New Air Mail and Passenger Planes To Be Established Soon

WASHINGTON, July 28.—Commercial aviation in the United States received a tremendous boost today with the announcement from the postoffice department that eight new air mail lines will be inaugurated about November 1. The routes will be leased to private individuals and mail planes will also operate commercially carrying passengers and freight. The new lines will touch 28 cities. Establishment of the new lines virtually creates a government subsidy for this class of aviation. The United States will pay the carrying firms up to four-fifths of the revenues derived from mail on the routes, while passengers will be carried for the firm's own profit. One line will operate through Chicago to Moline, St. Joseph, Kansas City, Oklahoma City, Dallas and Fort Worth. Round trip, six days a week, will be scheduled on all the routes. The planes will be required to average 50 miles per hour.

Coal Mine Situation In England Reaching Parting of the Ways

LONDON, July 28.—With England's tremendous threatened coal lock-out only three days away, Premier Baldwin today sought a compromise which might prevent this desperate industrial struggle. He was to meet the coal mine owners this afternoon and in this session, it was understood, he wanted the owners to let the old term stand for 60 days to give a breathing spell in which the mine owners and miners would have an opportunity to negotiate a new wage scale.

At the same time leaders among the miners were attending a meeting in Paris, an international conference at which it was hoped to create a more solid understanding between the British and European trade unionism would be reached. The Sayre Valley miners are out and signs of trouble awaited in Europe. England is watching anxiously the outcome of the Paris meeting. This, it was thought, would endeavor to make a blockade effective if the lockout is ordered. The miners claim that not one pound of coal will move from the mouth of the mines.

SINCLAIR CAMP WILL BECOME ONLY MEMORY

Buildings Ordered Razed and Lumber to Be Shipped to Tulsa, Co. Headquarters

Razing of the Sinclair Oil and Gas company camp, on the Tiffin road, one mile north of Ranger, marks the passing of one of the model and modern camps in the history of Ranger, built during the big oil boom of 1917-18. The houses now occupied by renters will be razed as soon as they are vacated in the future, according to J. L. Wheatley, superintendent of the camp. The big dormitory, that housed many workers in its day and containing the club rooms of the camp during its heyday, is practically a thing of memory only, as only the framework is now standing and workmen are busily engaged in tearing that down. All the vacant buildings on the camp will be torn down and the lumber assembled and shipped to Tulsa as soon as possible, Mr. Wheatley said. The office building is next on the list for razing and several vacant houses will be removed as workmen get to them. Residents of the camp at the present time will not be bothered, as no definite information regarding the final disposition of the camp is available, Mr. Wheatley said.

The workmen now engaged in razing the vacant buildings said that their orders came from Tulsa to proceed to the Sinclair camp in Ranger and raze all vacant buildings. The men responsible for the orders at the offices in Tulsa are out of town and will not return for several days, Mr. Wheatley said. A number of real estate men and individuals, it is said, would like to buy houses at the camp, but no orders were sent authorizing the sale of any. All the buildings now being razed are to be shipped to Tulsa, headquarters of the Sinclair company. The Sinclair camp was one of the first big camps to be erected by companies for their employees. The entire camp is laid out in an orderly manner and is strictly modern, all conveniences being available and when the boom collapsed around Ranger, the company was preparing to erect a school house and big hospital in the camp. Dormitories for the single men, residences for married employees, office buildings, club rooms, tennis courts, garages, a hospital and doctors and nurses maintained at the company's expense, were all installed in the modern camp by the Sinclair company when it was built.

