PRECIOUS METALS IN MOUNTAINS IN BEXAR COUNTY AREA

DUBLIN, Aug. 11.—Arthur Griffith, the location of the buried mountains extending from northwest of San Antonio down through the eastern part of Bexar county and on to Corpus Christi which were recently named the Turle Mountains by the Southwest Texas Oil Men's association. L. V. J. Kimball, who spent many years in California and Colorado as a geologist in the gold and silver mines of those states, declares that the significance of these mountains should not be understood as being limited to oil alone, but that in those mountains are great quantities of gold, silver, lead, zinc and other metals that rival the richest mines of California or Colorado. Furthermore, in the northern end of these buried mountains in San Saba county, Mr. Kimball believes will be found the "Lost Mine" of which are said to be written records, which the Spaniards hid at the time of an Indian raid and which have never since been recovered.

Mr. Kimball came to San Antonio some months ago after spending many years in California and Colorado as a geologist working for big mining concerns, and has had practical field experience of many years in locating and mining the precious metals as well as lead, zinc, and other basic metals. Within three blocks of the National Bank of Commerce in San Antonio he believes he has located a vein of ore a block or more wide and extending through one of the best business sections of the city, that is richer than many of the mines being worked in California. A few miles from San Antonio Mr. Kimball has located a vein, however, which he believes will prove one of the richest veins that has ever been found in any country. He believes it is about 1,500 feet wide and has already traced it out through the country for a distance of about 20 miles, the vein being especially rich in gold, but also having considerable silver and other less valuable metals. He believes that by following this vein he will be found to lead to the "lost mine" of tradition in San Saba county which Spanish records declare was remarkably rich and which adventurous persons are said to have since spent thousands of dollars in a fruitless effort to locate.

The tradition is that on account of a raid by the Indians the mine was covered up and all traces removed to prevent the Spaniards from finding it. The Spaniards were all massacred and exact knowledge of the location of the mine was lost. Mr. Kimball believes that the knowledge of the location of the buried mountains, if scientifically used will not only be of great assistance in locating oil, which is now taking the attention largely of South Texas, but that the richest and most productive mines of their precious as well as many of the baser metals will also be found. In fact, he claims to have already located some veins that are so rich as to surpass comprehension. Arrangements are now being made to organize a company to sink a mine into one of these veins.

Mr. Kimball secured a number of specimens of ores picked up on a farm near San Antonio by the farmer who owns the place. These pieces of ore were gathered from the field as they were turned up by the plow and were saved merely because they were curious specimens and not through any knowledge that they contained valuable metals, and the owner was much surprised when told by Mr. Kimball of their real worth. The ore is known as drift ore, and is one of the evidences of the real vein.

NEW INVENTION ENABLES MAN TO FLY LIKE A BIRD

Mr. H. S. Dixon with his ornithopter ready to take flight. Have you ever wished to fly like a bird? If so, your chance has come and here is the means to that end. The machine pictured above is called an ornithopter, and it is propelled by the action of the rider himself and not by an engine. It measures 23 feet 6 inches from tip to tip and 14 feet from nose to tail. Its weight is forty-seven pounds, and a speed of from fifteen to twenty miles an hour can be maintained. H. S. Dixon is the maker, owner and patentee.

SEIN FEIN LEADER MOST ISOLATED MAN IN ALL IRELAND

Be Associated Press
SAN ANTONIO, Aug. 11.—Confirming editor of Young Ireland, and the political head of Sinn Fein, is said to be one of the most isolated and inaccessible men in Ireland. The few visitors daily received by him say they are impressed by the unpretentiousness of his surroundings. He is as difficult to see, they say, as any big American political leader. No person not known to Griffith may visit him in his office without previous arrangements made by someone high in the confidence of Sinn Fein. The situation is much the same as a stranger attempting an interview with a cabinet officer at Washington.

Believed that the irksome preliminaries have ended the stranger is taken down a side street, ushered into an unimposing doorway and led up two flights of narrow, unpainted steps to an office. Inside the front door the stranger is confronted with a pine-board partition with one small door through which he is taken. He passes through a scene familiar in any small-town newspaper into an uninviting room where Griffith holds forth. The furniture consists of a table in the middle of the room and a few chairs.

