FRECKLES AND HIS FRIENDS

JOHNNY RIVERS STOPS DELOUIS IN FIFTH ROUND

Frantically Cheering Crowds Let Down When "Champs" Exchange Love Licks.

Whether the former champions of Oklahoma and Los Angeles respectively really indulged in a game of parlor croquet or tiddledewinks in order to get warmed up after their exchange of love licks in the so-called feature bout in the legion arena last night or not, as Referee Bobby Burns and some twelve hundred fight fans seemed to think they should, there is no mistaking the fact that those fans numbering around four or five hundred of the gentler sex, saw one real, honest-to-goodness, snappy, scrappy bout which ended in the fifth round with Al DeLouis of Syracuse, N. Y., taking the count and smiling Johnny Rivers of Fort Worth being proclaimed victor.

Save for that last event which consisted largely in a dialogue between the referee and the Californian in which the referee insisted on a boxing match and not a school hopping match, the whole evening was one round after another of real scrapping. Lee Burns and George Hammond led off with their 83 pounds each of fighting blood, bone and muscle. Egis Burns, 110, and Bill Kelley, 112, followed and these in turn were followed by Jimmy Tibbs and Slick Berry, each weighing 125 pounds, as the preliminaries to the evening's big timber, in three far-reaching, seldom-hitting but altogether snappy scraps.

The main events opened with a hard-hitting, rough-and-tumble fight tintured by a bit of science here and there between Jack Ecranbrack, sometimes of Houston but now of Ranger, and Dicky Green of Dallas, whom the fight fans have nicknamed "Oak Cliff" with the crowd about equally divided between favorites and Ecranbrack winner of the four rounds. Following this was the bout between Johnny Rivers with the smile that won't come off, and DeLouis, nimble as a kitten and game as a red chicken, but unable to stand up before the barricade from the Panther City's iron arms. DeLouis was stopped before the end of the fifth by a series of hard head and body blows and the crowd gave vent to wild enthusiasm as the Texan smiled back at them, an easy victor.

Before Announcer J. B. Heister introduced Roy Reid, erstwhile champion of Los Angeles, and Tony Storie, former champion of Oklahoma, he presented Senor Vicente Aguilar of Mexico City, who will meet Storie, voted winner in that last bout, next Monday night in the same arena. And fight fans say Storie, faced by this man from across the Rio Grande, will lay off his cat paw punches and punishment of sole leather and mat and do some real boxing. However that may be, the expectations of the crowd certainly got a cold water douche in that last widely exploited 10-round bout. There are those who say Storie really did hurt his California antagonist once, and looked sorry for it all the remainder of the evening. Others a plenty say the Californian might have given Storie a little jolt or two had he not loved him so well. Anyway the crowd thought Storie winner. He hopped the farthest, they claim.

All feature fights are to be on Monday night when weather permits, according to last night's announcement.

FOR WORKING PEOPLE.

The best of workers get out of sorts when the liver fails to act. They feel languid, half-sick, "blue" and discouraged and think they are getting lazy. The FLAPPER WIFE by Beatrice Burton © 1925, M.E.A. SERVICE INC.

THE STORY SO FAR:

Gloria Gordon, beautiful flapper, marries Dick Gregory, a struggling lawyer. Her idea of marriage is fun and fine clothes, but no work or children.

She refuses to cook and keep house. She hires Ranghild Swanson to do it for her, although Dick says they can't afford a maid. And she swamps him with debts for her clothes and an automobile.

Gloria becomes infatuated with Stanley Wayburn, an out-of-work actor. Her "jazzy" friend, May Seymour, wife of Dr. John Seymour, warns her not to be seen with Wayburn.

She tells Gloria how she, herself, has been snubbed because of her foolish affair with Jim Carewe.

Dick becomes seriously ill with pneumonia. During the days of his slow recovery, Gloria sees a great deal of Wayburn, who makes violent love to her. He borrows $200 of Dick's money from Gloria, and goes to New York to be leading man for Sonya Chotek, a Russian actress.

Dr. Seymour orders Dick away for a rest. His mother, who has been ill, also plans to go with him. But Gloria says that if Mother Gregory does, she won't. Dick refuses to tell his mother that Gloria doesn't want her with them. So Gloria stays at home—just long enough to pack to go to New York, where her friend, Kit Cameron, is on the stage.

Gloria goes to see Wayburn. But he "turns her down" and tells her he has just married Sonya Chotek.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

Gloria took the news of Wayburn's marriage as she might have taken the news of his death—standing very straight and still. Too hurt to cry! Too shocked to say a word!

So he had married Sonya Chotek yesterday.

There was a strained look in her eyes as she turned them from Sonya's broken photograph to Wayburn's face. They searched it as if it could tell her all she wanted to know.

At last she found her voice. "How long have you been in love with her?"

Wayburn smiled. "For quite a long time, if you must know," he said. "Months."

It began to dawn upon Gloria that she had been treated shamefully by Wayburn.

He had made love to her when he had really been in love with Sonya Chotek. And he had borrowed money from her to follow Sonya Chotek here and marry her!

