HUBBARD GOES BEFORE MAYOR, SHOWS WOUNDS

Police Chief Admits Attack; "Others to Get Same."

Jimmy Hubbard, who filed a complaint in Eastland before County Attorney G. G. Hazel charging Chief of Police Byron Parrish with aggravated assault, appeared before Mayor M. H. Hagaman and Police Commissioner A. Davenport yesterday and exhibited wounds which he said were the chief of police caused by beating him with a rope doubled four times.

Court Asks Hearing Before Mayor. Nolls stated that he brought Hubbard before the mayor at the request of the court at Eastland, the reason being, he said, that the court did not wish the impression to be prevalent that Parrish was being unjustly prosecuted.

The mayor said that he and the commissioner were not a court and had no jurisdiction in the matter, but for the sake of information he would like to know more about the affair.

Hubbard declared that Parrish had sent for him to come to the station Thursday night. He left his room and went with the officers. After reaching the station, he said, he was cursed by Parrish, who accused Hubbard of being the cause of an indictment for selling whisky being returned against him. He was then placed on a cot and beaten with a rope, he said, Henry Hamilton, G. W. Rust and one other man whom he did not know holding him. The following day he was released after paying a fine on a charge of vagrancy. He denied his guilt, however, saying that Parrish told him if he did not plead guilty he would stay in jail six months. This answer was given to Mayor Hagaman's question as to why he paid a fine if he was not guilty. Hubbard admitted when questioned that he was not living with his family but denied living with any woman.

Chief Admits Beating Hubbard. The chief of police when seen later admitted that he whipped Hubbard with the rope. He also declared that there were others in Ranger who were going "to get the same dose."

Arresting criminals, he stated, and sending them to Eastland for trial seemed to be useless, for in many cases they would be back in Ranger almost before the officer that took them to the county seat returned. He said that Hubbard had been found with several gallons of whisky in his possession and sent to Abilene, several weeks ago, where he was indicted by a federal grand jury.

He whipped him, he said, because he had deserted his wife and children to associate with common women.

POSSIBLE DANGER OF WATER FAMINE AVERTED BY RAIN

SAN ANGELO, June 19.—One-half to three inches of rain in the last 24 hours over the whole of West Texas last night. It is generally considered that bumper crops, ample feed for livestock and a sufficient water supply for the remainder of the summer in some localities, are assured blessings to accrue from the heavy precipitation.

One and three-quarter inches of rain fell here during the night, of the heaviest rainfall in the county since last October. Hail accompanied the downpour but caused little damage to crops or livestock.

AMERICAN FLIER WITH POLISH ARMY SINKS BOLSHEVIK SHIP CARRYING TROOPS OVER RIVER

WITH THE POLISH ARMIES AT THE FRONT, June 19.—Confirmation of the destruction of a Bolsheviki troop ship in the Dnieper river by an American aviator of the Kossisacko squadron during the Polish Ukraine drive which resulted in the capture of Kiev was received recently by the Polish military authorities. The American credited with the feat accomplished it single-handed. He is Lieut. G. M. Crawford of Wilmington, Del., a member of the squadron of American aviators for near a year.

In the retreat across the Dnieper the Bolsheviki used river steamboats at various places where bridges were not available. When the Polish chief of staff heard of this word was sent to Majors Stepiet Fauntleroy of Chicago and McGee of Arkansas, squadron commanders, to stop the troop movement by boats. Most of the other American aviators be-

GETS READY TO LEAD PARTY IN ELECTION RACE

WASHINGTON, June 19.—Abandoning claims for a vacation Senator Harding, Republican presidential candidate, today decided to remain here until the middle of July when he will go to his Marion, Ohio, home for notification and ceremonies.

Immediately the nominee began conferences with party leaders to continue throughout the preparation of his acceptance address. Assurance of support were received today by Mr. Harding from Senator Poin- dexter of Washington who contended with him for the nomination; from Governor Allen of Kansas who placed the name of General Wood before the Chicago convention and who himself was put before the convention as a candidate for the vice-presidency; from A. P. Moore, publisher of the Pittsburg Leader, and from John C. Shaffer, publisher of the Chicago Post, the Rocky Mountain News of Denver, the Louisville Herald, the Indianapolis Star and other middle west newspapers.

Senator Poindexter issued a statement tonight saying Senator Harding and Governor Coolidge presented a "typically American ticket" for the election of which he expected to do all he could. Governor Allen in a letter to Senator Harding said: "It will be a pleasure to do anything I can to further the cause of your election."

After calling on Mr. Harding, Mr. Moore said he could not be a very good American and not be for him. He added that while he was not authorized to speak for Senator Johnson, who was a rival of Senator Harding, he did say the California senator was "a 100 per cent American, from which you can draw your own conclusions."

LOVE IS NOT ALL IN MATRIMONY IS BISHOP'S NOTION

International News Service. COLUMBUS, Ohio, June 19.—Insisting that "the ever romantic love nor marriage ceremonies" are guarantees of happy wedlock, Rev. W. R. Gysan, local congregational clergyman, has urged that medical examinations be required before applicants are given licenses to wed.

"The happiest marriages are made through preparation," declared Rev. Dr. Gysan, discussing "Happy Marriages." "A clean bill of morals, physical and mental integrity and stable character promote a successful union."

"Politeness and etiquette of courtship days and equality of men and women in financial affairs help keep matrimonial paths smooth."

"The ideal marriage exists where both love and are loved. Most trouble originates in families where one loves and the other is content to be loved, or where one loves and the other dislikes."

"There is only one divorce for a true marriage—the divorce of death."

WOLFE WOULD RUN M'ADOO DESPITE HIS OBJECTIONS

DALLAS, June 19.—M. H. Wolfe, chairman of the state Democratic executive committee in a statement today declared that "if I were a delegate to the national Democratic convention I would make the nomination to W. H. McAdoo."

Mr. Wolfe said that although Mr. McAdoo has declared he was not a candidate for the nomination he now has said he would not accept nomination. "This is one time when the office of president should seek the man instead of the man seeking the office," the chairman said.

OKLAHOMA HARVESTER ABREAST OF TIMES

OKLAHOMA CITY, June 19.—The 1920 harvest hand is abreast of the times. He is not catching the rattlers, riding the rods or hitting the blinds to the harvest, but is riding the cushions and making use of sleeping cars in his trip to the wheat fields of the Northwest, according to Claude Connally, labor commissioner of Oklahoma. In former years the state labor department was smothered with letters from harvest hands, even before the opening of the cutting season. But the letters are too slow for the 1920 harvester, the state labor commissioner says, and he is sending telegrams this year.

WRECK DELAYS TRAFFIC

Traffic over the Texas & Pacific railroad was held up three hours last night when a freight extra which was heading in at Tiffin, to allow the Sunshine Special to pass, split a switch. The engine was partially derailed, but no one was injured. A wrecking crew had the line clear by 10:30 p. m. Jitney drivers were quick to seize the opportunity offered by the wreck and they carried numerous persons from Tiffin to Ranger in service cars. The Sunshine Special was delayed about three hours.

CANADA FARMERS WORKED AT NIGHT TO GET WHEAT IN

International News Service. CALGARY, Alb., June 19.—Many farmers in western Canada, to make up for lost time, kept their teams going in wheat seeding until midnight during May, working by lines of lanterns stuck up in the fields or by the light of the moon and stars. Seeding was delayed by inclement weather in April, but May was ideal and field work was pushed everywhere from dawn until long after dark.

WILSON'S LEAGUE OF NATIONS WILL BE INCORPORATED AS A PLANK IN DEMOCRAT PLATFORM

LABOR PLANK IN PLATFORM WILL BE ASKED

MONTREAL, Quebec, June 19.—After a stormy session the American Federation of Labor endorsed the League of Nations with reservations. The league was bitterly opposed by Irish sympathizers, who were supported by the progressive wing of the federation.

The federation adjourned its annual convention tonight and Mr. Gompers and the executive council will leave for Washington to put into operation the program. The first move, it was said, will be launched against the Democratic national convention to obtain incorporation of the federation's program in the party platform. They will urge also that the federation's non-partisan political policy be unanimously approved by the convention and be carried out.

Jailing of food and clothing profiteers. Right to strike and abolition of compulsory arbitration and anti-strike legislation. Hands off in Mexico by the United States. NEW YORK, June 19.—Evidence involving "women not hitherto mentioned" in connection with the murder of Joseph B. Elwell, turfman and whisky expert, who was shot to death in his home here June 11, was obtained today, Assistant District Attorney Doling announced tonight.

The names were given to the officials by William Barnes, Elwell's secretary, who was examined today. Barnes furnished the investigators with several important new leads, Mr. Doling said. The officials are convinced, according to Mr. Doling, that Elwell's assailant was not a stranger.

"We have learned," he said, "that even persons who had legitimate business in the house had difficulty in getting in. This proves that whoever called there was no stranger."

Barnes furnished the officials with the names of several persons who are said to have been "bitter enemies" of Elwell, Mr. Doling added.

MUST SPAN GAP HOLDING APART YOUTH AND AGE

DES MOINES, Iowa, June 19.—A plea for more sympathy between youth and older persons and also between the native born and alien here to be adopted as a citizen, was made by Mrs. Percy Lee Pennibaker of Austin, Texas, at tonight's session of the Central Federation of Women's clubs in its biennial convention.

She spoke at the session set aside to discuss community service. She declared that the door of sympathy between youth and middle life and between youth and old age too often was closed. In 90 per cent of the cases, she said, age was to blame.

"The greatest of all professions is home making," she said. She urged a better understanding of children. Too long have we trusted to maternal intuition, the speaker asserted.

Mrs. Pennibaker called attention to the duties of parents to children in contrast to those of children to parents. Respect must be earned and deserved and not demanded, she said.

Nitros Stop Last Inning Rally in Time; Win 7 to 6

BUDDIES TODAY AND TOMORROW

Popboy Smith and his Buddies are here over Sunday and clash with the Nitros at 4 p. m. today and in a double bill Monday...

Red Hill, our good ole hard boiled soldier boy, may be depended on to give the fans plenty of suspense. He did so yesterday, in a ninth inning burst of generosity which nearly proved one too many thrills...

Sturdy opened the frame, boosting to Mason in left. Thrash cut a single to right, Burkhead singled to left. Whitney looked good for an easy out, but Red passed him. That put three on. Ranger had a four-tally lead, 7 to 3.

Red tightened and whiffed King. Taylor singled to right and Thrash came over. Red cut loose a wild pitch and Burkhead counted. Ranger 7, Gorman 5. The fans, who had started toward the exits, hesitated and held their breath.

Any of those Gorman birds at the top of the batting order are a tough fish for any pitcher. The club, on the average, is batting .305. Taylor, for instance, is slapping out the ball at .416. A couple notches down are Gressett and Strady, with marks of .391 and .392, respectively. Gray has a mark over .300.

It was Gray that Red Hill faced, with the tying run on second. Gray slapped the ball through the box, an infield single. Galloway, playing the all-around ball that characterized his work yesterday, pulled it down back of second base. Whitney already was over the plate with Gorman's sixth run. Taylor had rounded third. Jim snapped it to Tate, catching Taylor well off the bag. Joe feinted a throw and Taylor started back to the bag. Joe chased him a few steps and put the pill on him.

The game was over. Sighs of relief.

A New Shortstop

Though Clapp was out of the lineup, still groggy from the beating he got at Mineral Wells, the club looked good, with a new man at short. He is Ralph Hamilton—"Ham"—of course, who comes from Oklahoma A. & M., where he has been coaching. He is a rangy cuss, remarkably fast on his feet, and plays the ball confidently. He has five years of college ball back of him and looks to have the stamina needed in the pinch. At bat, he got himself one real hit, of which more later. Red started the game by giving Gorman a handicap of one run. He walked Taylor and Gray sacrificed him to second. Red hurled him to third with a wild pitch and Fuller scored him, by a roller which Jim did well to handle and play to first ahead of the Buddie. Gressett rolled out the same way, putting Gorman off to a one-run lead without hits. The Nitros did nothing in the first frame, but batted around in the second, resulting in the retirement of Johnson and the ruin of Joe-a-de Mathews, who followed him.

Dude Mooney started it with a walk. He went to second on a wild heave and to third and home when Mason hit to the box and Johnson threw it away past third. Shaffer had the count three and two and took one in the ribs. Hill hit to the box, and Johnson cut Mason off at third. Henke slapped a single to right and Schaffer scored from second. Lovelace pushed out a bunt, which retired him at first, but squeezed in Hill, who had taken third speedily on Duteh's single. Tate scored Henke with a single, taking second on the throw-in and third when the ball went through Whitney. Galloway, sitting hitting it, made his record sure for consecutive hits, by scoring Tate with a single to right. He stole, but died, when Hamilton whiffed.

On this lead, 5-1, Red flung two scoreless innings, then Fuller and Strady got to him for a couple of two-base hits, bringing in another tally.

He was not in danger again until the eighth.

We Add a Couple

Ranger added a couple in the fifth, started by Hamilton, who took a boomerang swing at one of Johnson's slow ones and sent away a long double to left. Mooney bunted and beat it, Sturdy failing to touch the bag. This put Ham on third, from where he tallied on Mason's long ball one to center, which dropped in Gressett's glove. Dude stole and took third prettily on this same sacrifice fly. He scored when Shaffer dropped a Texas Leaguer single back of third. Hill forced Shaffer and Renke poled out to Thrash.

Red Hill came out of a good one in the eighth, after one run was scored. Whitney watched the third strike over, and King singled to left. He advanced on Taylor's out. Gray walked and Fuller singled King across. Then Red whiffed Gressett, one of the Gorman bad men.

Not content with making it four-teen straight games without missing a hit, Jim slammed out a triple in the sixth for his second blow of the game. The sort of game he played at second is shown in his fielding column. He played thirteen chances without a kick, just one-third of Ranger's total chances. One of these was Burkhead's smoky drive which took Jim his full length of six feet and then some more, in the air.

NITRO NOTES

Charlie Clapp, the string bean left fielder well liked by Nitro fans, took an awful beating at Mineral Wells Wednesday, when he stopped one of Clowers' fast ones, back of his right ear. The subnaw was smoking it over and Charlie was groggy for some time. The examining physician said that no serious damage was done, but that the shock would put Charlie out for a while. He has been weak since and has had no appetite, but thought he'd get out yesterday and was there in uniform, warming up with the boys and during the game was on the coaching line. The fans will be glad when he's himself again.

Rabbit Flankamer, good little boy, but young, was let go when the club went to Mineral Wells. He has caught on with Abilene and under the name of "Flash" has played one game and appeared as a baserunner in another. He is a hard working little boy, and has the earmarks of a coming player, but needs experience. He is only 18 years old.

The stand is better with the wire in front all the way up. The hardened rooters back of the plate still duck when a hot foul comes up that way, though. Force of habit. They've been dodging since May 30 and can't stop in one day.

Dutch Henke, at first, besides poling out a pinch blow, played the kind of ball the fans like. He took a couple that came on the wrong side, had Chase fashion, back-handed with his right mit. He plays the game all the time.

Joe Tate and Ralf Hamilton like that slow ball of Johnson's. It's their two-base special.

The Buddies and Popboy "motored" from Gorman. Popboy called the Times at 10 a. m. and asked if a game could be played. The Buddies had missed the night train. "Sure," said the b. v. reporter. So they came away, by way of Carbon and Eastland. Did it in four hours flat. If they were alibi artists, that would be a good one for losing a game. The Buddies tried stealing bases on Shotgun Shaffer and got discouraged. He pegged out Thrash in the second and Taylor in the third and had no more chances. Shaf throws like a rifle shot, we might as well tell you, Buddies.

Umpire Jess Price robbed Hamilton of an assist and gave Taylor a hit in the second, when he called the Buddie safe at first. The throw had the runner beat a step. It was well played. But Jess doesn't miss many.

Dude Mooney's arm helped Red out in the eighth, when he brought back Fuller's hit with a perfect throw. Not only that, but he pulled a neat bit of head-and-foot work. The drive, a vicious line to left center, was ticketed for the fence. Dude raced to intercept it and with a last long step, put his foot in the flying pellet's pathway. The stop, together with the quick recovery and throw, saved a run.

Another with the Buddies today.

Nitros Second Best at Bat; Defense Weak

Ranger's position next to the cellar champs in the Oilbelt race is explained, partially, by a glance at the official averages, compiled by Pop Boone, statistician and acting secretary of the West Texas League. The figures include games up to June 6. Ranger is next to the bottom of the pile in fielding.

The Nitros have the second strongest club in the league in hitting, although there is a big gap between them and the slugging Buddies, who have the unbelievable average of .305. The Nitros are hitting a fair clip, with 249; Eastland, second in the league race, is just behind Ranger, with 248. Abilene, league leaders, are hitting .241.

But the Eagles, at the top of the pile, are leading in fielding.

From H. H. BOONE, League Statistician.

The following batting and pitchers' averages, together with club batting and fielding averages include games of June 5. Delay in receipt of scores has naturally delayed the averages, while errors in compiling fielding statistics by scores has made it impossible to issue individual fielding averages at this time. The next average, which will be available about July 15, will be complete.

PITCHERS' AVERAGES.

It will be observed that no attempt has been made to secure the earned run averages. This is because of obvious inaccuracies in the official scores—only one or two of the scorers making any attempt to figure the earned runs. For this reason the averages are compiled only on the basis of games won and lost. The statistician did the best he could in the matter of figuring the winners and losers where more than one pitcher was used—scorekeepers showing woful ignorance in this matter, and not always showing in the report how many bases were occupied when a pitcher was relieved.

MONEY BOUGHT BERGDOLL OUT, WRITER SAYS

There are hundreds of military prisoners in the United States today serving out their terms for every kind of offense from insubordination to cowardice and treason; thousands more are to be imprisoned soon for evading the selective service law; but Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, the millionaire slacker of Philadelphia, is the arch draft dodger of them all, once more, at least, at the present writing, enjoying his liberty.

It matters little whether Bergdoll is recaptured before this appears in print. The main point is that by a agency Bergdoll, of all men, got an extraordinary lapse of military string-golden opportunity to escape, of which he very naturally took advantage.

It took the federal officials two years to capture Bergdoll after he had openly flouted the government and declared he would not fight. He was arrested Jan. 7, 1920, and subsequently sentenced to five years in the United States disciplinary barracks, Fort Jay, Governors Island. After serving little more than three months of this sentence he was paroled for three days in the custody of two guards and, without handcuffs, made the trip to his home in Philadelphia. There, at the first opportunity, he gave his guards the slip and escaped in his own automobile.

When the military authorities were informed of Bergdoll's escape—many hours later, by the way—a statement was issued that Bergdoll had been given permission to leave his confinement "on a secret mission that it would not be in the interests of the military service to disclose."

No one could quarrel with the accuracy of that statement. Nothing could be further from "the interests of the military service" than public knowledge of the real nature of that "secret mission." The army officers guarded the secret well. It remained for Secretary Baker to disclose that Bergdoll had been released to search for $150,000 which the latter said he had buried in the hills of Maryland while he was keeping out of war and which, of course, only he could find.

And so this scapegrace of 26 whiskered a tale of buried treasure into the ears of army officials, and prison doors gave way. A journey to Philadelphia in a parlor car, minus any ignominious handcuffs, a pleasant automobile tour through the Philadelphia suburbs in the afternoon, an evening at a burlesque show, a good night's rest, and the following day, wearied of the confinement of prison life, he entered his automobile and sped away!

It was no less a personage than Adjutant General Peter C. Harris who issued the order for Bergdoll's release and, after all, it was granted on Bergdoll's unsupported word, through the representations of his attorney. At the news of his escape officials were deeply grieved, painfully shocked. Why he had pledged his word not to escape! His own mother could scarcely have placed more faith in Bergdoll's honor than did the government. The word of a draft dodger! The honor of a man who had shown himself to be without honor!

There are a number of other draft dodgers serving out sentences on Governors Island. No doubt they would all gladly spin a yarn of buried treasure if they thought it promised freedom. But does anyone for a moment believe they could get away with it?

It appears that Bergdoll had no permission to visit his home; in fact, he was not supposed to stop longer in Philadelphia than necessary to change from train to automobile. But one of his attorneys met the party at the station and informed them it would be necessary to wait while Bergdoll's automobile underwent repairs. And in the evening it appeared the exigencies of the treasure hunt demanded a visit to burlesque show. The next afternoon, as a friend of the family tells it, Bergdoll had the whole party in the drawing room laughing over his recitations

DAILY TIMES SHORT STORY

WILL-O-THE-WISP-O-SPRING

By A. Maria Crawford.

"Your job is waiting for you, my boy," said Telford McGraw, patting the broad shoulder of a convalescent patient in St. Luke's hospital.