Forever And Forever

SPIRIT OF BRYAN TO CONTINUE FIGHT

Bryan's Attack On Evolution Is Given To the Press

DAYTON, Tenn., July 28.—The spirit of William Jennings Bryan spoke today to take up the battle where it was interrupted when he died suddenly Sunday afternoon. It assaulted the fortress of evolution and defended the old religion. The spirit of the former leader spoke through the text of a speech prepared by him as a closing argument in the prosecution of J. C. Scopes. It was not delivered at the trial, however, and before it was published he died. It was made available to the United Press today. It is a remarkable document of more than 10,000 words, running the gamut from almost the sublime to the bitterest condemnation of the "damnable philosophy, which is the flower that blooms on the stalk of evolution." It ridicules and denounces Darrow and even brings in his defense of Leopold and Leob. One can easily picture the fire of Bryan's sarcasm, which now is stilled forever. "There is no more reason to believe that man descended from some inferior animal than to believe a stately mansion has descended from a small cottage," argued Bryan in the attack on evolution.

Filipino Legislature Adopts Resolutions In Praise of Bryan

MANILA, July 28.—The Filipino legislature adjourned out of respect to William Jennings Bryan when word was received here of his death, both houses first adopting resolutions of condolence. Other resolutions extolled the Commoner for his work for Philippine independence. Services are planned here to review the life and deeds of Bryan.

MECHANIC IN JAPANESE NAVY YARD UNDER SUSPICION

TOKIO, July 28.—A mechanic in the naval dockyard at Yokohama, was arrested today on the allegation of Frank Jordan, Cleveland, Ohio, employee of the Otis Elevator company, that he offered to sell Jordan naval secrets. Yokohama has a naval station, dockyard and arsenal.

Dayton Planning William Jennings Bryan University

DAYTON, Tenn., July 28.—Dayton's monument to the man who became its martyr in the cause of fundamentalism may be a William Jennings Bryan university. B. Y. Morgan and other leading citizens of this town have called a meeting to take place soon after the funeral, at which efforts will be made to raise the money for a fundamentalist university.

Bryan, who died suddenly Sunday afternoon while taking an afternoon nap, rested yesterday in his coffin on the lawn of the home where he had been staying, his grim features slightly relaxed with a smile of death, while Tennessee mountaineers, farmers, business men and women, slowly filed by the temporary Bier, guarded by members of the American Legion. Many had not been apprised of the opportunity to view the body, so the body was to rest in state again today. At 8:30 o'clock tomorrow morning the body will be taken to the private car that will be awaiting it, and start on its way to Washington, which city will be reached at 7:30 a. m. Thursday.

LaFollette's Widow Prefers Her Son To Herself In the Senate

WASHINGTON, July 28.—Mrs. Belle Case LaFollette, widow of the late Wisconsin independent republican leader, in a statement issued today declined to enter the race for the senate seat of her late husband, and thereby opened the way for her son, Robert M. LaFollette Jr., to become his father's successor. Announcement of young LaFollette's intention to seek election to the senate, replacing his father, was expected to be made from Madison, Wis., within a few days. A call for a special election may be issued by Governor Blaine shortly thereafter and the battle launched.

AMBASSADOR BANCROFT DIES IN TOKIO, JAPAN

Had Been Ill for Month, But Was Thought to Be Improving; End Comes Suddenly

TOKIO, Japan, July 28.—American Ambassador Bancroft died here today. Bancroft had been ill with intestinal trouble, but was reported within the past fortnight to be improving. At that time his physicians believed that rest would restore him to health. He had been Ambassador to Japan since 1924. For many years he was born in Galesburg, Ill., in 1857 and graduated from Knox College of that city and Columbia Law School, N. Y. He had won for himself an eminent position at the bar of Illinois during his practice in Galesburg and Chicago. He was specially adapted as a railroad attorney. He belonged to several Chicago clubs and was author of several works of an economic and legal nature.

CHICAGO, July 28.—News of the death of Ambassador Bancroft was received at his law offices here today with the utmost sorrow. Only this morning his law partners had received a dispatch from Tokio in stating that his condition was improving.

"It can't be possible," said John McElsh of the firm of Scott, Bancroft, Martin and McElsh. "Only this morning we received a message which was most encouraging and led us to believe that Mr. Bancroft's condition was improving. A noble man and a good friend has been snatched from us," he said.