There is no necessity now or has there been for many months for Griffith to surround his movements with secrecy. It has been stated that a warrant for his arrest is ready but many leading Sinn Feiners believe government officials consider him a moderating influence and worth more directing the party's activities than looked upon as a martyr in jail. Griffith is as unassuming as his surroundings are unpretentious. To Griffith leaves outstandingly the impression that he has ceased to believe any English government in Ireland exists. The one idea left is that the Republican government is ruling the country properly but having some difficulty with an army of occupation and a number of policemen. "Our volunteers are maintaining order where representatives of the British government could not; our courts are organized and respected and other branches of our government are working smoothly," said Mr. Griffith to a correspondent. Griffith's sphere is only political, the planning and execution of force of arms being under jurisdiction of the volunteer army.

character of business relations, citizenship ties and reputes necessary to entitle them to ordinary indulgence. And in the case of these last cited individuals there were indictments to the number of fifteen, five against each one of them, and there seems to have been "arrests and commitments" but no bonds can be located. Neither, if report be true, can the accused be located.

A straw bond may be good for a man who cannot afford to run away, but a very good and sufficient bond is risky in the case of a person who cannot well afford to do anything else, having neither business affairs nor local ties to bind him.

Review the list of cases heretofore published. Note the character of charges. How many of them do you know? How many of them were of good repute, or any other kind of repute, in the community or county? How many of these bonds would you have signed? How many of these bonds would you have accepted except if the bonds were in every respect gilt edged and error proof? How many of these cases have been convicted or acquitted? It seems that there have been, of these particular forty-seven cases, six dismissed, no acquittals, two convictions, two given suspended sentences and one fine.

It certainly seems that there is something radically wrong, and naturally the question arises as to who is to blame and what are you going to do about it?

The best of men make mistakes, but it seems that there have been entirely too many mistakes in connection with the appearance bond business in Eastland county.

Who is to blame? It is the sheriff's business to accept and file these bonds. He doesn't have to accept them unless convinced that they are good. Any sheriff may be imposed upon in the matter of accepting a bond, but he should exercise every possible precaution to prevent this. It is the duty of the sheriff to file every bond with the district clerk, and it is the duty of the district clerk to preserve these bonds when filed with him.

Fifteen bonds seem to be missing, and to have never been filed in that office. Where are they? It is the duty of the county attorney to see that all bonds are free of fatal defects, and to see that forfeited bonds are promptly collected, or proceedings to that end instituted. And again, how does it happen that in the cases where defendants failed to appear so many "wrong bonds were called," and judgments nisi afterwards set aside because of this fact? These questions are asked solely for the purpose of eliciting information.

Somewhere, for some reason, there seems to have been some mighty bad appearance bond blunders in Eastland county.

Who is to blame? What are you going to do about it?

ITAL TO EXPLOIT HONEY INDUSTRY TO SAVE SUGAR

Rome, Aug. 11.—Italy is devising means to alleviate the beet sugar shortage. She has been urged to put more bees at work producing honey.

Italy in 1917 had nearly 67,000 miles of railways at regular intervals along the lines are little houses where the railway employees, signalmen, track walkers and repairmen live.

The manager of the National Institute for Agrarian Assistance recently recommended that they each be given a hive of bees. In conformity with the suggestion the experiment is to be begun at once on the lines in the province of Rome and, if successful, it will be extended to all the railways of Italy.

NOTE.—This is the second of a series of articles calculated to give more or less intimate sidelights on the personalities of the great and near-great. MAURICE MAETERLINCK

Swathed in the thick folds of a dressing robe, his misshapen toes only half hidden by crash-cloth slippers, Maeterlinck looked like anything else but the eminent Belgian poet, playwright, thinker and seer I had expected to see, when first I rested my eyes on him in his private car at the Kansas City railway terminals last spring.

Disillusionment. But the fair bauble I reached for turned to mocking ashes in my hand.

I registered much the same reaction I had experienced at one previous time when I precipitated myself into the dressing room of an exceedingly beautiful actress, only to turn away crestfallen and disillusioned when I discovered her raking make-up grease from wrinkles in her forehead, her scant hair bound in unseemly knots by kid-curlers.

Maeterlinck speaks very little English. But he can understand much that is said in the harsher language. At the time I met him he was making a tour for a moving picture company as a means of exploiting his personality.

He continually complained of the water, the food, the air. As many as ten times during the day he bewailed the absence of wine. When addressing one of the gatherings called at different points in the city in his honor, he would affect an air of saccharine suavity, only to return again to the automobile, whimpering and scolding. When finally the Belgian consul, at Kansas City invited the party to his home and furnished all who were inclined with a very good wine shipped from Belgium in embassy bags, Maeterlinck, the poet and ascetic, swilled it in great quantities, breathing heavily as he did so.

