put on, there will be a football game between Eastland and Gorman high schools. Plans are being perfected to hold Boy Scout maneuvers, as well as an exhibition contest among the Boy Scouts. Other entertainment will be provided, to be announced later.

It is believed that the plan in mind will give the people of Eastland county something that is different from the ordinary fair, and will attract considerable attention in this section.

International Highway Meet Be Held at El Paso

Special Correspondence.
EL PASO, Aug. 25.—An international highway conference may be held here Sept. 24, the occasion of Col. Lindbergh's visit to the border city, if invitations extended by the West Texas Chamber of Commerce to officials of New Mexico, Texas, and the republic of Old Mexico are accepted.

Both the Texas and New Mexico highway commissions have endorsed previously the proposal made by the West Texas Chamber of Commerce of holding a joint road meeting, and Manager Homer D. Wade of the regional organization has written this week suggesting the date of Sept. 24 and the place of El Paso. The fact that the date proposed is the occasion of the Lone Eagle's visit to the border city will assure a full attendance, it is thought.

Governor Fernando Orozco of Chihuahua, Mexico, Governor Dillon of New Mexico, Governor Dan Moody of Texas, W. C. Davidson, Santa Fe, state highway engineer of New Mexico, the Texas highway commission, were formally invited to attend the conference early this week, and favorable responses are expected within the next 10 days.

The prime purpose of the international road meeting as announced by the West Texas Chamber of Commerce is to co-ordinate better highways that lead from West Texas and the republic of Old Mexico, and New Mexico, while, secondarily, it is believed that much good will result from the congregation of officials from the three points.

Lindy's View of the County Fair

THE SOUTH

Prosperity of the nation must be synchronized by the prosperity of all its sections. The east, the north, the west have utilized their natural resources and built their industries to empires. Many of us not yet in the serene and yellow remember the days when the industry of the south was represented chiefly by cotton and tobacco; and in 1870 the total capital invested in manufacturing in this section was something like $150,000,000.

But today we see a different south—a new south growing greater day by day and year by year, steadily, substantially, through the renaissance of industry that set about in 1900 and received great impetus following the world war.

Figures are not always good hot weather reading, but here are just a few that will illustrate the great expansion of the south.

In the 30 years from 1870 to 1900 the south, mostly through its natural increase in cotton and tobacco, but with the addition of new industries close to natural resources, developed its capital invested in manufacturing to $1,196,002,036 with an output valued at $1,664,183,490. In the same year the total capital invested in manufacturing in the United States was $8,975,256,496 with products valued at $11,406,926,701. The south had grown to 13 per cent of the invested manufacturing capital of the country with a like percentage of products. In 1922 the south had $6,883,171,000 capital invested in manufacturing and $9,805,041,000 in products, while the whole country the same year had $44,688,094,000 capital invested in manufacturing and $62,418,079,000 in products. The south had grown to 15 per cent of the nation's invested manufacturing capital and produced 15 per cent of the nation's products.

Today, of the 290,000 manufacturing plants in the entire country, approximately 70,000 or 24 per cent are located in the south, and the production is a little more than 15 per cent of the nation's total.

Dixie, reborn, is utilizing all its natural resources, not only the raw products in field and forest, but is drawing on nature's own motive powers for transforming those resources into finished products. She is using her mines of iron, copper, phosphate, aluminum, coal, quarries of stone and marble, oil wells, forests for furniture, cotton and tobacco and the yields of the waters.

Manufacturing Dixie has become a going, vital part of the manufacturing United States. Her tribulations and her progress are a part of the tribulations and progress of the entire country and that is one of the reasons why the National Association of Manufacturers is holding its next convention in October in the south at Chattanooga. And because of the tremendous expansion of the south, of its place in the industrial structure of the country, the south has invited President Coolidge to come and see it and talk to it.

Not only the manufacturers of the south, but the manufacturers of the whole nation will be represented and it is believed no more fitting occasion could present itself for the presidential attendance. He has given business great consideration and attention; he has seen the east, the north and west. He now should give the south the same consideration.

New Swimming Pool At Ranger Will Open Today

Promptly at 5 o'clock this afternoon the Ranger High school band will play "Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here" at Ranger's new "swimming hole," The Willows.

