Murphy Giles Gets Pinched When Creek Transportation Casts Dead Horse at Police Commissioner's Door.

Continued gloomy weather yesterday afternoon snapped the tender thread that for the last few months has prevented the neurasthenic horse of Murphy Giles, negro, of Cypress street, from becoming a liability. All vestige of life departed from the horse during the heavy rain and Giles conceived the idea of saving funeral expenses by shipping the body elsewhere for funeral and interment via the creek route. The high waters selected Police Commissioner Lon Davenport as the undertaker and the body of the horse was washed up on the bank a short distance from his home on North Rusk street.

Ownership of the horse was traced and Giles pinched. He was released, however, on his promise to haul the dead animal seven miles from the city and on the other side of the Hagaman Lake watershed. He was further warned that his other horse, now in the last stages of general debility must be given a similar funeral on his demise, but Giles declared that he planned to lead the animal away before he died.

THE NEW CHAMBER.

OR STATE OF THE PARTY OF THE PA

Like everything else, the Chamber of Commerce has been deflated, dissolved. In its stead, civic leaders today are at work rearing a new institution, to do those things which are properly the function of such a civic body, and which are not done thoroughly and well unless there is an organization devoted exclusively

This new organization does not propose to wear the vestments of the old nor retain any fixed policies. The plans propose that a membership shall be obtained, then those members shall meet, elect their own officers, choose their own method of procedure and otherwise lay plans for working in harmony and for the best interests of the city.

That is a plan that should appeal to every citizen. It means a new deal. It means that whatever cause of friction may have existed, or that some persons have thought existed. have been removed, and that all can forget whatever has lain in the past and join hands in an organization with no past to hamper it. Since a large part of the members of each body will be members of the other, that should be easy. Each can be a specialist, just as are a man's "fork" hand and his "knife" hand, and with the two, Ranger can do much more—just as two hands can do more than one.

There are functions which indisputably belong to the Merchants' association. There are other functions which indisputably belong to a chamber of commerce. With these two bodies working in harmony, many things can be accomplished, and many internal frictions will be avoided, which would inevitably arise if all were united in one body and conflicting interests should arise. The Times believes the Merchants' association will welcome the New Chamber of Commerce, and aid it to successful formation, just as the promulgators of the new chamber have indorsed the Merchants' asso-

100% Depreciation

The depreciation of type and other material used in printing is 100 per cent a year. It is necessary to replace such yearly to produce quality printing, but printing can be done with the old type if an "I don't care" policy is maintained.

At an expense of hundreds of dollars we have "dumped" every piece of type, borders, etc., in the "hell box," and can turn out as good work as is done anywhere.

In addition to type it takes a thorough knowledge of the "printers' art." We have a man in charge of our department who is considered a past master in the art—meet him.

Thursday he walked several miles to Lake Chuzenii, scorning to use a sedan chair carried by coolies. Although he had seen many thousand jinrikishas in India and China, he tried his first one here. The prince dismissed the coolie, took the shafts and then ordered Admiral Halsey to step in.

He pulled the jinrikisha so rapidly that he swerved into a ditch and smashed it. He confessed that the coolie was better qualified as a jin rikisha expert than he was and insisted on settling the bill for the smashed conveyance on the spot.

The Japanese officials were flabbergasted at the sight of their royal guest performing the humble task. While walking along the trail the prince stopped at a wayside curio shop and purchased a crooked cane, which he intends to present to Sir Harry Lauder.

AMUSU CLUB MEETING.

The home of Mrs. W. J. McFarland with its cozy interior was in striking contrast to the outdoors yesterday afternoon, when she was hostess to the Amusu club, and all forgot the inclement weather when they parked their umbrellas and overshoes outside the door and felt the warmth of welcome that met them inside. It seems that rainy days are always the best days for playing cards, and yesterday was no exception to the rule. The high score club prize, pillow cover em broidered by hand, went to Mrs. John H. KEEPER AND HUGE APE BATTLE IN CAGE AT ZOO

TOLEDO, O., April 27 .- Tony, the giant ape of the Walbridge Park zoo, after a savage attack on his keeper. was beaten down in the open park by employes armed with shovels and pickaxes and finally killed with a revolver shot. Louis Scherer, veteran chief keeper of the zoo, is in Mercy hospital, fearfully mangled by the ape's attack.

Specialists are examining the brain of the ape to determine whether there is danger of hydrophobia. The man and the animal fought for life in the cage until their struggles brought them out into the open park.

A short time ago Scherer had to club Tony, who was attacking another keeper. Apparently the ape remembered. He lay in wait for Scherer and when the latter entered the cage sprang on him, clawing and biting savegely. Scherer rained blows on the brute's skull with a brick without effect.
