Child Has Narrow

Only the quick action of the driver of a delivery car saved little Martha Evalyn Carr from a serious if not accident Thursday afternoon according to the opinion of her father, D. W. Carr, and M. Blankenship, grocer, in front of whose store on East Main street, Ranger, the accident occurred. The child had run out into the street after some play-thing when the delivery vehicle came around the curve. She was squarely in front of it, it is said, when the driver swerved to the right so only the fender hit her.

She was cut and bruised considerably, but physicians say her injuries

The Internal Revenue Bureau handles far more of the government's money than any other of its agencies, and if anything is wrong there it's apt to be wrong on an exceedingly large scale.

Senator Couzens says plainly that such actually is the case— perhaps not that there's punishable dishonesty but that the system lends itself to grave abuses and that these abuses do indeed . . .

THE Couzens committee hasn't succeeded in getting very deeply into the Internal Revenue Bureau's many secrets.

Its workings are vastly complicated, voluminous and mys-

Couzens was handicapped by the presence on his committee of a journment.

The Old Guard senators are likely to suggest that the country might be interested in knowing just how a man with so much wealth as Couzens could get his tax so low. Of course, Couzens' honesty in filing a return is not challenged in the least, but as a means of checkmating his activities they may attempt to turn the investigation to the question of tax-exempt securities—the favorite tax reducing method of million-

Many Now With Remarkable Juccess.

The stories of the suffering and pain endured by women for the sake of modesty remind us of some of the tories of the cruelties practiced by he ancients. Yet. knowing that they are bound to suffer still more as ime goes on, they prefer to keep heir sickness and pain to themselves, trying many things which have no merit, rather than even to discuss it with their best friends. This results n such a condition that pain becomes a regular habit with them and they almost forcet that they were ever free from it.

May Seymour, whose husband, Dr. John Seymour, killed himself because of her love affair with Jim Carewe, returns to her home town after a year's absence.

She comes late one night to the home of her lawyer, Dick Gregory, and Gloria, his wife. She tells them how the ugly story of her past has followed her everywhere. And so she has made up her mind to go to Europe where no one will know her.

She turns over the sale of her house to Ulysses X. Forgan, a wealthy widower. And she begs Dick to sell her stocks and bonds at once for whatever they will bring. All she wants, she says is enough money to dress the part of a rich widow so that she can land a husband with

A week later with $8,000 in her handbag, May goes to Atlantic City for a rest before sailing. There she meets a divorcee, Carlotta Frolking, and her friends, Dan Sprague and Herbert Waterbury.

Dressed for the part of a wistful widow, May lays siege to Water-bury's heart. He gives two or three parties in her honor, and shows her pictures of his houses. Sure that he is the millionaire husband she is looking for, May leads him to believe she has much more money than the $12,000 Forgan says he can get for

One day Waterbury asks May to have a tete-a-tete luncheon with him. He tells her that he loves her passionately, but doesn't ask her to

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY: May was sick with angry disapcointment as she said goodby to Her bert Waterbury and went up to her room. Taking off her wraps, she gave the mirror a long, close scruyoung and beautiful woman dressed in expensive clothes, wearing expensive jewelry.

Why then had Herby failed to ask her to marry him when he had told her he loved her? The woman in the mirror would make a desirable wife for any man, even a millionaire like Herby!

"Who's the woman — Francie crazy about another woman!"

"How long have you been in love with Dan?" she asked.

"Twelve years," Carlotta answered dismally. "I was down in Mexico with my husband—my husband's a bridge builder, you know. And Dan was there with some oil people."

But Carlotta's weak little mouth was there with some oil people."

But Carlotta's weak little mouth dropped. "You think so, now," she had probably decided not to take a chance of unhappiness, by marrying the widow of a suicide! could the other day, when you were swimming together! Oh, I'm not blind, you know! I saw what you ware doing?" Yes, that must be it.

Yes, that must be it.

A sudden wave of hopelessness submerged May. She threw herself upon the bed, and wept long and silently for herself.

At last she dried her eyes and by the dried her eyes and by the state of the wall-telephone by the wall-telephone by the wall-telephone by the state of the wall-telephone by the wall

At last she dried her eyes and propped up on one elbow, looked out at the gray rain. A tap came at the She dragged herself across Carlotta Frolking stood there.

"You're the very person I wanted to see!" May told her, as she shut the door. "Have you, by any chance, told Herby Waterbury about my husband killing himself? If you have, please be honest and tell me so!"

But Carlotta shook her blond head vigorously. "Indeed I have not!" she said, choosing a cigaret from the blue enameled case that swung at her wrist. "I swear it, on a stack of seven Bibles!"

She struck a match to her cigaret,

"Can you tell I've been crying?" she asked May suddenly.

May nodded. "You can see for yourself that I have!" she answered.
"I suppose we've both been bawling about the same thing, too—men!"
"Oh, sure," Carlotta answered with her careless slang. "Tell me your troubles first, and then I'll tell you mine."

But May slowly shook her head.
"Mine aren't the kind that can be told right now," she said. "So go ahead with yours—didn't Dan propose to you last night? Is that what's wrong?"

Carlotta walked over to the win-dow, and stood with her back to May, apparently absorbed in her view of the ocean.

"N—not exactly," she answered presently. "But he told me he's in love with another woman. Now, can you imagine his having the nerve to say a thing like that to me, after all these years?"

She turned suddenly to May, and

Vigilantes

These three youthful vigilantes-

Vincent Calvert, 18 (above), John Ryland, 18 (center), and Ben Wil-liams, 22 (above)—are being held on first degree murder charges at Birmingham, Ala. They didn't like a young man who was courting Ryland's sister so they fired a shot at an auto in which they believed the couple was riding. It proved to be another car and the shot killed old baby. Calvert, a minister's son, admits firing the shot.

Agnes Lorraine Creel, a six-months-

LONDON.—Stuck away in amateur laboratories here and throughout Europe, enthusiasts are busy trying to perfect a "Death Ray" that will actually kill.

One such ray "invented" here some time back killed a dog. Another killed a cow. Both manifestations, however, failed to bring wealth and fame to the respective inventors, because it was proved that the next tried to give some form of demonstration abroad. The adminals died from other causes than the "ray."

In the case of the dog, the inventor disappeared. The most frequent suggestion put forward is to stop the engines of airplanes and thus put the airplane out of action.

The principal method is to stop the magneto from functioning. In some way energy is to be directed by the character of the supposed death rays has changed.
