FOCH'S HUMAN QUALITIES TO INTEREST SECOND A. E. F.

American Ex-Soldiers Will Get Different Angle on General From That of 1918.

EDITOR'S NOTE—Thirty thousand members of the American Legion either are en route or are preparing to sail from American ports for Paris, where they will attend their national convention from Sept. 19 to Sept. 23.

To these American veterans of the world's greatest war Marshal Foch, Commander-in-Chief of the Allied Armies during that mighty struggle, undoubtedly will mean more than any other figure they will see in France. The military career of this man who signed the armistice on the morning of Nov. 11, 1918, putting to an end the battles in which hundreds of thousands of men were being killed weekly, has been told and retold. It is the human side of Ferdinand Foch, whose name was linked so closely with that of General John J. Pershing when the American doughboys were in France, that will appeal to the American legionnaires. In a recent message to the American Legion Foch said:

"Let us see each other, understand each other, and we will find in our hearts the necessary element to settle many difficulties."

FARM AID.
 Mr. Clarence Ousley of Texas, director of the Texas Safe Farming association, following a conference in New England declares that farm aid is to be one of the main issues of the 1928 presidential campaign—that the middle western farmers will not support any candidate who is not openly in favor of some measure of farm relief.

He indicates that the broad-visioned farmers doubt the adequacy of the McNary-Haugen bill and that the Coolidge administration bill is less popular than the McNary-Haugen. It is Mr. Ousley's opinion that unless the next session of congress does something very definite in the way of farm relief the matter will be pretty thoroughly thrashed out during the next presidential campaign.

It may be perfectly all right for the agricultural industry to seek aid through government agencies, and it looks as though the government is going to be forced into that very thing. However, we are of the opinion that the farming class can get much more permanent relief through their own efforts at home than through political agencies at Washington. We believe well-balanced farm programs for every farm coupled with well directed farm organizations for marketing purposes will go much farther in relieving the farm situation than can be had through government agencies.

The people of Brown county and the city of Brownwood have declined the water grant of the Texas board of water engineers. The grant allowed only a small portion of that asked by the people of the district in an application to impound the waters of Jim Ned creek and Pecan bayou for irrigation purposes and the people have declined the grant and will seek to get what they first asked for. Evidently the board of directors of the Brown county water improvement district decided the grant was insufficient to meet the requirements sought.

Murphy Working For Lower Fire Rate In Ranger

Fire Chief George Murphy holds steadfast to one thought and that is the lessening of the fire rate in Ranger. For the past few years Murphy has toiled unceasingly to get the rate reduced and succeeded this year in obtaining a 15 percent reduction. He is still ambitious to succeed in having that rate lowered and is working now on trash and poor electrical installations that might result in a fire.
 "If electric wires are not installed right, or any wire is hanging on a nail, it affects the rate on the entire building which can be raised 10 percent by the state fire department, Mr. Murphy said.
 Regarding trash, he stated that all trash must be out in containers, either metal or wood and if outside of a building these containers must be covered so that the loose papers or trash cannot blow around.
 Mr. Murphy stated that persons who had any complaint to make about the cleaning department not picking up trash as per contract, to phone 36 and the matter would be looked into and taken care of.

Broncho mule riding ended the entertainment, with "Curley" Glascock, San Angelo, winning first prize.

New York Giants Can't Be Counted Out of Running

By BILLIE EVANS

Don't count those Giants out in the hectic struggle now being waged for the National League pennant. McGraw's club has come with a rush that is going to be hard to deny.

"I managed a pennant winner and world champion in the St. Louis Cardinals last year, but I think New York is a better ball club and feel we should win," was the way Rogers Hornsby expressed himself to me at Sarasota, Fla., training camp of the Giants, last spring.

"We have a mighty good team. Give us pretty good pitching and we will be tough to beat. And please don't forget, we have John McGraw as our manager."

For a couple of months it seemed as if Rogers Hornsby had been entirely too optimistic in his hope on the Giants, even though I realized New York was one of the clubs that had to be beaten in the pennant chase.

Injuries and pitching that was a trifle erratic caused New York to be slow in getting full speed ahead.

A month ago the Giants were about 10 games out of first place and even the most ardent fan held but little hope for his favorites. However, the club never once quit, kept plugging away.

Great Spurt in August

The break in the race the Giants had been looking for, came with about two-thirds of the schedule completed. The three other contenders had temporary slumps, while New York struck its fastest gait of the year.

During the month of August, New York won 23 out of 30 games, to stage the best late season rally in the National League.

