GAY PHILANDERER FLEES WRATH OF THREE WIVES Thurber Brick Plant Strike Stops Ranger Street Work

There is no change in the brick-makers' strike which went into effect at Thurber a week ago and completely stopped all activities in the brickmaking line. This information came from an official of the Thurber Coal & Oil company this morning as did the statement that no trouble had arisen from the strike and none was anticipated. His statement was to the effect that the strike was caused by working conditions and not over the wage scale or number of hours. Thus far no effort has been made to arbitrate the differences between men and their employers. Both sides apparently are playing a waiting game.

The early dispatch of American troops to France, and the selection of General Pershing to command the American expeditionary force, were both due in no small degree to the urging and advice of one man—Marshal Joffre—the hero of the Marne.

Americans hold in admiration the military leaders of the allied countries. The name of Foch will be a source of inspiration for many years to come. It is synonymous with victory.

But the name of Joffre will be loved as well as honored in American solong as ther are men and women left who saw him, and listened to him when he came to us in those stirring days of 1917.

I doubt if ever in history has there heen a great military hero, a winner of mighty battles, a commander of conquering armies, whose personality was so charming, so winsome, so provocative of confidence and affection as that of this French general.

The score:
MINERAL WELLS.

MINERAL WELLS, May 9.—The Nitros were feeling jam up yesterday and performed in championship style both in the field and at the bat. Not one bobble marred their fielding record and they nicked the Resorter twirlers for thirteen safeties, well bunched. The Resorters were off both at the stick and on the defensive, making seven hits and five errors. The final score was 9 to 0.

Manager Brashear was chased from the park in the first round, when he waxed obdurate in contesting a decision. Then in the second Johnson went wild. He walked five men, and allowed three hits before being relieved by Edgar with the bases jammed.

In a game filled with hits, runs, errors, pure comedy, pinch hitters who hit and forgot to run the Ranger Oil Stars yesterday went to a ten inning draw with the Oil Burners of Eastland.

Until the fifth the gam ewas a tame affair with the whites beginning to get restless. Mr. Strawder of the Stars, he of the weird wind-up and projectile delivery, kept the Oil Burners from making any thing but smoke as they slashed the air. That frame, however, made a long tall brown skin woman from Eastland climb the wire, and subsequent frames came near making one of the local colored belles shake loose from a shimmy.

Coming as a brilliant sequel to William Fox great epic picture, "While New York Sleeps," his latest achievement, "Blind Wives" the attraction now playing at the Temple Thertre. The same principals appear in the new production, Estelle Taylor, the beautiful brunette who gave such a remarkable portrayal in "While New York Sleeps," Marc McDermott and Harry Sothern.

"Blind Wives," which was made from Edward Knoblock's stage success, "My Lady's Dress," is one of the most powerful arguments that ever found its way to the screen. It strokes at the very vitals of every woman's vanity. It tears a costly gown to pieces and shows the poor miscrable elements toiling in the darkness and suffering who have made possible the manufacture of the dress. It shows the length to which some women will go to arouse envy in the eyes of their sisters and admiration in the hearts of men. And finally it reveals the woman crushed with remorse, and putting aside her folly, to sink in utter humiliation before the husband who had humored her at the cost of tremendous sacrifice.

In making "Blind Wives" which has so much to do with milady's dress Mr. Fox enlisted the aid of Lucile, (Lady Duff Gordon) the noted modiste, with the result that those who have the privilege of witnessing the picture will get an insight into the intimate workings of a fashionable shop. In the various epics showing how different parts of the dress, the lace, the beautiful silk and the fur were made, scenes from several parts of the world are shown and some highly dramatic situations are attained.

A shining example of the fallacy of employing help solely on the reference plan is presented to employers in a delightful way by Constance Talmadge in her newest picture, "Good References," to be shown at the Liberty Theatre, today.

