PIMPLES QUICKLY CLEARED UP

So-called skin diseases are caused by poisons from the perspiration becoming congested in the tiny pores and glands of the skin because they can't get out. Unhealthy skin holds them back and you know what must happen when you continue to let this condition exist. For this reason "skin lotions," etc., can't possibly help you any. You need what is known as Black and White Ointment, which heals the sores, builds up the tissue of the skin, makes it active, so it naturally expels all the acid poisons which the system must throw off through the pores. Then, pimples, blotches, "breaking out," eczema, etc., quickly disappear. Black and White Ointment is economically priced in generous packages. The 50c size contains three times as much as the 25c size. All dealers have Black and White Soap, too, so you can keep your face, neck, hands and arms lovely and clear.

Treaks of Noted Disasters

RUNAWAY houses, pursued and recaptured by swift motor boats; children asleep on a mattress blown high into a tree; a squawking rooster jammed head first into a water pitcher; herds of cattle blown across a wide bay; a field of corn completely mowed by flying iron—

These are some of the authentic treaks of disasters. They will seem incredible only to those who have not been through the unforgettable experience of a tornado hurricane or flood. Some of the strangest phenomena on record have resulted from tornadoes, those gigantic whirling dervishes of the sky whose terrific force throws buildings about as a boy throws pebbles.

In the administration of the relief task following all major disasters in recent years, workers of the American Red Cross have witnessed the strangest of happenings as a result of the unleashing of nature's mighty forces. Often these workers are the first outside aid to arrive on the scene and are personal witnesses of events that would seem rightfully to belong only in the realm of fiction.

Every one of the strange happenings recounted in this narrative have either been directly witnessed by Red Cross Relief Workers or else bear the stamp of verity given by meticulous investigation. Henry M. Baker, National Director of Red Cross Disaster Relief, has personally interviewed most of the persons involved.

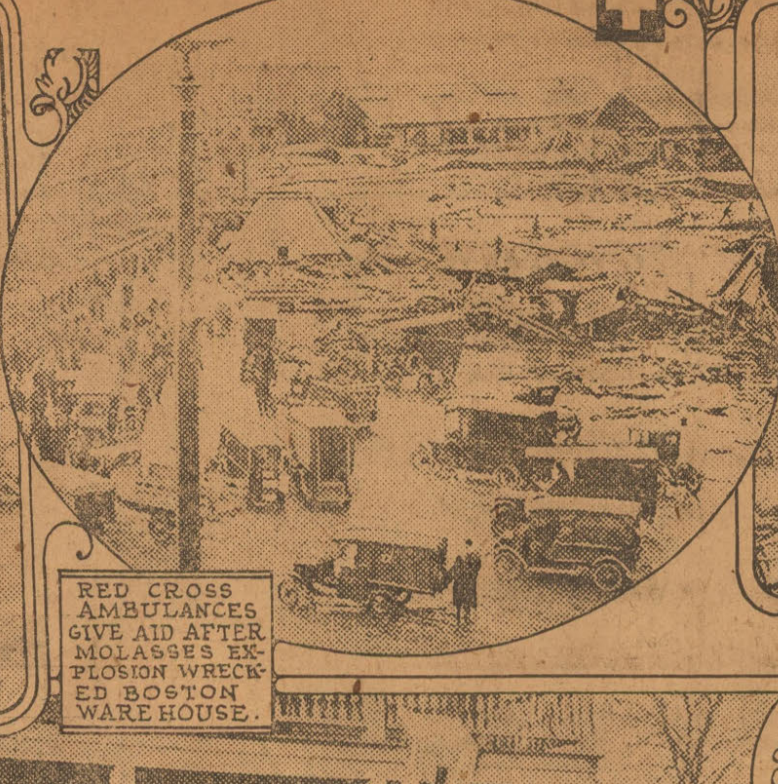

One victim of a tornado's wildest whims was an old Italian named Tony, who ran a fruit stand in Atlanta, Texas. Tony had been picked up in the giant arms of the great storm, carried through the air a quarter of a mile and then dropped feet first into a well. That would have been the end of the story had not one of those strange coincidences happened that often attend the passing of the twister. By the same tremendous rotary motion that causes such terrible damage to everything in its path, the tornado sucked more than three feet of water out of the well, leaving Tony's head still above the surface. The dual action saved the old Italian and when he was rescued hours later he apparently had suffered only a few cuts and bruises. The aftermath of his terrifying experience, however, was a nervous collapse which yielded only to long and expert treatment.