While New York may not win the pennant in the senior circuit, much of the keen interest in the race must be credited to the Giants for the recent remarkable showing they have made, after most of the critics were ready to count the fatal 10 on the club.

True, on form, New York faces the toughest going, since the club will be on the road practically the rest of the season. But playing away from home is no longer considered much of a handicap, with the umpires calling them as they see 'em.

McGraw's club has plenty of poise and just the proper number of old heads to give it balance and courage, which may be the deciding factors in a close race.

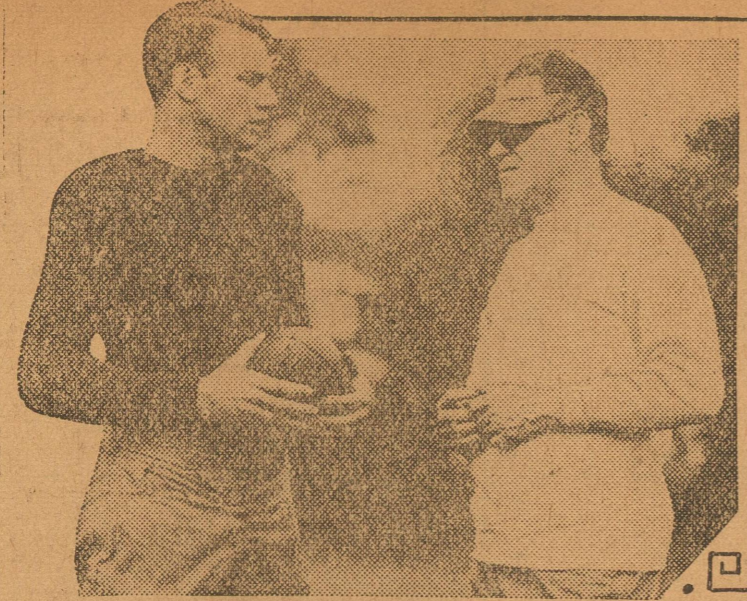

Cubs After Extra Cash

These pennant races make for many a case of "nerves," since the world series stakes have reached mighty fat figures.

I am told that Owner Wrigley of the Chicago Cubs, who would prefer a pennant to the amount the club coffers would be enriched by the world series gate, has offered the club's end of the receipts to the players, in case the Cubs get into the series.

Last year the winning players received each close to $6,000. Each club's share was around $160,000, which, divided among say 27 ball players, would make about $5000 more for each man.

Fordham Ushers Football in Early

Look what we have here—football, yes sir! It's at Fordham and Major Frank Cavanaugh, former Boston coach, is in charge. The Fordham squad was one of the first to assemble for the fall campaign. Major Cavanaugh is shown at the top talking to Bill Feaster, captain. The bottom panel shows the squad going through a light drill.

Thus, for the Chicago Cubs to win the pennant and world series this year, would mean that each player would profit to the extent of about $11,000.

Rumor has it that Mr. Wrigley, in conference with the team, made the offer just before the club left on the last eastern trip. The Cubs then proceeded to let their fairly comfortable lead slip away.

No doubt to many of the Chicago athletes the baseball is covered with dollar marks as it comes his way, whether from the pitcher to batter or in the field. The dollar mark sometimes proves to be quite elusive.

If Mr. Wrigley did make the proposition it may not turn out as he hoped it would, since it may unnerve the team because of the big stakes for which it is gambling, rather than supplying the confidence as he had hoped.

The state of Texas has a very small bonded indebtedness and all of it is owned and held by the permanent funds of the public schools and state institutions. At the close of the last fiscal year the total of this debt was $4,002,200.

Albert Glenn and Gilbert Cook Barred From Playing In Conference Games.

Lady Luck shot the other barrel at Ranger's hopes for a championship football team yesterday when Alfred Glenn and Gilbert Cook were both declared ineligible to play in conference games.

The basis of their ineligibility is that neither of them attended school the required number of days the second semester of last year.

This is another big blow to Ranger's hopes, coming as it does right after two more letter men, Grubbs and Taylor, were declared ineligible last week and leaves Coach Cherry in a deplorable plight as far as experienced football players are concerned.

He now has only five letter men to build a team around, these being Garland Hinman, David Whitehall, Byron Reeves and Captain Victor Short. Every man on the team outside of these five will be men who have never played in a conference game before, and if a winning combination can be worked out from these raw recruits, it will not only mean that Cherry and Davis are super-coaches but it will mean that the boys have worked and trained and thought and fought and given the coaches the very best of co-operation.

