ELDER OF TWO BOYS HUNTING BADLY WOUNDED

Accidentally Shot by Younger Companion Near Home in Caddo.

CADDO, Oct. 2.—James Tyler, 14, of this place, is in a sanitarium at Breckenridge where he was taken Thursday for treatment after having been shot while up in a tree after a squirrel. George White, aged 8, while on the ground and upon seeing the squirrel, fired at it with a 20-gauge shotgun loaded with No. 6 shot, missing the squirrel, but the shot took effect in Tyler's left side, shoulder and arm. The wounded boy is a brother of Bob Tyler of Caddo and is attending school here. His parents live elsewhere. He is in a critical condition, but has a fighting chance for his life.

Ranger Angler's 5 1/2-Foot Tarpon Is Now Mounted

Few fishermen are able to substantiate their fish yarns as is Dr. A. N. Harkrider, Ranger fisherman, who went to Aransas Pass, made a big catch and wired the news back home. Now the actual dimensions of the fish the Ranger angler landed may be had by going to the Oil City pharmacy and measuring its mounted skin, which graces the rear of the store. And when the measurement is made and comparisons made with the dentist's wired statement as printed in the Times several weeks ago, it will be seen that they tally to the fraction of an inch. The fish is exactly five and one-half feet long. True, the doctor says he caught another fish half a foot longer and it got away. And who shall doubt, once they see the one that didn't get away? Why the proof that that Ranger fisherman caught that fish the skin of which is now to be seen by all beholders, is as conclusive as even more conclusive if possible than the proof that a cowboy brought that he had killed a snake as long as a stake rope. "I've got the stake rope right here to prove it," he told them. And after that nobody doubted him. In the case of the Ranger angler, there is Charles Walts, who was right there at the hotel on Aransas Pass when the doctor made his catch, and he saw the very boat in which he landed it.

PRINCESS OF TEXAS AT TULSA EXPOSITION IN LINE TO BE CHOSEN QUEEN PETROLIA OF 1926 CONGRESS

Miss Ruby Morgan, pretty daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Morgan of Corsicana, named "Princess Texas" for the third annual International Petroleum Exposition and Congress which is being held in Tulsa, Oklahoma, October 1-10 inclusive. Miss Morgan was chosen from a large field of beautiful Texas girls entered from various oil-producing centers in the State. She will enter the contest for "Queen Petrolia," which will be held the final day of the Exposition in which a total of fourteen princesses will compete. Corsicana people are united in backing "Princess Texas" to assist in winning for her the crown. She is 22 years of age, has blue eyes, golden hair and a peach complexion.

Shadow Is Thrown On the Glass Door

One wet and windy night, Dick Gregory was looking up his dick on his way upstairs to bed. It was then he noticed there was a shadow on the glass of the front door. There was a light tapping on the pane. That's from the first installment of May Seymour (Footloose), the sequel to The Flapper Wife. This new story starts in this newspaper today. The readers now read about the return of May Seymour—Gloria's baby—May's determined intention to find love, love from a man with plenty of money.

NEXT YEAR'S FAIR WILL BE TALKED OVER

Eastland Citizens Called to Meet Tonight to Hear Report of Work. A mass meeting of Eastland citizens called for this evening at 7:30 at the American Legion Athletic club, at which time a full report will be made on the Central West Texas fair by the officials of that organization. Plans for the fair next year will also be discussed at this meeting. The fair this year, while it was a success from every standpoint, was organized and put over under great difficulties. But these were anticipated. Next year a better and bigger fair can be put on with even less effort than was put forth this year. The Central West Texas fair is now pretty well advertised, especially with the people of Eastland and adjoining counties and with the promise of a bigger and better show next year, much more interest can be expected in it. It was a notable fact that Eastland citizens as a whole did not take as much interest in the fair as did the people in many of the other towns and communities, and especially was this true of the earlier part of the campaign for the fair. This will not be true next time as the "doubting Thomases" in Eastland have been shown, it is claimed.

FRENCH DEBT PROBLEM GOES OVER 5 YEARS

In Meantime France Will Pay U. S. $40,000,000 Annually as Interest. WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—A provisional five-year truce and settlement of the $4,200,000,000 debt of France to the United States will be laid before congress and the French parliament as the sole result of the conference between the delegation from France and the American debt funding commission, which have been in progress here the last week. If ratified by the French parliament, France will pay to the United States $40,000,000 a year for the next five years, and at the end of that time the question of full payment of the debt will be reopened, if not before. The administration is expected to recommend ratification of the proposed agreement because it was arranged in good faith. WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—Approval of America's action in refusing to accept France's terms in the debt funding negotiations was manifest in circles here today, following the interruption of negotiations. No evidence was given to propose a moderation of the five-year provisional settlement, but the status was regarded as a calm before a storm. That opposition will be made before ratification is certain because of the cost to the American people. The French are already paying annually $20,000,000 on a debt incurred through the war. On a portion of the principal the American taxpayers themselves are paying 4 1/2 per cent interest. The American people in seven years have paid $886,000,000 on the principal of the French debt to holders of Liberty bonds, from the sale of which money was derived.

Raid in New Jersey Results In Seizures Worth About $500,000

BURLINGTON, N. J., Oct. 2.—Five officers raided a barge in Rancocas Creek here today, arrested 56 men, six motor trucks, four limousines, 7,000 cases of champagne, benedictine and various choice French wines and cordials, in addition to a quantity of Scotch liquor. The haul may range in value to $500,000. The raid was carried out by four state troopers and a private detective, who had tipped the troopers off to the fact the liquor was on the barge. The officers said they were offered as high as $75,000 "to forget it" by the commander of the barge.

JEWEL EXPERT SUSPECTED OF BEING THIEF

Police Trying to Eliminate Useless Factors in Track-in Half-Million Dollar Thief. NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—A European jewel expert who followed two rose pink pearls across the Atlantic was hunted today in the theft of jewelry valued at between $500,000 and $750,000 stolen from Mrs. Jam se P. Donohue, a daughter of the late Frank W. Woolworth. Direct charge of the case has been taken by Police Commissioner Enright and a large force of detectives have begun an investigation. The fact that the two largest pearls in one of the stolen necklaces had arrived from Paris only 24 hours before the robbery led police to the theory that the jewels had been followed from abroad. The thief who perpetrated the bold robbery while Mrs. Donohue was in her bath, Wednesday afternoon, showed an expert knowledge of pearls that are so perfect only a real expert can detect the fraud. The loot was fully insured and photographs of the jewels and their history have been sent to the police on this continent and in European cities. Mrs. Donohue returned only recently from Monte Carlo, where she frequented the gaming tables, it is said, often wearing considerable jewelry, and it is thought possible the notice of the thief might first have been attracted there.

