C. O. AUSTIN AND PARTY IN RANGER

Charles O. Austin and party, composed of other banking officials, namely A. P. Ford, A. J. Lewis, and C. B. Watters, are in Ranger today, checking over the records of the liquidating agency here. They will probably be here until Saturday and Mr. Austin expects to return here in about two weeks. They were joined at lunch by P. A. Phillips, head of the liquidating agency here.

This agency represents twenty defunct banks of this district and the object of the officials' visit is to see if they cannot evolve a way to speed up liquidation of the various insolvent banks in this district.

Famous Cabaret Of Boom Days Vanishes

As the walls of the Blue Moose cabaret fall under the carpenter's hammer, old timers here in Ranger, who weathered the boom days of its history, grow reminiscent and tell some almost blood curdling tales of the old cabaret, which even the hardest sinner duels as the worst place in Ranger at one time.

Cunningly Built
As the work of dismantling this last hell-hole of Ranger's boom days gets well underway, many things are brought to light, that contributed to the success of the that notorious cabaret in eluding raids, and otherwise evading arrests. Already a number of pits have been found under the building, where through the manipulation of double walls, sliding doors, and trap doors, booze, which was sold openly at a bar, with a real brass foot rail, was cached while officers raided the premises.

No sign of Law Violation.
At one time fifteen officers and Texas rangers, are reported as having raided the cabaret, without finding a thing that would indicate the Volstead law was being violated, as when the booze disappeared soft drinks took their place at the bar, and were served to the habitués of the dance and gambling hall.

Expertly Built It.
They say it took an expert to build the building and an expert to find any incriminating evidence against it, other than it had at all times eight or ten girls, who sang danced a la cabaret, and dice and other gambling tables.

Booze Sold High.
One man in talking of those wild days, said he saw a man come in there one night with a bottle of genuine bottled in bond, which he wanted for his own use, but others wanted it also, so a spirited bidding for its possession issued, and it was bid in by a man, well known here at that time for $105 a quart.

A Monte Carlo.
Ranger's Monte Carlo ran day and night. The sound of money jingling could be heard clear across the street. Thousands of the dollars so easily made in those days changed hands. Men were made or unmade in a night. Raids were frequent, but there were never any blood stains on the floors of the Blue Moose.

It was only one of twelve or fourteen other bad places of the boom city, all of which have gone — their owners scattered in other boom day fields, their buildings either torn down and moved away or remodeled into something that the community can be proud of. The Blue Moose, has been purchased by Mr. Reese of the Reese Filling Station of Ranger. For some months it has been used to store automobiles in, but now that the cry for houses in Ranger is a daily one, it is being torn down and its lumber will be used in building a modern home — so the walls that once echoed to the wail of the saxophone, the song of the cabaret girls, the obscene stories of men and women who made the rounds of such resorts nightly may now echo to the cooing voices of childhood, and the harmony occasioned by a happy home.

Play Lucky And Catch a Parachute, Theatre Stunt

Two hundred and fifty miniature parachutes will be released from a big airplane tomorrow morning in Ranger, between 10 and 12 o'clock. To each parachute will be attached a ticket to one of the plays that are to be seen at either the Liberty or Lamb Theaters during Greater Movie Season — so whoever is lucky enough to capture a parachute, is going to see some mighty good shows, as the program for August is chock full of just that kind.

This stunt is done in the interest of Greater Movie Season, by Manager Taggart, and is one among many things that are being done throughout the United States to advertise the Greater Movie Season.

Boy Scouts To Parade and Do Duty at Theatre

Ranger Boy Scouts will be on duty at the Liberty Saturday when their new serial, "The Green Archer," starts. The Boy Scouts will also parade through the business streets in the early afternoon in interest of the new picture and greater movie season.

One of the surprises of the early play in the national open golf tournament at Scioto was furnished by Joe Turnesa of New York. Turnesa negotiated the initial 18 holes in 71 and then came back with a 74 on the second. His total of 145 placed him two strokes behind "Wild Bill" Mehlhorn, the leader. Bobby Jones, fresh from his sensational triumph in the British open, shot a 70-79-149 for the first two days' play. In the above picture Turnesa is shown about to plough into the little ball with Jones in the inset.