Strange as it may seem there has not been a single transferred player into the Ranger High school this year. Every man on the team will be a man whose home is in Ranger and has resided here for a period of a year to 17 years.

It follows that the inducements to come to the Ranger High school are not so strong as those offered by some of our neighboring towns for certainly the educational advantages here will rank with any of them.

And it further appears that, all things being equal, a star player from a rural school would like to play with a team that was a runner up in the state championship last year.

However, what is left of the Ranger team will fight them all to a finish and everybody that beats them will know they have been in a football game, because fighting spirit is what wins, and it's no fun to get beaten, and when you see a bunch of green boys out there crying mad and on the little end of the score you just can't tell what they might do.

S. M. U. Team Will Begin Practice Work Saturday

DALLAS, Sept. 8.—Head Coach Ray Morrison of Southern Methodist University, will take his first squint at the 1927 Mustang possibilities Saturday morning when football training camp opens.

Morrison arrived at Mustang training quarters last Friday and expressed himself as highly pleased with the general layout of Armstrong Field and Ownby Stadium, as the result of improvement work done during the last two months. "We've got a schedule ahead of us this year that's no easy thing," Morrison said, "and everybody realizes it's going to take a lot of work to build a team that can go the route. If the men put heart into training however, and work with a determination to make good, there's no reason why we shouldn't go over as we

Major Herbert H. Frost, international radio expert, and Mrs. Frost brought "DX" with them when they arrived in New York from England for the Radio World's Fair. "DX" you know is the gift of British radio fans to American addicts of the loud speaker.

Morrison expects at least forty men to report, and it is believed the number will include at least seven-teen letter-men. Southwestern Conference rules permit training to begin September 10, and S. M. U. will have lost no time. The men will be issued full equipment Friday afternoon, and the first actual training work will start at 10 a. m. Saturday. Russell McIntosh, line coach, who was severely injured in an automobile accident near Texarkana, while returning from a vacation several weeks ago, is reported much improved. He will be perfectly able to take part in the first instructions to the football squad, Coach Morrison said, and in first class condition by the date of the opening game of the Mustang schedule with the Denton Teachers College, Sept. 24.

Gripings

By GUS

We sure got plenty to gripe about today, but the subject is of such a nature that we can't handle it just like we would like to on account of might not look well in print.

The subject is our football team, its chances of beating La Casa, the eligibility rules, and the fact that we don't have a single player transferred from a rural school.

Abilene managed to find a way to transfer Andrus from Cisco. Cisco managed to get a couple of big boys from Cottonwood. We hear that Breckenridge has a transfer or so from a rural school, and here we get with a team that went into the semi-finals last year and nobody wants to play football on our team it seems.

We didn't mean to infer that Cisco was a rural school, but Abilene must have.

We can't use a single player that there is question as to his eligibility. That's a cinch. Oak Cliff will probably keep a detective on our trail all year because it was through the protest filed by us and upheld that Oak Cliff will not be permitted to play in the interscholastic league this year.

So if it turns out that the race this year will be decided by the protest route rather than the contest route we'll be in fair shape to battle it out with them.

When you stop to think that we have only five men left who have over played conference football, and the other teams in this district have many more letter men than that, not to mention the boys that have substituted in games but have not been in enough to letter, you can figure where we stand right now at the start.

But, listen brother, don't get the idea that anybody is going to get out there and run over these boys without knowing there's opposition on the field.

Take, for instance, Hunkey Phillips. He's plenty big and stout, and is in pretty good shape and wants to get along in the world. Every time a man gets scratched off the list it puts more on Hunkey's shoulders, and we'll bet a quarter that Hunkey delivers when he's called on.

As for the five men left from last year, we know what they did then and have no reason to think they will not repeat this year. Then, there's Clyde Peppers. Peppers is inexperienced and it's going to be hard for him to get into condition, but he might surprise some of our neighbors and make it hard on some of their high powered linemen.

The main thing is the old fighting spirit. The boys know that they are the underdogs and their only chance is the fighting chance and it always makes the public glad to see a little man whip a big one, to say nothing of how much better the little man feels about it.

Success Comes To Farmer Through Diversification

TAYLOR, Sept. 8.—Diversified farming has enabled Emil J. Kautz, who farms 198 acres near here, to pay off a $16,000 debt on his farm in 13 years in addition to investing $18,000 profits.

Kautz resigned from a job as a mail carrier at Taylor to take up farming. He made a few rules for himself when he started farming. These rules, he said, have brought him success.