RODGERS WOULD COMBINE THREE INTO ONLY ONE

Hawaiian Flight Commander Would Merge Army, Navy and Air in One Department.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—A strong defense of the navy department against attacks by Col. William Mitchell and others was made today by Commander John Rodgers, who led the unsuccessful Hawaiian flight. He absolved the department of all blame for the failure of the flight. "Had we had the wind with us and the gas mileage we expected we would have reached our objective," said Rodgers. Colonel Mitchell's unified air service department was opposed by Captain Rodgers, but on the other hand he recommended a single board of national defense to control the three fighting branches, the army, the navy and the air, with a secretary at the head of each branch. Captain Rodgers leveled criticism at some phases of the management of the navy, but kept the board and the huge crowd laughing with his wit in replying to questions. He said that aviation problems could not be solved without taking the entire national defense system into consideration; that it had become so complicated that it might die of its own complications unless properly treated by high class experts, and that their ministrations should not be confined to any one branch. He insisted that the airplane had been in the last few years the ethical part of a ship, but that it was easy to imagine that within the next 20 years the airplane would be found to be the most important weapon. In spite of his defense of the navy department, Commander Rodgers issued some vital changes were a desirable. He suggested separate promotion in the air service and the abolition of unnecessary training. Rodgers attacked the activities of various navy boards and said they confined their work to talk. "I wore out six pairs of pants serving on one of these boards," he said. "All we did was talk and nothing came of the talk." He expressed an opinion that the defense of the Panama Canal should be entrusted to the navy officers and not to the army, because an attack on the canal would mean a defense by the navy. "Whatever mistakes the navy has made," he declared, "near his closing, challenge anybody to make any just criticism of its flight over the Pacific. The hearing adjourned to next Monday.

British Labor Will Seek to Uphold the Communist Delegate

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—Delegates of British labor to the interparliamentary union meeting here have decided to carry the Saklatvala to the floor of the union meeting as a matter of principle. Shapurji Saklatvala, British labor delegate, was denied admittance to the United States because of his outspoken communist views. The decision was reached at a meeting of labor members last night. Ben Riley, a delegate and a member of the house of commons, will be spokesman for the Englishman. He is expected to present his protest at today's session.

DALLAS FIRM CONTRACTS TO ELP TUNNEL MOUNTAIN

Dallas, Oct. 2.—Smith Bros., a Dallas contracting firm, have been awarded a sub-contract to take part in one of the largest water projects in the United States in California. Nine California cities, including Oakland and Berkeley, will get their future water supply from the mountains, more than 90 miles distant, and in order to transport the water to the coast cities, it will be necessary to tunnel through a mountain, a very difficult task. The Dallas firm's contract amounted to $1,500,000 of the $16,000,000 cost.

FRANC VALUE DECLINES

PARIS, Oct. 2.—Following receipt of news concerning the conclusion of the debt negotiations, the franc weakened, the dollar gaining 20 centimes in the morning trading, the franc losing all the gain it had scored in the last two weeks. International stocks were reported firm.

WESTWARD TRIP PLANNED

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—President and Mrs. Coolidge will travel by way of Cincinnati and St. Louis to Omaha, Neb., where the president is to address the American Legion next week.

DIVERS SEEKING BODIES OF THE DEAD IN WRECK

Hope of Finding Living Men in Sunken Submarine Is Gone.

NEW LONDON, Conn., Oct. 2.—Rescue fleet workers still operating on one chance in one million of finding any living man in the hull of the S-51 thought they could at least find some of the dead today. They do not expect to locate any living. Only the motor room astern and the torpedo room forward have yet to be tested for their contents. That they are full of water is believed certain. Divers were to penetrate into the engine room today.

NEW YONKON, Conn., Oct. 2.—The bodies of two men, B. D. Lindsey and Walter D. Lawton, were recovered today from the engine room of the ill-fated submarine S-51. Lawton was an electrician's mate, first class, from Weymouth, Mass., and Lindsey was an engine man, second class, of Pensacola, Fla.

The submarine base received word during the morning that a body, believed to be that of an officer or a chief petty officer, had been cast ashore at Stonington, Conn. An ambulance sent from here established that the man was not a navy man. With the finding of the two bodies, the divers reported that watertight compartment doors into the motor room, the last room astern, were open. This showed definitely that the whole ship, except possibly the torpedo room, was flooded, and that nobody was alive in the hull. The torpedo room will be tested this afternoon for the presence of water. If water is in there, too, as believed, then Admiral Christy's conviction that none are alive aboard the ship will become a certainty.

DOWN TOWN QUARTET MAKES STREET HARMONY

Dr. C. C. Craig and the three Little brothers, have formed a male quartet which is furnishing some catchy harmony down town. When heard Friday they made Sweet Adeline sweeter, if possible and gave some other numbers new and altogether fetching. Those who heard them suggested the feasibility of a down town glee club as another addition to Ranger's musical attractions.

C. D. Woods Gets Good Gas Flow in Well Near Carbon

C. D. Woods reports a flow of 1,500,000 cubic feet of gas daily from his No. 1 well on the M. J. Collins tract near Carbon, at a depth of 362 feet. He proposes to cease off this gas and go on down to the 1,450-foot level, where he expects to find pay sand. Mr. Woods says he went through the pay sand at that depth a year ago when looking for deeper pay. He has five wells in that neighborhood which are producing three and four barrels daily from a depth of only 50 feet.

LANDRETH COMPANY BUYS LEASE NEAR FRANKELL

BRECKENRIDGE, Oct. 2.—The consummation of a lease deal, by the terms of which the Landreth company became the owner of a 1,200-acre lease near Frankell, has been announced here. The consideration was not given. This tract is in semi-proven territory, between two different producing areas, but will be an extension if good production is found. According to the present plans of the new owners, a test well will be put down within the next 30 days.