At the signal given by the opening notes of the orchestra, Ranger's latest civic improvement will be thrown open to the public who are expected to literally "dive in" to the pure waters of the new concrete swimming pool. All morning streams of pure water flowed into the great pool, as dozens of spectators stood on the shady banks and waited for it to be filled up. It was as clear as crystal and the bottom could be clearly seen through its transparent depths.

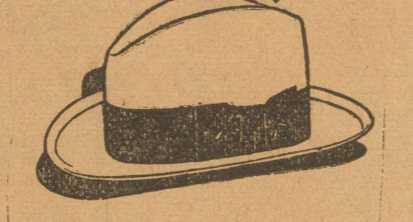

At no time in the day, except at high noon, will swimming be impossible, as the water is shaded practically all day by the willows and other trees that gracefully adorn the embankment.

Trees in the large park surrounding the pool have all had their trunks painted white, the park has been cleared of underbrush and makes a wonderful playground and picnic place. The bath houses are spacious and well equipped and every care will be taken to safeguard the sanitation of the pool, and the park.

The initial cost of the Willows runs around $6,000 and it is expected that before another season opens up much more will have been spent on making it more beautiful. The band will play all this evening and the public is extended a most cordial invitation to visit the new playground and enjoy its privileges.

Cheer up, everybody, and look forward to the holidays. Christmas and New Year's Day both fall on Sunday this year.

According to Swift, one of the young men approached him, complaining that at some time in the past Swift had arrested him. He apparently wanted to make it plain that he didn't intend to be arrested again. He was said to have been brandishing a knife. He was joined by another man and the two advanced on the officer who drew his gun and used it as a club on the man with the knife.

The other fled but was caught by Patrolman Davis, who came to Swift's aid. The young men live in Breckenridge but are said to be well known in Ranger.

Von Zuben Will Direct Work Of Ranger Paving

At a meeting of the City Commission of Ranger yesterday afternoon F. J. Von Zuben, consulting engineer of Fort Worth, was awarded the contract as engineer for Ranger's paving contract on a 4 1/2 per cent of the contract basis. On a petition signed by J. E. Moroney, Guy Mayo, M. Bronstein, F. N. Hassen, Mrs. Leena Thompson, L. C. C. Buchanan, Ed Myers and W. L. Terry the three blocks on Mesquite street lying between south Marston and the Bankhead highway were designated to be included in the paving program. This makes a total of 48 blocks that have been designated up to date.

The selection of Von Zuben as engineer came as a sequel to a long session of the commission on Tuesday night, which was continued over until yesterday afternoon. Three other engineers were seeking the contract but on account of Von Zuben having been consulting engineer for twenty years in Fort Worth, his proximity to Ranger and general qualification, he was finally awarded the contract. The final contract for the signatures of the commission and the engineer is to be submitted to the commission as soon as it is completed, the engineer will then get the work in shape for assessments and bids for the paving contract.

MOSCOW—Eighteen bandits were sentenced to death and executed and prison sentences of varying lengths were meted out to 28 others, as a result of a roundup in the town of Bierdilie, in the Ukraine. They had carried on banditry for a year and had killed a police chief and a constable, as well as a score of citizens.

Youth's Greatest Charm for Women

The greatest charm of womanhood is that youthful vivaciousness and buoyancy of spirit which comes with good health; and there is no reason nowadays why every girl or woman shouldn't have this charm.

Thousands of them who found themselves growing weak and listless are now using St. Joseph's G. F. P. to build them up and strengthen them.

How well satisfied these girls are with this vegetable compound is best shown by the words of Miss Fondtella Early, which are typical of those of girls and women everywhere who are using St. Joseph's G. F. P.

Miss Early, who lives at 1600 Hauger St., Little Rock, Ark., says, "Now I'm on my seventh bottle of G. F. P., I feel just wonderful and never miss a day from school. I am always going and having a good time. I want every girl to know about this medicine."

Women have used St. Joseph's G.F.P. for over 50 years!

BLAMES WOMEN FOR WARS

By United Press.

NEW YORK.—Women thus far have utterly failed as world peace makers and to the contrary have been responsible for many of the world's greatest wars, says the Woman's Home Companion for September in an article headed "Women as War Makers."

"Most of the real work for permanent peace is still being done by men," continues the article, "and the movements should have the strongest support and inspiring leadership from the mothers of the nation. The statement that women have hitherto failed as peacemakers should be repeated again and again."