These rules are: Never come to town except when he had something to sell, never buy feed for his livestock or food for his family that can be raised on his farm, and never plant the entire farm to one crop.

"I always plant one-half of my farm in feed and food crops," Kautz said. "Then I don't have to worry about the price of cotton. I never could understand the farmer who raises cotton only and thinks he can get by. It just can't be done.

"We keep cows, hogs, chickens and enough horses and mules to do all the work."

Kautz said all farm work was done on a schedule. In that way, he never gets behind with his work.

He divides his crop land up with about 80 acres in cotton, 30 acres in oats, 10 acres in sorghum, 30 acres in pasture, six acres in meadow, one acre in garden, two acres in potatoes and one acre in orchard.

"In this way we have some farm products to sell," he said, "in addition to supplying most of our needs on the farm."

Friday is not a jinx for the City Commission, as F. J. Von Zuben, consulting engineer of Fort Worth, and engineer for the paving program to be carried out in Ranger, will start to work in Ranger in the morning.

The obtaining of grades of the streets that will be paved will probably be the first step in the program.

AMERICAN LEGION AND AUXILIARY MEET TONIGHT

Brimberry and Hart will furnish a musical program for the entertainment of the members of Carl Barnes Post No. 69 of Ranger and the members of the Woman's auxiliary tonight after the regular meeting of both bodies.

Loboes Add Four Heavyweights To Football Team

The Big Dam Loboes of Cisco added four heavy men to their team Tuesday. These four huskies, who will be known as "The Four Horsemen" are Pete Slaton, 190, ambulance driver; Ray and Odell, two 175 pounders from Cantonplant, and Wilbur Brian, 194 tackle.

In addition to these heavies, Hicks, a 220 pounder, may come out for training and Dick Rutherford, a 175 pound backfield, has already reported for work out.

Coach Chapman of the Loboes is well supplied with ends and the addition of the weight to the line and the backfield, makes the outlook more rosy for the Loboes this fall.

On Friday of next week the Loboes start off their 1927 season by playing the heavy German team.

BUFFALO TRAILS

For miles they stretched across the prairie and up into the foothills, smooth, clearly marked, beaten hard as rock through the centuries by the hoofs of buffalo on their way to the salt licks.

When the railways came, and the engineers were confronted with the great bastion of the Rocky Mountains, these buffalo trails assumed a new significance. It was found that they always followed the easiest gradients, that they penetrated the mountain fastness by the most direct and practical route.

Buffalo trails became one of the greatest assets of the early railway builders. Time, money, energy, were conserved; a vast amount of fruitless pioneering and surveying was eliminated, by trusting to the infallible instinct which had led the herds along these obscure and little-known ways.

Advertising, like those old buffalo trails, provides a clear and unmistakable path among the perplexities of modern buying. It points the way to the goal of safety and sound value; it avoids the pitfalls of unknown and unreliable goods. By following the advertisements in this paper you are following the high road to true economy.

Boy Scouts Have Big Round of Fun On Mystery Hike

Ten boys of Ranger Scout Troop No. 10 responded to the lure of a "mystery hike" Tuesday night, and met Scoutmasters Jimmie Cox and Ralph Getts at the Presbyterian church to find out just what mystery was in store for them.

The first thing they found out about the hike was that their path led to "The Willows," where they enjoyed a long swim.

County Scout Executive Guy N. Quill was on hand and he had up his sleeve, as usual, a nice stock of stunts and games.

All boys of Ranger who did not attend this "mystery hike" missed a good time, for it was one of the best outings the boys have ever had.

He reports business conditions in the Lufkin area are very fine indeed, but admitted that he still had a longing for the old Eastland county atmosphere.

The frieze is framed by a wall in which it is set and supported by pillars and benches. A part of the inscription on the pedestal reads, "1914—A tribute from men of Scottish blood and sympathies in America to Scotland."

The site of the statue is on the north side of West Prince's street Gardens, set into a bank of two paths leading down to it from the street. It is directly opposite Edinburgh Castle.

Eat Sandwiches At Rate of 1,000,000 Day in Chicago

Special Correspondence. CHICAGO, Sept. 7.—Lunch grabbers consume 1,000,000 sandwiches every 24 hours in Chicago.

Sale of sandwiches, figuring at an average cost of 20 cents for each one, amounts to $200,000 from one sun-up to another, or about $70,000,000 a year, according to Henry Stude, president of the American Bakers' association, in an address here before the American Institute of Baking, announcing the annual convention of the association on Sept. 26-29 at the Hotel Sherman.