COTTON PALACE DESIGNATES OFFICIAL FARMERS' DAY

Waco, Oct. 2.—Fully 100,000 farmers are expected to be in attendance at the Texas Cotton Palace on November 5, designated by fair officials as Farmers Day. John W. McFarlane, winner of the "More Cotton on Fewer Acres" contest of the Dallas News and Dallas Semi-Weekly Farm News last year, will be a guest of honor on Farmers Day. THREE MEN SLIGHTLY HURT IN AUTOMOBILE CRASH

BRECKENRIDGE, Oct. 2.—Fred Phipps, Ben Arience and J. C. Roach, all of this city, were more or less cut and bruised about their bodies yesterday when the car in which they were returning to Breckenridge was struck in the rear by another car and turned completely around. It is stated that the driver of the Breckenridge car had stopped on the Breckenridge highway east of Caddo to fix a flat tire and while standing still a car driven by some negroes hit them.

BAYLOR UNIVERSITY SEEKS TO RAISE ENDOWMENT FUND

WACO, Oct. 2.—With an extension of one year in which to raise $1,500,000 as an endowment fund, in order to receive the support of the general education board for the enlargement and improvement of Baylor University, the campaign workers have taken on fresh courage and are determined to get the necessary pledge before July 1, 1927. On account of the drought in a large territory in Central Texas that furnishes a large percentage of Baylor's students, the campaigners have been handicapped during this year in securing pledges. Pledges have been received from California, Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, New Mexico, Oklahoma, and even from China, Uruguay, Mexico and India.

RANGER STACKS UP WELL WITH OTHER CITIES

Visitor From Kansas Sees Prospect for Steady and Substantial Growth.

During the passing week, a Ranger business man showed a Wichita, Kansas, man over the business and residence sections and asked him for a candid opinion on the future of Ranger, seen by an outsider. He said: "Cities go through stages. A first stage when they boom, a second stage when they shrink up a bit and a third stage when they come back, stay put, and in nine cases out of ten, go far beyond the boom stage and remain substantial."

PLAINVIEW MAN KILLED BY FALL FROM WINDOW

BRITISH NOT DISMAYED BY DIRIGIBLE DISASTER

LONDON, Oct. 2.—Undismayed by the fate of the Shenandoah, the British air ministry is rushing through the work of reconstructing the Zeppelin R-33 and trial flights will be made with it early in October. The R-33 was badly damaged last April when it was wrenched from its mooring mast and blown out to sea in an accident similar to one which fatal crash in Ohio, September 3. The crew on board the R-33, however, subsequently regained control of the airship and fought their way back to land after the storm subsided.

BIBLE THOUGHT

ON THE RANGE AT RANGER
 By THE FENCE RIDER.
 (Items for this department must be phoned in to the Fence Rider, by 12 o'clock daily in order to insure their insertion. Don't be haphazard. Jingle the telephone bell.)

Cy Ogden thinks he has found what, if anything, is the matter with our army service. He says if the Honorable Secretary of War would take seven days off, take one letter off his name and change the spelling a little, it would be a case of seven days making one Week. And Cy seems to think he did it and it has.

No, folks, a reporter is not a mind reader and he is not a centipede. He can't tell what you know unless you spill it, and he hasn't legs enough to be in a hundred places all at the same time. The way your home paper is being made the newest paper in Texas in any town four times Ranger's size and down, by actual count of items printed, is, Ranger people—some of them—are spilling it—and thereby doing their town a service as great as if they build an obelisk or donated a park. Thank you.

A little discussion up at City Hall Thursday brought out some things which should be worth while to our boys and girls in school. It was decided, after due deliberations, that the dictionaries notwithstanding, here in Texas calf does not spell cawf or caif but kyaf—which rhymes with staff. And Rio Grande spells Rye-on-oh-Grand—not re-oh-grahnda. And Tia Juana, that Mexican city which takes the coin from Southern California, according to our city secretary, should be called "Aunt Johnny," which is what it means in plain U. S. A.

THE GOOD THEY DO.
 There are a few "doubting Thomases" everywhere, perhaps some in Ranger, so just as a word of enlightenment to those who often go down into their pockets to help worthy causes, and sometimes think that the money is not well expended, will say that the Child Welfare club today sent a little girl to John Sealy hospital, Galveston, for treatment. This is the second little girl that they have sent there in the last three years. The first one had tuberculosis of the leg, and after staying there a year, she came home well and is now going to school like other children. The little girl that left today is Johnnie May Haygood, who has been suffering from tuberculosis of the hip for some time. Miss Joyce Connolly, public health nurse, took the child to Galveston, to see that she was properly cared for on the train, and properly entered, and will return to assume her duties here by Monday. This is splendid work. A work that will like good deeds "live after them."

IN FLORIDA.
SATURDAY.
 Mrs. Helen Gifford Clegg, writes that she is now in Florida, and for the time being at least, is in Miami. She notes that she went down to see what the excitement was in that state and finds plenty of excitement there, in spite of the reeking, smoking heat. She expects to see the season out there before returning this way. Even Florida can't make Mrs. Clegg forget Ranger, so she asked the Times be sent her there.

PASTOR JOHNSON RETURNS TO OLD CHARGE
 Rev. Mr. H. B. Johnson and family arrived today, from Plainview, to take up his duties as pastor of the First Christian Church, which he served several years prior to his going to Plainview. Members of the Ranger church and personal friends outside of the church, are glad to welcome Rev. Johnson and his family back to Ranger. Services will be at the church Sunday morning, and Brother Johnson will preach. The following resolutions of respect from the Plainview church conference, of which he was pastor, show how he and his family were appreciated there:

Resolutions of Respect
 Whereas, our fellow pastor and co-worker, Rev. H. B. Johnson, pastor of the First Christian church, is closing his work in Plainview with this month (September) and moving to another field, we, the members of the Pastors Conference of Plainview, take this opportunity of expressing our regret at losing from our organization, and from the religious life of our city, one who has endeared himself to all of our people, and especially to us, his fellow-pastors. Brother Johnson is a prince among men and a Christian gentleman of the highest type. He is ever kind and courteous, with sympathy and love for his Christian brethren of every faith. In losing him, Plainview is losing a valued citizen his church a great pastor, and leader, and we, his co-pastors, a noble friend and brother. May God's richest blessings go with him to his new field of labor. We commend him to his new pastorate as being a man among the best of men.