OLD TEXAS RANGER WILL BE HERE

One old Ex-Texas Ranger, writes the Chamber of Commerce of Ranger that he is 78 years old, and carries a bullet through his shoulder from Indian raids, but in spite of age and injury he will meet the old boys here next week, and live again the days of Texas border life.

Honored Guests
Everything possible is being done to make the second annual convention of the Ex-Texas Rangers, in Ranger, a success. They were our guests last year and like the treatment they received so much, they decided to return again this year, and the Chamber of Commerce feels that it is an honor to play hosts to this tiny remnant of brave men who protected the border and outlying posts of Texas and made it safe for those who enjoy its boundaries today.

It is not planned to charge them for any entertainment. Everything is to be contributed and the various committees are meeting with pretty good response. The main things is homes for the honored guests. A bed and breakfast are the only things that the people of Ranger as a whole will be asked to contribute. Anyone who can take care of one or two or more, are asked to phone Dr. Harry Logsdon, chairman of the housing committee.

Field Men Are Busy In Work Of System

Now that the Stoner people, who are in Ranger putting in a unit system, have gotten a working basis, field men are out in the field, for the purpose of measuring all taxable property, which is a part of the system.

This will be followed by appraisal of the buildings and placing of land units.

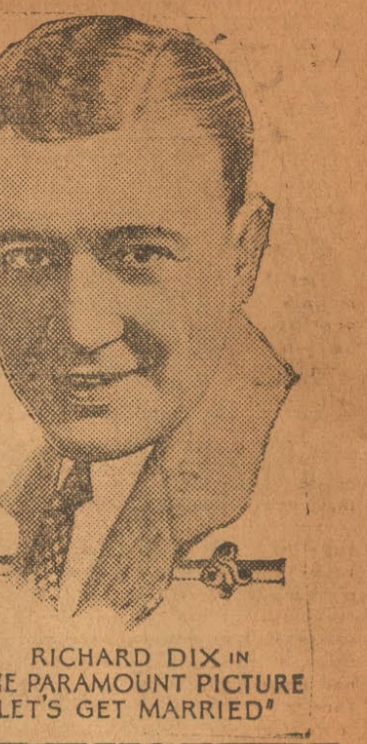

These building measuring crews will visit the homes of Ranger, and householders are asked not to treat them as agents, but to co-operate with them as much as they can by giving them the information they ask for, as each bit of information is a cog in the wheel of the unit system.

These building crews are merely gathering information, for building appraisals, and as the information comes into the office, the office crew takes each individual piece of property and locates it on the map of the city by a symbol.

These unit valuations are reviewed by an appraisal committee appointed by the city, at some later date, and this committee, together with the information gathered, and officials of the Stoner company, estimates the ground value.

The work is being pushed as rapidly as a accuracy will permit by the representatives of the Stoner company.

The VANITY CASE

by CAROLYN WELLS

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Mrs. Prentiss, who suffers from insomnia, sees lights mysteriously appearing and disappearing in the Heath household next door one night and the next morning Harbor Gardens, Long Island, is agog with the murder of Myra Heath and the disappearance of her husband, Perry, an artist.

House guests of the Heaths are Lawrence Inman and Bunny Moore. Inman might have a motive because he is heir to Myra's considerable fortune, she having made her will in his favor and cut her husband off. Suspicion also points toward Bunny, a vivacious, golden-haired beauty, because of her refusal to answer questions at inquest and the fact she had apparently known the murder before the maid, who went to her room to inform her.

Myra Heath was a peculiar woman, beautiful but cold. She did not love her husband; she never used cosmetics, never wore colors; she had a mania for collecting rare bits of glass, and it was an old whiskey bottle that was the instrument of her death—a bottle from her own collection.

Candles were burning at her head and feet when a maid discovered her body, and nearby was a cord marked, "The Work of Perry Heath." Strangest of all, she was made up heavily with rouge and dressed in gay colors.