"Making sandwiches threatens to become one of the leading American industries," declared Mr. Stude. "Chicago is becoming a city of sandwich nibblers, with the invasion of the drug store lunch counters and the brass rail sandwich stands. Bread is becoming a more important item in our daily dietary. It furnishes approximately five of the 20 ounces of food the average worker eats daily."

"Eighty per cent of the white bread consumed in the United States is made by commercial bakers. American bread, produced according to scientific principles and under controlled conditions which would be impossible in the home, is the most nutritious bread in the world."

The PENNY PRINCESS
COPYRIGHT 1927 by NEA Service by anne austin

BEGIN HERE TODAY
Jerry Macklyn, advertising manager for Peach Bloom Cosmetics, gets the consent of Vera Cameron, his secretary, to transform her into a beauty. She agrees only after seeing and falling in love with a stranger.

In refashioning her, Jerry has in mind the use of her pictures in advertising. He asks the beauty specialist to use as a model the portrait of a beautiful girl he supposes to be a movie actress.

Vera wants to go to Lake Minnetonka on her vacation, to meet the man she loves. At the summer hotel she meets him. His name is Schuyler Smythe. He and other guests mistake her for Vivian Crandall, heiress and ex-princess. Her attempts to convince the guests of their mistake are unsuccessful. Smythe falls in love with her, and denies the rumors he is engaged to Nan Fosdick.

Vera, or Vee-Vee as some call her finds it difficult to declare her real identity to Smythe, especially since it is apparent that he is in love with the girl he thinks she is. In her room, Vera picks up a newspaper and finds the name of Vivian Crandall in bold headlines.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XXIII