Jim looked up, a little smile twisting in his wide, straight mouth. "You've been a great boss, Mr. McGraw."

"Tut, tut," said the old man. His merry round face was wreathed in smiles. "I'll be glad when you are well enough to come back to the office."

"Girls were all right during the war when we couldn't do any better, but give me a boy in my place of business, every time. Now that girl who took your position when you had to come out, here to the hospital! She's a clever little thing, but you know, sometimes I actually forget what I am dictating because I am so busy watching the little brown curls around her face and wishing that I had a daughter as pretty. Well, here she comes! I didn't tell you, did I that she asked to come along with me? Pretty little thing, isn't she?"

He beamed in fatherly fashion on the girl who was walking slowly toward them. "Here's Jim, getting as fit as a fiddle," he called to her. "This is Miss Mary Sue Lenoir, Mr. James McConnell, formerly Sergeant McConnell with the A. E. F. in France."

Jim saw an eager, flushed face, not pretty according to his standard of beauty, and a slim, boyishly straight body. She wore a plain little serge dress and a blue straw sailor hat. There was no bright color about her except her cheeks and lips. Jim liked color and dash, with a ruffle or two about a girl. He had seen enough girls in plain uniforms abroad.

"I hope that you will soon be able to come back to the office," she said soberly.

Jim flashed her a quick look, half curiosity, half unbelief. He knew that McGraw was paying her the same salary that he himself had received, and that not many girls were making such figures, anywhere.

"Yes, indeed," she answered. "I would like to get out of the office by April."

"She's on the level, Jim," said McGraw, as he left. "She's told me, 'You're making a pretty nice same thing.'"

"Any for a girl," suggested Jim, after McGraw had gone.

"Don't you like the work?"

She shook her head, turning to look out of the window. The magic young green of spring hung on the trees like fragile lace.

Jim leaned forward a little, looking at her. He had bottled up personal troubles for so long that he felt it would relieve the tension to share them with another human being. Mary Sue seemed sympathetic.

"I can't hold down a desk job for a long time, maybe never again. I've developed nerves. I'd rather have lost a leg, or an arm." He leaned back in his wheel chair, closing his eyes, half ashamed of himself for disclosing his secret. She said nothing and presently Jim opened his eyes. She had taken off the sailor hat and was leaning her head against the ledge, looking away at the trees. Again Jim felt a subtle little thread of sympathy between them. "The doctor thinks that six months on a farm will fix me up, but I don't know a thing about farming. You know what farmers expect of hired help, brawn and muscle! And I'll have to do something to live."

Mary Sue got up, smiling a warm, friendly little smile at him. "There are some pear trees in bloom down the path. I'm going to wheel you there and we'll plan something together." Once under the trees, Mary Sue sat down on the grass at his feet. "Isn't it lovely here?" she cried. Look! There's a whithroait building her nest in the crotch of that tree, with the white bloom all over it, like a flowering vine on a tiny cottage. I love the country, the birds and the flowers, the green fields with daisies and buttercups. You'll love it, too, when you go."

BLACK TIES AND WHITE SLIPPERS FOR SUMMER WEAR

The well dressed woman always has both black and white footwear for the summer months. Here is a smart style in white for dressy occasions. They may be had in fine kid or linen and the buckles may be bought separately to suit one's fancy. The black ties are for more ordinary wear in the street or traveling. They are a fine calfskin with a leather heel.

Investigation—Investigation—Investigation

The newspapers are full of it. You hear of this, that and the other thing being investigated. But has anybody ever heard anything of the results?

That's a question we leave for you to answer.

But as a matter of fact, investigation is a splendid thing. We wish you would look to some investigating yourself.

Find out if your own local merchants won't do better by you than the mail-order house. Find out why it is to your own advantage to deal with a store that has but one price for its merchandise.

Do a little investigating yourself and you'll have less cause to complain about the H. C. of L.

you—but you'd get tired of your job. I can't let you fool yourself—and me."

Mary Sue moved very close to him and her hand found his hand and held it, in warm, sympathetic companionship, there on the wheel chair. "We're not dreamers nor faddists in the country," she told him. "We're simple folk and we feel a personal responsibility in our neighbors' welfare. The folks in cities live next door to each other for years and never speak. We couldn't do that. In a month's time in the country, you won't be conscious of a nerve in your body. Oh, Jim," she said softly, "there's peace and happiness and God in the still places. You'll come? What shall I write Uncle Si tonight about you?"

The boy leaned forward, feeling again the old urge of life, renewed dreams, hopes, the longings common to man. The horrors of war that he had thought were indelibly stamped on him seemed vague and very far away. "Tell Uncle Si," he said eagerly, "that I'll follow wherever you beckon, Will-o-the-wisp-o-spring!"

"Oh, say Jim," he pleaded, the shadow on his young face lifting for the first time.

She clapped her hands and, as if in fairylike answer, a little flurry of snowy pear blossoms sifted down on her head and shoulders. Mary Sue jumped and shook the petals from her hair. Jim timidly reached out a long arm and brushed her slim, blue-clad shoulders.

"Will-o-the-wisp-o-spring!" he whispered. "It sounds great, the farm, Aunt Fanny Uncle Si—and

U. S. BATTLING FOR SUPREMACY IN CLOCK MARKET OF WORLD

CHICAGO, June 19.—The United States just now is fighting a battle on which will hinge supremacy in the clock market of the world. Its rivals are Switzerland and Japan.

American clock manufacturers for the last six months have been swamped with foreign orders for American clocks, which are now regarded as the best in the world.

One manufacturer recently received an order for clocks to be shipped to England in large numbers weekly, which will keep his plant working night and day for the next three months. Another company has been filling large orders weekly from France. South America is swarming with agents of Japanese clocks, but continues to favor the American clock and is placing immense orders.

Because of the shortage of skilled labor, American clock manufacturers are finding it difficult to fill all of their orders. This is a serious handicap. If American firms fail to fill their foreign orders, foreign buyers may turn to the Japanese and Swiss and the chance for the United States to dominate the clock market will be lost. Japan in the last five years has become one of the greatest clock manufacturing nations in the world.

APCALYPSE MANUSCRIPT BRINGS RECORD PRICE

PARIS, June 19.—The highest price on record for a manuscript was recently paid by Thomas Danlos, a French connoisseur, for the manuscript of "The Book of the Apocalypse."

Danlos paid $29,000 for the book at an auction at Tours.

In an effort to ascertain the physical defects in children attending the public schools in Kansas City, Miss Elsie Owens, a Red Cross nurse, has undertaken the task of weighing and measuring every pupil in the schools there. Thus far she has made a rigid examination of more than 7,000 boys and girls.

Being Queen Is Trade Declares Rumania Leader

BUCHAREST, June 3.—"How to be a successful queen?" said Queen Mary of Rumania, repeating the question of the correspondents.

"Why, it is something of a trade to be a queen, and the chief implements of the trade are courage and courtesy. Smile when your heart is aching, smile when you are ready to drop from fatigue and worry, smile when all goes wrong, smile at good news and at bad news. Always keep yourself interested in others. No matter how great the strain may be on your patience when talking or listening to a bore, make him or her think that you think the conversation is vital. Never think of your personal troubles, but of those of your country. I don't even own up when I know that I don't know a thing; but I always go out and find out all about this subject."

Ask anybody, peasant or politician, who rules Rumania, and they will look at you with eyes wide open in surprise and say: "Why, the queen, of course." Queen Marie is the scene shifter, the siren hand, the power behind the throne of King Ferdinand every minute. Since she came out from England, nearly twenty-five years ago, she has been learning his trade of being queen, and now she has been at it for more than five years, in a place of Carmen Sylva, and she has made it her business to know her country and her people.

Wants to Make Good. She aspires to be queen in every sense, and she is quite willing to take the duties of the job as well as its pleasures. As for its pleasures, she gets all the fun she can out of it, dresses as well as she can, to enhance her beauty, which is famous. If a queen goes to a ball and is not invited, it makes a great deal of difference, I think," she said. "It is not expected of us, so why should I do it? I felt rather mortified when in Paris just after the armistice and I had to attend receptions frequented by all the beauties of the world, and was not able to wear some of my splendid jewels which had been sent to Moscow. Just to think that I had four or five crowns, some of them inherited from my Russian mother, and not a one to wear in Paris."

That the queen is quite willing to shoulder the duties of queenhood is testified to by thousands of men and women who met her during the German occupation of Rumania. As a Red Cross nurse she was visiting the hospital of the incurables at Jassy, when she and the surgeon reached the door of the hopeless: "There's no need of going in there; it's too dangerous," said the surgeon. "They are dying—it is my duty," answered the queen. Just after she entered the queen heard a dying soldier calling for his wife. Without a word the queen walked over to the bed of the typhus victim, saying "Here I am," and knelt and embraced the man, who died in her arms, happy.

She's Practical. The queen is a practical queen. In the same city of Jassy this fact was discovered and when the mayor wanted to get the snow cleaned off the streets, he timidly applied to the queen for help. "Why bless you, of course I'll help," said the queen, and she led the gang of snow shovelers. After this whenever medicines and instruments were needed in the hospitals, or extra nurses, the queen was called upon.

Once there was a bread famine. The queen got her own private motor cars scouring the country for flour and then she organized the bakeries in the city. She did the same when there was a wood and coal famine. "As a child I was taught to live for others," said the queen in one part of the conversation with the Associated Press correspondent. "So whatever I do I do naturally, without effort. As a little girl I was told that his was part of the trade."

"Should the queen get a touch of internationalism and go on strike some day, that would be a hard day for Rumania," said laughingly Take Jonescu, the keenest minded lawyer, financier and politician in the country.

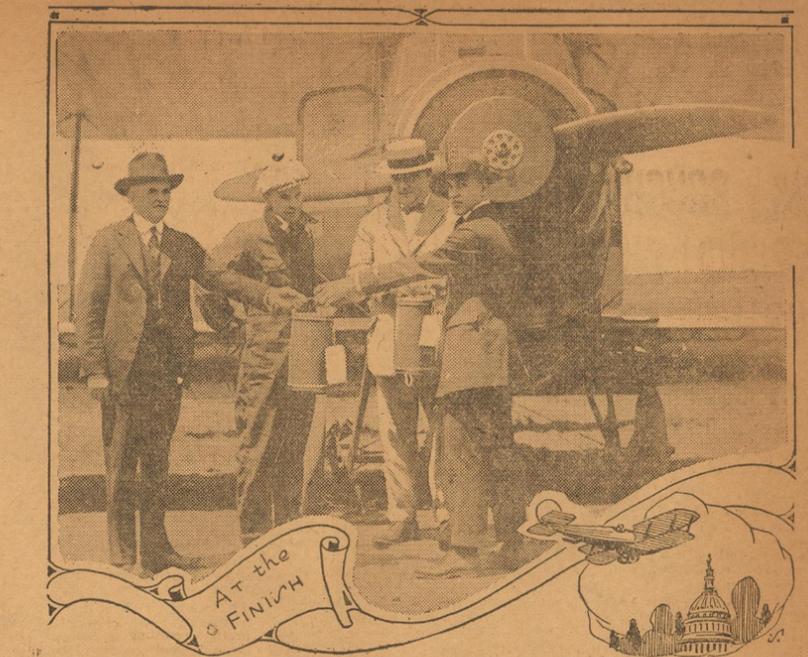

SINN FEIN CREATES HATRED OF ENGLISH IN IRELAND, PAPER SAYS
International News Service.
DUBLIN, June 19.—A story printed by the London Globe declares that the Sinn Fein's educational campaign in Ireland is directed at creating an absolute separatist republic within ten years. The Globe says that not only in the Irish schools, but in all the Irish homes, Protestant included, the principles of hatred of England are inculcated.

Domestic servants throughout Ireland are mainly Sinn Fein, the servants being drawn from Southern Ireland. The servants are Sinn Fein propagandists and children of parents entirely loyal to England are often heard uttering the most terrible threats against England, it is said.

The parents are helpless because servants are scarce.

ICE CREAM SPECIAL IN CLEVELAND-WASHINGTON FLIGHT TESTS ICELESS REFRIGERATION

Washington welcomes limousine guests from Cleveland. Left to right: Arthur A. Chapin, C. L. Fisher, Earl B. Gaddis and Ralph A. Lee. Chapin and Gaddis were on the reception committee of local citizens, while Fisher and Lee drove the plane to the nation's capital.

Keep your look out! The ice cream man may drop in on you most any time. At least, he is flying now delivering ice cream from city to city.

The first test of city-to-city delivery of ice cream was made this week and while not made for record purposes, it established a record for the longest flight ever made in a limousine airplane and also an altitude record of 13,710 feet. The flight from Cleveland to Washington was made with only one short stop to repair the plane's water system.

The test was observed with interest by Washington scientists arriving at Bolling Field was in as good condition as though purchased ten minutes before at the corner drug store.

SAN ISABEL, IN NATIONAL FOREST OF COLORADO, TO BE MECCA FOR MOTORISTS

DENVER, June 19.—Motorists who visit Colorado this summer will find in the San Isabel National Forest, lying 25 miles west of Pueblo and Trinidad, an attractive vacationland in which there are unsurpassed opportunities for outdoor life and enjoyment. Nowhere will the "motor gypsy" encounter such a diversity of scenic splendor as is found in the new playgrounds which are being developed on this forest.

High peaks and broad valleys vie with emerald lakes and Sahara-like sand dunes in a pageant of natural beauty. Here are stately cool forests dotted with glades and meadow abuzz with myriads of mountain wild flowers.

On Worth Creek, near Boulder, at the base of the Sangre de Cristo Range near Westcliffe, and on three other areas near the mystic Spanish Peaks, other camps of a similar nature will be constructed for the convenience of auto visitors and recreationists. And in all the forest areas of the magnificent reaches of San Isabel's mountains are other places equally as attractive, where one may pitch his tent in the midst of pleasant surroundings.

Two recreation associations of southern Colorado, co-operating with the U. S. Forest Service, are making this development possible. These are the San Isabel Public Recreation Association of Pueblo and the Spanish Peaks Mountain Playground Association with headquarters at Trinidad. Uncle Sam and the people of Southern Colorado invite every car owner to come and enjoy this new summer vacationland of the Rockies.

Driving your own car and carrying your camping outfit is one of the most popular ways of visiting the Rockies. Permanent improvements are to be made in the form of camping spots, fire camps, sanitary arrangements and a shelter tent, and further up this stream and under the towering brow of Cascade crag is another similar camp. Other camps of this kind are to be developed in this canon in time for the summer vacation season.

The Woman Who Saw

Some Sport.

The woman found romance the other day on top of a Fifth avenue bus. As soon as she spied the couple in front she knew that they were bride and groom, and very young at that. It was evident that they had never been in New York before. They only took their eyes off the buildings and the passing throng long enough to exchange rapt smiles once in a while.

"I wish we could have found one of the kind that has a man to explain things," the woman heard the man exclaim. A kindly looking little lady in the seat beside her leaned forward impulsively and touched him on the arm. "I'm an old New Yorker," she said. "I will point out the different buildings." They beamed their thanks and the little bride turned around to confide that they'd never been in New York before and were so anxious to do everything.

"So that's Altman's," she exclaimed. "I'm glad to see their place! You know I rot most of my—" she broke off, laughing and embarrassed, and after several false starts. "We're on our honeymoon. We thought we would keep it a secret—"

"We're from Mississippi," the boy contributed. It was evident that they wanted to talk about themselves and that the sights of Fifth avenue were but a big background for their new experience.

Not until the Metropolitan museum had been passed, however, did they get to the point of their confession, she doing most of the talking:

"We ran away."
"We hated to do it."
"We had an awful time!"
"We'd been going together ever since we were in the fifth grade, but papa wouldn't hear of our being engaged. He's the register of deeds with his office in the courthouse in our town."

"I help him keep the records, and he didn't want me to get married on that account for one thing. We wanted to run away, but I wouldn't be 18 till next June, and we had about decided we'd have to wait. Then papa had to go away on business the other day, and he left a lot of marriage license blanks signed so if anybody wanted to get married while he was gone—and we made out a license and got married!"

The little kindly person leaned forward and clasped a hand on the shoulder of each of them. "Bless your dear little hearts!" she exclaimed heartily. "But won't your father fume when he comes home and finds you gone?"

"Oh, he knows it! Somebody called him up on the long distance and he got there for the wedding," the young man chimed in. "Gee! He was some sport. Why, he is going us this trip!"

By Any Other Name.

Shakespeare's "rose by any other name" and, likewise, Sweet William (which may have been named for the Earl of Avon) loses none of its old world charm, though variously spelled, as the woman saw it in the flower marts of Vesey street labeled "Sweet Willum," "Sweet Wilum" and "Sweet Willimm."

Translated.

The woman had already ordered her malted milk before she realized there was somebody in difficulty beside her.

"Mais, non, non, non," followed by a velocity of real French, attracted her attention. This was answered by two eager voices speaking Americanized finishing-school French. The woman turned to her right. There, high on a stool at the soda counter, sat a short, plump French girl, trying her best with hands, arms and a foreign language to explain to the clerk her desires. Two young Americans surrounded her, trying their best to probe the depths of the "grand self" which she repeatedly claimed.

"Gee, I wish I spoke her language," lamented the youngster behind the counter. He was a nice-looking boy and obviously envious of his customer's linguistic advantages.

"It's raspberry soda," I think," suggested one of the helpful girls. The soda clerk threw some rosy liquid into a glass and held it up. "Raspberry, savvy?" he questioned. The round French eyes sparkled. "Oui, oui, délicieux, oui!" With the flourish of an artist the soda clerk placed the glass full of foaming liquid before the thirsty one. Followed a stream of delighted French; then a long pause. From one to the other of her rescuers the little lady from overseas looked inquiringly and then to the soda clerk. Suddenly a smile beamed on her face. With delicate grace, she raised her finger tips to her lips, kissed them and then dropped the kiss right on the very foamiest crest of the glass of soda. Snap went the fingers of the boy behind the counter. "I get yer," he said, all agrin. "I may not speak your language, but in any language that means spoon to me," and he planted one down in the frothy liquid on the very spot where the little lady had dropped her kiss.

Vanitas Vanitatum.

She is a girl bachelor, 60 if a minute, but one never dares to hint the existence of such a thing as age in the presence of this jolly little spinster. It is an amazing experience if one happens to see first her 16-year-old buck and then her slightly renovated 60-year-old face.

However, she is a generous, jolly little person and a great favorite with her many relatives. It was upon a visit to one of her nieces, a friend of the woman's, that she was threatened with a severe illness. Having always had excellent health, the visitor was not used to giving in gracefully, so she made a great do when Niece Amy insisted upon calling in the family doctor. Finding resistance useless she took heart of grace and a fresh dab of rouge, donned a rose-garlanded cap and pink negligee and climbed into bed, looking really quite fetching.

When the physician arrived he proved to be a jolly, middle-aged widower, who took pains to be unusually affable. Thereafter the doctor's visit became the anticipated event of the day, and it was preceded by much maneuvering with mysterious contents of the little vanity bag, always within reach. This took the patient's mind from her pain and discomfort, and she got what she could out of the social side of the game.

One day she had a slight relapse and was really too miserable even to be tidied up at the usual time. As bad luck would have it the doctor came ahead of time on his way to a serious case near by. He sent up word that he was in a great hurry and must not be kept waiting.

"Oh, but I couldn't possibly see him now," protested the flustered invalid to her niece. "You know perfectly well that I am much too ill to see the doctor this morning!"

WOMAN COOLLY KILLS HUSBAND WHEN LOVE IS DEAD SHE SAYS

ELGIN, Ill., June 15.—Here is a remarkable story of a woman who killed her husband "because he did not love her any more." She is free, but about to die—an incurable victim of tuberculosis.

The woman—Mrs. Henry C. Friederichs—premeditated the crime. She practiced with a pistol for many days in the room in which she lay, using her husband's cap as a target.

The husband, a well-known business man, was kind to her, Mrs. Friederichs said, but only because he "pitied" her. After she became proficient with the revolver she asked her husband to dinner one night.

"I stepped back just as I had planned to do, just as I used to do in front of the cap, and when the range was as usual I killed him," she said.

"She never quite knew what it was for he had a queer little laugh which I always liked, and he laughed just once before I ended his life. I just emptied the revolver."

"It seems touching. It's pitiful, really, I suppose, and yet I am not in the least sorry. I have killed him quite as I planned."

"The kisses he gave to me were just kisses of pity."
"I found a letter and I know the woman who wrote it loved my husband. There was no mistaking nor was there any question in her mind that her love was returned. The letter breathed it, just as a spoken word would in its accents. I had long known that my husband, good as he was, had ceased to love me. He had outlived me, really, and he pitied me; just determined to be kind until I died."