His Joyful Wife. With Madame Maeterlinck it was different. She is one of those rare women with a heart and mind wherein the fires of youth and the joy of living eternally burn. She bounded lightly out of the automobile at stops, took whole flights of stairs on the run, skipped down aisles in auditoriums and dining rooms and generally conducted herself in the manner of a tom-boy hoyden out on a lark.

Maeterlinck, as a final inglorious attribute, was what newspaper men designate as a "publicity hound." He avoird sought the society of reporters in the party, fawning on them collectively and individually. His was the repulsive department of a man who plays the part of a sycophant to men he considers of a subordinate scale, but men who may be turned to a good use to achieve his own selfish ends withal.

At one stopping point in the tour of the city his features contorted and he exclaimed sharply in French when a woman approached him and asked him to sign one of his own photographs that it might be auctioned off at a benefit for some cause or other. A moment later his face was illumined with smiles and he signed the photograph in a wholehearted, cheerful way.

O'Grady's Philosophy. I never recall the day I spent in proximity to the great Belgian poet without also recalling the words of Steve O'Grady, a veteran newspaper man, then on the staff of the Kansas City Post, who, as he left the taxi in which we were returning to our office in front of the Post building, said:

"Nothing is great but God."

Criticism, Meagre Salaries, Cause Parson Shortage

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 11.—Constant criticism to which preachers are subjected, low salaries, the lure of commercialism and the migration from farm to city help contribute to the dearth of ministers, according to Dr. James D. Rankin, professor of theology and sociology in the Pittsburg Theological seminary.

"From the information I have there are about enough ministers in the United Presbyterian church to fill acceptably three-fourths of the pulpits," said Dr. Rankin. "I believe the same condition holds good in most evangelical churches."

"There are several causes to which this condition may be traced. One is the spirit of materialism, which places the rich man ahead of the good man, and makes the man of wealth or social or political position a leader in the community, rather than the minister of the gospel. Formerly the minister was the leader. The term 'parson' originally meant 'the person' of the community."

"Ministers are being criticised by their congregations. I have known families to dissuade sons from entering the ministry because they did not wish to see them constantly criticised. A man in most walks of life does not have to contend with such annoyances."

"The passing of the family altar with consequent weakening of the religious spirit also has its effect. It used to be customary for a father and mother to urge boys to become preachers, but this is seldom the case now. Most parents want to see their sons get into something that will pay them more money."

Salaries have been going up in the ministry for the past few years but, I believe, not in the proportion they have in other callings and especially in the business world. A young man by choosing a business career will be earning a salary much sooner and probably will make more at the end of seven or eight years than the minister will at any time in his life.

"The movement from the country to the cities tends to reduce the number of boys who have many opportunities to make candidates for the ministry. The city money. The country boy, as a rule, has more time for meditation, meets fewer temptations and seems to take more naturally to the ministry than the city youth."

"A minister soon becomes too old to suit most congregations and he is discarded at a period of life when men in many callings are at the height of their careers. Only in the last few years have the churches begun to provide pensions for their superannuated ministers."

Radical discontent is shaking Italy, and Premier Giolitti is finding it increasingly difficult to keep the ship of state on an even keel. LONDON, Aug. 11.—That old, old slander about the Englishwoman's big feet, which has some groundwork of fact, is about to be dispelled by American shoes.

As the American claims to spot the Englishwoman by her feet, so the English spot the American woman by her pointed shoes. And now "dagger-like" American shoes are coming in from the States and Englishwomen are buying them.

"The narrow long shoe will be popular here," says a big dealer. "It takes away the look of bulkiness and makes the foot appear more graceful."

An Evil Cuckoo— Is the Bird They Call the Swoose

International News Service

LONDON, Aug. 11.—A bird prodigy of evil and hybrid character is the despair of a Norfolk farm. It rejoices in the name of the "swoose"—a portmanteau word indicating its origin, for its father was a swan and its mother was a goose.

This ill-assorted pair had three children—three "swooses"—one of which did not properly develop and died. The other two still rule the roost. They partake almost equally of the two characters. Both are bigger than any goose and have real swan necks, which they curl and rub against their backs in the true swan-like manner. Their upper beak or nose is a compromise between the Roman nose of the swan and the Greek nose of the goose.