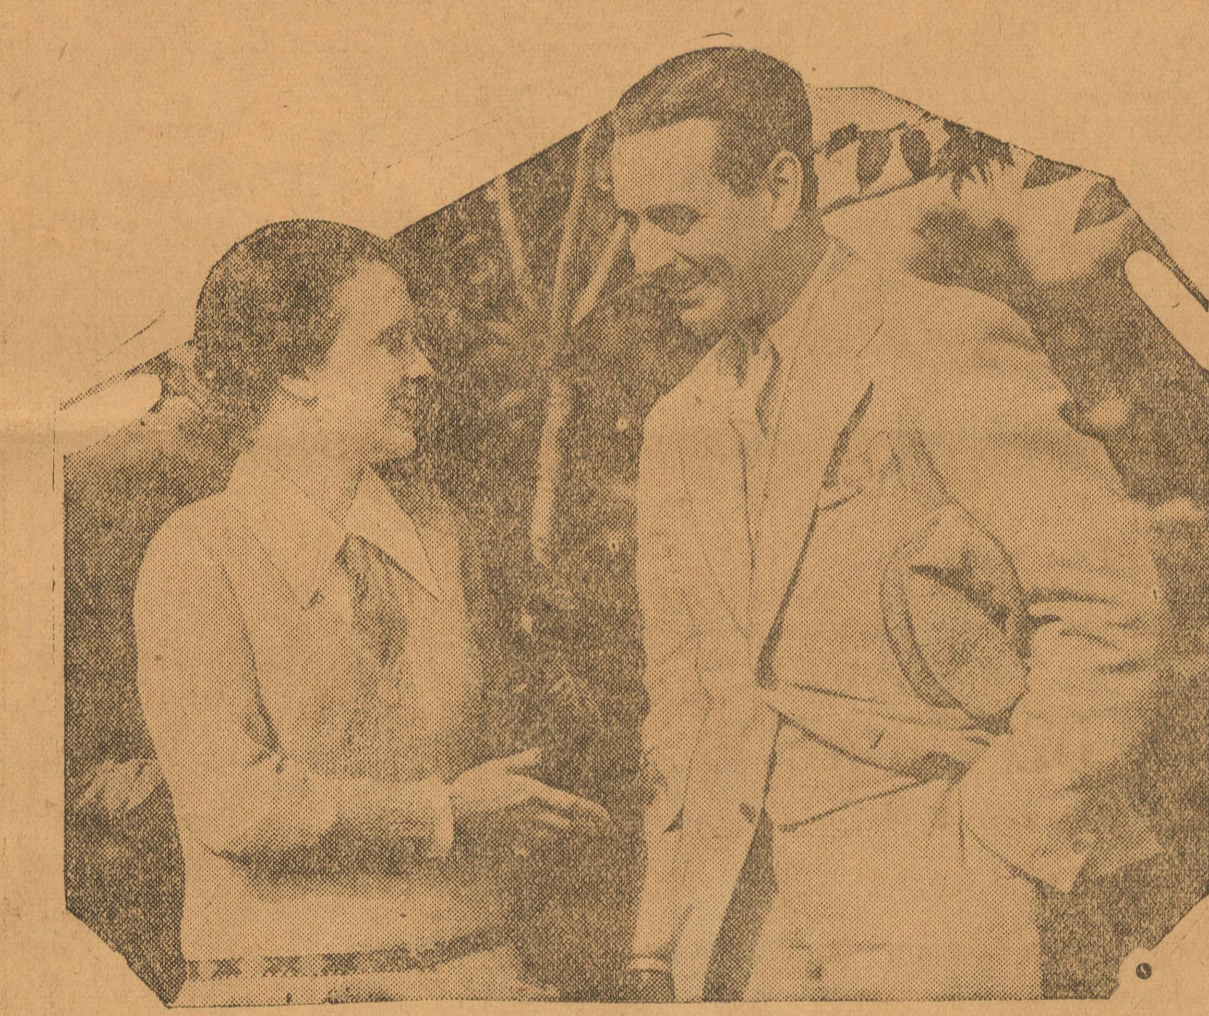

So closely did Vee-Vee feel herself identified with a girl she had never seen, of whom she had scarcely heard until three days before, that it seemed that she was reading about herself as her eyes took in the big headlines:

"DETECTIVES SEEK MISSING CRANDALL HEIRESS."

In the center of the front page was a picture of Vivian Crandall, with the caption: "Vivian Crandall, until three weeks ago the Princess Vivian, wife of Prince Ivan Polaski, of Russia's repudiated royalty, is the object of a nation-wide search by private detectives, according to information received from friends in the confidence of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Worrell Crandall, multi-millionaire society leaders of New York and Newport."

The column of front-page type gave little more actual information than the caption under the portrait. The picture might have been a photograph of herself, Vee-Vee noted with fresh wonder. It showed the Princess Vivian in décolleté evening dress, with three strands of pearls about her proud neck, a jewel-studded coronet on her bobbed head.

One paragraph of the small type declared: "Prince Ivan, the husband whom the Princess Vivian divorced in Paris, is in New York, registered at the Plaza Hotel. The Prince declares that the heiress divorced him without his knowledge and that he has come to New York to find his missing wife and plead for a reconciliation and re-marriage. He scents the idea of foul play in connection with the princess' disappearance, and is convinced that she will reveal her whereabouts in her own good time."

He also scoffs at the rumor that the former princess is in hiding with a lover whom she intends to marry as soon as convention will permit. He declares that he has the highest possible opinion of his former wife's honor.

"Trying to court her through the papers," Vee-Vee decided scornfully. "It's a pity he didn't have more concern for his own honor. She might not have divorced him if he had."

Detectives scouring the country for a married woman who asked nothing but solitude. Then fear for her own self pushed aside her righteous indignation for Vivian Crandall. At any moment now the detectives might get on the scent of the girl at the Minnetonka whom all the guests, and even the management believed, to be Vivian Crandall.

She jumped out of bed, ran to her desk and began to write with furious haste a telegram to Jerry Macklyn. But before she had finished her frantic appeal for him to come and stand by her in the threatened disaster, she stopped and clonched her cold hands against her pounding heart. Why worry him at all? Why not simply pack up and leave? Terror sent her hands flying through the desk drawers, searching for a schedule of trains to New York. There was no train until the 11:52 p. m. the train which Mrs. Bannister and Nan Fosdick had taken last night.

She felt trapped; then came the slow, insinuating thought that she was glad she could not get away until nearly midnight. She would have, would be forced to have, one more precious day with Schuyler Smythe. She would pack, would be ready to leave on the midnight train, but the day at least was hers—and Schuyler's.

She was taking dresses off their hangers to put them into her wardrobe trunks when the telephone rang. "Is that you, Vee-Vee? Your voice sounded so odd, darling," Schuyler Smythe's warm, deep voice came caressingly over the wire. "I—I don't feel very well. Oh, it's nothing. I'm just tired. I suppose Vee-Vee answered, relaxine weakly against the heaped up pillows of her bed.

"I've been waiting for you," his voice came reproachfully. "Have you forgotten that you were to play golf with me this morning?" She had deferred playing golf as long as possible, conscious that her game was extremely amateurish, undoubtedly miles below the practiced performance of Vivian Crandall. When she had made the engagement she had not intended to keep it, had intended to suggest some other form of diversion at the last minute. But now she took the plunge desperately. She might as well let her golf betray her as anything else.