"There is bitter truth in the recent statement of the great leader of women, Carrie Chapman Catt, that women have caused more irritation among nations than any other influence which has resulted in history's great wars. Mrs. Catt attributes this to the tendency of women throughout the world to repeat in exaggerated form statements of men in regard to matters of race hatred and other phases of foreign policy which might make two countries spring at each other's throat."

Three Charges Are Filed Following Fight at Spring

Charges for assault have been filed in Justice J. N. McFatter's court, Ranger, against W. J. Cook, J. O. Chester and T. A. Chester, young son of the elder Chester, all of Ranger. The charges grew out of an affray that occurred last night at a spring northwest of Mirror Lake.

According to information obtained this morning at the justice of the peace office the two older men met at the spring which it seems has been a bone of contention between the two for some time, and an altercation followed in which the three participated.

Chester was cut in several places and a physician was needed to sew up his wounds. He is home in bed and a warrant has been issued for him. His wounds are not considered dangerous.

Cook has been arrested and put under $300 bond. Both families live in the area north west of Mirror Lake.

PEKIN.—A second two-month prolongation of the Sino-French treaty relative to Annam has been decided upon by the Cabinet here. Negotiations are under way for a new pact.

Motherless Baby Has Been Adopted By Ranger Couple

While the Times does not want to take all of the glory attached to a little motherless boy getting a good home and a mother and father, it is happy to know that it at least has a "finger in the pie."

A mother died a few months ago and left several little children, among them a baby boy, just a few days old. The Child Welfare Club which is foster mother to the sick, needy and orphans, was on the job and in addition to taking charge of the baby told the Times reporter that the baby needed a home—and the reporter feeling sorry for all motherless babies, wrote a story about the situation that resulted in the baby eventually getting a mother and a father.

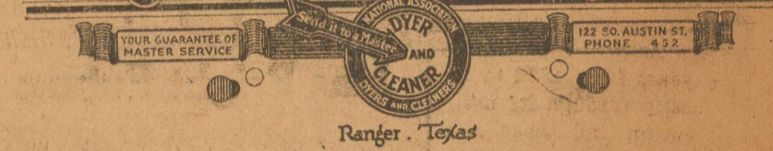

A couple not blessed with babies of their own wanted the little boy and adoption papers were pulled for after the father of the child signed away his claim. The final papers in the case were received this morning by Justice J. N. McFatter and the baby starts life today with a new name, a new home and a new mother and father.

Gripings

By GUS

A friend of ours asked us to gripe a while about the weeds on East Main. Said he had bought a lot down there and couldn't find it for the weeds and then when he found the lot he couldn't find the street again.

We went down to look the thing over and didn't find the weeds growing out in the street except in four or five places and they were not over five feet high there. On the sidewalk though the weeds are quite thick and in some places high, in fact, it would be with difficulty that you found the street if you were not already in said street.

If you are a junk dealer we can tell you where to pick up several pounds of nails from the pavement and it won't make any motorist a bit sore.

"Pay up, the credit men are here." The heck you say. All that ain't hid holler "I."

We usually write what we think we think, at the time we think we think it, ever reserving the right to change our minds without notice.

However, we haven't changed a bit about thinking that it is not in keeping with the spirit of hospitality for which Ranger is famous, to force people to come into town via the alley. We can't see wherein the congestion in traffic is greatly relieved by making the West Texas Coach use the alley, but we can see plainly where the inconvenience of the public is greatly aggravated.

A traveler was heard to remark that we must have something on the main drag we don't want people to see.

Boys, lock out—football time is right here upon us. Coach Cherry wants to see every one of you football players at 1 p. m. Monday at the high school where and when uniforms and equipment will be issued to all candidates for the team.

One good thing about a rough road, anyhow—there aren't many bill boards.

Strong Men May Show Stuff At Tulsa Oil Show

TULSA, Okla., Aug. 25.—The strong men of the oil industry will have their inning at the International Petroleum Exposition on Friday, Sept. 30, when a tug-o-war tournament will be held between picked teams from many of the mid-continent oil and refinery companies.

The tug-o-war feature is expected to attract scores of drillers, pipe line fitters, derrick builders and other Samsons of the oil industry. Some teams of office workers may also compete, as one group of clerks won a company contest over a team of refinery workers.