ALATHEAN CLASS MEET.
 The second meeting of the Alathean class of the Central Baptist church, was held at the annex, on Thursday, beginning at 9 a. m. A large number of old members met in teams and spent two hours visiting in the interest of the church. The new members of the class met them at 11:30, when a delectable two-course luncheon was served by Mrs. C. V. Wheeler's group. This luncheon consisted of baked chicken, dressing, creamed peas, cranberry sauce, fruit salad, hot rolls, lemon pie and iced tea. Thirty-six women were present. A unique program was given, causing much merriment. At the close of the uncheon, a short business meeting was held and the following officers elected: Mrs. L. L. Bruce, president; Mrs. C. W. Hargrave, vice president; Mrs. J. W. McKiamey, secretary and treasurer; Mrs. S. B. Plummer, assistant secretary; Mrs. C. V. Wheeler and E. C. IN JAYTON.
 A. Williams, of the Joseph Dry Goods company, is now in Jayton, where the firm has a branch store. Mr. Williams is in charge of the Jayton branch and he writes the Times that they are doing a nice business there and that it is a fine country, but he gets lonely for Ranger and that the best remedy he can think of for that is the Ranger Times, and requests that the paper be sent him so he can keep in touch with Ranger and Ranger folks. Needless to say that Saturday morning Mr. Williams will be reading Friday's Ranger Times, in Jayton.

LITTLE THEATRE NEWS
 At a meeting of the Little Theatre players last night, they decided on the name of their next play, which will be staged within a month. They have chosen a three act comedy,

"Take My Advice" which has been given in several other towns very successfully and is one of the snappiest plays of this season.

VISITOR FROM STRAWN

He has various holdings in Ranger and is a frequent visitor. Mr. Britton was a former official in the Texas Pacific Coal and Oil Company. He is chairman of the board of the Ranger State Bank.

TWO KILLED IN CRASH, SCORE OF OTHERS HURT. ADRIAN, Mich., Oct. 2.—Two railroad workers were instantly killed, two others probably injured and 17 others slightly injured here today when a passenger train crashed into a motor car with trailers.

JURY DOCKET LAID ASIDE. Judge Elzo Bean had disposed of all cases on his docket for trial this week before noon today and discharged the jury for the week. Beginning Monday Judge Bean will take up a long list of non-jury civil cases.

NEGRO REPUDIATES SIGNED STATEMENT, BUT CONVICTED. Aaron Robinson, colored, of Cisco, was found guilty of the theft of merchandise of the value of more than $50 by a jury in the Eighty-eighth district court Thursday and his punishment was assessed at confinement in the state penitentiary for a term of two years. Attorneys for Robinson will argue a motion for a new hearing and appeal the case if it is overruled.

Robinson, it is alleged, entered a dry goods store at Cisco and took a number of items of wearing apparel. After his arrest by officers, Robinson signed a statement in which he admitted getting the clothing. He later repudiated the statement and said that he signed it because he feared that the officers would beat him up if he did not.

SPECIAL VENIRE ORDERED FOR TRIAL OF TOGO RAY

A special venire of 200 men is being drawn from which to select a jury to try Togo Ray, charged with murder growing out of the shooting and killing of W. B. Houston, near Sabalino, some weeks ago. The case has been set for Oct. 21.

Strange Appearing Dog Believed to Be In Part Raccoon

Mrs. Joe Colson, living near the corner of Austin and Walnut streets, is the owner of an unusual dog, the mutterings of which aroused her in the night recently and apprised her of the presence of prowlers at whom she fired a shot, scaring them away. "Mutterings" is perhaps the best word to use to describe the noise this very watchful and unusual dog makes. It never barks, it is said. In fact, it is a strange beast, which the owner believes to be half raccoon. That a cross between a dog and a raccoon is considered a biological impossibility does not shake this belief in which many share. And the little canine bears many marks which would seem to ally it very closely with the raccoon family, whatever its breed.

Its front legs turn out into elongated paws which look for all the world like each lower leg had been bent into a pedal elongation. Its hair is very raccoonlike. Its size though somewhat greater than a raccoon, it not such as to contradict this belief. Its habits are said to tally very closely with habits of the stripe tailed furbearing animal which it imitates. Its muttering and squeals, which are said to take the place of barking, give no evidence of anything in which the ordinary conception of a dog would seem to fit. On the occasion of arousing the household when marauders threatened, it is said to have made its cries and mutterings unusually loud, but, in no sense did they imitate the bark of a dog.

This little black and white bunch of fur may be seen almost any day sitting out in front of the owner's home, where it gets out for an airing. It is particularly prized by Mrs. Colson because it was found on the streets of Weatherford, where the family formerly resided, by her little son who has since died. Money would not buy it, it is said.

EASTLAND CITIZENS ENJOY VISIT TO BRECKENRIDGE

The delegation of Eastland citizens, headed by the Eastland band, which went to Breckenridge yesterday to attend the Oil Belt fair in progress in that city, met with a royal welcome and thoroughly enjoyed the day according to many of those who made the trip. The party made the visit paid the Central West Texas fair at Eastland by a delegation of Breckenridge citizens and also to see the splendid fair.

59 Cooks in the Making Are Now In Ranger High

The enrollment in the domestic science classes of Ranger High School is now fifty-nine, according to Miss Helen Stafford who teaches cooking, dietetics and allied branches and who is much encouraged by the growing tendency of Ranger High School girls to place these studies of how to feed folks and care for their bodies among their favorite electives. The course covers two full nine-month school credit units, according to Miss Stafford. These are divided into four half credits. A half credit each is given for first year cooking, second year cooking, physiology and home nursing. The last named branch is closely allied with the cooking school feeding the sick, being an important phase of nursing.

The Ranger High School is exceptionally equipped for its cooking classes. The kitchens are immaculate and the ranges, ovens, tables and all other appurtenances are of the latest and best obtainable. The girls seem to get a real kick out of this work, particularly when serving the little luncheons which now and then feature the department's activities.

SENTENCED ON PLEA OF GUILTY OF FORGERY

Charlie Allman entered a plea of guilty to a charge of passing a forged instrument and was sentenced to two years in the state penitentiary in the Eighty-eighth district court Thursday. Allman, who is about 23 years of age, is alleged to have raised a check that had been drawn for $6 to $60.