One of the inexplicable features of tornadoes is their uncanny penchant for sparing the most fragile things. Recently the great tornado in Northern Ohio picked up a house at Lorain and literally stood it on its roof. From an inverted chandelier hung four electric globes, not one of which was even cracked.

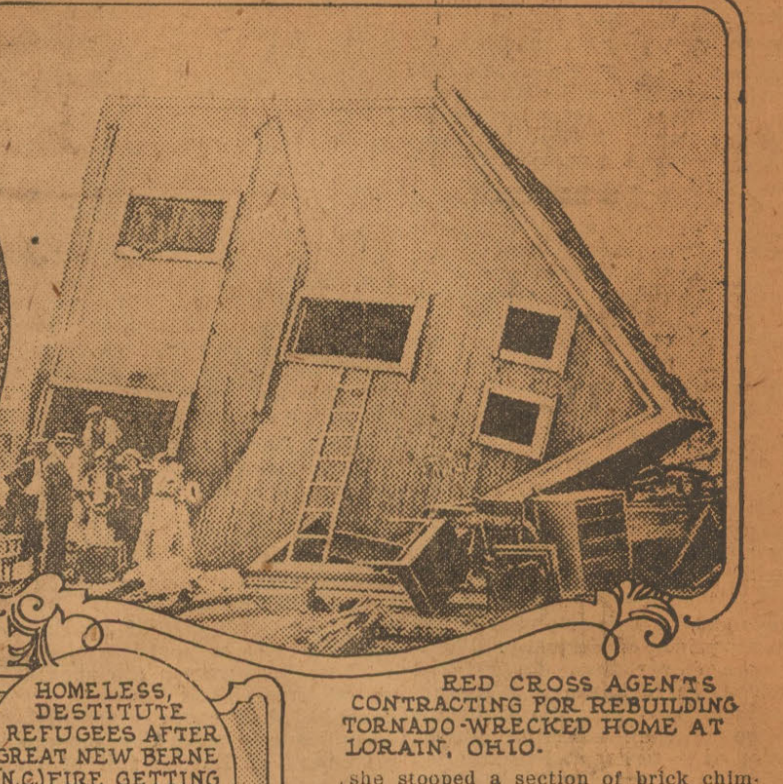

Another and even more remarkable instance of this tendency occurred following the passage of a twister through the town of Blevins, Ark. Searching amidst the ruins of a completely demolished home, Red Cross nurse heard the frantic squawking of a rooster. The most minute search failed to reveal the bird until the nurse's eye fell on a water pitcher that was shaking violently back and forth. Attracted by this strange phenomenon, she found the trouble. It was necessary for her to crack the unbroken pitcher with a stone to release a very bedraggled Chanticleer, who, completely de-feathered by the terrific wind, had been jammed head first into the pitcher.

So far as is known, the highest wind velocity attained during the height of a cyclone or tornado is 212 miles an hour. This terrific speed must have been approached when, on August 27, 1924, a violent hurricane swept in from the Caribbean Sea and over parts of the Virgin Islands. Of a large herd of cattle, 22 steers were blown across Coral Bay and into a pasture on the opposite side. They were found lying dead in a row some distance inland from the water. In a demolished village on the shores of the bay, a Red Cross field representative tells of a native family with eleven children whose home had been completely destroyed. When it became light enough to count the children two were found to be missing and were later found, still asleep, on their mattress, which had been blown high into a tree.

"Anything can happen during a cyclone or tornado," is the expressed belief of Red Cross Disaster Relief workers. Their years of experience in the field sooner or later make them think nothing impossible. During a series of cyclonic storms that ravaged several Southern states in the Fall of 1923 one family in a small town in South Carolina saw the ominous funnel-shaped cloud coming. Looking arms, they threw themselves face downward on the bed in their small cabin. The tornado struck, with a fearful roar. A few moments later the cowering figures felt a heavy jar, followed by silence. Gathering courage they stood up and looked about them. The roof and sides of the house were gone. Nothing was left but the floor upon which they stood. Investigating further, they found that they were nearly a quarter of a mile away from the site of their home. The tornado had carried away the floor supporting them and the bed, and dropped the whole business in an apple orchard.