The woman was not arrested, for she had only a short time before been discharged from the Winfield hospital here as incurably tubercular. She was not expected to live more than a week or two.

Two of the "Big Four—An Oriental Enchantress—His Feet Shot Away—Born on a Clipper Ship.

Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks, at their home in California, was one of the surprises of the film world. Miss Pickford will soon be seen in "Suds," a laughable comedy drama, in which she plays the part of a drudge in a London hand laundry. Fairbanks has just finished "The Mollycoddle," a spectacular production costing nearly half a million. He was injured four times while on this film.

Norma Nichols. Norma Nichols is the possessor of a beauty of face and form which lends itself with particular aptitude to the make-up of an Oriental enchantress, and it is such a role the director has given her in "Ruth of the Rockies," the Pathe serial. Miss Nichols, who is a sister-in-law of Hal Roach, producer of the Harold Lloyd comedies, literally walked into pictures. For it was but a day or two after her return from the college where she had completed her studies that she started out to make her fame and fortune in the pictures. She first went to the Sennet studios, and unlike the majority, was engaged immediately. Since then she has had parts in features as well as comedies and now she is to have her chance in the serial form of film drama.

William Faversham. Page Sir Oliver Lodge, someone, and explain this phenomenon—William Faversham's feet seem to have been shot out from under him. It just shows what terrible stuff is on the market these days. So keep away from the bar unless you know what you are getting.

This saloon, however, is a perfectly safe one. It was built for Mr. Faversham at the Selznick studio for his picture, "The Sin That Was His," which is now being filmed. "In fact, Mr. Faversham avers, 'about the only place where one may have the sensation of leaning up against a good old-fashioned bar and snuggling about the brass rail without thought of fear or of revenue officers is a motion picture studio.'"

Ruth Fuller Golden. What would you do if you had a father, who had been a well known monologist in vaudeville for years, golden haired girl, not yet out of your teens?

The chances are you would go into the movies, or at least try to, and that is exactly what little Ruth Fuller Golden did. As soon as she had finished school she invaded Universal City. There her youth and beauty found a place. Miss Golden's latest feature is seen as the sister of the Universal's western star, Harry Carey.

Vivian Rich. Vivian Rich was born to a life of adventure. Her mother claims descent from a line of proud Castilians, and her father is skipper of a full-rigged clipper ship.

It was on his ship that Vivian Rich was born; and perhaps it was this and you yourself were a very pretty and no playthings save those the sailors dug up for her from their treasure chests—which made the little girl dream the great dreams which carried her to her present success as one of the William Fox stars.

Her career began during her first summer spent on shore. In the artists' colony at Provincetown, on Cape "The Sheep Herder," in which she is early environment—when she knew no playground other than the deck, a model. Since then some of the paintings she posed for have become almost as famous as the men who painted them and incidentally as the little model who posed for them. Miss Rich's latest picture under the Fox banner is "A World of Folly," a society drama of exceptional force.

Ann Forrest. Ann Forrest, whose work in Paramount pictures is rapidly bringing her into front rank popularity with motion picture devotees, is a native of Denmark. She will soon be seen as Phoebe Puckers, the forlorn little London slavey, in William De Mille's "Cod," where she was staying with her mother, she was in great demand as production, "The Prince Chap," starring Thomas Meighan. In "The Grim Game," she was Houdini's leading woman, and in "Conrad in Quest of His Youth," another production by De Mille for Paramount, she has been cast for an important role.

Bobby Kelson. The Hollywood film colony is all talking about a new "child find" these days. He is Master Bobby Kelson, 3½ years old. The little youngster, now so much discussed among motion picture players, is declared to be a phenomenal child actor, who will cause again that wonder that must always come when a little one shows great depths of understanding and extraordinary powers of execution. He has just finished his first picture, King Vidor's new First National production, "The Jack Knife Man," a story of life among those quaint old characters of Ellis Parker Butler's famous novel, known as the Mississippi shanty boat men. In this picture Bobby plays the vital role of little Buddy, a waif, who inspires a wonderful love in the hearts of two remarkable characters, a shanty boat man and a philosophical singing tramp.

Man and Wife in Novel Race, Bessie Barriscale Plays Woman Rivaling Husband for Honors.

The story of the remarkable race between a husband and wife from a small town to win fame in New York's theatrical world is told in "The Luck of Geraldine Laird," the Robertson-Cole Superior picture, in which Bessie Barriscale will be seen at the Opera House today. The picture was produced by E. B. Features, Miss Barriscale's own company. "The Luck of Geraldine Laird" is founded on a story by Kathleen Norris, which appeared as a serial under the same name. It is the third Kathleen Norris story which Miss Barriscale has put on the screen in recent months, the two previous having been "The Heart of Rachel" and "Joseph's Wife," both of which proved great successes. In this picture Miss Barriscale is Geraldine Laird, who lives at Stockham, N. Y., a small town, where she moves in a quiet unpretentious way in church and social circles. She has two children, and she and her husband seem fairly happy in the home of Mrs. Fitzpatrick, Laird's mother-in-law. As a matter of fact, however, for a long time her husband's discontent secretly has been growing, due to the fact that he would like to have a home of his own for his wife and children.

Gets On Stage. Every time anything of this sort is mentioned, however, Mrs. Fitzpatrick reminds her daughter that she "simply couldn't get along" without her and so they go on, the husband's discontent increasing. At last a business opportunity comes to go to New York and at the same time, a woman play-broker of flirtatious manner convinces the husband that he should go. Unhappily she turns the man's head over her own charms, and he goes to New York alone, to win success as a playwright. Just before this the wife was seen in a little characterization at a church bazaar, which was great applause, there also she is seen by a New York producer of "girlie reviews." He remembers her, but never has opportunity to engage her until he meets her later on Fifth avenue, where she is working in a modiste's shop. This is after she has come to New York to try to win back her husband, and determined to remain there and work. Then come the "show downs" on the plays of the husband, and the acting ability of the wife, which gives the picture a most interesting climax. Miss Barriscale is supported by Niles Welch and others.

HIPPODROME.

Costly Bill at the Hippodrome Today. "Julnar of the Sea," a story of the dance is taken from the Arabian Nights and produced by Ted Shaw, is a masterpiece in construction. The scenes are reproduced from the Bronze Palace of the Shah of Persia, another the bottom of the sea, home of Julnar with human-legged octopus and shark and old Neptune on his throne and the last scene is the slave market in an Oriental city, with sixteen of the most beautiful of the Denishawn dancing girls, including Lillian Powell. It is one of the most captivating and magnificent spectacles upon the public stage today. Maurice Samuels and company, in "A Day at Ellis Island," in America's foremost Italian character delineator supported by an excellent cast which includes Master Frank Bosco, the boy violinist who offers a program of jazz and operatic selections during the sketch.

Dorn is now so embittered that he conducts a single-handed warfare against the "reds," determined to get at the leader. How he gets at the leader, avenges himself and regains the love and confidence of the girl, completes the thrilling plot of the story. Claire Adams, as the girl, and Robert McKim as the secret leader of the radicals, are seen in the cast.

Max Linder Cavorts in Merry Parisian Comedy.

Max Linder returns to delight his many followers, in "The Little Cafe," a merry comedy lad in a Paris cafe. Mr. Linder plays the role of a waiter who falls heir to two million francs, but is unable to give up "waiting" without paying a forfeit. This he will not do because he realizes he has been tricked into the contract that calls for his services for twenty years or a forfeit if he quits. In order to get some fun out of his fortune, Max works all day and night. His various affairs of the heart lead him a merry dance, but when they learn that he is a millionaire, they desert him, leaving only Yvonne, the barmaid, to be true to him—which is just as it should be. Max Linder will cavort in "The Little Cafe" at the Lamb theatre today. It is a Parthe feature and an adaptation of the popular musical comedy of the same name.

HAWAIIAN DIVING BELLE SCORNED RUSH WEDDING

HONOLULU, T. H.—A son of wealth from a neighboring island left home last week to sail for Ecuador on a vacation, his father having given him $1,000 with which to play the game of roulette. The trip might have been without incident had not fate thrown the young man in the path of one of the fairest of Honolulu's daughters. He didn't lose a minute falling in love and throughout all the hours of the day and as many of the evenings as were permitted he feasted his eyes on her beauty and listened in rapture to the music of her voice. That night he slept not. He knew that life without the fair one was not to be thought of, and he wanted to live joyously, not to say happily, he decided to wed her forthwith and take her to Ecuador to sympathize with him when he picked a loser. (He was young and inexperienced in the ways of wives, you understand.)

The first thing next morning he brought a diamond betrothal ring and a wedding ring as his guard. Then he obtained a marriage license, engaged a minister, invited friends to the wedding and ordered a fitting feast to celebrate his nuptial. This took up so much of his time he was unable to see his charmer until twenty minutes before the hour set for the ceremony. He found her swimming at Waikiki, called her out of the water told her of his dream in fervid tones and begged that she fasten into her garments and get to the church where the guests were assembled. She looked at him a moment, then with a fervor that matched his own, told him where he could betake himself, ran to the end of the pier, curved her plump body into a graceful curve and dived into the welcoming water, wiggling a farewell with her toes in a manner that said "Beat it!" as plainly as she could have done with her tongue. As the original Venus came out of the sea, so this one dived into it, and the heartbroken youth rushed to the Ecuadorian Consul, had his passport vised, and jumped aboard the steamer.

MONTMARTRE OPENS CONTEST TO SELECT PRETTIEST GIRL

By NEWTON C. PARKE, International News Service Staff Correspondent.

PARIS, June 15.—The contest to pick the "most beautiful girl in Montmartre," abandoned during the war, was revived the other night at the notorious Bal Tabarin concert hall, with a crowd that packed the building from the floors to the ceiling. The first contingent of American tourists held down nearly half the seats and certainly bought more than half the champagne. For let it be said right here, the business of picking the Montmartre peaches is as nothing in the minds of the Bal Tabarin management compared with the business of keeping the corks popping and the francs rolling in during the festivities preceding the annual contest itself. By something after 8 o'clock the tourists had occupied all the choice seats overlooking the dance floor, where the competition was scheduled to take place. It was nearly an hour later before the real habits of Montmartre's dancing halls and cafes, the short-haired, short-skirted girls and the long-haired dancing boys began to roll in and fill up the stools along the Bal Tabarin's long bar. They imbibe all glasses of vermouth, cassis or orangeades or orangeades, which cost considerably less than the champagne that flowed out of the wine buckets in the tourists' section. It may be mentioned here that the real "bad" man and "bad" woman of Montmartre, who figure in our best Apache dramas, are just fiends on lemonades and orangeades and seldom go in for anything stronger than port or madeira.

A couple of orchestras were razzing away all the while, and to make no mistake what they were razzing about big signs were flung down from the gallery announcing "fox trot" or "tango" or "javanese." They didn't seem to get the eye of anyone but some of the real professionals. Several leading American sightseers, as well as prominent cotton merchants from Manchester, England, and kippers herring kings from Scandinavia, just wound their arms around the short-skirted little Montmartre girls and lanced any kind of a dance that their feet moved to without regard to the music. A few American doughboys upheld our national dancing honors by conforming exactly to all the rules of the fox and the shimmy as laid down in the dance halls of Coney Island and Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

As the final preliminary to the beauty contest four heavyweight girls from Montmartre danced a quadrille, which was not a quadrille at all but the old "can't" of the Moulin Rouge, modified to meet modern police regulations. This brought down storms of applause and showers of confetti and gaily-colored paper ribbons. The orchestra hit up a lively tune, a small stage was pushed out upon one end of the dance floor and the dozen judges, all warranted to be "prominent sculptors and artists," assembled just in front of the stage to pick Montmartre's prize beauties. In a twinkling of an eye they were reinforced by a hundred volunteer judges, who descended from the balconies and galleries to have a better look at beauty as she really is.

Up went the curtain and out started the first two competitors, clad in extremely short skirts and stockings. They spun around while the professional judges made marks on long slips of paper and the volunteer judges yelled things like "she'll do," or "first prize for the little girl." The other beauties followed by pairs. Of course the management never planned it, but as the contest grew on toward the 11 o'clock closing hour the competitors wore less and less clothes. Two girls wore one-piece bathing suits of transparent net material climaxed the performance and the curtain went down. Maybe the judges were right and maybe they were influenced by the cries from the crowd, but the girls of the one-piece bathing suits were pronounced the two "most beautiful girls" of Montmartre and were hauled about the floor on a gilded float to receive the plaudits of the spectators. The lights were just going out when Montmartre's two "most beautiful girls" carried from the cloakroom, where they had been fast asleep all the time, their two children—one a boy of twelve and the other a girl baby. Thus ended a "wild" night in Montmartre.

MOVIE NOTES

In these days of magnificent motion picture production there's many a film company that will spend thousands of dollars for an elaborate setting and yet, apparently, cannot afford to spend a paltry sum for a much-needed dictionary or grammar. To all appearances, subtitles are given little or no consideration in the construction of the film. Flagrant grammatical errors are by no means uncommon, while correct spelling and proper punctuation are often ignored. Voyages to the most remote places will be taken in order to secure the right kind of background; lives will be recklessly risked in order to inject the right amount of realism, but the omission of periods, commas or semi-colons goes by unnoticed. And speaking of subtitles, why are they written with such childish indifference to their aptness in the places where they appear? It often occurs that when a character is registering extreme emotion, the subtitle flashed on the screen will have him entering upon a lengthy but puerile philippic discourse, entirely at odds with the action and in utter defiance with the laws of dramatics. Furthermore, there is scarcely ever any attempt to have the movement of the actor's lips coincide with the wording of the subtitle. It would be reasonable to demand the observance of this throughout a picture, but at certain important points it adds much to the dramatic effect and the better understanding of a production. It must be borne in mind that the subtitle is to the moving picture what the spoken dialogue is to the legitimate stage production. A spoken drama in which there is no harmony between its dialogue and its action is grotesque and absurd; a moving picture which does not co-ordinate the subtitles and the action of the piece is no less so.

Wm. S. Hart has just declined an offer to return to the speaking stage next season at $15,000 a week. The overtures came from Al H. Woods, New York theatrical producer, who sent a special agent to Los Angeles to see Mr. Hart. The terms proposed gave the film star an offer of $15,000 a week with a guarantee of forty weeks. The theatrical producer had a play all ready for the star and argued that his popularity would increase with his re-entry on the speaking stage. But Hart was adamant in his refusal. Under his contract with Paramount he is starring in a series of western pictures, the first of which, "The Toll Gate," was released a short time ago. "Sand" will be out next month.

In order to insure accuracy of the New England settings, Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of the Famous Players-Lasky corporation, has announced that Paramount's new film version of "The Old Homestead" will be produced in the east instead of on the west coast as had been previously announced. Work will start as soon as George Melford, who is to direct, has completed "The Juckins," the Paramount production he is now working on.

"The Mutiny of the Elsinore," the Jack London picture being made by Edward Sloman at the Metro studio, has gone to the cutting room. The next picture which Mr. Sloman will direct will be "God of His Fathers," another Jack London story.

With the personnel of his organization practically completed, Monroe Salisbury left this week for the north country of California, where he will film the exteriors for his first independent release. The star-producer has purchased "The Barbarian," a popular magazine story, and will be supported by Jane Novak, Barney Sherry, Eleanor Hancock, Harrison Post, Alan Hale and Milton Markwell.

Stating that she herself would still be a teacher if the pay had not been so poor, Wanda Hawley, motion picture star, has offered her time and energies to the movement designed to bring higher wages for American educators.

Four years ago Miss Hawley was a music teacher in the public schools of Bremerton, Wash. Discontented by the insufficient recompense, she resigned to go to the concert stage, later becoming a leading woman in moving pictures. Recently she has been made a star by the Renlart Pictures corporation.

"Mid-Channel," the screen version of Sir Arthur Wing Pinero's celebrated drama of the same name, with Ethel Barrymore in the leading role several years ago, is Clara Kimball Young's latest production. Under the direction of Harry Garson this picture has just been completed by the Garson studios, Los Angeles, and will be released shortly through the Equity Pictures Corporation, New York, following "For the Soul of Rafael," which is now being given its first presentations.

The next picture for Jack Pickford, who is making "The Man Who Had Everything," has been selected. It is to be "Just Out of College." Al Green, who directed Jack in most of his later releases, will continue in that capacity. During the next twelve months there will be an influx of foreign-made pictures in this country, according to Marshall Neilan, the young director-producer, who has sent a special representative abroad to make a study of conditions.

Motion-picture studios abroad are now working night and day to make up for the inactivity in this field brought on by the war. At least a dozen prominent American producing organizations have announced that producing units will shortly be dispatched to foreign "locations" with the idea of obtaining new atmosphere in films. Mr. Neilan was the first independent producer to announce such plans, and leaves this country the latter part of August, accompanied by his entire producing organization, including a number of internationally known stars.

RIDDING. "Doubtless," said the professor to the returned traveler, "you have picked up many strange bits of information regarding the animals and birds of the countries you have visited?" "A few," answered the traveler. "The most interesting thing I ever heard, however, was a story I got in Africa. It seems that a year or so ago a representative of a rubber stamp house went through there and lost his sample case, containing all kinds of office stamping apparatus. It appears that some ostriches found the case, broke it open, and swallowed the samples." "I see nothing odd about that. Ostriches will eat anything." "Yes, but now every ostrich egg that is found there is numbered and dated!" "Tut-tut."

FILM STARS TO BE MARRIED AT NEW YORK FRIDAY

More than 8,000 pipe organs and theatre orchestras in as many motion picture theatres throughout the United States and Canada, played the Mendelssohn wedding march at 4 o'clock Friday afternoon, June 18th, in compliment to Richard Barthelmess, prominent film star, and his bride, Miss Mary Hay, late of the Ziegfeld "Nine O'clock Revue." Mr. Barthelmess, prominent for several years in Dorothy Gish productions, and later in D. W. Griffith's "Broken Blossoms" and "The Idol Dancer," was married to Miss Hay last Friday afternoon in the Church of the Heavenly Rest (Episcopal), Fifth avenue and Forty-fifth street, New York City, the Rev. Herbert Shipman, pastor, officiating. The romance between Miss Hay and Mr. Barthelmess found its culmination at the D. W. Griffith studios at Mamaroneck, N. Y., where both the young players are releasing for the forthcoming Griffith production of "Way Down East," in which Miss Hay will appear as Kate Brewster and Mr. Barthelmess as David Bartlett. Miss Hay actually began her motion picture career three years ago in Mr. Griffith's production of "Hearts of the World," in which she was seen as the principal dancing girl in a replica of a German dug-out. She later left the screen and went upon the speaking stage, appearing in a number of Ziegfeld musical productions, the last being the "Nine O'clock Revue" on the roof of the New Amsterdam theatre, New York. She is the daughter of Colonel and Mrs. Frank Merrill Caldwell, and was born at Fort Bliss, Texas, August 22, 1901. Mr. Barthelmess, who is a graduate of Trinity college, Hartford, Conn., has been on the screen for but a few years, principally with Dorothy Gish and in Griffith productions. Within the present year he will head his own company and appear as a star.

Perry J. Rocklin of the Rocklin Rubber company, which recently opened as the distributor of Eric Coeds, says it is merely a question of delivery on the small car sizes as the demand for cords in this class far outstrips the factory production at present. Eric builds nothing but cords in all sizes and boasts up the guarantee to 12,000 miles.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the McGraw Tire and Rubber company John Morgan, formerly vice-president and treasurer, was unanimously elected to the presidency, succeeding the late Edwin C. McGraw, founder of the company, who died at his southern home, Miami, Fla., on May 24. Mr. Morgan will also continue to serve as treasurer.

His association with the McGraw company extends over the past ten years. Throughout this decade he has taken active part in the direction of the company's policies, having been elected to the trusteeship in 1912 and the following year to the vice-presidency and trusteeship.

He was born in London, England, in 1880, and in 1905 came to America to introduce the Kempshall, a high-grade European tire, into the United States. He is one of the directors of the Rubber Association of America, and is widely known in automobile circles.

Charles H. Wheeler, factory manager of the McGraw Tire and Rubber company, was also elected to serve on the board of directors.

The timely repair of even the most insignificant tread cut prevents sand blisters, mudblows and blowouts. The method is so simple that any motorist can protect himself by carrying in his tool box some self-vulcanizing tread gum, according to W. F. Oug.

Running over jagged stones and glass cuts the tread rubber protecting the fabric-carcase of the tire. In much the same way that a sponge absorbs water, even a minor tread cut sucks up sand, gravel and water. The moisture slowly rots away the cotton fabric. The sand and gravel form blisters and boils. Together they cause tread separation.