KELLOGG MOURNS DEATH OF LIFELONG FRIEND.

Policeman Gives Up Trying To Live On Policeman's Pay

SAN ANTONIO, July 28.—"How can a man live on a policeman's pay?" were the dying words of patrolman J. A. Cameron, 38, who died in a hospital late Monday night of a gunshot wound in his head. He was shot near his home on Medina street. Mrs. Cameron said her husband had killed himself. He first tried to shoot himself in the house, but she restrained him, and then he went into the yard and fired the fatal shot.

ARMY AIRPLANES ON WAY FROM WEST TO EAST

CHEYENNE, Wyo., July 28.—If favorable weather prevails the six army airplanes returning from San Francisco to Mt. Clemons, Mich., probably will leave this afternoon for Omaha. Rain last night forced two of the planes to maneuver over the mail landing field for a half hour before being able to effect a landing.

GIRARD WOMAN IS VICTIM OF AUTO WRECK

Mrs. Alice Hill Dies in Eastland From Injuries In Accident; Two Men Held.

Mrs. Alice Hill of Girard, Kent county, Texas, who was injured yesterday afternoon about 3 o'clock in an automobile wreck on the Carbon-Eastland highway, died this morning about 9 o'clock at the Eastland sanitarium where she was taken immediately following the accident. George Lasater and Glenn Drury, of near Kokomo, in this county, who it is alleged were driving the car that collided with the one in which Mrs. Hill and party were riding, were arrested yesterday afternoon and are being held in the county jail awaiting the action of the grand jury, which is in session. The accident, which cost Mrs. Hill her life, happened a short distance south of Eastland and just south of the bridge over the South Leon river. Mrs. Hill, her son-in-law, Mr. Barton, her daughter, Miss Ellen Hill, and Mrs. Ruth Hodges, were en route from their home at Girard, Texas, to Hamilton, Texas, to visit relatives. They were driving a Ford touring car, the same make of car driven by Lasater and Drury. Both cars were badly wrecked, the one driven by Lasater and Drury, so much so that they abandoned it and fled the scene of the accident on foot.

Mrs. Hill was thrown out of the car and her head struck the paving on the highway. Almost half of the left side of her head was torn open. Other parties in her car were not seriously hurt. Neither Lasater nor Drury were injured to any extent. Mrs. Hill's son and other relatives arrived in Eastland this morning and are preparing to take the body to Girard on the Texas & Pacific "Sunshine" this afternoon.

BEE TREE IS LOCATED ON HODGES' LAND

Original Finder and Claimant Not Known and Tree Will Not Be Disturbed.

A bee tree, rare in this part of the state, was recently discovered on the land of Mayor R. B. Hodges of Ranger by parties following the bees course after watching them for several weeks. The tree is located about 200 feet off Main street, at Homer, and is one of a large group. It is one of the largest oak trees growing on the tract and is partially hollow.

Following the bees and locating the tree, a resident of Ranger asked Mayor Hodges some time ago for permission to cut the tree. Mayor Hodges did not grant the permission as the tree was marked with an X on each side, which, according to an unwritten law of Texas, and strictly observed by the oldtimers, he said, indicated the tree had been found and marked by someone and that it belonged to him. The unwritten law of the oldtimers' code was that no matter whose land the bee tree was on, it belonged to the party who found it, he being entitled to the honey.

Bee trees are not easily located. Bees must be observed and the usual procedure is to watch them after they reach water and observe their course, gradually tracking them to their den. Sometimes from the tree is located several miles from where they get water, and that means work for the bee hunter who must make his way through underbrush and across rough country, always keeping the couring bees in sight. "I do not know who marked the tree," said Mayor Hodges, "but according to the old unwritten law it belongs to whoever first found it. However, I do not want the tree cut as yet, as it is one of the largest on that tract of land, and due to the intense heat this year, it is doubtful if any great amount of honey is in the combs at the present time." The tree is the home of an unusually large swarm of bees, one of the largest seen in this part of West Texas for some years, it is said. It would probably be difficult for the original finder, who marked the tree, to prove his claim to it.