In the National Museum in Washington is the trunk of a tree that had been completely severed by rifle bullets fired during one of the great battles of the Civil War. People are frequently amazed by the peculiar way in which tornadoes destroy trees, which are not uprooted, as one would imagine, but twisted off a few feet above the ground. This undoubtedly is due to the rotary motion of the funnel-shaped cloud, which, revolving at terrific speed, grinds up everything in its path and then discharges. Authentic instances are on record of straws having been driven through tree stumps by tornadoes. The Chamber of Commerce at Hope, Ark., has as a relic the trunk of a large tree nearly severed by a piece of flying tin as large as a telephone book.

Outside of a small town in Texas a fine stand of corn, covering nearly 30 acres, was mowed down, not by the tornado itself, but by sheets of galvanized iron hurled out of a wrecked hardware store nearly half a mile away.

At Texarkana, Texas, a cyclone drove a piece of four-inch water pipe through the neck of a horse making a clean cut hole through which a person could look through to the other side. Despite the injury the horse lived for three days.

Sometimes, though it must be admitted, not often, a disaster is not an unmitigated tragedy. Occasionally, it replaces in kind what it has taken away. Witness a flood at Burlington, Kansas, which picked up a fine new garage and carried it far down stream, only to bring another one from up the river and lay it in the back yard almost on the very site of its lost companion. A similar occurrence took place during the Lorain tornado, which picked up and threw into Lake Erie a touring car parked by its owner in an adjoining lot, and by way of compensation presented him with a nearly-new sedan. During a Kansas flood a dry goods dealer had practically his entire stock ruined by flood waters 14 feet deep. In an ironic gesture of reparation the swirling waters washed a popcorn stand through the plate glass windows at the front of the store and parked it on a balcony in the rear.

Miraculous escapes, with death surging all around, have spared the lives of many people caught in disasters. In the great flood at Pueblo, Colo., two years ago, a desperate mother, with her little two-year-old girl in her arms, climbed the foot-spikes of a telegraph pole. As the waters slowly mounted, she climbed higher. For hours she hung on successfully, but the raging waters finally tore her child from her deadened arms. Rescuers in a skiff who saw her plight hours later experienced the greatest difficulty in releasing the nearly demented woman from the pole. Her convulsive grasp had to be broken loose. The climax of the story was reached when Red Cross workers found the little daughter, alive and kicking, where she had been washed up on the top of an overturned freight car.

Three members of a family escaped death during a tornado in Oklahoma despite the fact that the entire upper part of the house fell on them. Rescues were astonished to hear their cries emerging from the hopeless ruins of their home. But what was the amazement of a Red Cross volunteer to find that father, mother and son were practically unscathed! When the storm first struck, the three had taken refuge under the baby grand piano, but this capsize. In falling, however, it was checked by the piano stool, the whole making a pyramid which successfully turned aside the falling wreckage. Except for being nearly suffocated by dust from broken plaster, the family was practically unharmed.

The "psychological moment" figured in saving from a terrible death a woman in the same tornado-swept town. When her house began to rock under the force of the twister, she said to her husband: "I must get Johnny to a safe place." Stopping over to pick up the child, who was playing on the floor with a toy, saved her life. At the very moment she stooped a section of brick chimney torn off the house next door smashed through the wall of the room and shot out through the window, exactly as a shell from a cannon. Had she not bent over at that second, she would have been beheaded.

One of the strangest situations ever encountered by Red Cross Disaster Relief workers was met during the great Ohio floods. The town of Future City, Ill., was literally wiped off the map. Every house and outbuilding was torn from its site and sent reeling down the Ohio River, like a great herd of bathing elephants.

Crowds lining the straining levees were then spectators to a chase that probably has no parallel in history. Red Cross relief workers manned a fleet of motor boats and rushed in all directions after the runaway houses. A boat would dash alongside a house, her crew would deftly attach a hawser to it and then, with racing motor, the "tug" and her strange tow would go slowly back, bucking the flood waters, to Future City, where the dwelling would be anchored to a projecting tree or telegraph pole and the home savers would dash off for more houses.

Stewart's Washington Letter

BY CHARLES P. STEWART
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—Why won't the "powers" come to President Coolidge's disarmament conference? They came to President Harding's and were glad to disarm—partially. When President Coolidge suggests another conference, to disarm some more, they turn him down. Why?

Well, President Harding was in a position to say, substantially, "America has the world's strongest navy. Our warship-building program will make it stronger still. You can't catch up. You're broke. We're not poor. But if you'll scrap a few million dollars' worth of your ships, we'll scrap a few hundred millions' worth of ours."

and we'll be on an even basis. What say?" Naturally the others agreed.