At the Country Club the murder is discussed by Sam Anderson, Al Cunningham and others, some believing Perry Heath the murderer, others disagreeing. The strangest thing about Heath's disappearance is the fact that all the doors and windows had been locked on the inside the night before and were found that way in the morning.

Finger prints of Inman and Bunny Moore are found on the bottle, and the coroner declares his belief that the murderer will be found in the household.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XIII

Had Larry been less perturbed, he must have laughed at the pompous air and stilted diction of the coroner. But he was dismayed at the turn things had taken. He had had no doubts but the coroner would at once assume Perry Heath guilty and forthwith institute a search for him.

"Your assumptions are not without interest," Larry said, looking at the coroner. "But what, then, is the meaning of the eccentric act of painting Mrs. Heath's face and adding colorful touches to her costume? This point was an obsession with Mr. Heath, but no one else would have done such a thing."

"As I understand it, nearly all of Mrs. Heath's friends and acquaintances urged her to use a touch of make-up, and, too, we have no real reason to assume that the rouge was applied to Mrs. Heath's face after she was dead. It may well be that she consented to the experiment while still alive."

Inman looked startled.

"Surely a medical man can tell you about this."

This speech deeply annoyed the coroner, for he suddenly realized his own delinquency in not having thought of that point.

He therefore ignored it, until such time as he could correct his own error.

"Then the card, of such sinister significance. It is scarcely possible that Mr. Heath would have placed that where it was found, if the terrible deed had been really his own work."

"That's just where you're wrong," Larry exclaimed. "Perry Heath is full of the spirit of bravado. He has a diabolical sense of humor. It is exactly what he would do—attach a gruesome signature to his own work."

"I can't agree with that. But we are not seeking opinions, we want facts. If then we assume Mr. Heath went away on some simple or casual errand, where do you think he is now?"

"That is surely a matter of opinion, Mr. Coroner, and you say you are out for facts. But I can't opine about Mr. Heath's casual errand—if he went on one—for I am fully convinced that he killed his wife and then disappeared purposely and permanently."

"Getting out of the house and leaving no unlocked door or window."

"Surely he had his latch key."

"But the front door was fastened on the inside with a chain bolt."

"Then by some overlooked window, or side door, perhaps."

"No, we had the most thorough and careful search made in that respect. Herrick fastened every door and window on the inside, last night. And he found the bars and bolts all intact this morning."

"Then I give it up, but I still feel sure that there must be some obscure entrance or exit from this house, that Perry Heath could use, if so minded."

"Will you suggest one?"

"In the cellar, perhaps the coal hole."

"Not a chance. Everything down there was cut off from the main house, by the upper cellar door, leading from the pantries, and which is the only means of connection with the cellar. This door was locked as usual, on the pantry side. Heath could not have gone down through it, and left it locked."

"Let me go over the house, and I'll guarantee I can find several ways he could have left his home secretly. Lord knows I've no wish to accuse Perry Heath of this thing if he is not guilty, but, personally, I think there is no slightest sign of his innocence."

"You say you all urged Mrs. Heath to use what is known as 'make-up' on her face?"

"Yes, we did. We all felt it would improve her extremely pale countenance."

"You thought that, too, Miss Moore?"

Osborn had a most disconcerting way of turning with a sudden question to another witness.

"Wh, yes," Bunny said, pulling herself together. "We have all been in the habit of jesting about it."

"Then the crime was clearly the work of some one who knew of the distaste of Mrs. Heath for cosmetics, and some one who had sufficient nerve to apply the coloring to a dead woman's face."

"You said you were not sure she was dead when"—Larry began, but the coroner interrupted him.

"I am sure now," he referred to a written message which had been handed him. "I asked Doctor Conklin to investigate that matter, and he tells me that the cosmetics were applied to Mrs. Heath's face after death."

"How can he tell?" Larry growled.

"There are many ways to ascertain that. A physician could not be mistaken. Now, what I want to know is, where is the vanity box that was used for the purpose."

"That's easy," said Inman. "When I left the room, I saw a gold vanity box with lots of dangling trinkets, lying on the table."

"It is not there now. Who removed it?"