It is believed that the like of them has rarely been seen. But of late their character has been relapsing into such savagery as may prove their ruin. The spring season, in the romance of which they cannot share, fills them with insatiate fury, not seldom culminating in murder.

The rage inherited from their father, associating with their mother's petulance, creates such a temper that they kill the ducks, which they can do with a single blow, pursue the hens, and make such demonstrations that even their human awe of their fearsome wrath. If you owners confess to fears and speak with want especially to abuse a man for his temper you now call him a "swoose." It is the culminating insult, and seems likely to take a place in the language. The verb "to swoose"—along the lines of the verb "to grouse"—may be expected

Wet Glasses Put Under Ban, State Drug Inspectors

W. R. Davis and Joe Jayne, inspectors from the state department of food and drug inspection, were in Ranger yesterday and today. They left for Strawn this morning.

In company with W. H. Stowe, local sanitary inspector, they made an inspection of the conditions of the city and according to Mr. Stowe found that Ranger merchants and druggists were complying with the law in every respect. The inspectors told Mr. Stowe that this was the first visit their department had ever made to Ranger.

The inspectors instructed Mr. Stowe to insist that all soda fountains and restaurants wipe the glasses dry that they use for serving drinks instead of rinsing them in water and using them wet, as is now the custom. This ruling, Mr. Stowe explains, comes under his department and will be enforced.

Mr. Olmes, with Mr. Baehre, is classed as an expert in this work and has been in charge of a similar property in Little Rock, in which Mr. Poe is interested also.

LLOYD GEORGE TO DEAL WITH LIQUOR QUESTION

LONDON, Aug. 11.—Bonar Law, leader of the house of commons, says the Lloyd George government will deal with the liquor traffic during the present session. He says:

"The government's aim is to retain, insofar as possible, some of the advantages of greater temperance attained during the war through restricted hours of sale of liquor and lessened alcoholic content of beverages."

"There is no intention to do more than prevent sale of alcoholic drinks before meal times, and to give public houses a higher tone."

"State purchase and operation of breweries and public houses, as advocated by labor members, will not be considered. Local option for English counties, after the plan in force this year in Scotland, likewise will be ignored."

What's done as much as anything else to fill up the movie houses

LOOK at the crowds that step out of their cars in front of the movies every summer evening.

The movie managers would be renting half of their theatres for store space, if it weren't for the automobile.

It is typical of Americans that they took to the automobile as a matter of course—just as they have to the movies and to every other great invention of the last half century.

And the same thing has happened everytime. Taking things as they come is a fine way to foster waste and extravagance.

As regards tires, the comeback is about due. People are pretty near through paying for something that isn't there when they look for it.

What a man pays for in a tire is quality—not a limited number of miles or the privilege of getting a rebate in case the miles don't come up to the limit.

U. S. Tires are guaranteed as to quality—with no limitation of mileage.

And that holds just as good for the small car tire as for the biggest U. S. Tire we've got. There's only one standard of quality with U. S.—and the size of the car has nothing whatever to do with it.

We represent U. S. Tires in this town. You'll find it worth while to talk to us before you buy any more tires.

RANGER MAN HAS HISTORIC COPY OF NEW YORK "POST"

A copy of the New York Morning Post published Friday, Nov. 7, 1783, is in the possession of J. M. Wilson, of Hollister, Cal., formerly of Ranger, who is in the city visiting friends. Mr. Wilson stated that the paper came into his possession about six years ago when he, in the capacity of a dealer in new and second hand furniture, bought the effects of an old couple and it was among them. He said he did not know whether this is an original copy or a reprint. However, in any case, it is a true replica of the newspapers of those days and is very interesting. The wording is of the old English style that uses an "f" where we now use an "s." The big bold type found in the present day newspaper is entirely missing. Such emphasis as is used in the advertisements are small italics. The type of the reading matter according to printers in the Times office is that which is still extensively used and is known as Caslon and was one of the first classes ever cut. The columns of the antique paper are thirteen ems wide, which is the width used by the present day newspapers. Beneath the title of the paper is found a line which reads: "Printed by Morton and Horner, No. 7 Water street, between the Coffee House and the Old Slip."

The farewell address of George Washington to his soldiers is printed verbatim, the editor, however, having in mind a possible refutation from some one headed the address in this manner: "The following piece was handed us by a gentleman from Newburgh, who assured us of its genuineness."

It is to be deduced from the advertisement running in the old newspaper that merchants of that day, as well as this, believed in the value of advertising and also believed that it was a good scheme to offer bargains for cash. Cullimore & Sandler offer: "Mess beef for sale cheap for cash."