TRUCK LOAD OF LARD CATCHES FIRE ON PIKE.

DALLAS, July 28.—A truck driver for Swift & Company was almost killed the other day, but he managed to escape uninjured and saved the canned hog besides: A truck load of lard he was hauling caught fire on the Fort Worth Pike when a spark ignited it, and the driver braved the blaze and bubbling grease to salvage his cargo. He finally succeeded in throwing most of it overboard but admitted that the hot lard and merciless sun made him thirsty when it was all over.

MRS. HAGAMAN HOSTESS
 Mrs. M. H. Hagaman was hostess yesterday afternoon to the members of the Woman's Missionary society of the Methodist church. The Hagaman home is an ideal place for a mid-summer function of any kind, with its spacious, inviting looking grounds, its large entertaining suite, and its gracious hostess, and yesterday's social meeting of the Missionary Society was no exception to the rule of hospitality that always prevails in this home. Cut flowers adorned the parlors, dining room and library, while a huge bunch of mammoth sunflowers centered the table in the breakfast room. The program was very interesting, starting off with a contest of Biblical women, which afforded a great deal of sharpening of wits, and merriment. The remainder of the program was given by a number of young girls of the church, the hostess showing that she is looking to the future in respect, as they will be the ones who will come after, and her recognition of this fact was a pleasing tribute to the young ladies and a splendid lesson for older members. Catherine Galloway read "When My Aunt Visits Us." Betsy Dixon gave a piano selection. Margaret Galloway and Mary Edlow Davenport sang a duet. Little Catherine Newnam sang a solo. Margaret Galloway read, "A Young Wife's Lament," and Shirley Shook concluded the program with a piano selection.

Following the program the guests were invited out to the sun-parlor where they were served ice cold Parker county watermelons. The attendance was splendid and the afternoon's pleasure most gratifying.

LADIES' AUXILIARY OF PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH MEET
 The ladies auxiliary of the Presbyterian church met in study and social session yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. C. R. Getts in the Bobo addition. Mrs. G. D. Robison, president of the auxiliary, led the devotional service which was a devotional study of Bible and missions, by Helen Barnett Montgomery. Several very interesting papers were given after which the meeting was turned into a purely social one, during which time the hosts served delicious refreshments of ice cream and cake. In spite of the hot weather the attendance was splendid.

MEMBERS OF THE GUILD SEW
 Needlework and conversation made a large part of the day pass very pleasantly for a number of the members of St. Mary's Guild, when they met Monday with Mrs. Gifford Clegg. It was an all day affair, members having been notified to come about ten and stay for lunch and in spite of the terrific heat, a great deal of work was accomplished. The Guild is preparing for a fall bazaar and its members take advantage of the long summer days, and the general dullness in social affairs, to make preparations for this event. At midday Mrs. Clegg served a cleverly appointed luncheon to those present, who were: Mmes. Garvin Clastain, George Armer, H. L. Post, George Taggart of Eastland, C. B. Schram, Jack Shannon, T. L. Lauderdale, W. H. Burden and Miss Jones.

MONTHS DON'T BRING OLD BURDEN OF PAIN TO THESE WOMEN NOW
 They Say They are Now Regular as a Clock and No Longer Suffer From So-Called "Female Troubles."
 Thousands of women are simply carried away with enthusiasm by seeing and feeling for themselves what a difference the use of G. F. P. is making in their former sick and pain-ridden bodies.
 Most women feel very insecure in the enjoyment of their health. This is due to the fact that they see on every side of them the poor, thin, nervous wrecks which catarrh of the generative organs has made of so many of their unfortunate fellow-women.
 Although this dreaded enemy to the health of women hovers over them, it need no longer cause the same gripping, terrifying fear as of old, for the reason that St. Joseph's G. F. P. is proving in thousands of cases now that it can be relied on to overcome and stamp out this terrible malady, which is the direct cause of nine out of every ten cases of so-called disorders of women.
 Mrs. Peck says: "A close friend recommended St. Joseph's G. F. P. to me, and I found that it made a very great change in my condition the first time I used it. I have taken four bottles now and have gained seven pounds in weight and am still gaining."
 Singing at Mr. and Mrs. Mart Dulin's Sunday night was enjoyed by a large crowd.
 The women of this community have been very busy the past week canning peas and corn.
 Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Dulin and son, Albert, of Eastland, were recent guests at the home of their son, Mart, of this community.