Nobody answered, and the coroner, turning to Bunny, said:

"Do you think it was Mrs. Heath's own?"

"I think it must have been," she replied, but her voice shook in spite of her efforts to keep it steady.

"Then why has it disappeared?"

"I'm sure I don't know," Bunny had recovered her pertness, if not her poise. "I suppose whoever used it, carried it off. They are sometimes valuable trifles, and I think it was a burglar who did the whole crime."

She put her head on one side like a wise canary bird, and falling under the spell of her helpless air and wistful countenance, the coroner forbore to question her further.

But, whether by reason of Osborn's lack of skill, or the non-committal evidence of the witnesses, no points of real importance were forthcoming, and the awe-struck and bewildered jury brought in the open verdict of murder by unknown hands, but with a strong recommendation that Perry Heath be found.

Food Problem Is Solved By Co-operation

STOCKHOLM—The bread and butter problem for 315,000 families in Sweden, or over one-third of the entire population, is now handled through the Co-operative societies, which make margarine, mill flour, bake bread, prepare meats and distribute these products through over 2,000 retail stores scattered all over the country.

Its wholesale business is by far the largest in Sweden and it also runs savings banks, writes insurance, both life and fire, publishes books on economic topics and in order to keep its members informed on market news, publishes a weekly newspaper whose circulation of 228,000 is the largest in Sweden.

Physiologist Says Hanging Increases Crime

By United Press.
 OXFORD, Eng., Aug. 6.—Capital punishment increases frequency of murder, Dr. James Drever, noted psychologist, told the British Association for the Advancement of Science here today.

"Not only does capital punishment increase the crime of murder," he said, "but it effects a brutalizing influence on society at large."

"Problems of all punishments for crime eventually effect society, but the question of whether we can reform individuals through punishment is a highly arguable one."

Dr. Drever declared that all prison sentences, no matter how short, seriously alter the whole life of the subject and that the restraint of imprisonment, imposed by society as a protective measure to itself, in the long run works in the opposite direction.

He recommended a closer contact between medical and legal methods as a solution to the problem.

Farmer's Short Course at A. & M. Full Of Action

COLLEGE STATION, Aug. 6.—Addresses by persons prominent in the field of agriculture, announcement of state winners in the kitchen improvement contest and the arrival of more than 100 Milam county visitors by auto were feature events on Wednesday at the A. and M. college of Texas as the third day of the farmers' short course swung into action. Milam county day was observed with musical entertainment furnished by the Junior Band from Cameron.

The three-day meeting of the Texas Farm Bureau was opened on Wednesday morning in Gulon Hall, where addresses were made by Miss Susan Landon of the North Carolina Cotton Growers' Association; Dr. T. O. Walton, president of the A. and M. College; and Walton Petet, secretary of the National Council of farmers' organization, with headquarters in Washington.

SWEETWATER, Texas, Aug. 6. Building permits amounting to $261,650, have been issued here for the first six months of the year, which is a substantial increase over permits issued for the same period last year. Improvements on the Nolan County Fair Grounds, the letting of contracts for a municipal auditorium and fire station and high school building, are expected to boost the year's buildings permits' total to a new high record mark.

BEDFORD NEWS

BEDFORD, Aug. 5.—Our revival meeting will begin next Sunday morning and for that purpose a number of the men of the community are building a new arbor near the church.

Saturday night an ice cream party was enjoyed by a number of our young people at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Hibbert.

Bedford is rather dead this week as six of our liveliest young people left Saturday night for A. and M. college to take advantage of the annual short course offered by that institution. The members going from Bedford were Dona, Della and Tuddie Matthews, Nina Smith and the Spruill twins.

Miss Beatrice Wright is the house guest of Miss Emma Hatton.

Glenn Hibbert and family of Cisco spent Saturday night with his brother, Charlie Hibbert.

Everybody on the Spruill Ranch will be assured of something to do for the next three weeks as the molasses mill on that place is in full sway.