To neglect any tread cut is dangerous to the life of the tire, which deserves a square deal and protection against the thousand and one forms of tire abuse. It pays big dividends in immunity from trouble to regularly inspect tires for tread cuts and, when found, to promptly plug with tread gum, rather than to wait for the tire to "pop."

Tire conservation belted down means exercising a little care to get out of the tire all the miles that the manufacturer built into it. Any other course spoils the pleasure of driving a car, and besides it is extravagant.

A road authority stated recently that $62,750,000 is expected to be spent this year out of motorists' registration fees.

This is 95 per cent. of the fees paid the various states, and only part of the large sum already authorized in this country for good roads.

Such progress in the good roads movement is certain to exercise a strong influence on the type of motor car the motorist buys.

One important change already noticeable is the large number of closed cars used for all-year purposes. Of course, the closed car is adapted to all road conditions. But as more and better roads open up new touring possibilities, the closed car will be recognized as ideal to meet changing weather conditions encountered in traveling long distances.

Good roads have another important bearing on motor cars. They make unnecessary the enormous weight and tremendous power required for earlier touring cars. Light weight means a tremendous saving in purchase price as well as in upkeep expense.

The Auburn Automobile company manufacturers of the Auburn Beauty Six have been preaching the doctrine of good roads for many years. It believes that when motorists realize more fully that there are many advantages to be derived from good roads, the admirable work done to date in building the nation's roads will be only a beginning.

That broad-minded bankers of the country look upon the motor car as a necessity and are co-operating liberally with automobile dealers is the observation of N. R. Feites, treasurer of the Studebaker corporation, South Bend, Ind.

In a bulletin to the distributors of Studebaker cars, Mr. Feltes says: "The Studebaker corporation does business with a number of the largest and most important banks of the entire States, and, therefore, is in a position to state that the banks consider the automobile business and the men engaged in it are entitled to legitimate banking accommodations and credit and to constructive assistance from their bankers."

The number of motor cars in use today, the number of people supported by the automobile and allied industries, and the benefits to the owners in convenience, recreation and efficiency, are factors in gaining the support of bankers, according to E. S. Gahagen, local Studebaker distributor.

Figures show that there are approximately seven and one-half million motor cars registered in the United States. That means one to every fourteen people, or one to every three families. In the grain fields of Iowa and Nebraska and the fruit valleys of California there is an average of a car to nearly every family. Automobiles are doing about twice as much passenger traffic as the railroads, which shows what a vital factor the motor car is in the life of today.

"When a spring is improperly lubricated the leaves rust and stick together, thus destroying the resiliency of the spring and making it a little more effective than a solid block of steel," says Amos Chevrax of the C. and K. Motor Car company.

"A spring that has rusted fails to function and the shocks of the road are transmitted to the chassis with disastrous effect to the mechanism and discomfort to the passenger, while the tires are badly battered. Then, too, it always the rusty spring that breaks under a strain that it would normally support with ease. A little care in lubricating the leaves of the springs will pay big dividends in comfort and the satisfaction of a longer life for your car."

A suggestion has been made to the heads of the large railroad systems of the country by J. F. Richman, manufacturing manager of the Allen Motor company, Columbus, O., relative to the standardized type of freight car to be used in transporting automobiles.

The question is a most pertinent one because of the increasing volume of business and the apparent decrease in the facilities for handling it. Mr. Richman's suggestion is that all automobile box cars be made 75 feet in length, mounted on six-wheel trucks. If this could be done it would mean a reduction in the price of the average automobile to the consumer because of the decrease in the cost of transportation.

As a further suggestion, Mr. Richman asked the railroad companies to consider discontinuance of the common thirty-six-foot box cars equipped with wide side and end doors. These cars could be used for ordinary merchandise as well as automobiles and could be used to the same advantage, as far as the railroad companies are concerned, as the thirty-six-foot box cars.

Light weight, which has been the goal of automobile designers for years, has been attained in the new series "S" models of the Lexington Motor Car company to a surprising degree.

And this has been accomplished without loss of strength or car roadability. One of the greatest steps in the securing of light weight in the new "Thoroughbred" chassis has been made possible through the new frame construction.

The frame has not only been lightened in weight, but it actually has been given additional strength and sturdiness by the simple operation of making the side rails straight, forming them into one solid unit, and thereby eliminating more than 100 parts.

The frame is so designed that it tapers out to give wheel clearance and ground clearance and, giving a narrow front overhang, a wider rear end gives better body and spring support and materially reduces the tendency toward sidesway.

The stockholders of the Haynes Automobile company of Kokomo, Ind., in a recent meeting voted their approval for the construction of an immense body plant as the latest addition to the group of factories composing the Haynes manufacturing institution. Fifty automobile bodies per day will be the output of this new factory.

The Indianapolis 500-mile sweepstakes, won by Gaston Chevrolet in a Monroe Special is the third victory in this famous classic for the Indianapolis-made car.

No American car built outside of Indianapolis has ever finished first, the only other American car to win being the Marmon in 1911 and National in 1912.

Among the foreign cars, Peugeot stands first with three victories, in 1913, 1916 and 1919, while Delange and Mercedes claim one each, in 1914 and 1915, respectively.

Chevrolet's victory was a satisfaction to the Indianapolis racing in more than one way. Louis Chevrolet, designer of the winning car, is very popular, and his triumph was richly deserved, the reward for many years of intelligent and earnest effort.

With the prestige accruing to Indianapolis as a three-time winner in the annual 500-mile classic, other motor manufacturing centers that have hitherto feared less well will feel impelled to double their efforts, it is thought, assuring the largest domestic field next year in the speedway history.

It goes without saying that European manufacturers are already determined to come back next year and wipe out their defeat, the first they have sustained since 1912, when National bested Mercedes in the most famous contest in racing annals.

American automobile racing came back with a vengeance this year, and the interest in the sport promises to be greater in 1921 than ever. In Indianapolis alone three or four racing teams are expected to materialize, including Monroe, Frontenac and Duesenberg, and the contender who bests the home-bred, therefore, will have to step some to keep the Hoosier capital from a fourth victory.

As you ride along in a railroad train and watch the train slowly but surely pass a seemingly small automobile on a nearby highway, you experience thoughts of the many auto and the mighty railroad. Further reflection might bring to mind the tremendous scope of the vast network of steel rails in the United States.

But have you considered at the same moment, that for every mile of railway in the country there are ten miles on highway; and that for every railroad car there are three motor vehicles?

Even more startling is the fact that the nation possesses a motor vehicle for every fifty-nine yards of railroad right-of-way. This information is advanced by the B. F. Goodrich Rubber company, as a part of exhaustive research which points out the possibilities of the motor vehicle, which are almost limitless.

An idea of the development of motor transportation during the past ten years can be obtained by comparing it with the development in railroad transportation.

The railroad mileage of the United States would circle the globe at the equator more than ten times, or would form seventy-six parallel lines from New York to San Francisco. If the motor vehicles of the country were evenly distributed along these railroads there would be two for every city block of space on each of these parallel lines, or one for every fifty-nine yards of track.

A comparison of the railroad mileage in the various states with the number of motor vehicles in use in those states calls attention to an unequal distribution of transportation facilities.

In Rhode Island, for instance, there is one motor vehicle for every nine yards of railroad track, while in Nevada there is but one motor vehicle for every 434 yards.

New York, with the greatest number of motor vehicles, averaging one car for every twenty-five yards, and across the continent California, with its admittedly excellent road system, has one car for every thirty-three yards. Illinois, a representative state of the Middle West, has one motor vehicle for every forty-five yards of its vast network of rail lines.

Texas, whose railroad mileage is twenty-five per cent greater than that of any other state, has one motor vehicle for every fifty-five yards.

SOME CHICKENS.

International News Service.
ST. LOUIS, June 15.—Here is "some chicken!"

Besides laying the average-size egg of from one to two ounces in weight every day, a light Brahma hen belonging to Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Busch, of No. 4343 Hartford street, recently broke the henfruit record with an egg weighing 5 1/2 ounces. The Buschs declare they feed the hen only the regular chicken diet.

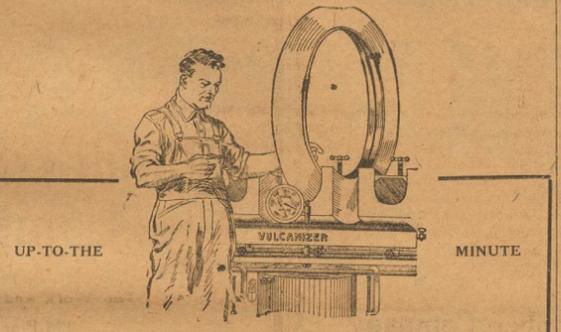

TOPEKA, Kan., June 15.—A curiosity in the shape of a chicken was hatched in an incubator owned by Gilbert Vaughn of this city, a few days ago. The chicken, if it can be so called, possesses four legs and the extras are so well developed that it is well-nigh impossible to distinguish them from its "regular" set.

Aside from the "extras," which it uses with equal adeptness, the "bird" is normal.

MOSCOW, Idaho, June 15.—Thirty years ago a woman here found a fine one in the crop of a chicken. This led to the discovery of a rich mine which, because of high cost of mining was abandoned. Many rich gems were found. The mine, almost forgotten, is to be reopened.

It is estimated that there were more than 2,000 New Yorkers, fifty-five of whom were killed in action, enlisted in allied armies.

RISE IN SHOE MARKET SHOWS MORE EXPORTS

CINCINNATI.—There is every reason to believe that the developments recently noted, and still in force in the shoe trade, will serve as a direct stimulus to greater efforts in the export business on the part of shoe manufacturers. If this proves to be the case, as it probably will, there will be cause for congratulation on the part of everybody concerned, for reasons which were suggested in this column some time ago.

Among these were the indisputable fact that American business as a whole needs export trade in order to be assured of markets for its surplus output of manufactured goods, and that individual manufacturers, by the same token, whether in the shoe trade or in other lines of business, need to work steadily upon the development of export connections as a species of insurance against slack business at home. With the pause which is on in the domestic demand for shoes, due to a backward season and to other causes, and with production at last regaining normal figures, the desirability of a healthy foreign business has become obvious.

Conditions Have Changed.

A year ago, and even less, it required a considerable degree of courage and more than ordinary farsightedness for an American shoe manufacturer, with a literal flood of business pressing upon him from all parts of the United States, to devote any part of his then limited capacity to foreign customers. He could pack and choose his customers in this country, and limit them to fractions of their demands. Why, it was asked, should a shoe manufacturer, under these circumstances, turn down gilded home business in order to provide himself with goods where to serve foreign customers?

Although many manufacturers took this view there were still some who felt that it was worth while to continue efforts to develop foreign connections, especially in Latin-America, where the opportunities seemed to be greatest, and where it seemed most logical to build up permanent business relations. It can be said also that in spite of the annoyances and difficulties inseparable, at least at the start, from handling foreign business in any part of the world those who had laid out and adhered to a program of this sort have had no reason to be sorry. It seems certain that they will have still less cause for regret as time goes on.

Importance of Foreign Trade.

At the annual convention last week of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, in Indianapolis, one of the most authoritative and interesting of the several prominent speakers was Edward N. Hurley, formerly chairman of the federal commission in charge of the shipping, and himself a highly successful manufacturer. And Mr. Hurley spoke on the importance to business men and to the country as a whole of building up foreign trade.

He declared that any manufacturer whose goods are suitable for export and who does not make it a part of his business program to devote a part of his production to export, aided by proper selling and advertising effort directed to the foreign field, is not doing his proper part as an American or a business man.

He described the fundamental and generally recognized need of the country for foreign business as a means of taking care of the normal surplus in production, which is sure to be present again in the near future if, indeed, it is not already in evidence. He pointed out that unless goods are available for foreign markets and unless, on the other hand, foreign markets are cultivated for American goods, various undesirable consequences must follow, the most obvious of which include unemployment for American labor and American capital.

The public at large is, of course, directly interested in this matter as to the shoe trade, just as are Cincinnati manufacturers. If there were any possibility of a shortage of shoes, as some authorities believe there may be of some food products, there would be ample reason for the public to object to any suggestion that manufacturers take steps to cultivate foreign business.

Production Near Normal.

As stated above, however, shoe production is approximately normal, and there is no reason to believe that there will not be plenty of shoes for the home markets, with a good surplus available for export.

With this assurance, the interest of the public becomes the same in the shoe trade as it is in other lines of manufacturing. In other words, in order that business in general may continue good, and that all of the beneficial activity may be experienced, it is to the interest of everybody that manufacturing be continued at as nearly as possible 100 per cent capacity, with a corresponding employment of wage earners and with consequent prosperity for merchants and others, in every line of business.

Foreign markets are still hungry for American shoes. They have had little opportunity to buy them for several years, and are hardly able to provide themselves with acceptable substitutes, in spite of the efforts of other countries in this line. While the foreign exchange situation is a serious handicap, as far as most of the countries of Europe are concerned, this is not true of Latin-American and other markets. The shoe manufacturer who desires to go after foreign trade, therefore, has only to make up his mind and go. Nobody will stop him.

TEACHER WHO GOT BETTER JOB MAY LOSE LICENSE

International News Service.
MOUNT VERNON, N. Y., June 19.—The board of education adopted a resolution directing W. H. Holmes, superintendent, at once to begin proceedings before the state commissioner of education to revoke the teaching license of Miss Gertrude E. Morris, a former teacher at public school No. 9.

The latter part of April Miss Morris handed in her resignation, to take effect May 1. The board refused to accept it because Miss Morris had not given thirty days' notice. Miss Morris went to New York and accepted a teacher's position at a higher salary.

Maime gave a bonus of $100 to her former service men.

Kansas Women to Make Fight for Better Children

TOPEKA, Kan.—Kansas club women have started a campaign to improve the physical condition of the future citizens of the state. As the first step in the plan the women are demanding the enforcement of the law passed years ago providing for the sterilization of insane, epileptic persons in the state institutions. They would also prohibit the marriage of epileptics and would force those seeking marriage licenses to provide a certificate from a physician that there is no epilepsy in the family and that both the contracting parties are not subject to the disease as far as a reputable physician can determine.

Five years physicians and students of the social structure in Kansas have pointed out the need of some drastic step in this direction to prevent the "propagation of the unfit." They were able to get a law through the legislature some years ago authorizing the heads of the various eleemosynary institutions to perform the sterilization operation when they thought it should be done. But there was on requirement that it should be done and no penalty for failure to perform the operation.

Want Law Amended.

At the annual meeting of the Kansas Federation of Women's clubs held at Hays, when nearly all of the larger clubs of the state were directly represented the legislative committee was directed to have prepared an amendment to the present law requiring the performance of the operation upon the admission of the patient to the institution and fixing a severe penalty for failure to do it.

There has been an increase in the number of epileptics in the state in proportion to the population. The club women feel that the only way to stop the gradual increase, thus weakening the citizenship of the state, is to begin now enforcing the sterilization law.

The women also want more strict marriage laws than those in force at the present time. They have not yet reached the point where they feel that there should be a complete medical examination of those seeking marriage licenses. But they do feel that the present laws are too lax, and what laws there are, are not rigidly enforced by the probate judges of the state. The probate judges, in their annual convention, made almost the same declaration. They want the laws amended so that there is no leeway granted the officers, but that the same requirements be made of every person. The probate judges and the women's clubs both maintain that there is too much leeway allowed officials in the manner of granting licenses, and that one judge may be strict and enforce the law to the letter, while another may not enforce the requirements at all in many instances.

PRIZE GOWN IN SCHOOL CONTEST COST BUT $2.87

AUSTIN, Texas.—Dresses and hats for girls need not be expensive to be attractive. This was proved by the remarkable display which was made at the state style show which has just been held in Austin under the auspices of the University of Texas. More than fifty girls from various parts of Texas entered the contest and were present to show the dresses they had made for themselves of materials of their own selection. Pretty school dresses that cost not to exceed $4 each were shown and the dress of this particular kind which won the prize was of gingham material and cost only $2.87. The maker, wearer and prize winner of this dress was Miss Alice Johnson of Houston.

It is stated that this style show was the first of its kind ever held in the United States. Its purpose was to teach the high school girl how to select, how to buy, how to make a becoming costume at a reasonable price. Each girl as she stepped forth told why she had selected the color, why the style. Each dress was made at a far less expense than if it had been ready made. The graduating gowns were beautiful and

Each girl as she stepped forth told why she had selected the color, why the style. Each dress was made at a far less expense than if it had been ready made. The graduating gowns were beautiful and dainty, and not one of them came up to $18. Most of the girls wore the most becoming hats made by themselves. The dresses were all made in school periods. Most of the girls wore low heeled shoes.

All of the contestants were students in high schools and received their instruction in dressmaking from teachers of home economics. In awarding the prizes, which ranged from $5 to $10 each, the judges took into consideration the workmanship of the dress and its becomingness to the wearer. The money prizes were given by the Mothers' Congress of Texas. While the materials which the dresses were made were not expensive they were of good, lasting qualities and will wear better, it is stated, than the more expensive stuff.

Miss Judith Norwood of Cleburne was winner of the second place, with a dress costing $3.15.

Miss Lois Southwell of Cleburne won honorable mention.

A sport costume which was made by Miss Bryn McGowan of San Antonio, costing $3.90, won a first prize.

Miss Ruth Glidenmeister of San Antonio was the only entry in the winter costume, with a dress costing $9.50.

Schools of second classification made entries and prizes were awarded to: Miss Thessa Davis for the best afternoon dress, who displayed one costing $5.00.

The graduation dress taking first place was made by Miss Inez A. Ford of San Antonio for $9.94, and Uta second best was made by Miss Elizabeth Pollack of Midlothian for $17.50, while honorable mention went to Miss Hazel Hope of Sweetwater.

Other afternoon dresses were displayed by Miss Eleanor Schraum of Houston, who won first place with a dress costing $8.40, and Miss Mona Fossen of San Antonio won second place with one costing $16.37, while honorable mention went to Miss Louise Bernhart of Austin for a renovated pongee dress, which cost $2.

Woman Is Sailor on Ocean Vessel Headed by Hubby

NEW YORK, June 19.—Over the cobalt expanse of Pelham Bay the hot noon sun shone down on deck and boom of many craft. Long, low-slung summer clouds seemed motionless above the horizon, against which lines of masts and rigging etched a changing pattern.

As quiet as the East from which she might have returned was the three-masted trading schooner in the distance. Sound of buzz saw and hammer, and pop of paint brush about Jacob's shipyard on City Island, told the visitors that preparation was being made for an important event.

Choppy little waves tipped Shamrock IV, the pride of Sir Thomas Lipton—and the sun struck green gleams from the challenger's canvas sails. The great race to the shore lay the former Shamrock, which came over in 1914, idle perforce, because of war, now "trial horse" for the cup candidate.

"The Shamrock, to borrow a phrase from your Republican convention, is a 'dark horse,' said Mrs. Emily Burton, who stood on the deck of the houseboat Killarney watching sailors climb rope ladders or ride up high in 'chairs' made of board and rope. And the old Shamrock is now trial horse for her."

But lest you should wonder why a woman carries in a shipyard, we hasten to explain that Mrs. Burton will sail on the Shamrock IV, the great race on July 15 off Sandy Hook. For she is none other than the wife of the man who will command the speedy contender, and she will be the first woman who has ever been a member of a crew in a cup race.

"I'm just going along because I like to," Mrs. Burton said modestly. "Now Emily," Captain Burton, her husband, said reproachfully, "why do you say that? The Shamrock is a trial horse for me, and I would allow no one else to perform that duty."

Mrs. Burton smiled out to sea and told me of her experience and of her love for things nautical.

"We've been sailing together for thirty years—ever since we've been married. My husband has built a number of boats and we raced in England, and often in the Kiel canal. The racing, one of the boats, won many times for us."

"We used to go in for hunting back home. My husband was master of the hounds and I often rode to hounds with him. But in the last few years I have given it up and sailing is my only sport now."

"Seafaring life is hard on a woman if she cares for her complexion. Salt water is hardly a cosmetic! But it's wonderful for one's health. A wetting at sea never gives one a cold, but you know it would on land."

"You see, they're fixing up the former Shamrock—she's the 'trial horse' now. They call her that because in the trial races she goes beside Shamrock IV, as a pace-maker. The trial horse is the boat that sailed across the ocean in 1914."

"But the new Shamrock is a lovely craft. Sir Thomas Lipton will be here to see her in a few days," continued Mrs. Burton. "There is her mast yonder."

"The challenger has between thirty and forty in her crew and we're all anxious for her to win, of course."