EASTLAND MAN HIT BY AUTO IN STREET
 "Uncle" Tom Alderson, who was run down by an automobile driven by Mrs. George Langston of Cisco, on the northeast corner of the square in Eastland last evening about 8:00 o'clock, is resting well this morning and it is believed he will soon recover, as it appears that no bones were broken.
 It is stated that the accident in which Mr. Alderson was hurt was entirely unavoidable on the part of Mrs. Langston, who stopped her car immediately when she saw that she had hit someone and rendered all the aid possible. Mrs. Alderson stated this morning that the family did not blame her for the accident.

To Restore Their Vitality

To understand why U.S. Royal Balloons are known as "the Balloon Tire Principle at its Best," consider these facts—

THE comfort you get out of balloon tires depends on how soft you can run them with safety to the tires.

U.S. Royal Balloons are built in strict accordance with the original conception of balloon tire cushioning—true low air pressure.

They can be run at pressures which actually give you the comfort you expect from a balloon tire.

They do not have to be over-inflated to save them from early, uneven and disfiguring tread wear.

This is because their flat "Low-Pressure Tread" distributes the weight over a greater tread area than the ordinary round tread.

The entire surface of the tread comes in contact with the road.

The tire itself is built of the famous Latex-treated Web Cord, which gives the maximum strength and maximum flexibility so essential to balloon cushioning.

Put U. S. Royal Balloons on your car and enjoy the comfort of riding on genuine low air pressure.

GRAND OINTMENT MAKES PIMPLES AND BLOTCHES GO

Ever since the introduction in this country of the wonderful Black and White Ointment, and Soap, skin specialists say that such troubles as pimples, blotches, bumps, rash, tetter, eczema, "breaking out," etc., are coming fewer every year.

Wide distribution of Black and White Ointment, and Soap, has made it possible for millions of people to get the benefit of this wonderful, quick effect in clearing disfigured skin and making it smooth and cool to look at. Dealers everywhere say they are selling faster than anything of a similar nature they have ever handled, and they attribute this popularity to the low prices at which they are sold, as well as their dependability. The 50c size Ointment contains three times as much as the 25c size. Adv.

The FLAPPER WIFE

by Beatrice Burton © 1925, N.E.A. SERVICE INC.

THE STORY SO FAR

Gloria Gordon, pretty young flapper, marries Dick Gregory, a struggling lawyer. Her idea of married life is good times, good clothes, but no children! Gloria has hysterics when Dick suggests that she do her own housework. He borrows his mother's maid, Maggie, to teach Gloria to cook. But Gloria won't learn. Stanley Wayburn, an actor with whom Gloria had been in love, calls on her. Dick sees him leave the house. Gloria tells him that the man was an interior decorator. Gloria invites Wayburn to a house-warming. Dick instantly recognizes him. During the evening Gloria sees Wayburn kissing her friend, Myra Gail. Becoming reckless, she drinks too much, and faints away while dancing with Dr. John Seymour, whose wife, May, is in love with Jim Carewe. The party breaks up when Lela Hough "bawls out" Bill, her husband, for indiscriminate "petting." Then the disgusted Maggie quits her job. Gloria hires a new maid, Ranghild Swanson, at $18 a week. Mother Gregory calls to scold Gloria for giving a drinking party. While she is doing this Dick comes home.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

As soon as Dick came into the room Mother Gregory rose to go. She gathered her furs around her shoulders and adjusted the veil on her imposing hat.