Motion Pictures Like Life; They Sing, Move, Play

Special Correspondence.
NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—Motion pictures and music, perfectly synchronized, and lifelike to an almost uncanny degree, were presented to a Broadway theatre audience tonight. Representing the culmination of years of acoustical and photographic experiment and research, scientists and critics expressed the opinion that the new invention heralds a radical change in the entire complexion of the motion picture industry.

The Vitaphone is the new instrument which has made it possible for pictured singers really to sing, and great orchestras to play as they are seen to swing into action on the silver screen. The film play, John Barrymore's "Don Juan," was the vehicle for presentation of the invention, which is the culmination of months of experiments by Warner Brothers, the Western Electric company, the Bell Telephone laboratories and the Victor Talking Machine company.

Great arias by Giovanni Martinelli, Marion Talley and Anna Case, all of the Metropolitan opera, were heard as their pictured lips formed the words and notes. Mischa Elman and Zimbalist were reproduced with almost uncanny fidelity as bows swept violins. Finally, in the prologue in "Don Juan," the New York philharmonic orchestra was flashed upon the screen, and as Henry Hadley, the conductor raised his baton, the strains of the great symphony organization swept through the Warner theatre.

The entire action of the film play was interpreted musically by the philharmonic orchestra, pictures and accompaniment never being out of synchronism for a moment.

The Vitaphone is the result of a new tendency in American business—development—the co-operation of apparently unrelated industries, to insure the utilization of by-products of industrial research. In developing equipment for long distance telephone communication, scientists of the Western Electric company and the Bell Telephone laboratories perfected highly improved equipment for recording and reproducing sound electrically. The next logical step was the filming of motion and the recording of music simultaneously, with a camera and a recording instrument operated in synchronism. When the film and the record were run in synchronism, the fidelity of the original was reproduced.

When actual work of producing the first Vitaphone films and records began, the technicians of the Victor Talking Machine company's laboratories, joined the collaborators.

Warner Brothers, producers of "Don Juan," saw in the Vitaphone a means of uniting elaborate motion picture production with music of the highest type, in such a way that any theatre, no matter how large or how small, might take advantage of the new development. The premiere of the instrument is considered by the critics as having measured up to expectations.

The motion picture projector and the musical reproducer are operated from a single electric motor, absolutely accurate synchronism being thus insured. Highly developed loud speaker equipment, located with scientific accuracy, creates the illusion that the source of the music is the singer or the musician appearing on the screen.

Car Accidents Put Woman and Man in Hospital

BRECKENRIDGE, Aug. 6.—Ed Bailey, 50; Woodson; and Mrs. E. N. Davidson, 36, Black Camp, are in Breckenridge hospitals today, following two car accidents occurring between the hours of 7 o'clock and 10 o'clock last night.

Mrs. E. N. Davidson, 36, Black Camp is in the Breckenridge Sanitarium suffering from a fractured skull, lacerations about the head, and bruises over her body, following an accident at the street intersection of West Walker and Miller avenue at 7 o'clock last night, when she was thrown from a Ford touring car onto the pavement.

The accident occurred, it is reported, when the Ford touring car going East, struck the rear bumper of the Dodge coupe, driven by Mrs. N. A. Zinn, which was making a south turn at the street intersections of West Walker and Miller avenue. Mrs. Davidson was taken to the Breckenridge Sanitarium by ambulance, where she received medical attention. An X-Ray examination was made today, and attending physicians reported that the results showed a fracture of the right side of her skull.

Attendants reported that she was resting well this afternoon. Ed Bailey is in the West Side hospital, suffering from serious injuries received last night about 10 o'clock, seven miles south of town on the main highway, when he and his 14-year-old son, R. L. Bailey, who were on their way from Carbon to Woodson, were blinded by the lights of a truck going south, striking the rear end of another loaded with pipe that had been on its way toward Breckenridge but which had stopped on the road for repairs, according to a statement made by R. L. Bailey, the boy.

When Bailey and his son saw the truck stopped just in front of him, after they had been almost blinded, they swerved the car in an attempt to miss it, but hit the trailer, overturning the touring car, in the middle of the road, it was reported. It was stated that the truck had been stopped on the road so that the driver could unstop the gasoline line.