"I, personally, have no thought of anything else. Although we have received wonderful hospitality since our arrival,

I have really planned to go nowhere. Haven't even been into New York City. You see we came right to City Island after landing from the Adriatic. I may go out more after the excitement is over.

"There is so much to be done. The boats must have their sails and gear tested. And everything is to be painted inside and out. But as to the Shamrock's winning, that depends on so many things, weather conditions and good seamanship.

"It may be fine or very rough, but she is a good boat and has good sails, so I hope we can handle whatever situation comes up. We have every hope, but none can tell the outcome yet."

Nearly seamen were rubbing the "trial horse's" sides with polishing rags, winding paint brushes and tossing about rope. The sound of riveting back in the shipyard and the scraping of masts contrasted strangely with the soundless dip of the seagulls that flashed far out near the challenger's grass-green glory.

COOPER CIRCLE OF METHODIST W.H.M.S. GIVES LAWN PARTY

The Cooper Addition circle of the Woman's Home Missionary society of the Methodist church, Mrs. Mills, chairman, gave an ice cream supper on Mrs. Mill's lawn Friday night. The lawn was illuminated brilliantly by electric lights hung from tree to tree, the booths and tables adorned with cut flowers. The "spooky" fortune teller's nook, with a lantern hanging at its entrance was kept crowded by folks who wished to have a peep into their future life.

An "advertisement" guessing game was the principal amusement of the evening, besides dominoes, finch and several piano selections.

The amount taken in by the circle, which is to apply on the new church fund was $22.14.

The circle thanks all for their hearty co-operation and gracious response.

Took Her Into Home to Live.
Following the graduation of Miss Henderson from the hospital, Dr. Henry took her into his office as his assistant. Next he took her into his home to live "as our little girl," because boarding houses were not very satisfactory to the "beautiful, rosy cheeked, blue eyed, auburn haired girl of jolly disposition." She lived with the Henry family, going to church with them, attending their entertainments, etc., and then fairly paralyzed the doctor by proposing marriage to him.

SOLVED DEBT PROBLEM BY LEAPING TO DEATH.
International News Service.
OMAHA, Neb., June 19.—Walter Hansen, a former bank clerk, will not have to make a settlement of his debts—that is, not on this sphere.

Jumping in front of a passenger train here the other day solved the problem for Hansen.

A list of debts totalling $365 was found in the pockets of his clothing after he was ground to small pieces beneath the wheels. He was twenty-one years old and unmarried.

MERGE OF CHURCHES IN KANSAS FAILS.
OLATHE, Kan., June 19.—Merging of the congregations of the Presbyterian and Congregational churches here has been found to be unsatisfactory. After a four months' trial the churches have decided to separate.

The merged congregations were known as the Federated churches of Olathe. Trouble arose over a ruling in regard to church property.

Wanted Wife to Live With Them.

"Then Mrs. Henry can come and live with us as a real member of the family and I will take care of you both and we will be just as nice and fair to her as possible and both of us will do all that we can do to make her happy; this is the only scriptural thing we can do," Dr. Henry wrote.

Mrs. Henry agreed to the divorce but almost broke the doctor's heart, of which he speaks in his autobiography, by absolutely refusing to come and live with the doctor and his new wife.

In his autobiography, which appeared simultaneously with the divorce matters, the doctor likens himself to the prophet Jonah of whale fame. "After viewing the matter in as careful a way intellectually, scientifically, religiously and prayerfully as I knew how, I had no doubt but God had given me as positive and distinct a call to preach and teach these truths to the world as he had given Jonah to go to Nineveh and 'preach unto it the preaching that I bid thee,' he writes.

LONDON, June 19.—The majority of American manufacturers are opposed to governmental loans to European countries, but are strongly in favor of direct credits to the manufacturers in those countries.

This was the statement made by S. N. Vanclain, president of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, in an article written for Anglo-American Trade, a publication issued by the American Chamber of Commerce here.

Vanclain has just returned from a visit to Poland, Rumania and Serbia, where he has had an opportunity of studying at first hand industrial and trade conditions in those countries.

BOSTON SCHOOLS CONTINUED GERMAN STUDY DURING WAR

International News Service.
BOSTON, June 19.—The decision of several high schools in New England to re-establish the study of German brought out the fact that Boston schools continued their courses in German throughout the war. Commenting on this attitude of the Boston school committee, Miss Frances G. Curtis of the board, said:

"The very time when German was most needed in the schools was during the war. Boston was one city, at least, that was not swept off her feet during that period. The study of German has always been elective here."

BLANTON GOES OVER RECORDS IN TALK HERE

Congressman Thomas L. Blanton spoke at the courthouse at Eastland Saturday afternoon to a crowd of comfortably filled the district court room. Addressing an audience from the home town of his opponent, Mr. Blanton made an aggressive, fighting speech, defending his record in the United States congress and handling the issues without gloves.

He paid particular attention to the labor issue and reiterated his stand against Samuel Compers and his alleged attempts to dominate congress, at the same time explaining that he was in sympathy with all demands of labor which he considered legitimate and not opposed to the public welfare.

Refers to Fight.
Mr. Blanton was frequently and warmly applauded during his address. A disagreement at Abilene between the speaker and the secretary of Mr. Gresham was referred to.

The congressman left Eastland for Cisco, to fill a speaking engagement last night.

In his talk at Ranger Saturday, Mr. Blanton said:

"I gladly report my stewardship to my constituents. I come with a clear conscience knowing that I have left no stone unturned in doing every thing within my power in their behalf.

"In my platform I pledged the following: Untrammelled service and constant attention to business; condemnation of the prevalent inactivity and absence of congressmen from Washington; strict public economy and a clean-up of useless, wasteful departments; merit rather than the spoils system; national prohibition; national woman suffrage; rural farm credits; real help rather than the usual camouflage for the farmer, bringing him and the spinner closer together so as to eliminate the gambler and middleman; a strong merchant marine to insure prompt transportation of all farm and industrial products; tariff for revenue only; restricted immigration; a fair, square deal alike for labor and capital; an uncompromising fight against the pork barrel, garden seed and other graft; maximum government assistance for education, for the eradication of tuberculosis and other menacing diseases, boll weevil, tick, blackleg and hog cholera, and a real partnership between all the people and the federal government instead of between special interests and the federal government.

"I have faithfully kept every campaign pledge. My record in congress shows favorable results on every promise. No other member has been in more constant attendance on the house floor or given more active and painstaking attention than I have to all public business. I have participarted in every debate of importance during my membership. Of the Texas delegation of eighteen members, I was the only congressman who made a speech for national prohibition.

Defends Record.
"Through exhaustive personal investigations made at my own expense, I have succeeded in having several thousand useless employees discharged and several departments cleaned up. The graft best known to the public is the rivers and harbors appropriation and the public buildings appropriation. Since I have been in congress only one small rivers and harbors appropriation and no public buildings appropriation has been made. By investigating and filing minority reports against unmeritorious private claims, I have saved over $100,000,000. By making points of order against improper appropriations, which were sustained by the chair, I have saved about $200,000,000, proof of which is shown in the excerpts from the record sent you, entitled 'Let the Record Speak.'

"In refusing to obey orders and wear a yoke, in forcing members to stay in Washington and attend to business by recording their absence, in opposing and defeating their private bills involving millions, in trying to reduce mileage to actual expenses, in denouncing the giving to each member every session a cedar chest, a pine chest and an oak chest, in blocking all efforts to raise members' salaries from $7,500 to $10,000, in denouncing frequent and expensive junketing trips, in fighting garden seed and other graft, in making points of order against appropriations for special interests, I very naturally made some enemies, but I survived their side-jabs and under-cuts, and I now enjoy the respect and personal friendship of every member worth while in the House of Representatives."

DOCTOR OF 64 DIVORCES WIFE WEDS NURSE, 20

OMAHA, Neb.—Dr. W. O. Henry, for many years one of the most prominent surgeons of Omaha, a pillar of the First Presbyterian church of this city, Sunday school teacher, member of all the prominent Omaha clubs and civic organizations, is just now figuring as the apex of a triangle, with his wife and a pretty trained nurse as the other angles. Mrs. Henry has just been granted a divorce from her husband, to whom she has been married for more than forty years, and Dr. Henry has written a book telling in the most naive way all about his love affair with the young nurse. The doctor is 64, Mrs. Henry is almost as old, and the pretty nurse is just 20. The Henrys are in Los Angeles, where the divorce was granted, the nurse is in South Dakota and there will be no wedding for a year, Dr. Henry has informed his Omaha friends.

The nurse is Miss Hazel Henderson. She was a student nurse in Dr. Henry's hospital in Omaha. She became interested in the doctor before she was graduated. Dr. Henry, in his book, says he discovered the young girl was an orphan with no one to look after her, so he took upon himself the job of giving her a Christian character. While doing so he took the pretty nurse into his family. He says her Christian character was developing very rapidly and then "suddenly, without warning, she with the deepest simplicity, said she wanted to marry me," says the doctor.

The first thing Omaha knew of the affair was when the divorce case came to trial. The filing of the petition had been accomplished without attracting any publicity and the fact that Mrs. Henry was seeking a divorce from her husband was not known until the case actually came to trial.

Omaha Gaped at the Case.
Then Omaha gaped. The evidence was the talk of the town. Everybody knew Dr. and Mrs. Henry. When the Baptist ministers, in regular conference, brought up the subject, they decided the doctor was either insane or guilty of gross moral obliquity.

A member of the Ethel Woman's club of Los Angeles threatened the doctor's life if he permitted his autobiography to be published in the newspapers.

When the pretty nurse proposed marriage to the aged surgeon who already had a wife with whom he was living, Dr. Henry after, as he says, carefully, prayerfully, scientifically and religiously thinking the matter over, accepted the proposal provided a way could be found.

"If you really love me and need me, there is only one thing we can do," Dr. Henry told the nurse.

The doctor's plan was to frankly tell his wife that the girl needed him in order to work out her salvation. Mrs. Henry was to obtain a divorce to allow Dr. Henry and Miss Henderson to marry.

BOTTOM DROPS OUT OF BLUE SKY MARKET AFTER LONG RUN

OMAHA, Neb.—Abas the blueprint stock salesman. His occupation is gone. Last month he was cleaning up thousands. Today he is looking for a job of real work at from $25 a week up to anything he can get. His greatest pasture has lost its verdant color and is now as brown as a former "morning after" taste.

The bottom has dropped out of the bluesky stock market. A little while ago any brightly lithographed piece of paper bearing the word "share" could be sold in Nebraska for 100 cents on the dollar's worth. Today nothing but gilt-edged bonds can be sold at any price at all. The glib-tongued, diamond-backed salesman who secured and toured Nebraska by the hundreds, have awakened to the fact that they must get down to work if they are to draw any more salaries. Men who have been chattering up $100 a week and more as commissions on the sale of stock are now asking for most any kind of job.

Farmers Have Awakened.

The Nebraska farmers, drunk with the prosperity of six years of unprecedented prices for wheat and corn, their livestock and other products, who have been an easy mark for the stock salesman, have suddenly awakened to the fact that their pretty certificates of ownership of stock in something or other are worth next to nothing at all.

The small town business man, and thousands of city business men, as well, rich with sudden wealth, have made a similar discovery. Professional men who should have known better but who were "talked" into "investing" in the bluesky stuff, have reached the same conclusion.

The result is that there is a grand slump in the bluesky business. Pictures of spouting oil wells, 1000 miles away, with lakes of oil and pipe lines in all directions, no longer attract. A prospectus showing that Nebraska's 250,000 automobiles use 1,000,000 tires or more every year cannot now be utilized to sell a million dollars' worth of stock in a rubber factory. The alleged fact that a bill invested in So-and-so's packing house at the start is now worth $500,000 cannot be used as a successful argument in inducing some son of Nebraska to invest $1000 in a new packing company. A bottle of brackish water and a picture of a lake which somebody says contains a billion units of potash is no longer a good bait with which to catch suckers.

Selling Conditions Revealed.

Nebraskans are getting "wise" to conditions under which they have been sold. A potash company with several millions of dollars' worth of stock has gone into the hands of the receiver. A packing house in Sioux City with hundreds of stockholders in Nebraska has gone by the board. Another one in Des Moines has gone the same way. Five thousand stockholders of a new Omaha packing house have been treated to the sight of the officials of the new company fighting over more than $1,000,000 out of $8,000,000 of stock sold to them. An oil company, in court, has disclosed some "inside dope". The huge dividends promised by the tire company have not materialized.

The bubble has burst. The market has gone glimmering. But it certainly was great while it lasted.

Nobody knows just how much of the "speculative" stock has been sold in Nebraska. Some of the stock salesmen say $100,000,000 is a conservative figure.

This $100,000,000 does not include the tremendous sums which Nebraska has invested in real estate and bonds—securities of a recognized value. Several of the great New York trust companies and banks maintain big offices in Omaha and dispose of many millions of dollars' worth of securities out here. But the big business has been in the bluesky stocks, not the kind listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

Turn in Road Reached.

Now that the turn in the road has been reached, the activities of many of the stock salesmen are becoming known. It is being told how, in one place, a school for salesmen was conducted regularly each week to give initiates pointers on how to evade the bluesky laws. Stories have been made public revealing that ex-convicts have been parading up and down the state disposing of stocks and have made fortunes. Men who, in normal times, found the task of existence a problem, have risen from fruit peddlers to heads of organizations that have been capitalized for millions and have dragged hundreds of thousands out of the pockets of the unwary.

"One man came to a lawyer in Omaha and called upon him to organize a company quickly," says T. J. McGuire, assistant attorney general of Nebraska. "Organize anything you want to just so it's a company with shares. I can sell its stock."

"What kind of a company do you want?" asked the lawyer.

"I don't care," responded the salesman. "Organize anything you want to just so it's a company with shares. I can sell its stock."

The salesman got the company and he sold every dollar of its $250,000 capital stock, too. Now he's missing.

Some Saved Commissions.

Some of these salesmen have "salted" their commissions away. Most of them have not. Some invested in their own stocks. Some others "sat in" mightily in little games where the stakes sometimes went to $10,000 or so. The money came down and it went just as easily. Delinquent automobiles, expensive suits in hotels, and things of that kind, accounted for commissions almost as rapidly as they were made.

But things are changed. The little games are played no more. The expensive suits are vacant. The markets for diamonds and automobiles has fallen off so far as the stock salesmen are concerned.

And all because western people "got wise" to the bluesky stuff that was being shoveled out to them in return for hard cash. The westerners buy no more, and the stock salesmen are seeking work. The market's gone.

SAYS CHURCHES SHOULDN'T BAN DANCE, PASTOR

COLUMBUS, O., June 19.—"Churches should not place a ban on dancing. Men cannot be made good that way," said Rev. E. A. Cowley, Baptist minister.

"Those who want to dance will dance," continued Rev. Dr. Cowley, "irrespective of its nature or the ban. Those who do not dance would view the lifting of the ban as condoning of the dance."

"The church and the graveyard no longer belong together."

"Christianity never has been opposed to the God-given instinct for recreation. It does insist that people must distinguish between recreation and dissipation."

"Americans are wearing out their nerves through running after cheap amusements. Commercialism, professionalism and immorality are prostituting the play instinct for gain."

"The church must do something to remodel amusements. Shorter hours for the worker will prove a curse instead of a blessing, unless men can be shown how to rightly spend their leisure time."

Russian Woman of Noble Birth Is Now Servant

ST. JOSEPH, Mo.—A story of varying fortunes lies behind the application for a passport to China made to United States Commissioner J. A. Duncan, Jr. here by Mrs. Mathew Grover Faulkner, a Russian noblewoman who has lived in St. Joseph since the death here last fall of her husband, an American consul and native Missourian.

At the time of his death Faulkner was United States consul at San Luis Potosi, Mexico, and was here on leave visiting relatives. Following his death the wife has been supporting herself, first as a domestic and later as a chocolate wrapper in a candy factory.

The application for a passport marks the close of a struggle against odds by one who proudly terms herself an American—for she is an American through her marriage—and has believed that she could show herself worthy of the name only but the independent course she has followed for several months.

Will Return to Childhood Home.

A Russian by birth, Mrs. Faulkner will now return to the home of her childhood, in Mukden, Manchuria, under her father was consul-general where the old

Russian regime and where he and his family yet reside.

As a girl, Mrs. Faulkner was one of the leaders in the social life of the foreign colony of Mukden. Life was a continual round of gaiety and the future appeared exceedingly bright for the vivacious girl. At many of the social functions she met young Faulkner, who had joined the maritime while in his teens and subsequently had entered the consular service. When the Russian girl was eighteen years old, they were married by an American minister who was traveling through China. They lived in Mukden several years, when Mrs. Faulkner's health failed. Her husband asked to the state department for a transfer to a tropical climate, which it was said would benefit his wife, and he was ordered to the station in Mexico.

Husband Died of Typhoid.

A few months after the transfer, Consul Faulkner obtained a leave of absence to visit his mother, Mrs. Mary Brewer, at Mercer, Mo., where he was reared. Upon reaching St. Joseph the Faulkners stopped to visit an aunt and the husband was stricken with typhoid. He was removed to a hospital, where he died September 24. After taking the body of her husband to his old home for burial, Mrs. Faulkner, who had become considerably involved in debt here as a result of her husband's protracted illness, returned to St. Joseph determined to satisfy all obligations. Though her father sent such assistance as he could, she applied for employment in a local candy factory and here the cultured girl who speaks several languages rolls paper about chocolates and permanent sticks.

Has Paid All Debts.

Mrs. Faulkner has paid all of the hospital, doctor and drug bills and has, with the assistance of her father, accumulated enough to pay her way back to Manchuria. Upon the return trip she will accompany Carlton Baker, former United States consul general at Mukden, and his wife, who have been visiting in this country several months. Mr. and Mrs. Baker were friends of Mrs. Faulkner before and after her marriage, and Baker is now in business in Mukden. The party will embark at San Francisco for the Far East, June 26.

"HUMAN SKELETON" DIES IN AUTO WRECK

Mary Adelaide, seven years old, Moll's oldest child, won first prize several years ago in a national perfect baby contest.

DENVER, Colo., June 19.—"Sweetheart" was dying. Inside there was great pain. "Operation," said the physician. "Get Dr. A. A. Hermand at Morrison."

So Mrs. W. O. Wood chartered an airplane, rode to Morrison for the surgeon and returned in time to save "Sweetheart's" life.

Mrs. Wood watched over the sick bed for an hour after the operation. She heard a soft "meow." The crisis was past.

Essex Reveals True Economy

Not Limited to But One Advantage

The question of motor car economy is not limited to gasoline mileage.

It includes oil, tires and particularly repair costs.

The Essex consumes no more gasoline than other cars of similar capacity. And it is a common remark of all owners that it requires hardly any oil.

As for its tire economy, many reports are so remarkable that we repeat them only with the explanation that they are exceptional rather than average. One owner has a record of 29,600 miles on one set of tires that appear good for several thousand more miles of use.

The repair requirements are so slight that it has given Essex a distinctive position among all cars.

Will Have Name When She Shows What Is Suited

NEW YORK.—Little Miss Herr, aged three weeks, is registered over in Caldwell, N. J., on her birth certificate simply as "Herr, a girl." Neighborly inquiries of "What is it?" have forced the parents to provide the temporary name of "Itsa Herr."

"Itsa Herr is the daughter of Dougal Herr, a lawyer, with offices in Hoboken and Mrs. Josephine Herr, who is a daughter of Supreme Court Justice Garrison and a niece of Lindley M. Garrison. At present she doesn't care very much whether her name is "Itsa Herr" or "Itsa Him," but some day she is going to thank her parents for their discretion and far sightedness.

"Of course we don't call her 'Itsa Herr' in our home circle," laughed Mrs. Herr, as she smiled down at a very sweet little bundle wrapped in pink and white blankets. "That is just a joke we have. 'Baby sister' is the only name she has or is going to have for a long time. We have three other children, Gertrude, 9; Garrison, 8, and Dougal, Jr., 5, and we have all decided to call the precious gift the stork brought us 'baby sister' until we know her a little better and discover what name will fit her best.

"You see my other children were named after members of the family, but when this little girl arrived Mr. Herr and I both decided that we would let her grow into her name. It must be fitting for a girl to be named Lilly and grow up dark, or a serious-minded, studious young lady to be called Gladys or Daisy or some flip name which doesn't at all fit her character. To avoid all this I want to wait until our baby sister develops qualities either physical or mental which suggest a fitting name."

"When do you think you will be able to trace these qualities?" Mrs. Herr was asked. "Do you think it possible that a child of two or three might suggest its own name?"