"I just ran in to have a little chat with you," she said smiling as pleasantly as any afternoon caller. "But I must run alone now. Perhaps you'll come along and tuck me into my car, Richard?"

Gloria watched her tall husband and his mother walk down to the curbstone. They stood talking beside Mother Gregory's car.

"About me, I'll bet!" Gloria said to herself.

Why had Mother Gregory stopped scolding her the minute Dick came into the room, Gloria wondered.

Was it because she didn't want to upset Dick and his delicate stomach by a quarrel?

Or was it because she didn't want him to know that she was interfering in Gloria's affairs—in the running of her house?

If that was the case, Gloria made up her mind that she'd tell Dick just what Mother Gregory had said to her—she'd let him know that his mother couldn't come into their house and try to arrange their lives for them!

The very idea of her trying to tell Gloria whether she was to serve hard liquor or lemonade at her parties! It was none of her business!

"Your mother's just like the mother-in-law in the funny papers," she said when Dick came into the house. "She's been trying to tell me I should not have had cocktails at last night's party. Gosh, I'd hate to sit through one of her bone-dry dinners. They must be ghastly!"

Dick didn't answer her. He stood watching her futile efforts to wipe some stains from the hall mirror.

"Here, give me that duster!" he said finally. "You shiny upstairs and make the beds. I'll clean up down here—I'm the world's best parlor maid, if you only knew it!"

In his way, Dick was quite good-looking, she thought.

He was tall and thin. And there was an anger look in his face—in the quick movements of his body—that made him seem splendidly alive.

Of course he wasn't handsome, like Stan Wayburn.

Gloria knew every detail of Stan Wayburn by heart. The cleft in his chin, his polished black hair, his ice-blue eyes—and his thrilling way of looking at you.

Dick came toward her across the living-room, shoving the vacuum sweeper ahead of him as he came. He left broad dusty streaks on the rug behind him.

Gloria laughed. "Gosh, but you're doing a bum job of house cleaning!" she said. Dick dropped the sweeper and caught her in his arms to kiss away her laughter.

"No! No!" Gloria cried. With all her strength she pushed him away from her and ran upstairs.

Stan Wayburn had held Myra in his arms just that way last night!—The very thought of him was like a knife twisting in her heart.

What was there about Myra Gail that made all the men fall in love with her, Gloria wondered.

Myra, with her sullen gray eyes, wasn't even pretty. She talked very little in her drawing, husky voice. She did not try to please anyone, particularly.

It must be her clothes that made her so alluring—that turned the trick, Gloria decided.

For there was no doubt that Myra had wonderful clothes. She bought them in Paris.

Gloria stopped making beds and opened the door of her clothes-closet.

With a new scorn she surveyed the dresses hanging there. A few weeks ago when she had bought them for her trousseau she had thought them beautiful.

Now she saw that there were too many ruffles on them, too many buttons, too much fringe. Even the colors were wrong!—They should be subtle greens and dusky grays like Myra wore—instead of bright blues and frantic reds.

Well, was there any reason why she shouldn't have clothes like Myra's if she wanted them?

Of course, if she asked Dick for them he would be sure to say he couldn't afford them for her. But she wouldn't ask him!—She would simply buy them!

After all, it was no crime to have a few becoming clothes, was it?

She would buy a dress of cream and amber to match her skin and hair!

She would buy black velvet to set off the pearly whiteness of her neck and arms!—And a scarf of real lace like foam along the edge of a wave!

She would beat Myra Gail at her own game! Stan would never look at Myra again!

Not when he saw Gloria with her loveliness dressed as it never had been dressed before!

She wished that it were Monday morning instead of late Saturday afternoon—so that she could go down town and begin to shop, then and there!

By the time Gloria had made the twin beds and had hung a neat row of face towels in the bathroom, it was dark.