What President Coolidge says is, "England, the way this thing has worked out, you're ahead of us in battleships. Japan, you've out-built us in cruisers. France, your air fleet beats ours a mile. We invite you to scrap yourselves down to our level." "Ha, ha," chorus the governments of England, France and Japan.

unable to understand or even believe.

WHILE the American Cotton Manufacturers Association was in convention here, leading delegates called on President Coolidge to tell him that the country's industries want higher tariff rates. In reply the president told this story, as old as Aesop, but oh, so apropos: A dog with a bone in his mouth was crossing a bridge. Glancing into the water, he thought he saw another dog with a bone in his mouth, too. The greedy real dog instantly dropped his real bone to grab at the imaginary one. Just as instantly the water closed over the real bone, and presto! no imaginary bone was there.

HOWEVER, the rest of his auto safety plans may work out. M. O. Eldridge, Washington's new traffic director, has installed one institution which is working wonders. When an offender is arrested there's no delay, no release on bond, no chance to sidestep. The prisoner is dragged into the traffic court—which sits day and night—as fast as a policeman can get him there, red-handed, perhaps with his breath still smelling, and forthwith his medicine is ladled out. In ten days the capital's streets have been transformed. From among the most dangerous in the country, they have become almost safe.

THE CLYDE LINE of New York has just launched another ship at Newport News for its coastwise trade between Manhattan and Florida ports. The Cherokee was launched some time ago. Now the Seminole, Next the Mohawk. They're fine craft, costing some millions apiece. Now, why is the Clyde Line building new vessels, with government-owned ships cluttering American waters, idle and for sale for a song? The answer is that very few of the government's tubs are worth the song.

Four Women Lead In Intrigue to Restore the Monarchy In Germany

By T. C. HALLINAN, United Press Staff Correspondent. LONDON, May 16.—Women play a leading part in the monarchist movements in Europe by their votes, as in Germany; by their money, influence, activities in all the other countries where vacant thrones yearn for their kings again.

And four women, in particular, may be described as the dynamic factors in the monarchist movements of Europe. There are other factors contributing such as the landed interests, a popular weariness strange with republicanism, the hard cash which the monarchists possess in abundance but these four women are the energies of the movement.

Wife of Wilhelm. One is the Princess Hermine, the second wife of the former emperor of Germany. She lives, of course, at Doorn, but she moves all over Germany and where she moves there is a thrill, a revival of old loyalties. She is intensely ambitious.

The second one is the wife of the ex-crown prince of Germany. She is far more clever than the Princess Hermine. In fact, she is a Romanoff, which is to say, she is of the one-time reigning house of Russia, accustomed to power and prestige on a scale far transcending that of her new step-mother-in-law. She sails a yacht. She plays tennis with verve. And she is simply crazy to get the crown prince back on the throne. Experienced Old World diplomats, swooning before the fresh impact of her personality, have been heard to say that if she had $678.18 free of mortgage and incumbrance, she could make the German republic look to its jaded laurels. This may be exaggeration, but certainly she seems to have impressed a number of experts not easily impressed and her career she would be followed by those with the slightest taste for the bizarre.

The third woman who threatens to make trouble for the decorous League of Nations is the Princess Antoinette of Luxembourg, the young and pretty wife of Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria. She thinks that her husband should be emperor of Germany since the rival house of Hohenzollern has made such a sad mess of things. She insists that Munich, the capital of Bavaria, has been—thanks to her dearly beloved Rupprecht—a far more civilized and attractive capital than Berlin under the rude Hohenzollerns. Why then, she cries, should Germany not give the Wittelsbach family a trial?

The fourth female who is doing her best to restore the old order which America has helped to overthrow, is the ex-Empress Zita of the old Austria-Hungary. She has no yacht, but she has seven children of which the oldest is 14. She thinks the 14-year-old Prince Otto should be on the throne of Hungary, and she has some of the most powerful families and statesmen in Hungary cordially agreeing with her. She carries high and proudly the banner of the Hapsburg dynasty.

Another Ambition. Theoretically, the present regent of Hungary, the amiable Admiral Horthy, is merely holding the throne until the Hapsburg family can resume it. Actually, Admiral Horthy has manifested some ambition to keep the throne for himself. So that there is a hitch, but the ex-Empress Zita has to be reckoned with.

These four women are apparently never idle. Their intensity, their devotion, their capacity for prolonged intrigue, make the monarchist movement of Europe full of tragic surprises.