Gloria groaned aloud. Oh, what a fool she had made of herself! For deep in her heart, she had always known that Stan truly didn't care about her.

Perhaps if she had scorned him, laughed at him, he would be on his knees to her still! For that was the way with men: they wanted most what they couldn't have! They spent their lives wishing for the moon. The fruit that hung highest on the tree—that was the fruit they craved. The woman who belonged to somebody else was the woman they desired above all other women!

She had been too easy for Wayburn. She had always been at his beck and call, just as she was here now, this very minute!

"You coward!" she flared up at him, "all the time you were telling me how crazy you were about me, you knew you were going to marry another woman! Why, you're nothing but a crook!"

Wayburn's smile widened.

And all the time you were letting me make love to you; you were married to another man!" he said. "You were doing a little double-crossing, yourself, I'd say!"

Gloria couldn't find a word to say. She knew that he was telling the truth—unvarnished, and unpleasant to listen to!

"The wonder to me is that Gregory ever married you," Wayburn went on. "I can't understand any man ever taking you seriously, Gloria. I never did, you know. Not for a minute. I had the low-down on you right from the start."

"The low-down on me?" Gloria asked him. "What do you mean?"

"Oh, I'd seen your kind of woman before. The world's full of them."

Wayburn went on insolently. "Lighten up! That's the way men size you up! Dolls to play around with for a while."

Gloria picked up her hat and began to put it on. She didn't have to stay here to be insulted any longer.

Wayburn spoke again. "You're a member of the great sisterhood that takes everything and gives nothing in return," he said.

That stung Gloria to anger. "You say that! You!" she cried. "What have I ever taken from you? I'd like to know! Nothing but a lot of applause!"

"I wasn't talking about myself. I was speaking of your husband," Wayburn said clearly. "You've never made him any decent return for what he's given you. Have you?"

"You're a great one to talk," Gloria answered. "You were glad enough to ride around in the car he'd given me, weren't you? You didn't mind spoiling my life with him just for the fun of the thing, did you? And now you have the nerve to pull this holier-than-thou stuff on me! Oh, it's too funny."

Her voice rose shrilly on a high wave of hysteria. She laughed and laughed, until she was weak. She lay limply in her chair, with her arms hanging at her sides. She was beyond tears done for.

She heard the door of the room open. She looked up. Wayburn was going out. She stood up then and laid one hand on his arm. But he pulled away from her. "No," he said. The door closed on him.

Moments ticked by. After a while she pulled herself together, and got up to go.

Gloria had no feeling in her as she left Stanley Wayburn's boarding house. She was so terribly hurt that she was numb to her own pain.

She walked along block after block without knowing what she was doing. She stopped sometimes, to look into shop windows—but only because she had always loved to look into shop windows.

It was after seven when she got back to her hotel. She walked past the open door of the dining room. Her own room was dark.

Without turning on the lights, she flung herself down on the hard hotel bed. The best thing that could have happened would have been to cry herself to sleep. But she could neither cry nor sleep.

An hour passed. She got up and undressed. Her movements were slow, and she moved without a sound. She felt as if the person she loved had died, and that the body was in the next room—just beyond the wall. She must be very still.

Toward morning she fell asleep.

When she awoke the sun was high.

Gloria lay in bed trying to make up her mind whether to go home or to go and hunt a job in New York.

She looked into the mirror. Her face showed no sign of the strain she had been through.

And Gloria was sure she had never been prettier in her whole life than she was that May morning, when she rang the doorbell of Kit Cameron's apartment in Fifty-ninth street.

Kit was having breakfast in bed.

She was in black satin pajamas. A green ribbon banded her hair that was like black satin above her black eyes. Her smooth skin was the color of cream.

"Why, it's little Glory Gordon!" she exclaimed, when the elderly maid led Gloria into the big, airy bedroom.

"Bring another cup and some fresh coffee for Miss Gordon, please, Elsie." Then she turned to Gloria. "What in the world are you doing here?" she asked.

"Hunting a job," Gloria answered briefly.

"A job! What do you want with a job?" Kit asked in surprise. "I thought you'd married a millionaire back home."

"So did I," Gloria laughed. "But I got stung." Kit took her hand sympathetically.

BILIOUS ATTACKS

From Which Kentucky Man Suffered Two or Three Times a Month, Relieved by Black-Draught.

Lawrenceburg, Ky.—Mr. J. P. Nevin, a local coal dealer and farmer, about two years ago learned of the value of Theford's Black-Draught liver medicine, and now he says:

"Until then I suffered with severe bilious attacks that came on two or three times each month. I would get nauseated. I would have dizziness and couldn't work."

"I would take pills until I was worn-out with them. I didn't seem to get relief. After taking the pills my bowels would act a couple or three times, then I would be very constipated."

"A neighbor told me of Black-Draught and I began its use. I never have found so much relief as it gave me. I would not be without it for anything."

"It seemed to cleanse my whole system and make me feel like new. I would take a few doses—get rid of the bile and have my usual clear head, feel full of pep and could do twice the work."