"If Itsa Herr is like my other children I think we can probably name her when she is three," replied Mrs. Herr. "Usually a child has dark or light hair by that time; one can tell whether they are active or inclined to be slow and deliberate, talkative or shy. No doubt many names would name their children far differently if they waited until they were three years instead of two or three weeks. The old-fashioned way of naming children before the stork arrived—having a list of names 'in case it is a girl' does not appeal to me at all. Poetical and romantic names very seldom fit the actual boy or girl. Dictionary names and Bible names may be all very well, provided they fit, but certainly we meet a host of people floating about with names which don't fit them any better than 'Fido' would do for an Angora Kitten."

May Wait Many Years. "And if little Itsa Herr doesn't develop any characteristics or qualities which suggest a name for her when she has reached three years of age, it may be supposed you will still wait for this name which is to be healy her own personal affair?" Mrs. Herr was asked.

"We will wait until she is 18 if necessary," laughed Mrs. Herr. "If we wait until she can talk no doubt she will have plenty of ideas upon the subject herself. Anyway, she won't be named Violet or Pearl and develop into a bone-glassed bookworm, or be called some religious, beautifully pious name and develop into a twentieth-century flapper."

STUDENTS THROW BAD EGGS AT SUPERINTENDENT STERLING, Kan., June 19.—A "bad egg" barrage they laid down over Superintendent of Schools Eastwood proved a "bombarang" for seven high school lads here recently. The "barrage" grew out of Eastwood's efforts to suppress cigarette smoking in the school yard. The fines of the "helligerents" ranged from $25 to $200 each.

MAKER OF FINE THERMOMETERS IS TO RETIRE

International News Service. NEW YORK, June 19.—One of the highest paid workmen in New York is a little, withered, foreign-born, foreign-speaking man, who works from daylight until nearly midnight, week after week, in his cheerless, dirty little dwelling which serves as both home and workshop. He makes between $1,500 and $1,800 a week.

When he retires, as he expects to do within the next few months, physicians, aviators and other users of high-priced thermometers may have more difficulty than ever in obtaining these instruments, for he asserts he is one of the few men in the United States who knows how to construct them.

Of Prussian birth, this thermometer maker, who lives at the end of the Coney Island elevated line, learned his trade as a glass blower in "the old country" years ago when he was only a boy. He learned also to make delicate thermometers, from the blowing of the glass, paintings on the lettering to filling it with the right amount of mercury and attaching it to its metal back.

He came to America a few years ago and began business for himself, although he experimented a few months of bitter poverty before a prominent physician recognized the value of the instrument the Prussian was producing, when the war cut off supplies of this kind from Europe. Then he received more orders than he could supply.

Although the Prussian thermometer maker, a man of middle age, his wife and one child, live in the careless insanitary manner of the poorer peasant classes of Europe, they are extremely hospitable and entertain their guests always with Prussian cakes, sour wine and other foods of foreign name and taste.

Rus War Brides Will Soon Come to Hubbies Here

By Associated Press. MANILA, June 19.—Three hundred or more Russian "war brides," who have come here from Siberia with their American soldier husbands, are to be sent to the United States by the government as soon as transportation is available.

These brides come from every station in life from the peasant girl to the college graduate and a number had been accustomed to the luxuries of life before war and revolution drove them from their homes.

Their experiences in Manila, probably have been a disappointment to most of them, as their soldier husbands on their meager pay of $36 a month have been unable to support a family, house rent and food prices having almost doubled here within the last year.

To prevent these Russian girls from actual suffering, the Red Cross and other charitable organizations, have provided them with shelter and food.

They are willing to work, but having no knowledge of English nor Spanish, they are unable to find employment in any of the stores of Manila and native men and boys are preferred for house servants.

After several weeks of investigation as to the best disposition to make of the war brides and their soldier husbands, the army authorities decided that they, with few exceptions, should be sent to the United States and there distributed among the army camps and posts, where quarters are available for married enlisted men. These the department of the Philippines is not able to provide. Only those enlisted men with wives, who have an income in addition to their army pay will be permitted to remain in the Philippines.

Some of the Russian girls who were disappointed in not obtaining soldier husbands at Vladivostok, disguised as American soldiers, stowed away on transports and came to Manila, so eager were they to escape from the turmoil and suffering which have prevailed in Siberia almost since the beginning of the war. These stowaways were turned over to the authorities here to be deported to the country whence they came. Several of them were married at the pier while awaiting to be put aboard a transport for the voyage back to Vladivostok, which made them American citizens and gave them the right to remain here.

One of these stowaways, clad in male attire, when about to be placed on board a transport for deportation, with several thousand Russian rubles in her hands, appealed to the crowd at the pier for some man to marry her and save her life from what she said would be certain death if she were returned to Siberia. The Russian money which is now of little or no value, appeared to have no influence toward bringing forth a husband for the woman, and she was sent back to Siberia.

OUTDOOR CAMP SUGGESTED AS VACATION PLAN

The other day I met an enthusiastic outdoorsman who, like a big percentage of the men who were in the service, had learned to love the outdoors and understood that, under entirely different conditions from military rule and fighting the Boche, a lot of pleasure was to be had in playing out under the blue sky.

He had just come from a town of about five thousand inhabitants, in which the Legion post had taken up permanent summer camp for its members. His enthusiasm ran riot over the proposition and the way the members were taking hold of it as a cheap way to have a real outdoor, health-gaining vacation.

"Why, man," he said, "Think of the possibilities! Think of the vacation you can pull off; think of the week-enders you can put in at a minimum cost, never undecided where to go, always certain of a place over Sunday—a place where you can go best, swim or fish, and do as you please!"

Carried off by his enthusiasm, I was quick to see the possibilities in the plan he outlined. Substantially, it was this: Legion posts can rent for the season a little wooded slope on the shore of a lake—it need not necessarily be a lake; a river would do just as well as long as the usual water sports, swimming, canoeing, fishing, boating and so forth, can be indulged in. It would also be wise to have a spring of good water near the camp for drinking and cooking purposes. There must be a slope for drainage in case it rains and, if possible, a southwestern exposure, as the prevailing winds in the summer are from the southwest. The location should be accessible, as transportation to and from such a place will mean a good deal toward its popularity.

There are two plans by which posts might be able to manage these permanent camps through the season. First they might take it over, build and maintain the camp. They could rent out tents and equipment and sell meals exactly on the plan of a club, routing the camp for a period of two weeks or so, to a certain group of members. Families could be accommodated if desired and could pay the post a fixed price.

The second plan is for the post to rent spaces of ground to members for individual tents. The restaurant could be taken care of at so much a meal, which is the scheme of the Camp Fire Girls of America on its annual outings. Each man is requested to tell in advance how many meals he wants.

In regard to the sanitation, which is decidedly important, a latrine should be built well back away from the water and well dosed with fresh earth and chlorate of lime daily. All the refuse of the camp should be burned and buried well away from the camp, and everything should be kept just as clean as possible, so that flies will not be attracted.

Coming to the camp itself, it is advisable to build a permanent main house. The size will depend entirely upon the number of members who intend to use the camp. The house would be used for the storage of tents, bedding and so forth when the camp is not in use, and so also should contain a good sized range or a large oil stove, where in an emergency or in case of storm, all the cooking utensils could be done. The house should always be kept well looked when the camp is unoccupied.

It is necessary to remind everybody who goes out into the open that it rains and sometimes rains hard—and there is no place that is wetter than the woods when it does rain, so make sure that your overgarments are absolutely waterproof. A ditch should be dug around each tent banked on the inside and with an outlet to the lowest corner, to carry the water off in case of a hard thunder shower, when the water rushes wildly down the slope. Provision for rain should be made immediately. Woe betide the camp that is not properly arranged for a heavy deluge.

Cooking needs, of course, depend entirely upon the number of persons to be fed at each meal. A permanent camp should have coffee pots and kettles large enough so that the cook isn't continually worried about the contents boiling dry or boiling over. When one doesn't have to tote his camp equipment every day from place to place, it isn't necessary to be so conservative in regard to weight and size.

The best sort of pots and pans for a camp of this kind are those made of steel. Aluminum is not so practical, as it burns too easily, and also, as soon as the polish comes off, things are inclined to stick to it.

There will always be one or two men among a number who belong to a post who are wide awake and thorough outdoor folk, and the minute this idea is brought to their notice, they will be enthusiastic and have a number of practical suggestions to make which will be worth while noting. These men will take care of situations that the novice will find most appalling. But after he has been steered right and finds out the comfort and pleasure to be had from this sort of thing, he also will join the army of men who love the great outdoors.

COP GETS THUG TO PROVE HOUR OF BURGLARY

BROOKLYN, June 19.—Patrolman Thomas Schultz of Brooklyn, charged with having "failed to discover and prevent a burglary on his post," brought a burglar into the trial room at Brooklyn police headquarters to prove the crime was committed when he (Schultz) was not on duty.

"The burglary was committed at 5:20 a. m.," said Schultz. He had already stated that on the day in question he had received permission to leave post at 5 o'clock so that he could prepare for the police parade.

"How do you know it was committed at that time?" asked Deputy Commissioner Faurot.

"I have the burglar here to prove it," calmly returned the policeman.

The deputy commissioner was somewhat taken back. He directed the burglar to come forward. He said he was Benjamin Rockkover, living on Bushwick avenue, Brooklyn. He admitted that he and two others had entered the drug store at No. 823 De Kalb avenue on the morning in question and had stolen a quantity of alcohol. "He was sure it was 20 minutes after 5. How did he know? He observed the time on a clock in a drug store. Commissioner Faurot reserved decision.

TEXAS WOOL AND MOHAIR GROWERS IN BAD SITUATION

SAN ANTONIO.—Wool and mohair growers of Texas are facing a serious situation in the matter of not being able to finance the holding of their season's product until better marketing conditions prevail, according to sentiments expressed by more than fifty men who are prominently identified with the industry, attending a conference which was held here. The purpose of the meeting was to draft a formal appeal to the federal reserve bank to rescind its recent order restricting money credits.

The wool now in storage represents the entire spring clip. Advances have been on all of this wool to the producers by banks and warehouse companies, it is pointed out. These loans are now falling due and must be met. Mills, the producers say, are virtually out of the market at the present time, and unless some means of tiding the growers over the present emergency is found that they will be forced to take losses that will be ruinous to the industry.

Traffic Service Bad. The situation, it is asserted, is further complicated by the congestion of railroad traffic all over the country. The growers contend that even though the mills were willing to take their wool they would be unable to get it to market owing to the inability of the railways to move the clip to market.

As a means of relieving the situation the federal reserve bank is asked to declare wool and mohair raising an essential industry and to encourage member banks to deal liberally in warehouse receipts for these products. The wool men assert that the wool market is technically sound and that as soon as the present financial depression passes mills will re-enter the market on a large scale and that there will be a ready market for their product at satisfactory prices. All were unanimous in their belief that present conditions were only temporary and that the market would recover after a brief flurry.

"There are 16,000,000 pounds of wool and mohair stored at the wool growing centers of Texas," said C. B. Scales of Del Rio, who presided at the meeting. "While the market is a little strained at this time the country needs every pound of this wool. At present there is no means of getting the product to Boston, where nearly all Texas wool is marketed, owing to the inability of the railroads to handle it. The government is giving aid to the wheat growers and other producers in the country, and we feel sure that when the condition confronting our industry is properly understood we will have no difficulty in obtaining the necessary financial aid to tide us over the present emergency.

Case Never Before So Acute. "Our case has never before been so acute. There are many merchants, banks and warehouse companies that cannot possibly carry the great supply they now have on hand unless they receive help from the government. If special arrangements could be made for moving the wool now in the warehouses we believe our greatest problem would be solved."

The present value of wool is 60 to 75 cents per pound and the clips stored in Texas are valued at $11,000,000, estimating conservatively.

It is concentrated at the following points: At San Antonio, 4,000,000 pounds; Kerrville, 2,000,000; Del Rio, 5,000,000; Mertzon, 5,000,000; Menard, 750,000; Uvalde, 500,000; Brackett, 500,000; Lampasas, 500,000; Talpa, 300,000;

Sabinal, 300,000; Big Lake, 500,000; Sanderson, 250,000; Waco, 50,000.

PUNJAB AFFAIR IS DESCRIBED BY COMMITTEE

NEW YORK, June 19.—Firing by soldiers commanded by British army officers upon a crowd of unarmed natives of India who were seeking to present to a British deputy commissioner a petition for the release of two of their leaders led a few days later to the massacre of 1,000 Indians in the spring of 1919, says a report now made public by native investigators. The report was prepared by the Punjab sub-committee of the Indian National congress. In its preparation more than 1,700 witnesses were examined and depositions taken from survivors and relatives of the dead.

Dissatisfaction among the natives first became apparent with the passage of the Rowlatt bills, designed to punish sedition. All over the country resolutions were passed by huge mass meetings protesting against the law and demanding its repeal.

The trouble between natives and officials, the report states, began in earnest on the night of April 7, when two influential natives, Drs. Kitchlew and Satyapal, were arrested and their friends heard they were to be deported.

"The news spread through Amritsar like lightning," the report continues. "A crowd immediately gathered together. It was a crowd of mourners, bereaved, many unshod and all without sticks. It was on the way to the deputy commissioner's bungalow to plead for the release of its loved ones.

Stopped at Bridge. "It marched through the principal streets of Amritsar, passed the national bank, the town hall and the Christian mission hall, the very buildings which, within a short time, were to be destroyed by some of them. Its progress was stopped, however, at the railway overbridge which was guarded by a military picket. The men demanded passage and said that they wanted to go to the deputy commissioner's bungalow to make 'prayer' in a prayer. They pushed forward and the picket fell back a little. They advanced and the military fired, killing and wounding some of them. The crowd fell back.

"It was no longer a peaceful crowd. It was a crowd filled in its effort to secure the release of its leaders and exasperated at the killing and wounding of some of its members. The sight of the dead bodies and the wounded inflamed the citizens who saw them and who gathered again near the bridge, this time carrying sticks and pieces of wood."

The report continues with a description of the fight between natives and soldiers, during which many of the former were killed and the survivors inflamed to such a pitch of fury that they returned into the city and applied the torch to several principal buildings. It says: "The authorities omitted all usual parleys with the natives and other intermediaries resorted to in civilized countries. There was no parley, no humoring and no use of milder force. Immediately the crowd became insistent the order was given to fire."

One eye-witness told later of the scene at the bridge: "Salara and I shouted to the deputy commissioner and the officers to get back and not to fire. We still hoped to take the crowd back. A few in the crowd threw wood and stones at the soldiers, who at once opened with a volley without warning. Bullets whistled to my right and left. After the first few shots the crowd rushed back but the firing was continued. Many of them were hit in the back. The crowd dispersed leaving 25 or 30 killed and wounded."

Mob Was Quiet. "It should be remembered," the report goes on, "that the mob had not as yet committed excesses. There was therefore no occasion for impudence, indifference or callousness, which, according to this witness, was evidently exhibited."

"While, therefore, we deplore the deportation order and the firing and consider both as unjustifiable and the absence of any ambulance arrangement as inhuman, nothing can be held to justify the wanton destruction by the mob of the innocent lives and properties."

"The first thing General Dyer did was to make arrests without any molestation or resistance whatever."

One witness told the investigators that the city's water and electric light supplies were cut off for three or four days as a punishment.

The occurrence which directly led to the subsequent wholesale massacres in the Jallianwala Bagh, the report asserts, was a proclamation issued about this time by General Dyer forbidding the natives to assemble publicly.

"The public meeting in the Jallianwala Bagh," the report states, "was called before the proclamation had reached more than half the population. Shortly before the arrival of General Dyer on the scene with ninety soldiers and two armored cars, Hans Raj had taken charge of the meeting, the audience numbering about 20,000."

"The bagh is an irregular quadrangle, indifferently walled, and, in most cases, with the back walls of houses surrounding it enclosing a quadrangle. There are three trees, a dilapidated tomb with a dome and a well. The ground at the entrance is an elevation, remarkably fit for posting soldiers and firing upon a crowd in front. The main entrance is a narrow passage through which, happily, the armored cars could not pass. There are no other regular entrances but at four or five points it was possible to get out by narrow openings. The audience included many boys and children and some men had come with infants in their arms."

"General Dyer deployed 25 soldiers to the right and 25 to the left, on the high ground on the north side of the rectangular space."

What happened afterward is given by the Indian investigators in General Dyer's own words recorded during his testimony at the subsequent inquiry:

"When you got to the bagh, what did you do?" General Dyer was asked. "I opened fire. Immediately I had thought about the matter and don't imagine it took me more than 30 seconds to make up my mind as to what my duty was," he replied.

"As regards the crowd, what was it doing?" "They were holding a meeting. There was a man in the center of the place on something raised. His arms were moving about. He was evidently addressing."

"Did it not occur to you that it was a proper measure to ask the crowd to disperse before you took the step of actually firing?" "No. At that time I did not. I merely felt that my orders had not been obeyed, that martial law was flouted, at that it was my duty to fire immediately by rifle."

"Before you dispersed the crowd had the crowd taken any action at all?" "Had Taken No Action."

"No, sir, they had run away, a few of them. When I began to fire the big mob in the center began to run almost to the right."

"In firing, was it your object to disperse?" "No, sir, I was going to fire until they dispersed."

"Did you continue firing after they had started to disperse?" "Yes."

"After the crowd indicated that it was going to disperse, why did you not stop?" "I thought it was my duty to go on until they had dispersed. If I fired a little, I should be wrong in firing at all."

Continuing their report, the investigators added: "The General Dyer, said he continued firing for about ten minutes, until he had expended 1,650 rounds of ammunition. He said he had made no provision for aiding or removing the wounded. That was a medical question, he declared."

"One eye witness said: 'I saw hundreds of persons killed on the spot. The worst part of the whole thing was that firing was directed toward the gates through which the people were trying to run out. Many got trampled under the feet of the rushing crowds and lost their lives. There were heaps of bodies at different places. I think there must have been over 1,000.'

"The next day was devoted by the people to disposing of their dead at the following laconic proclamation had been issued: 'The inhabitants may burn or bury their dead as soon as they please. There must be no demonstration of any kind.'

Many pages of the report are devoted to various kinds of punishments inflicted on the natives by the authorities under the martial law. These included flogging, making the people crawl through certain streets, imprisonment without trial or even accusation and other punitive measures.

450 TEAMS AT WORK ON ROADS; CONTRACTS LET

George C. Ehrenborg, who has been district engineer in charge of all the preliminary work in the Ranger district, has accepted the position of chief engineer and general superintendent with Fleming & Stitzer, winning bidders on the contract for the entire highway system.

Mr. Ehrenborg reports that sub-contracts covering grading, have been let and the work between Ranger and Eastland will be let in two days. The contracts which already have been assigned to cover between Cisco and Romney, Romney and Rising Star, Gorman and Carbon, Cisco west to the county line and Eastland to Cisco.

The grading will be followed immediately with the crushed rock base for the roads. All actual road construction will be handled by Fleming & Stitzer. There are 450 teams at work, he reports.

Before taking his present position, Mr. Ehrenborg was with the county highway department for six months. He is thoroughly conversant with the work of the entire county, as well as in the Ranger district, where all of the engineering was done under his direction.

NEWS REPORTS LIBEL SCHOOL AND STUDENTS

WELLESLEY, Mass., June 19.—Wellesley college authorities are trying to head off the activities of an ingenious news peddler who, making his headquarters in Boston, has sent to newspapers all over the country complimentary, but the officials say untrue, stories concerning young women in the student body and members of the faculty. His method is to query a newspaper as to whether it wishes a story of which a student or faculty member living in the city or town where the paper is published, is the central figure. The identical query is sent to anywhere from fifty to 100 papers, if it is alleged, with a different name in each case for the heroine of the story. These names are taken from the college catalogue.

Regarding one of these stories the college publicity department says: "On April 23 there went out from Boston to newspapers all over the United States and Canada a set of telegrams like the following, except for the name and address: 'Wellesley honors Anne Abbott, 60 Main street, to represent college sweeping government economic investigation.'

The story sent to those papers which wired acceptance was that the local student, or, in some towns whose supply of students at Wellesley was limited, a member of the faculty had been elected by the student body and confirmed by the faculty, as one of the fifty members of a Wellesley economic investigation, which, as it appeared, 'to conduct a systematic economic survey of the United States, in an endeavor to secure a basis for a plan to reduce the cost of living.'

"The irritation of the victims, of whom there are at least 100, and of their families, especial of those whose parental pride had accepted the tale as not unlikely, has naturally been considerable. It is made greater for many of the victims because this is at least the second occasion they have thus received honors bestowed only by this news company."

An earlier instance was in January last when the agency sent out a story of an "unprecedented ceremony," the time of which was indefinite, when General Pershing's helmet and staff flag and also "the imperial battle pennon of the German emperor" were bestowed upon the college by the Anglo society. The story said "touching, eloquent and impressive address" was made on behalf of the college by a girl whose name was different in each case.