BOOKS ARRIVING FOR APPELLATE COURT LIBRARY

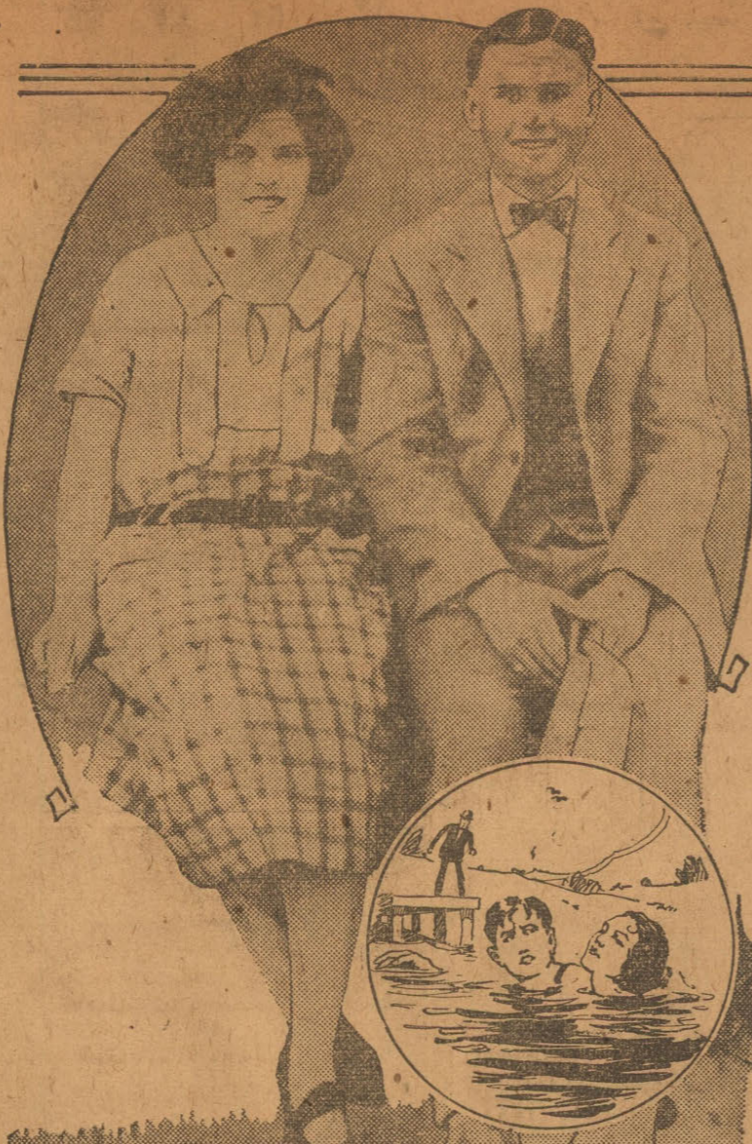

Roy Nunnally, clerk of the 11th court of civil appeals at Eastland, states that a large number of the books for the court library have arrived. Many of these were from Abilene and were a part of the Sayles library and were donated for the use of the court by John and Perry Sayles of Eastland.

It will require several days yet to complete the work of arranging quarters for the court and it will doubtless be after the first of June before this work is completed, Mr. Nunnally says.

Owing to the fact that the present term of this court closes the latter part of June for the summer vacation, it is not likely that more than a few minor cases will be handled by the court this term.

Hear The "Mary Songs" Again On Chautauqua Circuit

George Cohan has written for the Liberty magazine the story of his life. In writing this story Mr. Cohan told some intimate truths as to how which many of his greatest successes in which he attained his success and the circumstances unusual comedies were dashed off.

Mr. Cohan has probably had a greater success as play writer, producer and composer than has been the lot of any other American. He seems to have the knack of writing songs that catch the fancy of Americans.

This is evidently because Mr. Cohan understands that the appeal to the emotions of the average person is along the line of things they understand, and is better than striving for "high-brow" effect. So Mr. Cohan wrote such songs as "So Long Mary," "Forty-Five Minutes From Broadway," "Mary Is A Grand Old Name."

Mr. Cohan, although all of his operas and plays have met with immediate success in New York, has kept them clean. He has played more for the approbation of the average home than he has pandered to the approval of those who like questionable situations in their amusements. This is why Cohan's plays and his musical comedies have swept America. The American people prefer this type.

In bringing "Forty-Five Minutes From Broadway" to the Chautauqua, Mr. Horner is trying an experiment which is being watched with a great deal of interest by other Chautauqua men throughout the country. It is the most pretentious thing of this kind that has been produced on this great circuit. Its success seems to be assured. Its an-