In this picture Constance, as the heroine, takes the part of a poor girl seeking a job without reference. She is turned down everywhere until finally she "borrows" the references of a sick friend. The scheme works and she gets a job, and proves quite efficient.

ficient. The trouble with many employers, according to Miss Talmadge, is the fact that they themselves, pay too little attention to the study of character and too much to looking up past records of achievement.

"Many girls with little or no previous experience would prove excellent workers if they were only given a chance," she said. "But the employers are afraid to try them out and I hope to see all employers gain a broader and more human point of view.

"If a picture such as the one I have just made has any influence toward bettering the conditions of deserving girls by calling attention to bad busness practices, then I will feel satisfied.

"Knowing that references are sometimes misleading and often fail to do justice to the bearer, wise employers are hiring their assistants on a trial basis. Experiments in many of the country's largest offices has proven this to be the most satisfactory and economical method of maintaining an efficient staff."

SLATED FOR UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT BENCH

Frank Harris Hiscock, Syracuse, New York, chief justice of the state court of appeals, will be named by President Harding to the United States supreme court, according to reports from Washington. It is presumed that Judge Hiscock will fill the vacancy to be created by the resignation of Chief Justice White whose retirement has been reported imminent. Prior to his elevation to the bench Mr. Hiscock made a notable record as an attorney.

Mexico's President Trains His Sons to Lead Army

President Obregon of Mexico, is a confirmed "family man" and is never happier than when surrounded by his children. The president's love of domesticity is such that it was reported at one time that he would not live in the great National Palace, the official home of Mexican president, but would occupy a quiet house set in large grounds on the outskirts of the capital. The accompanying photographs, taken in the grounds of the National Palace, show the president with his sons and daughter. They reveal that at least two of the youngsters evidently have military aspirations. In the insert is Refugio Obregon, the president's pretty fourteen-year-old daughter. "OH, CONSISTENCY."

The Times has been indicted, condemned and pardoned, all in the space of a working day. It accepted the verbal f.agellation in the spirit in which it was administered, wherefore the Times hastens to inform its flagellants that it feels properly humbled So far as lies within its power it will go and sin no more.

On a recent afternoon a gentleman entered the sanctum sanctorum with a troubled brow. Plainly the distressingly wicked lives being led by Ranger felks weighed heavily upon him.

Nor was he embarassed by lack of words through which to convey the burden of his tortured soul.

The Times, he declared, is side-stepping its mission in the world and is passing up a glorious opportunity to redeem mankind-at least so far as Ranger folks are concerned.

"There IS a moral obligation resting upon this newspaper," he asseverargumentatively, although no one had so much as intimated there

"The Times could do so much to elevate the morals of the community if it only would," and he smiled benignly and kindly.

"I know this is so, because just the other day I read such a good editorial in the Times. It impressed me so much. It was splendid. It really had a moval tone. The subject was-it was about-well, I've forgotten for the moment what it was about but I remember that it had a splendid moral tone and I was much impressed by it. I'm quite sure of that."

FACING A TWENTY YEARS' WAR.

It will take twenty years at least, according to William H. Anderson of the Anti-Saloon League, to enforce prohibition in New York. Mr. Anderson looks forward to the long war hopefully, however, even cheerfully. While it goes on he will not be out of a job. This is a minor consideration. perhaps, but not to be ignored.

"If we make good in the next two or three years," Mr. Anderson goes on to say, "then the rest of the fight will be a winning fight all the way."
This is indeed a pleasant prospect for which we are being gently prepared. The war is to begin, it appears, with a sharp two-year campaign, during which the city and state police leave all laws except the Mullan-Gage act to enforce themselves, followed by a guerilla struggle wherein home brew and civil rights are to perish together. At the end of the twenty years, if the city and state are not yet dry -and they won't be-the struggle will have to go on, and the Anti-Saloon League will have to keep on raising money and paying its officers as usual. Why should this ideal condition ever end?

"Civil liberty under law," Mr. Anderson warns further "is endangered by anarchy with respect to any par-ticular law." True. But just now, as it happens, civil liberty is being endangered by an attempt to enforce an unpopular Prohibition Law passed at the dictation of the Anti-Saloon League .- New York World.