Half the world is half asleep

It is terrible to feel all dragged out—to live from one day to the next in a constant state of weariness. Yet thousands do, because constipation is destroying their energy—even their interest in life. Only Kellogg's ALL-BRAN brings sure and safe relief from this disease.

"Nothing seemed to interest her"

BY THE end of the second act she wished she were home in bed. She was tired—always tired. That fact showed in her face. And "she" may be multiplied by tens of thousands of women in America. For it was the world's most universal disease that was sapping her strength and killing her interest. . . . It is good to know that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN has brought permanent relief to thousands of sufferers from constipation.

When ALL-BRAN travels through the system, its fiber remains unchanged. Therefore, it can sweep the intestine clean. It can absorb and carry moisture through the intestinal tract and stimulate it to natural, healthy action. ALL-BRAN is what doctors call a bulk food.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is delightful with milk or cream, sprinkled over other cereals; cooked with hot cereals; in soups, or made into the many recipes given on every package. If eaten regularly, it is guaranteed to bring permanent relief or the grocer returns the purchase price. Eat two tablespoonfuls daily—in chronic cases, with every meal.

Be sure to get Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. Only ALL-BRAN brings sure results. You can see that a part-bran product can, at best, be but partially effective.

Kellogg's is the original and only ALL-BRAN. It is the bran which doctors recommend. Accept no other if you would be sure. All grocers sell it. Leading hotels and restaurants serve it. Buy a package of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN today.

COTTON PRODUCTION ON TEXAS PRISON FARMS

AUSTIN, Oct. 1.—It is possible that the Texas prison farms will produce 15,000 bales of cotton this year, according to the state prison's report to Governor Ferguson, with a yield of 12,000 bales practically certain. More than 5,000 bales have been gathered already.
The money is being used to retire the penitentiary system's indebtedness, and the institution is now on a cash basis, with sufficient funds to operate it several months.

Thurber Eleven to Play Eastland at Connellee Park Today

The Thurber eleven will meet the Eastland Mavericks on the local grid-iron at Connellee park this afternoon. Coach Vernon Adams has been putting the Mavericks through some strenuous practice during the last three weeks and they are in good condition for the coming game with the Thurber team.
This game, like the others that have been played this season by the Mavericks, will not count as an official game. Nevertheless, the Mavericks are going into it to win just as they went in to win the other games they played, and in which their efforts were crowned with success.

Christian Calendar Eight Years Late, According to Records Just Discovered

By United Press.
LONDON.—Strictly speaking, this is not the year 1925 of the Christian era; it is, according to the researches of the British Asia Minor Archeological expedition, the year 1933. This conclusion, to which modern scholarship has been slowly approaching for some time, is supported by photographs, which have been taken in London, of an old Roman milestone near the modern village of Yonuziar in Syria, indicating by the strongest circumstantial evidence that the year of the Nativity was not, as the monk Dionysius claimed, I. A. D., but, rather, 8 B. C. The proof is roundabout, but scholars regard it as conclusive. In the Gospel, according to Luke, the year of Christ's birth is described or dated with reference to two contemporary events. The only trouble is that scholars have found it impossible to reconcile those two events; this feat is finally achieved by the old milestone. Luke says: "Now it came to pass in those days, there went out a decree from Caesar Augustus that all the (Roman) world should be enrolled. This was the first enrollment, made when Quirinius was governing Syria. And all went to enroll themselves, everyone to his own city. And Joseph also went up to enroll himself with Mary, his wife."

Here are two specific points, the "first enrollment" under Caesar Augustus and "when Quirinius was governing Syria." Old records show that the Romans took their census every 14 years, and that there was one in the year which we now describe as 20 A. D. Dating back, we have one (probably) in 6 A. D. and before that, in 8 B. C. Was that the "first enrollment?"

Many scholars have said "no," on the grounds that Quirinius was not "governing Syria" at that time; contemporary records usually refer to Saturninus as the governor of Syria at that time.

But the old milestone which has been discovered explains it completely. It bears an equivalent to our 6 B. C., and shows that Quirinius, acting as military governor, as distinguished from the civil governor, was engaged for two years that is, from 8 B. C. to 6 B. C., in pacifying the country. Thus, if the census took place in 8 B. C., the two conflicting points in Luke are reconciled and the year of Christ's birth, fixed approximately at 8 B. C.

COTTON CONSUMPTION MAKES NEW INCREASE

By United Press.
WASHINGTON.—The world is using more cotton than ever before in history and the largest part of the cotton used is grown and spinned in America, according to the agriculture department.

The world mill consumption of cotton during six months ending July 31, 1925, was estimated at 12,000,000 bales, and of this huge total 7,222,000 bales were produced in America. Consumption was slightly less than in the preceding six months.

"Don't doubt it for a minute," E. A. Ringold remarked. "I know of stranger things than that. Out in Young Addition, just the other day, a little girl found an egg so big it took 10 hens to lay it. She called her mother and they turned the egg over when it accidentally broke and a chicken popped out. Well, they cooked that chicken, ate all they wanted, sent dishes of stewed chicken to all their neighbors, pressed the rest and put it up in cans and they have enough chicken right now to last them until Thanksgiving! ! ? !"

MYSTERY RACE PLANES TO ENTER U. S. MEET

By United Press.
LONDON.—Secret tests of the two mystery racing airplanes with which the British hope to recapture the Schneider trophy cup from America, are being made.

The construction of the machines has been closely guarded and but few details regarding them have leaked out. It is understood that they are extremely diminutive in size, but powered with special Napier engines of 450-600 horsepower.

Equipped with floats as seaplanes, it is expected they will develop speeds well in excess of 200 miles an hour. They will be flown in the American races by Captain Henri Biard and Hubert Broad, with Bert Hinkler, famous test pilot, accompanying as reserve pilot.

TEXAS' FIRE LOSS LAST YEAR EXCEEDS INSURANCE

AUSTIN, Sept. 30.—Fire insurance premiums collected in Texas amounted to $25,000,000. But even at this figure, Texas' bill for protection against fire was not nearly so large as the actual loss sustained during the year by fire.