Any company in the oil industry may enter a team of their employees in the contest, it was announced by E. D. Murphy, who is in charge of the event. There will be six on each team, the rules state. A valuable trophy and individual prizes will be awarded the winning team and awards will also be made to the runners up in the tournament.

Companies desiring to enter teams in the tournament should make application at once to E. D. Murphy, care of the International Petroleum Exposition, Tulsa.

Log Rolling Will Be Revived at Big Contest August 27

DULUTH, Minn., Aug. 25.—Descendants of the old-time river driver will revive the woodsmen's most thrilling sport here Aug. 27 and 28 when the tenth annual world's championship log rolling contests are held in St. Louis bay.

Log "burlers" as they are known from all parts of the north country will sharpen the spikes on their boots in readiness for the competition when the champion and ex-champions attempt to roll each other off the twirling timbers.

William Girard, Gladstone, Mich., holder of the world's championship, will defend his title against all comers, among whom will be such stars as Wilber Marx, Eau Claire, Wis., last year's runner-up; Johnny Olson, Marinette, Wis., William Delyea, and Joe Madwayosh, Cloquet, Minn., all former champions.

It was during the early lumbering days in Minnesota, Wisconsin, and Michigan that log rolling was the principal past time of the river driver. But with the passing of the picturesque woodsmen the sport, with its danger and glory, has passed into history. The present type of lumbermen, mostly immigrants, do not care for the traditional outdoor activities of the lumberjack. Few of them have even as much as attempted to learn the pioneer games.

Log burling has been passed down from father to son in this section of the country, and it is these sons who will meet here late this month in competition, one attempting to defend his title and the other seeking to wrest the crown from him.

Officers of the association governing the sport, most of them old-time burlers, are W. P. Hart, Eau Claire, president; Elmer N. Bodin, vice president; Dick Herring secretary. The latter two are of Washburn, Wis. Bodin is the owner of the famous Bodin bowl at Houghton Point, Mich., where the 1926 competition was held.

BORAH AND DISTINGUISHED GROUP ONCE ON K. U. PAPER

KANSAS CITY.—Brilliance was their requirement. Fame was their goal.

And from their group, organized upon these principles in 1884 at the University of Kansas, has come such men as Senator William E. Borah; General Fred Finston; the late Ralph E. Stout, formerly managing editor of the Kansas City Star, a Marshall, veteran newspaper writer with the Kansas City Journal-Post; Percy R. Bennett, once managing editor of the Chicago Inter-Ocean; the late Col. Edward C. Little, Kansas congressman; and W. Y. Morgan, owner of the Hutchinson, Kansas News.

All in all, the group produced a major general, a lawyer, a banker, two statesmen, and seven nationally known editors.

The young men formed the University Courier Publishing company, and published the university paper, John Sullivan, a Kansas City attorney was president of the group. It was his privilege to hire and fire William Allen White on the first newspaper job the Kansas editor ever had.

Football Coach Calls Bulldogs To Meet Monday

Blair Cherry, high school athletic coach, returned last night from South Bend, Indiana, where he has been attending Knute Rockne's coaching school.

Cherry issued the call for football players to appear Monday afternoon at 1 o'clock at the high school building when equipment will be issued and the candidates will start the long and tedious grind of getting into condition for football.

The coach is somewhat reticent about giving his opinions of the prospects until he has seen what his squad looks like and how it takes to training. His only comment being that he thought he had some promising material and would do his best to make a football team out of it.

Alpine Resident Boasts of Banner Crop of Grapes

ALPINE, Aug. 25.—W. A. Daugherty, city clerk of Alpine, owns a grapevine at his home here which he claims has shattered all records for production.

His wife vouches for the following story.

"After supplying two families with eating grapes this summer," said Daugherty, "we picked grapes from the vine to make 40 quarts of jelly and 32 quarts of grape juice. We also sold several small crates of grapes from the vine on the local market."

Daugherty also owns an apricot tree which, he said, produced only one-third of a crop this season. But from this small crop, he said, he sold $15 worth of apricots in addition to canning several quarts for family use.

Vera Cameron, assistant to Jerry Macklyn, advertising manager for the Peach Bloom Cosmetics Co., indignantly rejects Jerry's plan to transform her, with the aid of Peach Bloom cosmetics, from the old-maid type she is into beauty, and to use her photographs in the company's advertising copy.