THE WOMAN WHO SAW

The woman had a dinner engagement for which she had to go home and dress, but the play had been a short one and glancing at her watch she decided she would have time to go up to Forty-eighth street and get the tickets for the following Saturday.

There was just one purchaser at the ticket window—a trim, spectacled little lady with a small-brimmed black hat and a slightly shiny serge suit.
"Have you two dollar seats for tonight?" she inquired hopefully of the stern individual behind the brass bars.

"How many, madame?" "I said two." "Oh, two one dollar seats. I beg pardon."

The tickets were promptly produced but the lady did not pay and move on, as people are expected to do at box offices nowadays. She had read on the little ticket envelopes that you must examine your tickets before leaving the theatre. So she did it thoroughly.

"These are in the second belong."

"These are in the second balcony, aren't they?" she said sweetly, after a "moment's concentrated study. "Sure they're in the middle? And is this theatre a small one, so that we can hear and see perfectly?"

"Derfeatly, madowa," said the sup-

"Perfectly, madame," said the autocrat of the little window naively. Slowly she paid for the tickets and moved away. With a sigh of relief the Woman stepped forward. Just then the telephone rang and as the box office man turned to answer the Woman heard the doorman's firm tones, "This was not read to the tickets and the same and the same are the woman to the same are the same and the same are the same are the same as the same are the

"This way out, ma'am."
"O, I thought the performance was over," said the lady pleasantly, "I was just going in to look at the seats to see if they were all right."

As the ticket seller turned from the telephone to the inpatient Woman the lady had a sudden inspiration and returned to the box office.

"Do you know," she said brightly,
"I don't think I'll take these seats, after all. I think I'd rather stand in the orchestra. Give me two for standing room. but be sure they're together, won't you?"

Then Mother came to sit with the Woman, and she told her little son to run off and practice. He seemed perfectly willing and went to the music rack to get a big book to put on the piano stool. Without the additional height, he could not reach the keys.

"Shall I take the Beethoven Sonatset to sit or?" he asked as to sit on?" he asked.

"Yes; you might. But there are the Beethoven Trios—you might better take them."

He took the big folio, carried it to the stool, climbed aboard as if he were mounting a rocking horse and struck the first few notes of a scale. "Mother," he said, as he turned the "Mother," he said, as he turned the stool slowly, a questioning look in his round blue eyes, "Mother, I know what a sontata is, and I know what a trio is, but what is a Beethoven?"

SLEEPING SICKNESS

TINKER BOB STORIES

By CARLYSLE H. HOLCOMB.

OFF TO THE RIVER THEY GO

"Robin, Robin Red Breast, where are you today?
Robin, Robin Red Breast, come on out and play.
You can sing anything, come on out I say."

This was the song of Silky the Monkey as he stood outside the King's Palace looking into the trees. All of the creatures had given the King a surprise the day before and Tinker Bob had taken his chance to sleep a little longer than usual. But as for Silky he had rather be up early and out amongst the folks of the Forest to see what was going on.

"You are some singer," this voice was indeed unexpected for Silky sup-posed he was alone. "I didn'tt know you seuld sing like that." It was Jack the Rabbit. He was out early Jack the Rabbit. He was out early in search of food.

"Hello there Jack! I supposed you were still sleeping I didn't think anyone of the Forest Dwellers would be up before the King."

"Well I have a long journey before me this morning and I must get an early start if I expect to get back tonight, and, that's what I want to do, for if I should be gone over night the folks at home would never forgive me You see it is in the night that I take my family out for a walk in the Forest, and sometimes a walk in the Forest, and sometimes we visit our friends at that time." "But tell me, Jack, where are you going today that calls you out so early in the morning? Maybe I would go with you today."

Not the First to Ask.

He is the four-year-old son of musicians, the curly-haired youngster who tried his best to amuse the Woman, who had come to call and stayed to tea. As she watched his antics she wondered if the lad inherited his pianist father's remarkable technique or his violinist mother's talent for musical expression of varying moods and emotions.