The business was written by 157 stock companies, twelve mutual associations, through their 7,000 agents throughout the state. There are now five stock companies in Texas, all of the others being non-resident.

Service Builds for the Future of Eastland

Everybody who thinks about it knows that no city or community can get along without gas.

But there is more to it than just having good service now. The city can grow and meet the needs of its people, and the additional people who are coming here all the time, only if this business keeps ahead of the growth so as to be able to serve the large community as it develops.

This job of city and community building is one of the big jobs of your gas company.

HALF A HUNDRED JOIN ORCHESTRA AND GLEE CLUBS

Ranger High School Music Enrollment is Record Breaking.

The experiment of placing Ranger's School Music in charge of a bachelor of arts and bachelor of music with conservatory methods coupled with training in public school music direction is proving all the school board and faculty hoped for, it is said. A concrete evidence of this from the standpoint of popularity among high school pupils is found in the fact that more than half a hundred students have entered the two glee clubs and orchestra recently organized. It is further stated that a number of outside pupils, from surrounding towns, have entered the classes and will participate in some of the musical functions now being planned.

The exact numbers enrolled for the glee clubs, and orchestras down to Friday, October 2, were 25 in the girls' glee club, 20 in the boys' glee club and about 10 in the orchestra. This, by no means comprises all who have gone in for music in the new department of fine arts, according to the heads of that department, Miss Christine Carter and Miss Marie Flahie. Now does it include the entrants into the high school band, under Leo M. Underwood, which is entirely outside the orchestra.

The glee clubs will soon be ready to function to the extent of aiding the pep squad at games and the like, it is stated. Also, there is planned a negro minstrel show for the near future, which will be carried on jointly by the glee clubs, orchestra and readers from Miss Flahie's classes, it is announced.

The general Ranger city schools, aside from the high school which are taking up music under direction of Miss Carter, also report ample enthusiasm and progress. Sight reading and group singing comprise the principal exercises in these grade and grammar schools.

RACES AND RODEO AT STATE FAIR IN DALLAS

DALLAS, Oct. 1.—The federal government's quarantine on South Texas live stock will not prohibit the races and the rodeo at the State Fair of Texas next month, it has been announced here.

Cattle, sheep and swine will not be exhibited, but horses, jacks, mules, dogs and poultry will be on hand as usual.

The horse races, the polo games and the rodeo will be held on scheduled dates.

'YEARNING' RECORDS LISTED IN THE MISSING COLUMN

That gramophone records do not have feet and yet walk off, is proved by the mysterious disappearance of two records along with some other things from Hicks Drug Store recently. Curiously enough, the title of both records missing is "Yearning." Whether the title set someone to yearning beyond the power of resistance, or somebody's fingers got sticky and both these records stuck to them, is not known. What the manager and a few other merchants are yearning for is something to cure this yearning habit and this predisposition to encourage little trifles like that to take legs and walk away.

HIGH SCHOOL BAND NOW IS FIFTY STRONG

The Ranger High School band now numbers more than forty actually down on the rolls with orders in for instruments and ten or fifteen more who have signified their intention of coming in, bringing the aggregate up to more than fifty. Adding these to members of the clubs and orchestra, brings the actual number of pupils going out for music this year up to more than a hundred. And these do not include Miss Carter's piano and special voice pupils.

The high school band, first of its kind, is under tutelage of Leo M. Underwood, leader of the Ranger Band which won high honors at the recent West Texas Chamber of Commerce meet. It is the intention to make the high school band a training school for the larger city band, it is said. It will be several weeks before the public will have the opportunity of hearing the high school players perform.

GAMBLING DEBTS SOMETIMES EMBARRASSING TO COLLECT

By United Press.
SAN ANTONIO, Oct. 1.—A girl who bet her escort 10 kisses that his oil car wouldn't do 50 miles an hour here the other day lost her bet and paid off, but the other gambler got in trouble, both because he made 50 and again because he collected the bet.

When the anxious race against time was finished, the pair got out of the car onto the sidewalk, and the winner proceeded to collect. About that time a patrolman came along. The youth explained to the patrolman, but could have saved his breath for he had to explain it all over the judge anyhow. He was placed in jail for disorderly conduct and speeding.

DORMANT POWER IN STATE'S LIGNITE BEDS

DALLAS, Texas, Sept. 30.—New and interesting information on the possibilities of developing enormous power in Texas from the state's lignite beds, was told to a number of luncheon guests at the Dallas Electric Club last week by F. C. Bolton, an engineer.

Power companies are already exploring the possibility of using lignite instead of oil and coal. Coal's cost is higher, because of the freight rate, and oil is becoming too expensive as a boiler fuel, it is pointed out.

PIMPLES CAUSE FOLKS TO SHRINK FROM ATTENTION

Whenever you go out, you can't help but pity the many folks you see trying to have a good time, but are so shrinking and backward about coming near others where pimply, blotchy and eczemic skin can be seen. You almost feel like going up to them and telling them that they ought to begin using Black and White Ointment and Soap, which so many thousands of happy people are depending on to keep their skin clear, smooth and good to look at.

Black and White Ointment, and Soap, are selling at the phenomenal rate of more than two million packages a year, and the fact that they are so economically priced is largely responsible for this record. The 40c size Ointment contains three times as much as the 25c size. All dealers have both the Ointment and the Soap.—Adv.

West Virginia Lady Says That She Was in a Serious Condition, But Is Stronger After Taking Cardui.

Huntington, W. Va.—"I was in a very weak and run-down condition—in fact, was in a serious condition," says Mrs. Fannie C. Bloss, of 1964 Madison Avenue, this city.

"In my left side the pain was very severe. It would start in my back and sides. Part of the time I was in bed and when up I didn't feel like doing anything or going anywhere.

"Life wasn't any pleasure. I was very pale. I was nervous and thin, and so tired all the time.

"My druggist told me that Cardui was a good tonic for women and I bought a couple of bottles. I took two bottles, then I noticed an improvement. I kept on and found it was helping me. I have taken nine bottles. I'm stronger now than I have been in a long time."

Cardui is made from mild-acting medicinal herbs with a gentle, tonic, strengthening effect upon certain female organs and upon the system in general.

MAY SEYMOUR FOOT LOOSE

by BEATRICE BURTON

Sequel to The Flapper Wife

One wet and windy night last September, Dick Gregory was locking up his house, on his way upstairs to bed.