As a matter of fact, the publicity department says: "About the only facts were the names and addresses gained from the college directory, though it was true, as published in an Associated Press dispatch last October, that General Pershing's helmet and flag are in possession of an organization at Wellesley."

The department says that it has learned that similar stories have been sent out by the agency concerning Smith's college students, and adds: "A regular set of rules seems to have been established by the agency. In the first place, the story must not be true, and must at the same time not be actionable; should, in fact, be supposedly flattering. It should have some timely note. In using the college directory the agency takes only one name to a town or even a city."

The college has sent denials of the stories to as many as possible of the papers which printed them. It has also sent an explanation of the circumstances to each of the "victims," with the suggestion that they turn it over to their home town papers for their information.

ADMITS HE WAS DRUNK COSTS HIM ONE NIGHT

International News Service. DETROIT, June 19.—Possibly for the first time in the history of Wayne county courts a man insisted in prosecuting himself when Philip McGuire, forty-two years old, self-styled globe trotter, asserted in night court that he was guilty of being drunk and should be fined. When McGuire's case was called it was found that no police officer was present to witness against the defendant.

"That's all right, judge," exclaimed McGuire. "You don't need an officer. I'm guilty. I was drunk. The officer was a gentleman and a former soldier and I wouldn't take advantage of his absence. You go right ahead and judge this case the same as if the officer was here."

He was ordered held over night.

TWO COUNTY COURTS.

The impression is prevalent with many people of this county that there is only one county court in Eastland county. This impression is wrong. There is a county court at law and a county court. One attends to all business that comes within the jurisdiction of the law; that is, judge of the court at law sits on all criminal cases.

The county judge presides over the commissioners' court and attends to other clerical matters.

At present, Judge C. R. Starnes is judge of the county court and Judge Rusk is over the court at law.

This separation was made several months ago when the business of the court became too heavy for one judge to handle.

FOR A BETTER RANGER.

In a resolution adopted by the Carpenters' Union a plea is voiced for a clearer Ranger, cleaner morally as well as physically. It is a demand felt by the majority of residents here but is, like many other needs of the city, one that has not claimed the center of the stage position during the rush.

The carpenters declare there are open houses of prostitution and gambling houses in operation here, a regrettable condition that should certainly be corrected for the halcyon boom days are over when it once lined itself up with settled communities, such conditions are no longer possible.

Recently announcement was made by the police department that the unemployed woman must go. It was decided that street women were to be arrested and sent out of town. It is but a part of the campaign that should be embarked upon.

While conditions here are as they are, Ranger will attract only the drifter and those far-sighted individuals who see in the city a prospect of future growth and business stability. The professional men and laborer on whom every town's success is founded will not settle here.

Ranger is not a city of married persons. Married men will not bring their wives and families here while it ranks with the boom town. Too many residents here are merely out to make a "strike" and travel on, although there is much about the city that is commendable.

Now there is a drive under way to clean the streets and remove the many flagrant insanitary conditions. The city is working steadily on a street program buildings are going up all about, and the county has an extensive road paving project moving forward.

Entertainment facilities in Ranger are probably not equalled in a dozen cities in the country. Here there is not an idle evening. Soon the roads will be in condition to favor automobiling during the long evenings. It is truly a town for settled lives; it is a community where there is ever something going on.

But with this pleasant condition prevailing, the other condition obtrudes itself. When the streets are clean and eye-sores removed, the moral side may continue to exist, if the red light district and the haunts of the immoral are not invaded and wiped out. It is often said that these things are necessary, a fallacy born in boom towns and back woods settlements. They, on the contrary, give the city a black eye and make it notorious, rather than famous. It is not the booster, but the drifter and irresponsible, who urge the continuance of present conditions.

The carpenters are right; the house cleaning must go farther than the physical.

OLD SOLDIER ACQUITTED ON MURDER CHARGE

L. B. Lippard, a Confederate veteran, 75 years old, was acquitted by a jury in the district court of Eastland county on a charge of murder Saturday afternoon. He killed J. A. Huling, city marshal of Rising Star, on the streets of that city, May 6, 1919. He was indicted and tried last year, the case resulting in a hung jury. At the second trial of the case one of the jurors was dismissed on account of the serious illness of his child and the case went no further.

The trial which resulted in his acquittal began last Wednesday. The chief witnesses for the state were the elder Jacobs and his two sons, who were present at the time of the killing. Their testimony agreed substantially with that of the defendant.

Insulting remarks Huling is alleged to have made to young Josie Lippard and her mother, he circled regarding the good name of the defendant's wife led to the difficulty. On the morning of the killing, witnesses testified, Lippard approached Huling, who was standing in front of a garage across the street from Lippard's restaurant, and struck Huling with his walking stick and then turned and walked four or five steps back toward the restaurant. Huling had wrenched the stick from Lippard's hand and he threw it at the old man, striking him in the back. Lippard then turned and, as he testified, Huling was reaching for his gun. He took another step in the direction of the restaurant, got out his pistol with his left hand on account of his right hand being paralyzed by the blow of the stick, and turned and fired. Huling backed into the garage, Lippard said, and he followed and fired two more shots, the third one taking effect in Huling's side. The marshal fell and exclaimed, "You've killed me!" The old man turned and started back to the restaurant across the street. Huling rose and fired at Lippard from behind the garage door and Lippard returned the fire and again went toward his place of business. When he had reached the sidewalk on the other side of the street, Huling fired at him again from behind another door of the garage and the old man then emptied his pistol at Huling. Only one shot struck the city marshal. He died soon after from the effect of the wound.

The extreme age of the defendant made the trial one of more than ordinary interest, and numerous persons from the Rising Star district attended. Lippard testified that he served three years and a half in the Confederate army and had lived in Texas most of his life. He held the office of tax assessor of Hill county for a number of years and held other offices in the state. He stated that he had never been arrested or tried for any offense in his lifetime until the occasion of the fatal shooting.

Judge Hill submitted a regular and two special charges to the jury Friday afternoon. Attorneys for the state and defense consumed several hours in argument. The case went to the jury at noon Saturday and a verdict was returned at 3 p. m.

Sheriff Sterling P. Clark of Fort Worth, a lifelong friend of Lippard, attended the trial.

Democratic Convention Snap-Shots THE STORY OF 16 NOMINATIONS By A. H. Vandenberg

THE CONVENTION OF 1896.

The 1896 Democratic national convention, which gathered in Chicago on July 7, was destined to split the party quite as the later 1912 convention split Republicanism. The issue upon which the division came was the free coinage of silver in the famous ratio of "16 to 1," and the new Democratic chieftain whom the occasion made, was William Jennings Bryan—then only 36 years of age—who was destined to dominate subsequent party faiths for twenty years. From the moment the gavel first fell, the convention fight raged around "free silver," and from first to last "free silver" won. The national committee and proposed Senator David B. Hill of New York for temporary chairman. He was promptly unhorsed by a vote of 533 to 349, when the convention substituted Senator John W. Daniel, a "free silverite" from Virginia. The committee on credentials then decided all contests in favor of the "free silverites," and thus augmented their convention control.

The resolutions committee then reported a straight-away "free silver" plank which, after terrific debate, was sustained by a vote of 626 to 303.

It was in this debate that Bryan—what got into the convention only when the credentials committee unseated the "gold delegation" from Nebraska—sprang into white-hot popularity and dominion with that famous speech which concluded in these burning words: "We shall answer their demand for the gold standard by saying to them: You shall not press down upon the brow of labor this crown of thorns; you shall not crucify mankind upon a cross of gold!"

The "silverites" were now so completely in the saddle that the "gold standard" delegates realized they were helpless to prevent a "free silver" nomination, even under the two-thirds rule. They did not withdraw from the convention at the time, but 178 delegates refused to vote on the presidential roll call.

Richard B. Bland of Missouri led the first ballot, with 235 to Bryan's 119 votes in a total field of fourteen candidates. Robert E. Pattison of Pennsylvania (95), Horace Botes of Iowa (85) and Joseph S. C. Blackburn of Kentucky (83) where the other principal contenders. On the second and third ballots, Bland still led. On the fourth ballot, Bryan went into first favor, and on the fifth ballot he had 500 votes—just twelve short of the necessary two-thirds. Before the result was announced, seventy-eight delegates transferred to Bryan and he had won his first of three presidential nominations.

Joseph C. Sibley of Pennsylvania led for Vice President on the first ballot in a field of fifteen. Among these fifteen were four who had contended with Bryan for first place. Bland led the second and third ballots (just as he had done in the preceding presidential voting). Joseph R. McLean of Ohio led the fourth ballot. But Arthur Sewall of Maine led the fifth and last ballot, with the necessary two-thirds vote.

Two weeks later, the Populists also nominated Bryan, but linked Thomas E. Watson of Georgia with him for second place. The National Silver party, however, adopted both Bryan and Sewall. Then, on Sept. 2, the revolting "gold Democrats" gathered in Indianapolis—with forty-one states and three territories represented—and nominated John M. Palmer of Illinois for President, on a single ballot, and General Simon B. Buckner of Kentucky for Vice President by acclamation.

The result of this campaign was the first election of President McKin-

Shamrock Water Better Than the Average Plunge

Reports that bathing at Shamrock plunge was dangerous to health were refuted by the analysis of the water of the plunge which was made at the Terrell laboratories and headed yesterday to R. D. Clancy, manager of the park. According to Thomas J. Dunn, in charge of the laboratories, the water of the lake is better in quality than some "drinking water" which has been submitted for analysis. This does not mean that the lake is suited to drinking purposes, but, as the chemist reports: "Having made a bacterial examination of the water, I wish to state that it is as good or better than the average bathing pool." The report was signed by Mr. Dunn. According to his bacterial count, the water is not harmful to bathers. The reports which have been made that sickness resulted from swimming at the park are without foundation, this shows. For his own satisfaction, Manager Clancy stated Saturday, such an examination of the water of Shamrock plunge will be made each week.

Says Girls Are No Longer Nice As in Old Days

LONDON, June 19.—Take it from Dr. Arabella Kenely, the modern female of the species is becoming increasingly lax and decadent in tone and manner, in dress and morale, and is not to be compared with the Victorian maiden "whose ennobling influences did so much for her generation."

Such is the theory developed at length by Dr. Kenely in her book, "Feminism and Sex Distinction," just printed.

"For the most part," she says, "the faces of our handsome women are pre-eminently Pagan—bold, sophisticated, clever; without sensitiveness—in a word, without soul."

Dr. Kenely declares that girls brought up on modern strenuous methods skip the years between 16 and 26, at which latter age they approach the 40s in constitution and temperament.

"At 26," states Dr. Kenely, "they are even keen on politics, cards, finance, resorts pre-eminently of materialistic middle age."

This, she says, has led to development of those young colts known as flappers, with ungainly movements, crude mentality and manners and without charm. Dr. Kenely is shocked by the hearty manner in which English girls' colleges have taken up sport, which, she declares, makes women have a combative habit of mind and develops girls into being half men.

"Here are seen," she says, "absorbed in fierce contest during the exhausting heat of summer afternoons, grim-visaged maidens of sinewy build, hard and tough as set as working women in their forties; some with brawny throats, square shoulders and stern loins that would do credit to a prize ring."

Dr. Kenely declares this type of woman does not bear many boy babies but instead become mothers of neurotic, emasculate boys. She maintains that unless the masculinization of girls is halted, the race will become physical and mental degenerates.

INTRODUCES MUSICLESS DANCE TO PARISIANS

PARIS, June 19.—The shimmy, the fox trot, or the one-step may be danced without any music at all and simply to the syncopation of poetry, read aloud, according to Miss Isabel d'Eschessary, star of the Buenos Aires Opera, who is demonstrating the shimmy before a group of Paris musicians and artists. Not that Miss d'Eschessary would dance them herself, for she considers them the output of heathen minds. She has confided herself to doing classical dances in gaudy draperies while her assistant read aloud rhythmic poems adapted from the Greek.

INDIAN THINKS WHITE MAN NOT ON THE SQUARE

International News Service

SPOKANE, Wash., June 19.—"The white man speaks with a forked tongue," riposted the Indian chieftain Meninock, head of the great Yakima tribe of Washington, when the Benton county judge passed sentence upon the aged member of a once flourishing tribe of redmen.

The stalwart head of the fast-dying Yakimas appeared in court on a charge of violating state fishing laws.

The Yakima tribal leaders have appealed to Governor Hart of Washington following a grand jury. They ask for perpetual fishing rights in the Yakima river, which they claim are due them by virtue of an old-time treaty conceded by another governor, Isaac Stevens, the first territorial executive of Washington. The Indians were arrested for fishing in the river within 100 feet of the dam near Prosser. The court held that the treaty was not operative against the later fishing laws. The Indians were found guilty and fined $10 each. The governor has promised the Yakimas a hearing at an early date.

Chief Meninock made an eloquent speech before the Benton county judge and reminded the jurist that he was breaking a solemn pledge made between the red men and the white men two-thirds of a century before. Shaking his hands above his head and with a great swirl of his feathers as he left the court room he turned and made the retort: "The white man speaks with a forked tongue."

Bull Fight Has Charm in Spain Unknown Here

LONDON, June 3.—The hackneyed argument against bullfights, that the bull has not a sporting chance, is refuted by the death in Madrid of the idolized Joselito, who was gored to death in the eighth year of his career, according to a correspondent writing to the London Times on "The Psychology of the Bull Ring." He says:

"True that of the 1,430 bulls that Joselito disposed of in his brief career as a matador only seven succeeded in wounding his body and one taking his life. "Yet, even if we accept these figures as the average, though they result from the experience of the most skillful bull-dodger that the Spanish ring ever knew, they are amply sufficient to prove that the bull has a sporting chance considerably higher than that of the fox or deer.

"The opinion seems to be general in England that bullfights satisfy a craving for cruelty and sanguinary scenes. Nothing is farther from the truth. It is not because bullfights are sanguinary, but in spite of their being so, that Spaniards like them. "It is seldom that the foreigner can appreciate a bullfight as something more complex and dramatic than a picture. Once he has been in the graceful curve of the ring, the movement, the color, and the merry hubbub of thousands of voices, and the blue sky overhead; once he has seen the despojo, the glistening costumes of the toreros, the quaint ceremony of the throwing of the key; once he has felt the first bull rush out from his dark cell, and suddenly stop, dazzled by the sun, casting out on the yellow sand its beautiful profile—nothing remains in store for him save monotony, broken now and then by the outbursts of disgust. But it is then the true 'aficionado' begins to enjoy himself.

"He is going to behold a spectacle where men are playing light-footed on the edge of the abyss. There is no forgetting that. A bull is a most dangerous animal, one whose handling requires a cool head and a stout heart. And this is the fundamental fact about bullfights. They are above all dramas of courage."

ABUNDANT CROPS WILL ADD VALUE NATION'S MONEY

BUCHAREST, June 19.—Rumania's crops this year promise to be exceedingly abundant, provided no drought sets in. Nearly four-fifths of a corn crop has already been placed in the ground. The government hopes to be in a position to export a large quantity of cereals this year. This is expected by Rumanians to bring up the present low value of the Rumanian franc, which is about 2 cents. The ministry of industry and commerce has entered into a contract with the Italian government for the early delivery of 40,000 carloads of maize.

The farmers are much retarded in their work by reason of the scarcity of horses, draft oxen and agricultural implements. None of the farming machinery carried off by the Germans has been replaced. Horses and oxen have been brought into the country from Hungary and Transylvania, but the number is inadequate. Much industry has been tied up by lack of tools, machinery and transportation. There is a fertile field in Rumania for American agricultural implements of all kinds. The taking of the government of all state and institutional lands and more than 4,000,000 acres of private holdings, for use by the peasants, is expected to have a stimulating influence on production. It is the first time in Rumania's history that the peasants have been given outright ownership of land. The expropriation of large private estates by the government did not please the proprietor classes, but it had a steadying influence on the temper and spirit of the people, who were showing distinct signs of unrest.

Queen Mary Is Business Head of Her Nation

BUCHAREST, June 19.—Queen Mary of Rumania displayed her business ability and her faith in her country by putting through an important deal in locomotives not long ago.

The Rumanian railways were in sad need of the new engines. There were American, French and English agents here to sell locomotives, but for money only. None of them had enough faith in Rumania to sell them for anything except for cold, hard cash.

Then the president of an American concern who had been selling locomotives to Poland came to Rumania. An interview was arranged between him and the queen, who presented such a strong argument on the future of her country and its resources that the hard-headed business American agreed to furnish locomotives and rolling stock and to take in payment Rumania's national bonds.

The queen believes in Rumania and she knows how to convince others because she has been over every foot of its ground. During the days that she was princess she traveled by train and by automobile and on horseback until she has come to know all of the resources of her country and a great many of its people.

Here is what she said to the Associated Press correspondent about her country: "The queen of a small country! Those who are accustomed to see rulers of a great land can little understand what it means. It means work and anxiety and hope, and a great toiling for small results. But the field is large and if the heart is willing, great is the work."

It is a Writer.

Queen Mary has a reputation as a writer and now that the war is over she has resumed the literary work she abandoned when the war began.

"Whatever may be the value of what I write, I am happy to say that I have facility in writing," she explained. "I write in the morning before I begin my day's work, but interruptions do not disturb me. If I have to see someone, I go back to my desk and am able to take up the unfinished sentence where I left it. Part of my writing is in the nature of a journal which I have kept throughout the war, but it is of such an intimate nature that much of it cannot be published until long after I am dead."

The most admired work of the queen, aside from her fairy stories, is a little book entitled "My Country," wherein, in a casual impressionistic manner, the queen tells of her travels through the country, describing the life of the peasants, their desire to own the soil, their willingness to work hard, the quaint costumes of the women, the curious architecture of the churches and houses, the beautiful women of the country and the charm of the winding, dusty roads.

For all her beauty and fine clothes, the queen is not afraid of dirt. This fact is shown in her boundless admiration for the dusty plains and dusty roads of her country. One day during the German occupation of Rumania, she was riding along one of the dusty roads of Bessarabia, when she saw and picked up an ill-clad little orphan girl, that was part of a group of refugees, but seemed to belong to nobody in particular. The queen gathered up the child in her arms and took it home, thinking later to find its mother. To date the mother has not been found, so the queen has adopted the little girl as a member of her own family.

Another girl that the queen has almost adopted is Miss Anne Shaw of Philadelphia, who has been in Rumania with the American Red Cross for more than a year. Miss Shaw came to know the queen through her Red Cross work, and then, especially Princess Elizabeth, with whom she has struck up a fast friendship. The queen heartily approves of the friendship and when Miss Shaw is about the house, the queen treats her as a younger sister.

Knows Human Nature.

Queen Mary is a good judge of human nature. When she receives a stranger, she puts him through a sort of third degree. She places him a chair facing a lighted window, whereas she sits with her back to the light, and if the stranger meets with her approval, as a person to be trusted, she then is apt to remark:

"I think that light is too strong for your eyes," and asks him or her to change seats. Then she is ready for conversation.

She makes it a point to be in touch with all sorts of opinion and has made friends with a great many of the radical politicians of Rumania.

Not long since, she invited all the writers and newspaper folk of Rumania to her home, serving them tea, and had a heart to heart talk with them. She explained that she was working just as they were for the good of Rumania, told them that perhaps in the past she had not worked as she might, confessed that she had been ignorant, if not misguided, but promised to do better in the future and asked to be permitted to work with them to the common end of making their country greater.

The queen is keenly alive to the social changes brought by the war, to the possibility that thrones are unstable, but she is said to believe that there is still much kings and queens can do if they stick to their jobs—and smile.

YOUNGEST PAID FIRE CHIEF ATTRIBUTES HIS QUICK RISE TO "THE LUCK OF THE IRISH"

By EARNEST SPARKS

"Irish" (Charles L.) Buttomer, recently appointed fire chief, was asked if he believed in the luck of the Irish.

"Sure I do," he answered, "why wouldn't I believe in it? Just when square meals were beginning to look like a vanishing quantity in the show business I went back to my old trade in the fire hall, and in seventeen days I was made chief. Doesn't that look as if it might be the luck of the Irish? Then, again, there was the time I married Mrs. Buttomer."

However, that is the chief's own story and he will have to tell it himself. Chief Irish's reference to being made head of the fire department in seventeen days after joining the force was not intended boastfully. To the chief it was luck, pure and simple. To others, it was the coincidence of the right man being in the right place at the right time.

Chief Buttomer is 20 years old and without doubt is the youngest paid fire department head in the state. But back of him are many years of experience in fire fighting. He was born in Kansas City and almost since he can remember he has been around fire companies. As a small boy, when school was out in the afternoon, he would go by the fire station and pal with the firemen. Later he was made a mascot and had the proud privilege of riding to all the fires behind a pair of racing brown horses.