Groceries and ironmongery and hardware are also offered cheap for cash. Christopher Lewis and Lents state that he will sell only for ready money. The paper contains four pages about half of which is in advertisements.

Blanton Thanks Constituents for Hearty Support

Eastland, in support of its own candidate, R. N. Grisham, was the only county in the Seventeenth congressional district, to give him a majority in the race with Thomas L. Blanton, for a seat in the national house of representatives.

In a letter received by the Times, Mr. Blanton thanks his constituents for the support he received:

"I am under renewed deep and lasting obligations to my loyal friends for their dependable support. I deem my splendid majority of 11,217 in the district as simply remarkable. With a majority of over five votes to one in such large representative counties as Burnet and Runnels proves that it was the new stranger population that caused me to lose, even by a small vote, Eastland county, as I carried by a substantial majority every other county in the district, carrying eighteen out of nineteen counties. Organized opposition worked for my defeat in every county. No greater effort was ever made against any candidate. Not half so much time was ever set and circulated before to bring about the defeat of any candidate for congress. Not one-third so many organizations ever before sought the defeat of a congressman. My good constituents will never know just how many forces and combinations there were actively and concertedly seeking my political ruin. My tremendous majority demonstrates that the people do appreciate and will reward faithful service."

"Honest members of organized labor will some day realize that after all, instead of being their enemy, I have been their loyal faithful friend, seeking only to protect them against their own worst enemy—selfish, lawless anarchy."

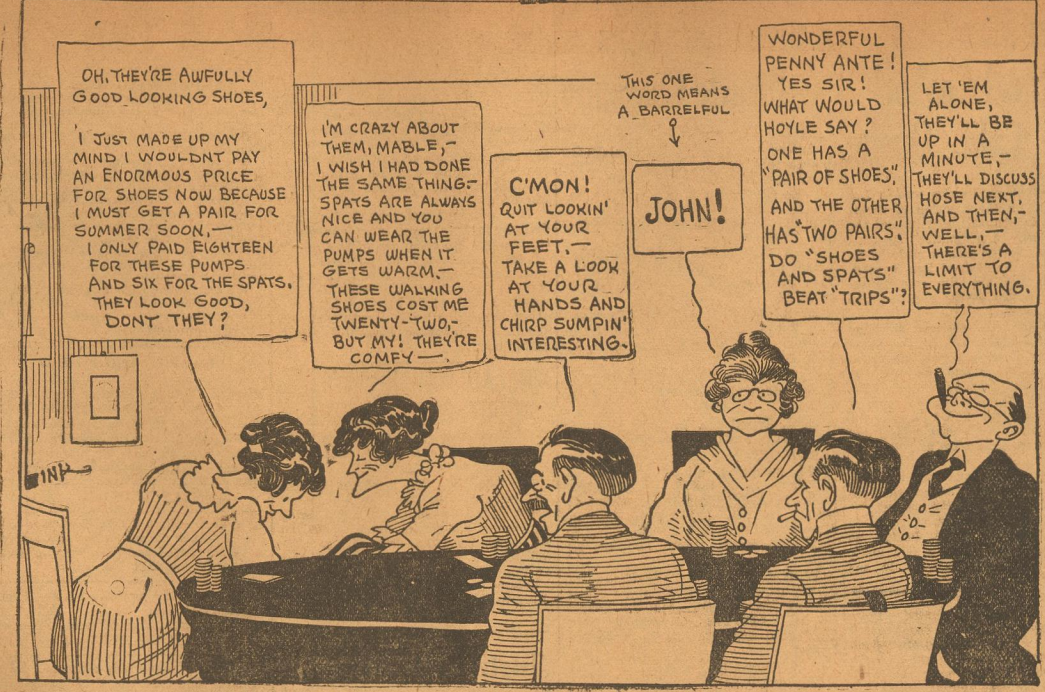

"The new voters in my district, too, will some day realize that I have been cruelly misrepresented, maligned and treated with great injustice, and that they formed a wrong opinion of me. I ask that they do not believe prejudiced reports, but in the future look only to the entire Daily Congressional Record for my official acts."

"I leave Texas in a few days for Washington to resume my work in cleaning up the many departments there, and hope to repay my constituents, those who voted for and against me, with the very best service of which one man is capable. Whenever I may serve any person I hope you will freely call on me. I thank you with all my heart for your confidence and support."