Downstairs she could hear the faint rattle and clatter of dishes. She supposed that Dick had finished straightening the house in his slap-dash man's way, and was washing the glasses from last night's bout.

She fluffed up her hair, dabbed her nose with a powder puff, and started downstairs.

Halfway down the flight of steps she stopped. From the kitchen came the rich odor of broiling ham—Dick must be getting supper!

Gloria had a sudden feeling of distaste for the house with its reminders of last night's hilarity. She wanted to get out of it—to go somewhere. To a restaurant. Anywhere.

Above all she wanted not to be alone all evening with Dick.

She ran into the kitchen.

Dick had on one of Maggie's ging-ham aprons. He was standing before the stove, brandishing a toasting fork.

"Oh, take that thing off!" Gloria cried. "I hate to see a man in an apron, fussing around the kitchen. It doesn't look manly!"

Dick took off the apron and handed it to her.

"Well, if my wife doesn't know how to cook, and won't try to learn to cook, I can't starve, can I?" he asked. "Somebody's got to get our supper."

"I don't suppose it's occurred to you that there are restaurants in this town?" Gloria asked saucily. "And anyway it's Saturday night—we ought to go out and bat around a bit."

She turned out the gas under the broiler.

"Going out to eat is just twice as expensive as eating at home," said Dick. "And, gosh, I'm tired after staying up nearly all last night. I'm all in, as a matter of fact—Come on, Gloria, be a sport, for once, and say you'll have a fried ham sandwich at home."

"Not a chance!" Gloria cried. "I didn't have any lunch today, and I'm as hungry as a bear. So hitch up the car, old thing, and we'll drive downtown for supper—And maybe we'll get wild afterward and go to a movie eh wot?"

She ran upstairs, whistling as she went.

Dick stood alone in the bright untidy kitchen.

He was still shaky from his attack of "Wells" earlier in the week. His head and eyes ached. He was tired to the point of nausea.

He wondered how he could sit through a restaurant meal and a moving picture show afterward.

He put on his hat and went out to the garage to start the car.

Minutes in her room Gloria was pinning on a black lace hat she had bought in Montreal during her honeymoon.

Ah, she had not gone wrong on that hat! It was perfect.

It cast faint shadows under her eyes, and brought out the ivory of her skin.

She was twice as beautiful in that hat as in any other hat she ever had on her head! And why?—Because it had cost twice as much as any other one that she had ever owned.

Oh, there was no getting away from the fact that anybody could be good-looking, who had good-looking clothes!—and when you had beauty to start with as she had—well, you were just plumb crazy if you didn't insist upon beautiful clothes to bring it out! They were your due!—They were her due!—Gloria's!—And, by jinks, she would have them!

"Rikky-tikky-tavy," Gloria said when they were seated in the restaurant. "I hope you meant what you said this morning when you told me I could hire a new maid to take Maggie's place."

Dick looked up from the dinner menu.

"Why?" he asked. "You haven't hired one already, have you?"

Gloria nodded.

"I was going to talk to you about that, tonight, and it slipped my mind," Dick said. "I was going to ask you if you could get along with a laundress and cleaning woman for a while—Somehow or other, it's costing us more to live than I figured it would, and I'm no millionaire, you know."

Gloria drew lines on the tablecloth thoughtfully.

"I've hired an awfully nice-looking Swedish girl," she remarked, after a time. "She says she can do all the work in our house."

Dick gave the waiter the order for dinner.

"How much are you going to pay her?" he asked.

"Eighteen dollars a week," Gloria said bravely.

"Eighteen dollars a week!" repeated Dick. "Great Scott, Gloria, you must have lost your mind! I can't afford to pay a maid $18 a week and board her, besides! It'll cost me $100 a month, easily. I can't do it, honey—I just haven't got the money."

"I've told her to start work in the morning, and she's coming," Gloria said. "So we'll have to keep her for a little while."

She raised her limpid eyes. Across the restaurant at a corner table sat Stanley Wayburn. He was looking straight at her.