A passing car brought the message to town and an ambulance hurried to the scene and took the injured man to the Westside Hospital, it was declared. An X-Ray picture showed that Bailey had a fractured skull, physicians stated.

The elder Bailey's skull was fractured on the left front side, while his right ear was almost severed from his head, attendants said. Attending physicians also stated that he was probably suffering from some internal injuries, and body bruises.

Truly Christian Nation Does Not Exist, Boys Say

By HENRY WOOD
(United Press Correspondent)
GENEVA.—There is no such thing in the world today as "truly Christian nations."

This is the cynical conviction of the youth of the entire world, as revealed by the almost universal reply to the international headquarters here of the Young Men's Christian Association in response to a questionnaire sent to local associations in over fifty countries.

The information asked for on this and a score of other questions is intended to furnish the basis of an analysis of just what the young of the world are thinking about today.

As to whether the youth of the world today is thinking more about religion than patriotism, it was quickly demonstrated that patriotism takes the lead. It was precisely these boys who are thinking more about patriotism than religion who declared that no really Christian nations exist at the present time.

The reply from Great Britain, giving the consensus of opinion of over 30,000 boys is as follows:

"Christian nations are usually stronger, and spend a great deal of their time robbing non-Christian nations. Lack of faith in political methods was very generally expressed and as a matter of fact throughout the British Empire was virtually universal. Perhaps the most sweeping indictment came from the Japanese boys and young men who replied:

"Christian countries are powerful; non-Christian ones are weak; thought of non-Christian countries is deep, that of Christian countries superficial; civilization of Christian countries is materialistic, but that of non-Christian countries is spiritual."

Virtually all the boys expressed the conviction that God has no favorite nation. To these, however, there was one notable exception, a boy from Canada, who replied:

"God must have a favorite nation or the British Empire would not be where it is."

Most classified the greatest nations of the world as being France, Germany, England, Japan and the United States, although not always in the same order. Where the United States was not placed first, it was almost invariably placed second. Generally the boys voted for their own country first.

Consider the mosquito. He gets swatted for making a noise about what he is going to do.

Stubblefield Holds Up Well; Reiter Deepens

BRECKENRIDGE, Aug. 6.—The Stubblefield No. 1 of the Humble Oil and Refining Company near Woodson, which this week sprang into the limelight as one of the most sensational developments of the past month in oil operations in this section when it reached a flow of 128 barrels an hour from the 3800 foot sand had dropped from its peak to about 80 barrels an hour this morning, according to late reports, and looked good to settle around 300 or 400 barrels per day, it is stated.

The oil is high gravity, testing 42 degrees Baume. The territory in which the new production was encountered already has a number of wells producing from 3200 foot sands, the Reiter-Foster, Humble and Red Bank companies being leaders in the development in the area. Wells from this first sand have been good for settled production of between 50 and 100 barrels per day.

With the success of the Humble in the quest for new pay at the 3800 foot level deepening operations are expected to be carried on in practically all other wells now producing from the first sand it is said, provided subsequent tests prove successful. The Reiter-Foster already rebuilding and moving in tools to deepen its Stubblefield No. 1, an offset to the Humble Stubblefield which has become the center of interest there. The Reiter-Foster well is reported to be making about 40 barrels per day.

The Humble company has already made two new locations upon which drilling will be started as soon as derricks can be built and rigging completed.

The entire territory, six miles north of Woodson, is declared to look good for heavy play during the next few months and local oil men are regarding developments there with growing interest.

ROLLICKING RICHARD TO ARRIVE AT LAMB TODAY

Advance reports tell us that Richard Dix's latest Paramount picture, "Let's Get Married," which arrives at the Lamb Theatre today and plays again Saturday is good. They say it is a gay comedy that starts at sixty miles an hour and gets faster every foot.

We are asked to imagine rollicking Richard as a wild young man whose lovely fiancée threatens him with the gate if he gets into any more crapes. Innocently, he is caught in a raid on a cabaret and sent to jail for thirty days. He tries, by means of letters, to convince her that he is selling hymn books to South Sea cannibals, and his tale almost works until—but then, you'd better see "Let's Get Married."