"I'll be dressed and down in ten minutes, Schuyler. Awfully sorry to have kept you waiting," she told him.

She was about to leave the room, her heart beating quickly at the thought that she would see Schuyler Smythe in just two more minutes, when a knock sounded upon the door, a discreet, deferential knock. She thought it was the waiter, come to remove her breakfast tray and table, and called "Come in!" blithely.

But it was not the waiter. It was the hotel manager, Mr. Thurston, his bald forehead glistening with the dew of embarrassment, his big white hands massaging themselves nervously.

"Miss—er—Cameron, I beg your pardon, haven't you, Miss—Cameron?" Thurston asked with more spirit. "I have seen it, yes," Vee-Vee admitted. "But I still fail to understand."

"I don't want any scandal, Miss Cameron," the man went on doggedly. "I—we all appreciate the honor of having you at the Minnetonka, and I hope you will stay all summer. But I—I should very much appreciate it, Miss—Cameron, if you would notify your parents that on my account." But as she said the last words, color flooded her pale face. She knew she was lying, that the poor, distracted manager had far more to fear because she was Vera Victoria Cameron than if she were the Vivian Crandall that he took her to be.

"Of course, Miss Crandall—I beg your pardon, Miss Cameron—if you take that attitude there is nothing more that I can say," Thurston told her dejectedly, moping his glistening bald head with a fresh white handkerchief. "But I do hope that in case anything—anything at all, Miss Cameron—comes up, of an unpleasant character, I mean, that you will absolve the management of the Minnetonka from all blame."

 "The only thing that you could possibly be blamed for is for not believing me," Vee-Vee told him severely. "I shall be glad to leave the hotel, Mr. Thurston, if that would relieve your mind."
 "Oh, by no means!" the unhappy man protested. "As I have told you, we are honored to have you here. I hope you are comfortable?" He was the solicitous hotel manager again.
 "Quite comfortable," Vee-Vee assured him briskly. She was thinking that if she obeyed her impulse to flee from the Minnetonka that night she would be tacitly confessing to Thurston that she was Vivian Crandall, and that he would have every right to notify the Crandall family to watch for her at the Grand Central Station. Her detention in the station would inevitably result in her being hauled before the Crandalls for identification. Their discovery of her resemblance to their daughter—a resemblance that no one would believe had been achieved accidentally, since haircut, shaping of eyebrows and coloring of hair could not have been affected without deliberate design—would just as inevitably brand her as an imposter. She might even be arrested for fraud, would undoubtedly find herself smeared all over the front pages. She was trapped, horribly trapped, whether she left the hotel or stayed.

 When Thurston had left, looking very unhappy, Vee-Vee again flew to her desk, to complete her telegram to Jerry Macklyn. But again, before she had finished it, she halted, her pencil stabbing viciously at the yellow sheet.

 "No, I'm not going to get him into a mess. I won't let him take the blame. It might cost him his position with Peach Bloom." And again irrationally, while tears gathered in her vivid green eyes, she murmured, "Dear Jerry."
 But there were no tears in her eyes when she held out her hand to Schuyler Smythe. She was a sparkle with eagerness and excitement, determined to make the most of the precious hours that were left to her before the storm broke. For she was sure there would be a storm, and that she would have to face it alone, unless—Her vivid eyes probed the glowing brown eyes of Schuyler Smythe as if she had never looked deep into them before.

 Mrs. Fockick has something interesting to tell Vee-Vee about Schuyler Smythe. Read the next chapter.

Foch's Human Qualities
To Interest Second A. E. F.

 of Bertrand Napoleon, which shows the admiration in which the great Napoleon was held in the Foch family. Bertrand Napoleon Foch exercised the profession of solicitor, later was a paymaster and finally became a tax collector. The different vocations of Foch caused him frequently to change his abode, and thus it was that young Ferdinand Foch followed his studies in the different cities and towns of France where the official duties of his father brought the Foch family.
 The cradle of the paternal house of Foch was at Valentine, a little bourg in the Pyrenees, where the ancestors of Foch, from father to son, for years followed the trades of weavers and cloth merchants, and where their businesses flourished under Louis XIV.
 When the fate of the Allied cause depended upon Marshal Foch, the world passionately discussed the proper pronunciation of the name of the great Marshal; some pronounced it as in Foch, others as Fock. The first pronunciation is the proper one, but before Foch became universally known, he frequently had to rectify the pronunciation of his name as given by the various persons who came into contact with him.