He turned out the light in the hall and stood for a moment listening to the staccato music of the rain against the windows. It was then that he noticed something odd about the pane of glass in the front door.

There was a shadow on it, against the light from the street lamp outside. The shadow moved and then stood still. It showed clearly the slim outlines of a woman.

There came a light tapping on the pane. As Dick went toward the door, the tapping became louder, faster—a nervous appeal.

He opened the door, and the lamp-light showed him the veiled face of the woman who stood there.

"May!" he said. "It's May Seymour! Isn't it?"

With only a little throaty laugh for answer, May Seymour stepped into the warm darkness of the hall. As Dick switched on the lights she threw back the sodden veil from the pallor of her face.

"Yes, it's the return of the prodigal May!" she remarked flippantly, "but kill me no fatted calf, Dick! I've come to see you on business, that's all."

She stopped and looked around her. "Where's Gloria?" she asked.

"Upstairs, giving the baby his 10 o'clock bottle," the man answered. "I'll run up and bring her down."

"A baby!" The nervous laugh shook in May's throat once more, and turned into a cough. "I hope I'm not catching cold. I'm soaked to the skin!"

Dick put his hand on her arm and led her into the living room. He drew up a chair for her near the wood fire that glowed in the grate.

May peeled off her wet silk coat, and the long gloves that were plastered to her arms. She held her drenched hat in her hands and looked down at it ruefully.

From upstairs came a little, waiting cry and the sound of a closing door.

"A baby!" May said again, "I can't imagine Gloria with a baby!"

"Wait until you see her!" Dick answered, "you won't know her."

May turned her face toward the door as there came a sound of light steps on the stairs and Gloria Gregory walked into the room.

So far as May could see, Gloria was the same Gloria she had always been, except for a new look in her eyes. There was a tenderness in them—a softness that had not been there a year ago. The look of fulfillment that is only in the eyes of mothers!

It deepened in them, as she saw the woman who sat holding out her slender hands to the fire.

"Why, May! May Seymour!" she cried, and put her arms around her. "Where in the world did you drop from?"

May shrugged her shoulders. "From everywhere—anywhere," she said, stonily, "I haven't any special place to drop from these days."

Gloria looked down at her sharply, taking in the wet rings of hair on her forehead, the look of strain around her eyes, the weary droop of her painted mouth.

The year since May Seymour had left town following the suicide of her husband had put its stamp on her face once so charming in its gayety and impudence. It was thinner—older.

"You're soaking, sopping, sizzling wet!" Gloria cried, "I don't know where you came from, but this I do know—you're not going out into this storm again tonight! You're going to stay here with us."

She turned to her tall husband who stood, silent, in the doorway of the firelit room.

"You go and make some of your famous coffee, Dick," she ordered briskly, "and I'll get some dry things for her to put on."

May sank back and closed her eyes. "No, no," she protested. "Please don't bother about me, I'm going right back to the hotel."

But Gloria had gone. May could hear her moving lightly around upstairs. She could hear the sound of running water in the kitchen where Dick was making his coffee. She drowsed.

When she opened her eyes again he was back in the room.

"You said you'd come to see me on business," he said, propping his long body against the chimney piece. His eyes questioned her.

"I did—come to see you as my lawyer," May Seymour answered. "I want to sell out. I'm going to sell everything I have that ties me to this town. I've been away from here for more than a year now. And if I can manage it, I'll stay away for the rest of my life. I hate the town and I hate the people in it!"

Her voice, shrill and bitter, stopped as Gloria came downstairs. She knelt down before May and drew the drenched satin slippers from her feet—pulled off the thin chiffon stockings.

"Take these into the kitchen and put them under the water heater," she said, handing them to Dick. "Is that coffee ready?"

When he came back with the coffee tray the room was empty. From upstairs he could hear the low murmur of the two women's voices.

"May saying her soul to Gloria, I suppose. Telling her all her troubles," he remarked to himself. "They've doubtless forgotten all about this stuff." And he carried the coffee back to the kitchen.

Upstairs in the guest room under the dripping eaves, May Seymour was not saying her soul to the only friend she had on earth. Instead she was asking her a question: "What's become of Jim? Jim Carewe?" she said. "Did he ever marry that little flapper child?"

Gloria nodded. "Yes, and I hear they're very happy," she answered as naturally as possible. "They have a new baby."

May's eyes studied the love-knots and garlands on the wall paper for a moment.

"He doesn't deserve to be happy!" she said sullenly. "When I think of how he made love to me for years, and then when I was free to marry him! Oh, I can't talk about it!"

"Jim was just a coward," Gloria said gently, "if Dr. John had been killed in his automobile or had died of appendicitis, Jim would have married you willingly, I know. What he couldn't stand was the disgrace and the scandal after Dr. John shot himself."

"but I had to stand them!" May broke in furiously. "I had to face them all alone. I'll always have to face them."

She pounded the bed clothes in her fury.

Gloria leaned over and laid her hand over one of May's clenched fists.

"No you won't!" she said. "Time will take care of that. People forget things after a while. There are always new scandals to crowd the old ones out."

May laughed bitterly.

"There was a man down at Old Point Comfort last winter," she said after a pause, "a nice man—middle-aged, well to do, quiet—you know the type. And we became great friends. After a while I told him all about myself. I told him everything—all about my silly affair with Jim, and about my husband committing suicide. I even told him about the talk there had been—the rotten gossip."

She stopped for a moment, and then went on breathlessly.

"And—do you know, he was going to marry me anyway! He said he was sorry for me. And I was so happy, thinking that at last I'd have someone to look after me—he decent to me."

"Well, things were going along beautifully," she went on, "and then our old friend, Myra Gail, happened to come down there for a rest. It turned out that she'd known him, met him on shipboard once. And after she'd had one or two talks with him, he packed up and left without even saying goodby to me! Sent me a letter a few days later, full of polite nothings!"

"Oh, well," Gloria comforted her, "his love wasn't worth much, or he wouldn't have taken the thing that way. You're really better off without him."