However, when she falls suddenly in love with a man whom she hears called Schuyler, and who remarks to a companion he will be in Lake Minnetonka in late June, she reconsiders Jerry's offer and resolves to undergo anything to become beautiful. She must meet this man whom she has seen but once and to do this she decides to go to Minnetonka.

Vera's sea-green eyes remind Jerry Macklyn of an uncaptioned Sunday supplement picture he has in his desk and he has the beauty specialist refashion Vera after this picture.

Vera's aunt, Flora Cartwright, is thoroughly astonished at the change wrought in her once homely niece and is a little jealous also.

Flora becomes infatuated with Jerry and tells him that Vera is going to Lake Minnetonka to see a man with whom she is in love. By this time Jerry is desperately in love with the girl whom he has made into a beauty. Just before Vera leaves the office to go on her vacation, Jerry comes in with the proofs of the advertising which contain her photographs. She begs him not to use them, saying it will humiliate her. He says: "I'll tear those ads up on one condition—that you give up your trip to Minnetonka."

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XI

That evening, as Vera Cameron was dressing for her journey and for her last engagement with Jerry Macklyn, she studied her reflection in the mirror with worried eyes, but occasionally a wicked little smile tugged at the temple in the left corner of her mouth.

"A good thing for me that Rosemary Fitch came in just when she did," she mused. "Well, it's up to me now. If I'm a worthy pupil of Aunt Flora and Jerry Macklyn I'll get Jerry's promise not to run the advertisements and I won't have to give up my trip either. Jerry says a beautiful girl can get anything she wants, is entitled to it by the divine right of beauty. Well, dear teacher, we shall see!"

The sight of the nodding, wickedly smiling face in the mirror startled her. She leaned forward, so that her nose and lips almost touched the mirrored ones. "Who are you?" she demanded of the girl in the mirror. "I don't know you! You're a stranger and you've murdered Vera Cameron. I'm afraid of you!"

But there was no terror apparent in the exquisite face and in the limpid clear green pools that were her eyes when she advanced, walking proudly, to meet Jerry Macklyn a half hour later.

"Dear Jerry!" she said softly, as she gave him both her hands, standing so close to him that the perfume he had been at such pains to find for her wrapped him about like an exquisite, invisible cloak. "It's awfully sweet of you to come to take me to the train. I'm going to miss you—terribly!" She hesitated before the last word, then dropped it gently, like a shy caress.

"Then you're going to Lake Minnetonka?" Jerry demanded savagely. "Don't be foolish, Jerry!" she chided him softly. "Of course I'm going to Minnetonka! My reservations are already made, I've spent hundreds and hundreds of dollars for clothes, which I couldn't possibly wear at a less exclusive resort."

"Oh, shut up!" Jerry commanded her abruptly. "You know why I don't want you to go! My God, you must know or you're blind as a fool or both! You said you couldn't bear for me to print those advertisements with your picture. There are one or two things I can't bear either, Vera Cameron, and one of them is to see you carry out this insane scheme of yours to trap a rich man into marrying you—posing as a society girl—!" His voice broke and he flung up an arm.

"You shan't talk to me like that!" Vera cried passionately. "I'm not were a game that you were enjoying in the same way that I enjoyed it." Vee-Vee said weakly, groping for a chair.

"A game? Oh, dear God!" Jerry groaned, dropping to the floor beside her and laying his head against her knees.

Vee-Vee's slim, white finger fluttered to his head, hovering for a moment over that flaming mop of red curls as if she were afraid it would burn her, then dropped lightly upon it.