 The origin of the name Foch is said to be Latin, coming from the Latin word "Focus," signifying "home" or "fire." This Latin word is pronounced in the dialect of the Pyrenees as "Fioch." Thus Foch might very properly be called the "Marshal Fire."
 Young Foch had a serious education. At the end of his studies, one of his professors wrote in a report of Foch: "A geometrical mind, the stuff of which a technician is made." After his schooling Foch engaged in infantry at the beginning of the war of 1870 between France and Germany. Upon the signature of peace, he entered the Ecole Polytechnique, from which he graduated third in his class.
 After two years spent at Tarbes as second lieutenant, Foch entered the cavalry school of Saumur, whence he graduated fourth in his class. In 1878 he was named Captain of the Tenth Artillery at Rennes.

In 1883, Foch married a young girl of Brittany, Mademoiselle Bienvenue, daughter of a magistrate. Two years later he entered the Ecole de Guerre, and again graduated fourth in his class. Foch then was named to the command of the Third Artillery at Vincennes, then was made assistant professor at the superior War College, and in 1890 was promoted to Lieutenant Colonel and made a regular professor.
 Colonel Foch's political and religious convictions, which he has always affirmed regardless of any inconveniences that might be caused him, resulted in Foch being dropped from the French War College for several years, when he was sent into the provinces in more or less disgrace.

But Foch's brilliant qualities defeated the obscurity which threatened the officer, and in 1907 he was promoted to General of Brigade and attached to the General Staff. Some time later an historic scene took place between Foch and Clemenceau.
 Clemenceau was Premier and was noted as anti-clerical. He summoned Foch one day and announced to the General his intention of appointing him to the command of the War College. Foch smiled; his enigmatical smile, looked the Premier in the eyes and said:

"I thank you Mr. President, but evidently you have not heard all regarding me?"
 "What are you talking about?" snapped back Clemenceau testily. "No one has told you perhaps that I have a brother who is a Jesuit?" responded Foch. "I don't care," returned the "Tiger" characteristically, "you are the man I need and that's enough."

In 1911 Foch was named General of division and assigned to the command of the Eighth Army Corps at Bourges, and in 1914 to the Twentieth Army Corps at Nancy. The 18th of July, 1914, General Foch left for a vacation of two weeks in Brittany, and it was there that the mobilization order that threw France into the World War found him a few days later. The rest of Foch's career belongs to contemporary history.

Physically, Foch is the Pyrenees type, rather short, slender, wiry. He has a large head; deep-set, gray eyes, under bushy eye-brows, burn out at you. He is nervous, somewhat testy, concise in his language, of somewhat rude approach. Foch despises talkative people, but his does not prevent him in the intimacy of friends being an accomplished "causer" himself.
 When Foch receives a visitor who starts to perforce what he has to say with a long useless preamble, it is not infrequent that the Marshal interrupts to say: "You know, time is money." This is about the only English sentence that Foch can pronounce correctly.

But when Foch spends an evening among friends, it is said of him: "He is dumb during the first cigar, animated during the second, and sparkling during the third." For Foch during recent years was a great smoker of cigars. He lit the first early in the morning, and until the moment he went to sleep always had a cigar in his mouth.
 It is recalled that a few moments after the signature of the peace treaty at Versailles, a crowd of admirers literally charged Foch as he descended a stairway, beseeching him for his autograph. Foch sat down at a nearby table and during half an hour executed his signature on post-cards, etc. All this time he puffed slowly on a cigar, and on each card fell a few ashes. Several of the autograph hunters carefully carried off also these souvenir ashes from Foch's cigar.
 But today Foch has abandoned his cigars for a pipe. He uses pipes which come from New Zealand and upon which are worked curious beads.

Mayor Bill Thompson of Chicago finally has succeeded in having school Superintendent McAndrews voted out of office. Your majesty's next. Hey, there! King George, your Majesty's next!

Sometimes its not so much a matter of meeting creditors as it is of avoiding them.

CARD OF THANKS

I take this method of expressing to our friends in Eastland, for myself, my babies and for my mother, Mrs. Augusta Reed, our real appreciation and thanks for the expressions and acts of sympathy extended us in our bereavement over the recent death of our wife, mother and daughter-in-law, Mrs. Ora Helen Reed. Words cannot convey to you the real gratitude that is ours. You were all so kind and generous with your expressions and acts of sympathy that it did much to lighten our sorrow.