Then Mother came to sit with the Woman, and she told her little son to

One of the reasons why Joffre will always hold a distinct place in my memory, a place in my affection is because of all those who came seeking American co-constitute he seeking American co-operation, he, more than any man, displayed his faith in the American soldier, his desire to have American manhood at the front.

While other men were thinking in material terms, Joffre was thinking in spiritual terms.

lions of men America was to put in the field. New factories would have to be built, and in an incredibly short space of time this was done.

"Meanwhile," said Joffre, "we can equip your soldiers from the large supplies we have." He was wise enough, since we were now allies, to propose that pooling of supplies which in the end made the exercise of the united strength of the allies so much more effective.

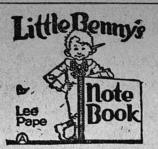

"For months our troops had to depend upon the French for shells," critics of the war administration had said.

"Hail, hall, the gang's all here, "What those words mean I do not know, but one thing I know is that after they passed singing that song we were told we could go back to our homes, and we have lived in peace and courage. Joffre had seen those "sturdy, vigorous Americans" on our streets, in the throngs which had cheered him wherever he had gone. He believed in their capacity to learn quickly the art of war. He believed in their spirit.

And Joffre, with the memory of his own war-worn soldiers and his tired, sometimes discouraged countrymen knew what a tonic there would be for weariness and depression in the presence of even a few thousand American boys—enough to march through the streets with high, set chins, and firm, resilient step;

It is possible we would have been several weeks or months longer in getting to France with our fighting forces if it had not been for the quiet insistence of Joffre.

Others talked of the long training that would be necessary to prepare men for fighting in Europe; of the necessary to prepare men for fighting in Europe; of the necessary to retaining our regulars at home in order to train a great army that might begin to reach France six or eight months later.

Tie parade this afternoon was the chief attraction of the second day of the three-day flower carnival. Approximately 300 gaily adorned automobies, trucks and floats were in the procession which wound its way through the downtown streets and along the Seawall boulevard.

Tomorrow, the culmination of the oleander festivals is to be the crepe paper ball which will be held at a beach pavillion within a stone's throw of the surf. The grand march will be led by the queen of the fete the coronation of whom is to take place at the opening of the ball.

SCHOOL TAX AND BOND ISSUE CARRIES WELL

EASTLAND, May 9.—In the school and bond election held in this city Saturday both the school tax and bond issues were carried by almost a two to one majority, while the vote was very light. One hundred and ninety-five vote: were cast, as follows: For the bonds 126, against 69. For the tax 124, against 71. The passage of the bonds and school tax means that Eastland will have a full nine months term and good and substantial school buildings, with the necessary equipment to and good and substantial school buildings, with the necessary equipment to properly instruct the student body. The $50,000 bond issue insures the improvements and equipments necessary, and the raise in the tax rates means the people of Eastland will not be bothered with annual deficiencies to be made up in the running of the public free school system.

MAY BE CLOSE TO SHALLOW FIELD

Pay in J. J. Robertson No. 1 Said to Be in 200-Barrel Class.

CRYSTAL FALLS, May 9.—That a shallow field may lay west and north of Crystal Falls, is the belief of oil men in this vicinity, who watched with interest the drilling of a shallow pay sand encountered in the J. J. Robertson No. 1 well of the Burkburnett Oil & Leasing company two miles southwest of Crystal Falls. General Manager J. T. Llewellyn, after a careful estimate, has placed this sand in the two hundred barrel class. It was encountered at a depth of 2000 feet and the strata showed a thickness of 34 feet and the hole continues to make oil despite the fact that the 8-inch casing has been set. This shallow sand will be given a thorough test, according to officials of the company.

test, according to officials of the company.

Two locations south of the Burk well, the Gilbert Johnson No. 1 on the Yeaman, has been drilled to a depth of 3280 feet and is now within. 10 feet of the pay. It is the belief of oil men that this well will rival other large gushers of the Stephens county field.