Sincerely your friend, THOMAS L. BLANTON.

Hunting Bargains in Ranger

Bargains discovered in trips through Ranger shops and department stores are here presented briefly, for the benefit of Times readers. If any of the articles described meets your needs, you may learn the shop where it may be purchased by calling the Times, telephone 224, and giving the shopping editor the number of the paragraph which tells of your particular bargain.

We of the bargain counter band must admit that we sometimes forget our quest for bargains when we see a window full of such exquisite creations as I saw today. Even though there was not a "For Sale" sign in that shop I couldn't get myself away until I had had a look at everything on display. Negligees and Billy Burkes just like the movie actresses wear and black and dark red georgette underthings that would certainly have shocked your sense of propriety a few years ago, but now they are "simply wonderful." No chance to copy one these days, because try as you will there is no way to tell how they are cut or put together. Beads, braids, embroideries, and plaits form the new trimming designs.

On your next shopping tour keep this in mind: A local shop is selling these rompers and dresses, in sizes up to six years at a 30 per cent reduction. These are of the better quality of pongee and linen and prettily designed, each with a bit of embroidery or hand work on it. It looks as though the shop keepers were all on a bet to see who could make the biggest reduction on organdie dresses. The one I saw this morning is, I believe, the winner up to date. Organdie and dotted swiss ones in values up to $50.50, are now selling for $13.85. These don't need the word "bargain" attached.

QUESTION NOW IS, CAN YOU DISTURB 'PEACE' OF CABARET?

L. H. Flewellen, police judge will be called upon to decide in the case of W. M. Warren now pending for trial, whether using loudtalk in a cabaret is a disturbance of the peace and whether abusive language use toward one of the "ladies of the silver tray" may be construed as an insult to her.

It is expected that the defendant in the case will try to prove that the peace of a cabaret cannot be broken and that unchristian language there cannot be construed as an insult.

Warren was arrested yesterday by the police department and charged with abusive language and a disturbance of the peace. He made bond to appear for trial which has been set for Friday morning.

Men conductors and motormen on the street cars in Tokio, Japan, have become so independent that the company is now entertaining a plan to replace them with men. The Tokio Street Motor Car company has employed women conductors on its buses for some time with economy and increased efficiency.

BERRY NALLS QUILTS PLACE AS DEPUTY UNDER LAWRENCE

Special to The Times. EASTLAND, Aug. 10.—Berry Nalls, deputy under Sheriff R. E. Lawrence, today submitted his resignation, with this letter of explanation:

"Never in the history of Eastland county were the people more in need of good officers than at present especially the peace officers who look after the enforcement of the laws."

"Report comes to me that the sheriff is being criticised over the county because of some of the deputies now serving under Mr. Lawrence. Particularly it seems, in this criticism aimed at myself. I have endeavored to treat every body right and do no one any wrong. I have heard of no criticism of my official or personal acts as a deputy sheriff, if it seems that persons who dislike me have endeavored to prejudice uninformed voters against Sheriff Lawrence because of my being a deputy. As evidence of the fact that I do not want to fill a position subjecting as good a man as Sheriff Lawrence to any criticism, nor be at all instrumental in his defeat, and having the interest and welfare of the people of Eastland county more deeply at interest than I have my own interest, for the people of this county have certainly treated me right in so far as my personal and official relations with them have been concerned, I am tendering my resignation as a deputy sheriff."

"In doing so I wish to state that I came to Eastland county as a state ranger, ordered here by the government two years ago, and have been working under Sheriff Lawrence a little more than twelve months."

"I have been an officer in this state for more than fourteen years and have never worked for a better man than Mr. Lawrence, nor one who more faithfully endeavored to enforce the law. During my connection with the sheriff's department there have been apprehended and placed in jail approximately 600 criminals

Many of these being bootleggers, and many still have been captured and destroyed, as well as numerous "choke" joints, and every gambling house coming to the knowledge of the sheriff's department has been raided and the furniture destroyed. Practically every bit of this work has been directed by Sheriff Lawrence, and much of it has been attended to by him in person. Much of this work remains to be done, and the people could have no better man nor better qualified officer than Sheriff Lawrence to continue this work, and it is my firm belief that the citizens of Eastland county would make a mistake to change sheriffs at this time.

"My resignation is tendered with ill feeling to no one, but for the sole purpose of eliminating myself as a factor in the situation, if it be true that I am a factor."

Respectfully,
"BERRY NALLS."