For several years while he was going to school he did this. After his school days, at the age of 17, he was employed regularly and given a team and wagon to drive. While Irish did not say so, one can imagine that those were just about the proudest days of his life.

When he was 21, Irish resigned from the fire company and went into the show business. That he followed regularly for a year and at intervals since. But as he himself has said, one did not always eat as often as one desired to in the amusement game. However, he did have success and is really a clever entertainer, as many Ranger folks can testify.

From Kansas City, Ranger's future fire chief went to St. Louis. It was there he married Mrs. Buttomer.

In that city he heard of the fabulous fortunes that were being picked up in the oil fields, and he came over to get one. But according to Irish, some one had been over the ground before he arrived here and fortunes were just a little hard to find. In fact, he said, square meals had begun to look like a vanishing quantity, so he went back to his trade of fire fighting.

As a private, Buttomer was employed under Ed S. Smith, who was then chief. In two days he was promoted to captain. Eight days later Smith resigned and his captain was appointed to act in that capany. Seven days later the city commission confirmed his appointment as head of the fire department. No so bad, the chief gives the luck of the Irish all the credit.

It is doubtful if the city could have done a better choice to fill the place. Since his appointment, Chief Buttomer has handled several bad fires and in each case he has shown excellent judgment. In addition, he has the happy faculty of being able to make the men under him like him.

Men Loyal to Him.
The fact of the matter is the fire company swear by Chief Irish; and as a tribute of their regard, a few days ago they bought a solid gold fire chief's badge and presented it to him.

The department is composed of ten paid firemen and five volunteers. The latter only work during bad fires. Directly under the chief there are a captain and a lieutenant.

Believing there is time to work and time to play, Chief Buttomer insists upon discipline. Everything must be kept clean and shining. Tools and hose must be in their proper places and at certain hours of the day the men of the department must go to school as they call it. They are questioned concerning the location of fire plugs, streets and other information they must have to enable them to fight fires properly.

Though Chief Buttomer is only 20 years old and new to his position, he has a department that is a boast to the citizens of Ranger.

MANY BULGARS THINK THRACE IS THEIR OWN

SOFIA, June 1.—The award of Thrace to Greece by the Supreme Council was denounced by Alexander Stambouliwsky, premier of Bulgaria, in a talk with the Associated Press correspondent today as the "gravest injustice ever done to Bulgaria."

"I cannot believe the reports to that effect," he continued. "It will drive our people to despair. But, on behalf of the government, I want to say that in spite of such a misfortune, if it comes to pass, we will loyally keep our obligations to the Allies to fulfill the terms of peace." (Under the peace treaty, Bulgaria ceded to the Allies western Thrace which she had occupied before the war. The peace conference later awarded it to Greece.)

Premier Stambouliwsky is the man who served a three-year prison sentence for telling King Ferdinand that if he went to war on the side of Germany he would either lose his throne or his head. He is leader of the powerful Agrarian party.

Because of his humble birth and his peasant parentage, the prime minister is regarded as the Lincoln of Bulgaria. Like the great Illinoisan, he is essentially a man of the people and has much homely wisdom and practical sense. He received the correspondent in a simple, unpretentious office, the oddest feature in which was a desk as high as a man's shoulder, at which the minister did all his writing while standing.

"You must excuse me for receiving you in this fashion," said he laughingly to the reporter, "but you see while I was serving my prison term for daring to oppose the former king, the only light in my cell came through a narrow opening near the ceiling and I acquired the habit of writing while standing. In this way I wrote twenty volumes within three years. I still continue the practice of doing all my work while on my feet."

"When I signed the peace treaty on behalf of Bulgaria," he said, "it was in the firm conviction that the Allies would make Thrace a separate state under the control of one of more of the great powers and would give us an outlet to the Aegean sea. If now Thrace is given to the Greeks, we must believe that the peace conference desired to cripple us economically, for we could not accept a seaport on Greek territory."

Mr. Stambouliwsky declared that every foreign mission that had investigated the Thracian question urged that autonomy be given the people there, or, if not autonomy, that they be allowed to express their preference for union either with Bulgaria or Greece. "As between a choice of having Bulgaria or Greece for a master," said the prime minister, "there is absolutely no question that the Thracian people would choose Bulgaria. They feel that the granting of self-government to them would lead to the creation of many autonomous states in the Balkans and that this in turn would tend to the formation of a federation of Balkan countries which has been the hope of statesmen for so many years."

"I cannot see," continued the minister, "how the allies could be so prejudiced as to award this narrow strip of territory to Greece and deprive us of all access to the sea. By closing the door to us on the Aegean they are forcing us north to the Danube, which can mean only one thing—a resumption of trade and economic relations with Germany. They have already punished us for our association with the Central Powers. Now they are forcing us to the same path. There is no logic in such a decision."

"Bulgaria intended to construct railroads to Dediagatch on the south," M. Stambouliwsky said, "but now if Thrace is given to Thrace we shall have to divert them to the north on the Danube, because our Black sea ports are of little value, especially in winter. Would the peace conference put us under the economic and commercial dependence and domination of Germany again? We shall be forced to this extremity if we are deprived of all access to the Aegean and are compelled to go to the Danube. We must have commercial intercourse with England, France, America and Italy if we are to live on terms of peace and amity with them. Now Bulgaria desires sincerely to ally itself with the Entente."

TROTZKY HAS LOST NONE OF FORMER VICOR

MOSCOW, June 19.—Leon Trotsky the Soviet war minister, is often his own messenger. While he is carrying important dispatches to one of his colleagues the Associated Press correspondent had a fleeting interview with him in Kremlin the other day.

Replying to a question as to whether he would appoint a time to discuss with the correspondent the activities of the working army, he said: "This is a time of momentous decisions in Russia and until party politics for the coming year are determined I can not talk for publication."

Meanwhile he was taking such long steps as to render it difficult for the correspondent to keep up with him. Crossing the big square of the Kremlin he was saluted by the numerous soldiers who received him despite the fact he was wearing the regulation uniform, no different than that of his enlisted men.

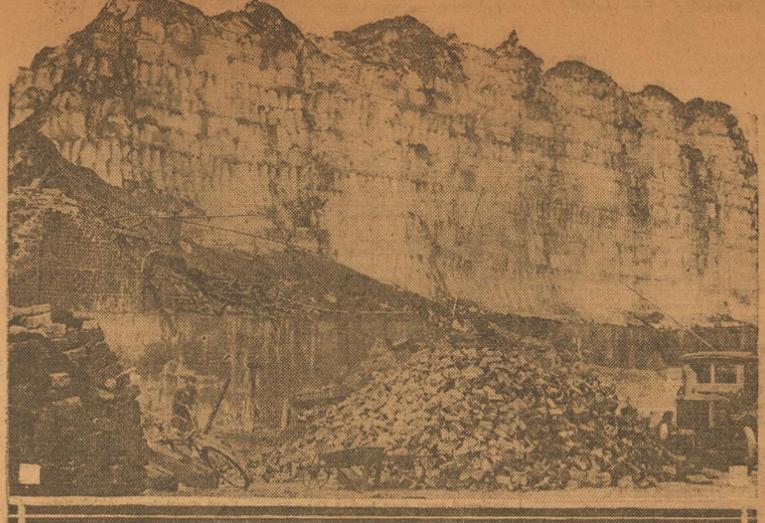

As Trotsky walked his wiry person seemed vibrant with energy, showing no signs of the strain of the past three years. Leading the cavalry barracks he disappeared up the steps, two at a bound, with the parting words: "Call me up later when I have more time."

HOMER CUMMINGS WILL BE CANDIDATE AT SAN FRANCISCO

SAN FRANCISCO.—Homer S. Cummings, chairman of the National Democratic committee and temporary chairman of the Democratic national convention when it convenes in this city on June 28, is to be put in nomination for the presidency by Mayor Fitzgerald of New Haven, Conn., now en route to this city with the Connecticut delegation.

The news, received in San Francisco a few days ago, created a furor among arriving Democrats, and from expressions of opinion among them it is judged that the Cummings candidacy will be welcomed with open arms by large numbers of the delegates.

Cummings has been chairman of the national committee for four years. He has one of the largest law practices in Stamford, Conn., and is a former mayor of that city. He is the leader of the Connecticut Democrats and in 1916 failed by a narrow margin to be elected to the Senate. Cummings was vice chairman of the Democratic national committee for eight years and succeeded Vance McCormick.

Wheat in this vicinity was badly damaged by the pest last year. In one portion of South Clark county twelve miles from here the grasshoppers are reported as literally covering the ground.

Chief of Police Reynolds has decreed that infractions of this rule will be dealt with severely and Hull police who have hitherto closed their eyes when some dimpled-knee miss passed, will be obliged to act as an escort—as far as the police station. Midnight "panama parties" and other nocturnal disturbances of which seaside residents have complained will also be vigorously suppressed.

International News Service. WARRENSBURG, Mo., June 19.—Landing a cub wolf with a fishing line was the unique experience of Frank Carpenter of this place, a few days ago. After spending an hour angling for the finny tribe with good results, Carpenter decided to go to camp, meanwhile laying the baited line on the bank of the stream. When he returned to resume his fishing, Carpenter found the cub writhing on the ground with the fish hook securely fastened in its upper lip.

New Nations Go in For Display in Court Stuff

ROME.—Roman high society is amazed at the extravagance of those little new states born of the war, whose currency is known to be very much down in the list of international money values.

At a moment when the royal court has given up all idea of balls and large receptions because the king and queen think such festivities are out of keeping with the food situation and the short purses of most of their subjects; when the papal court sets the example of frugality and many cardinals have put aside their carriages, receptions and go humbly on foot; when the ambassadors of the great powers have followed the two courts' example and confine their entertaining to simple afternoon receptions at rare intervals and a very occasional garden party, when the embassy happens to have a garden, the small states which did not exist before the armistice are giving dinners, lunches, receptions and junketings with zest.

Finns, Czechoslovaks, Poles, Georgians, Rumanians and other "small fry" outstrip the British, American and French missions in hospitality. The menus are long and the dresses expensive, and the houses and villas these small powers have taken make their neighbors ask, "How on earth can they pay for it all?"

Rospigliosi Palace Taken.
One state whose coinage is depreciated 600 per cent has taken for its minister to the Holy See the first floor of the famous Rospigliosi palace, the home of the former Miss Mildred Hazeltine and Miss Ethel Bronson of New York. It has six huge reception salons stocked with museum pictures and numerous private apartments. The French government negotiated for it as the seat of their new legation to the Holy See, but gave up the idea because it thought the rent too dear for France. It was immediately whipped up by the Poles, whose finances, though they will recover, are by no means so robust as the French.

The Finns have taken an apartment in the historical Palazzo Stasino, which one of the three biggest powers considered too expensive for its own representative to the papal court.

The Czechoslovaks have taken a villa which even in these days of house famine stood empty for long months because it was so expensive.

"If they are doing this in Rome, what can they be spending in Washington, Paris and London?" ask the old Roman diners-out. Probably the best explanation is one given by a Polish society woman who had plenty of money before the war but is now obliged to economize.

"All these little states are in the position of poor young girls who marry rich men. They think they have unlimited wealth and can't spend fast enough. Later they will know better and spend money wisely."

The Bolshevik element which has invaded Italy's chamber of deputies since the last election has closed the restaurant, which for more than twenty years was a well-run institution in the chamber, managed by Signor Guardabassi, known as the best ice cream maker in Rome.

Boors in Parliament.
—Since December last his parliamentary restaurant has been the scene of considerable violence. Members who were pavers, carters and dock laborers before they got into parliament have been invading the restaurant pantry, carrying off rounds of cheese, sprinkling away large quantities of fruit, eating a meal and walking off without paying for it, to such an extent that Signor Guardabassi finds he cannot carry on the restaurant any longer. The way one avowedly Bolshevik deputy has of ordering a cutlet, cutting it up and then sending it away because he thinks the price too high exasperated the waiters.

"It was bearable as long as these new deputies took my cheese, my fruit and my lunches without paying for them," Signor Guardabassi told a correspondent. "Though the loss was beginning to be heavy, I was ready to put up with it for the sake of the tradition which my family business has had with parliament all these years. But when it came to their refusing to pay for food they had ordered and for which my waiters had paid with their checks, I couldn't stand it any longer and closed the restaurant."

When deputies want refreshments now they have to seek it outside the chamber and there is much grumbling.

WIDOW SUES FOR THOUSANDS BUT GETS ONE DOLLAR

ST. PAUL.—Heartaches caused by disappointment in love are not affected by old H. C. L. It was indicated when a jury returned a verdict to Judge H. R. Brill in district court giving Mrs. Sophie Kravak, a widow, $1 because Ferdinand Jacobovitz, her neighbor, broke his promise to marry her.

The widow sued for $10,000, alleging that Mr. Jacobovitz and she agreed to marry April 14, after she had kept house for him several weeks.

The widow alleged that she lived on South street an elite defendant lived on Hatch street, a short distance away. She went to keep house for him, and when he agreed to marry her a short time afterward he also promised to give her $1,000 and to pay her $2 a week from the time of the promise until it was fulfilled by their marriage.

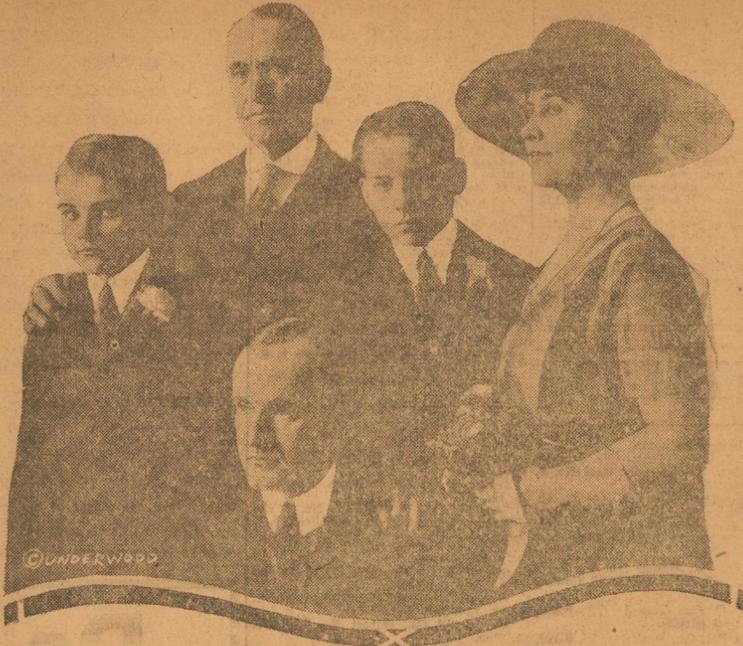

Jacobovitz is said to have married another woman. His defense was that he employed the woman as his housekeeper at $15 a month, and when he reprimanded her for incompetence and defrauding him she left. He denied any promise of marriage.

"In what way—telling them all he loves them?"
"No. He said to me last night that we have got to begin to teach my little brother not to be so fresh. And then a little later he said my father certainly 'smokes rotten' cigars."—Houston Chronicle.

LABOR MEET WILL BE AT DENVER IN 1921

MONTREAL, June 19.—Denver, Colorado was selected by the American Federation of Labor today as the place for the 1921 convention. Birmingham was the only rival.

Baby's Clothes Should Be Thin in Hot Weather

Cincinnati, O., June 19.—Most infants are overdressed, Health Commissioner William H. Peters said in a statement on infant care. Dr. Peters says: "Heat usually means too much clothing, and very often woolen clothing next to the skin."

"During hot weather a cotton shirt, a diaper and a slip are sufficient. The bobbyband may be discarded after the baby is six to eight weeks old."

"Bathing with tepid water, to which may be added a little baking soda, cools the skin, reduces irritation, induces sleep and increases resistance."

"Flies should be excluded as religiously as one guards against a snake."

"The baby's food should be prepared with scrupulous care. Bottles, nipples and utensils should be sterilized by boiling and the hands of the attendant cleaned with soap and water before handling food."

"Mother's milk is the best food for babies. Fresh, clean cow's milk is the best substitute. Milk sold in Cincinnati is pure and wholesome but it must be kept cold and clean. When making up the baby's food it is always best to prepare the day's supply."

"Parents who cannot afford to pay for such supervision are urged to register their children at the Child Health Station."

"A very splendid monograph on 'Infant Care,' published by the Children's Bureau, containing everything that a mother should know about her baby, will be mailed to anyone desiring it. We mail this most instructive booklet to parents in Cincinnati just as soon as the birth of a child is recorded."

Seven milk stations were opened yesterday by the health department, with two nurses and a physician in attendance daily from 9 a. m. to 12 o'clock noon. The stations are at the Highlands school, Eastern avenue near Lewis street; Union Bethel, 501 East Third street; Morgan school, Kilgour and Fin streets; Pease school, Woodward, near Main street; Sinton Park Playgrounds; Oyster school, Burns and Storrs streets and Kenton Street Welfare Center.

Dr. Peters issued the following statement, "Hot Weather Hints":

"Practice moderation in all things."

"Plenty of cool water, citrus drinks, such as limeades, orangeades, etc., which have a very salutary effect upon the body."

"Bathe daily. A sponge bath or a shower in the morning and at night are very invigorating."

"Wear light weight, light colored clothing."

"A good night's sleep, preferably in the open air, is the best preparation for a hot day."

"Fatigue, worry and anxiety should be avoided during hot weather, and physical effort reduced to a minimum."

"Don't worry about the weather; it will be hot just the same."

TO DETERMINE ORIGIN OF MAORIS AND HAWAIIANS

HONOLULU, May 25.—(By Mail).—Twenty Maoris from New Zealand have arrived here with James M. Lambert, head of the Mormon mission in New Zealand, for a series of tests to establish or refute the theory that the Maoris and the Hawaiians are sprung from the same stock. The Maoris will spend two months in the Hawaiian Islands, as guests of the Mormon church here.

EXTEND PIPE LINE TO OIL FIELD IN KY.

BARBOURVILLE, Ky.—A new petroleum district in eastern Kentucky was connected up when the Cumberland Pipe Line company finished a branch line through the Magoffin-Johnson development. This district is east of the Lee-Estill-Wolfe fields, and during the summer has made rapid strides in new production, in addition to showing some gas wells of large capacity. Wells now producing in this district are estimated to have a daily capacity of 500 or 600 barrels in the aggregate. Many new wells are drilling and, while no strikes of big capacity have been made, an extensive area has been proved, with limits as yet undefined.

Strikes during the week were of average capacity, with the larger wells reported from the western counties. Allen, Warren, Simpson and Barren are experiencing great activity, contractors usually being dated up many months with new work.

In Warren county one of the best of late strikes was Johnson and associates' No. 2, Torment lease, which is estimated to be good for 250 barrels daily. In the Three Forks section of the same county the Big Dipper Oil company got a 100-barrel showing on the Lawrence lease and in the same section the Overman company has a 50-barrel well on the Ground lease.

New Work in Warren.
New developments in the lower end of Warren county will be connected up by a four-inch pipe line extension to Bowling Green. Several flowing wells have been developed in the Allen county side lately, in addition to many wells of fair capacity. Simpson county shows one strike of 100-barrel capacity, with a number of 10 to 40-barrel pumps.

While Allen, Warren and Simpson county strikes usually are shut down much of the time due to congestion of pipe lines, it is claimed that there is no big decline in yield, such as usually marks wells starting at 100 barrels and better. Few wells in this district have played out entirely.

An advance strike in the western field was E. A. Snyder's No. 1, Wall lease, in Logan county, which shows up for 10 barrels.

In Eastern Kentucky, Lee county district, the Fletcher company's No. 4, Cable lease, is reported showing for 40 barrels. On the Lyons lease the Southwestern Petroleum company has a 25-barrel in its twenty-first test, Cumberland Petroleum company has one of the same capacity on the Smith lease.

Small Wells Bought.
Nothing out of the ordinary was developed in the Estill, Powell-Wolfe fields. In Powell county one well made 10 barrels and three were in the 5-barrel class. Two small producers and one failure were drilled in Estill.

In Lawrence county, Big Sandy district, the Union Oil & Gas company, drilling on the Holbrook lease, got a 10-barrel producer. Other strikes included a 10-barrel drilled by the Pilgrim Oil company, on the Rice lease.

Some new work is started each week in lower Kentucky counties, bordering Tennessee, but completions are slow because of scarcity of material. Operators in the old Wayne county district are pushing developments more vigorously than usual and are meeting with a fair degree of success. The county is now producing from 2,000 to 3,000 barrels weekly.