"Don't! I can't stand that!" Jerry flung up his head sharply, seized her caressing hand and crushed it against his grief-twisted, hot lips. "Vee-Vee! Can't you love me a little, darling? You don't know what love is! You've seen him only once, you know nothing about him—"

"How do you know?" Vera's green eyes widened in an agonized amazement. "I've never told you—"

"But Flora did, when she saw what was happening to me," Jerry told her savagely. "I tried to keep me from making a blankly-blank fool of myself by putting me wise to the fact that you were already dead gone on another man—"

"She was very unselfish," Vee-Vee that sort of thing—and you refused. You say you love me." "I do love you. I think you know that. And when I tried to make a bargain with you, named one condition on which I would agree to throw down the firm, you refused. I may as well tell you now that if you had accepted that condition I would have been forced, by my own conscientious scruples, to resign from the Peach Bloom Company—"

"Resign?" Vee-Vee echoed blankly. "Resign, certainly! Do you think I could accept money from the company after I had thrown them down for personal motives? Oh, I could get something else easily enough! I'm one of the three best advertising men in the business! Oh, you can grin if you want to! I admit I'm no shrinking violet when it comes to rating myself in a business way. I wouldn't be on a $25,000 salary at the age of 29 if I were. If you had accepted my condition I should have had every hope of winning you for my wife, and of course I don't want my wife's picture smiling up at every man that thumbs through a magazine. But—don't interrupt please—if you are not even willing to give me a chance, if you insist on keeping our relationship on a business basis, I'm going to hold you to the letter of your bargain."

"You are certainly making yourself very plain," Vera told him with cold fury. "And now that you know you can't bribe me into marrying you, you are going to keep your precious job and humiliate me—"

"Bribe? You into becoming my wife!" Jerry shouted, springing to his feet. "My God! And yet you say I've made myself very plain! Haven't you sense enough to know that Jerry Macklyn wouldn't marry any woman in the world, no matter how much he loved her, if she didn't love him as much as he loved her? I love you, Vera, and if you can't love me that's an end of the whole thing. I—I guess I'd better be going."

"Good-by, Jerry. I don't suppose I shall see you again," Vee-Vee rose, found his hat for him and offered it unsmilingly.

"I suppose that means that you expect to be married," Jerry retorted bitterly. "Well—good luck!"

"I hope I shall," Vee-Vee said simply. "I—I really love him, Jerry, even if I have only seen him once. But—if I fail, of course I shan't go back to Peach Bloom and to your office. I'm not so utterly selfish as you think, Jerry."

She felt that she had told him good-by forever, but she was to see him again that evening. She was setting her things in her section of the Pullman car, and listening, with curiously apathetic ears, to her aunt's last minute instructions on how to play the love game, when Jerry Macklyn came charging breathlessly down the aisle.

"I forgot something this afternoon," he panted. "Nearly broke my neck and all the traffic laws getting here. Here's a note, and you're not to open it unless you find yourself in a jam. No, I can't tell you what I mean, but you may find out. God knows I hope you won't but if what I'm thinking of happens, as there is one chance in a thousand that it will, you may find that the information and instructions in this letter will help you. Good-by again—and good luck!"

"Oh, Jerry, I'm so glad you came!" Flora Cartwright caroled at him. "I'm all at loose ends this evening—not a thing in the world to do. Shall we go somewhere for supper and a dance or two? Nice Jerry!" she wheedled. "Sure! Great idea!" Jerry agreed, as if delighted.

Vera watched the two of them—Jerry's tall, broad figure with Flora's small, dainty body as close behind it—hurrying down the aisle of the Pullman car, and for the second time she knew the sharp stab of jealousy.

AMERICA'S EARLIEST CITIZENS SAID TO HAVE LIVED IN TREES

Editor's Note: The following is the second of three articles describing discoveries made by Dr. Harold J. Cook, famous paleontologist, of remains of the world's first human life in America. The last article, appearing Aug. 26, tells of other discoveries which have disproved scientific theories of 20 years' standing.

By FREDERICK C. OTHMAN, United Press Staff Correspondent. (Copyright by United Press.)

DENVER, Colo., Aug. 25.—Remains of the world's first man, discovered by Dr. Harold J. Cook of the Colorado Museum of Natural History, Denver, tend to show that the man of 4,000,000 years ago had most of the instincts and tendencies of a modern human being.

A tooth of the one of these prehistoric citizens of the United States was found among other fossilized remains by Dr. Cook at Agate Springs, Neb.

So sure are scientists that the tooth represents a hitherto unknown race that they have credited Dr. Cook with having discovered the Hesperopithecus Haroldcockii, which means in English "the ape man of the west found by Harold Cook."

A little guess work, from which Dr. Cook absolves himself of all responsibility until his findings are verified further, paints a most interesting and in all likelihood an authentic picture of the first known human life in the world.

First of all Hesperopithecus Haroldcockii lived in a tree. There were no caves. And had he been able to build a home for himself on the ground he sooner or later would have awakened one morning to find his roof crushed in by the enormous foot of some beast towering high above him.

So, sleeping at night in a tall tree, Hesperopithecus Haroldcockii cautiously climbed down at dawn to stalk small game with the sharp weapons he had fashioned for himself out of green bone. Fossilized bone weapons used by him have been found.

He didn't need the animal's skins clothes because of the tropical sun which warmed him, but he did eat the meat. Crushed marrow bones in great numbers found near the tools point to his carnivorous appetite.

And when he couldn't find a small bird or diminutive beast to eat, he beat in one of his brother's skulls with a club made from an elephant bone and resorted to cannibalism. Crushed and macerated bones greatly resembling those of present day humans were discovered.

At nightfall after the day's work was done, he turned to music for solace from the frights of the many-eyed jungle closing in about him.

Up in his tree safe from the gigantic snarling cats, the mastodontic dogs and the huge slimy beasts below him, he blew into his bone flute a simple tune which perhaps he thought would quiet the jungle strife about him. A hollow bone drilled with holes similar to those of a rifle, was found in the Agate Springs deposits.

He lived thus for many ages, more than 2,000,000 years, fighting, playing, raising families, and gradually becoming more intelligent as the facts of the world about him penetrated his thick skull.

But after innumerable sons succeeded innumerable fathers, the ice age began to dim the tropical splendor of North America. Gradually, as the years passed by the thousand and the hundred thousand, the sun shone less brightly. It began to get colder. The less hardy animals, snakes and birds vanished.

Hesperopithecus Haroldcockii, chilled by the biting winds from the north, probably took to clothing himself with skins from the great packs of wolves which abounded in the region.

But the progress of the icy coldness was steady. Thousands more generations lived and died. Vegetation withered away. The animals disappeared from the face of the earth.

And with the plant and animal life, Hesperopithecus Haroldcockii, too. Although there is too great a gap between the quarternary age and even the glacial age which followed the ice era for scientists to make statements of any kind concerning possible descendants of the earliest man, Dr. Cook said that probably there was no relation between him and the modern American Indian.

"The man-like race of 4,000,000 years ago in all likelihood disappeared as did the animal and plant forms when the ice age gripped the world," Dr. Cook declared.

Complaints received by the state department of health during the last week in regard to insanitary and objectionable conditions existing in many sections of the state were many and varied, according to Dr. J. C. Anderson, state health officer, who stated that these complaints would be given attention just as fast as possible, but owing to the fact that the department has only a few inspectors, it is humanly impossible to meet the immediate demands made for service.

Some of the complaints made the last week to the department with requests for help included: objections to construction of a dam on the Guadalupe river; objection to injunction obtained keeping city employees off of water shed and portion of water reservoir of a West Texas city; complaints against the operation of a number of filthy dairies; com-

Chevrolet Head Sees Good Times Ahead This Fall

That business conditions generally throughout the country are exceedingly fair, with every indication that they will continue so this fall, was the keynote of a statement issued recently by C. F. Barth, vice president in charge of manufacturing of the Chevrolet Motor company. Mr. Barth's statement followed the announcement that on Aug. 12 Chevrolet topped its entire output for 1926 by turning out the 732,147th car so far this year.

"We are looking optimistically toward the fall season," Mr. Barth declared. "There is ample evidence of country-wide prosperity. Crop conditions are considerably better than last year, diversification having helped the south and west. In the north-west alone the yield this year is expected to be substantially above the average for the past 10 years, in Minnesota, the Dakotas and Montana the grain crop being estimated as worth $150,000,000 more than last year.

"Other healthy signs include heavy railway shipping, which stands above the million cars weekly mark; unusually large postal receipts; exports and imports above last year's high figures; and—perhaps the best business barometer of all—dividend increases far outnumber reductions.

"The automobile, like every other staple commodity, is sensitive to any change in the economic situation. Although Chevrolet may not be considered as representative of the industry because the phenomenal demand for our cars is shattering all previous production figures for gear-shift cars, their even distribution shows that healthful conditions prevail from coast to coast and border to border. There are of course spotty areas of unemployment and depression, but they are relatively small and not of check numbers to cause alarm or effect the general era of good times ahead.