"Yes, but that's not the point," May answered. "The point is that that's the thing that will keep happening to me over and over. No, I've made up my mind to sell out—to take my money and go to Europe and to stay all the rest of my life. I can go to places like Monte Carlo and Deauville, where nobody knows anything about anybody else—where everybody's a little shady. And with the money from all my stocks and bonds and things that John left me, I ought to be rather a Merry Widow, I think—don't you?"

Gloria shook her head. "I hate to hear you talk that way," she said. "I'm sure you're going about this thing the wrong way. What you ought to do is to come back here to live and live the whole thing down. I'd help you!" Her voice was suddenly eager.

"Not on your lipstock! I've had enough of this old town to last me the rest of my life!" May answered. "Did Dick make that coffee? I'd love some. It won't keep me awake. I can sleep nights any more, anyway."

As Gloria started downstairs May called to her. "Did you ever hear of a man in this town named Ulysses X. Forgan?" she asked. "A rich old geezer who's in the real estate business?"

Gloria reappeared in the doorway instantly.

There was a look of warning in her white-lidded eyes, and she had a tinger on her lips. "Hush!" she said softly.

May started. "Oh, I forgot about waking the baby. Forgive me for shrieking that way, won't you?" she asked.

Then Gloria came closer to the bed where her friend lay with her arms clasped behind her dark, sleek head. "No, no, it isn't that, May," she whispered. "But I didn't want Dick to hear you mention Ulysses X. Forgan. His very name is taboo around this house."

May's slate-colored eyes widened with interest.

"How come?" she asked slangily. "Has he a crush on you, and is the Honorable Dick jealous of him?"

Gloria colored. "Of course, not," she said, "but last year, you remember, Dick and I separated, and I went back to work. For one whole week I was secretary to this Forgan man, and it hurt Dick's pride that his wife should be working. Well, we patched up our quarrel—but we never speak of it, or of Ulysses X., either."

"How silly!" There was light scorn in May's voice. "Why shouldn't you talk over quarrels you've had? Everybody has 'em!"

Gloria put her head on one side like a wise mother bird.

"Well," she said slowly, "I suppose it's natural for us to forget the horrid things we've lived through, isn't it? Just as you want to get away from this town and forget it because you were unhappy here."

A second later she wished she had left that sentence unsaid. For May's eyes filled with tears that rolled slowly down her face. She made no move to wipe them away—just lay staring at the gay wall paper beside the bed, as if it held the record of her past.

When Gloria came upstairs 10 minutes later with the belated coffee, May had dropped off to sleep. There were shiny streaks on her face that showed where the tears had coursed.

"Where am I?" was May Seymour's first thought the next morning. And then with wakened memory in her heart, she remembered.

For the first time in months and months she was waking in the home of friends instead of in a hotel packed with indifferent strangers. Her voice was cheerful and welcoming as she heard a light tap on the panels of her door.

"Come in!" she called.

The door swung open, and Gloria came in holding a small white bundle in her arms.

"Well!" May's tone was flippant. "I certainly never expected to be treated to this sight—you with a child of your own!"

Gloria smiled mysteriously, as she laid the small bundle on the pillows beside May.

The tiny baby-face that looked up at her was Dick Gregory's as to be almost funny—the same serious eyes and cleft chin, the firm mouth.

"Why, you cute man-child! May laughed, "if you aren't just like your daddy! Let me hold him, Gloria!"

"We—well, just for a second then, Be careful, don't drop him," Gloria answered, laying her precious son in May's arms. "Now, I've got to take him back to the nurse. It's his bath time. Dick wants to see you before he goes to the office."

"All right, I'm getting up right away," May answered, swinging herself over the side of the bed, with the quick grace of a tiger-cat.

By the time she was dressed, an appetizing odor of toast, bacon and coffee filled the little, sunny house. From the lower floor came the faint sound of a mellow African voice singing the "Wabash Blues."

On the sill of her open window was a bowl of sylvia. There were magazines on the table, snapshots stuck in the mirror of the dresser, bright cushions on the wide, friendly window-seat.

All this—how different it was from the dreary, over-laborate rooms of the most expensive hotels!

May shuddered. "I've tried it for a year, battered around from pillar to post," she said to herself. "And now I'm going to find a place that suits me—some faraway place—and settle down. There must be a new life waiting for me somewhere. Life isn't over at 27. It can't be!"

Breakfast was laid in the sunroom. There was a vase of dahlias on it, among the blue-and-white dishes. A pile of letters lay beside Gloria's plate, and the morning paper was folded at Dick's place. The percolator bubbled merrily.

May thought of neat, barren tables on Pullmans and in hotels. She shuddered again inwardly.

"Go on with your letters, Gloria," Dick Gregory said to his wife, "May and I want to talk business, for a minute or two."

He turned to May as she unfolded his napkin and sugared his coffee. "You're sure you want to sell everything you have?" he asked.

May Seymour nodded vigorously. "Positive," she said. "I'm going to cut every tie that holds me to this town. I'm going to look around, and see if there isn't some happiness for me somewhere. I want to be as free as air!"

Dick grunted. "Even an airplane has to have a hangar—a landing place, somewhere, May," he said grimly.

"Well, that's what I'm looking for really," the woman answered. "But I'm going to take my time finding some place—some faraway place—that suits me."

Gloria looked up suddenly. "Would you marry again, if you had the chance, May?" she asked, bluntly.

A dull red flush swept over May's face. It wasn't until months afterward that Gloria knew what that flush meant.

"Of course, I would," May replied promptly. "But not many men would marry a woman whose husband killed himself because she ran around with another man. No, don't look shocked, Dick! That's the plain truth, and I'll never keep it from any man who falls in love with me!"

She looked defiantly from one face to the other. "Of course, I'll marry again if I get the chance!" She repeated.

There was a long silence.

"About your house, May," Dick said presently, "the people who are living in it leased it for five years. What do you intend to do about them?"

Again May flushed. "Well," she began slowly, "I—I have a friend here in the real estate business. I thought I'd go to see him about the house, this morning."

"I can take care of it, you know," Dick said.

But May shook her head. And that was the last the Gregoryses heard about May's house for a good many months.

Ulysses X. Forgan sat in his office at high noon of that same day, looking at the visiting card he held in his hand.

"Mrs. May Lucas Seymour," he read aloud to the office boy who stood at attention beside him. "That must be the widow of Dr. Seymour. Yes, Sandy, that must be Dr. Seymour's widow. They say she was a pretty high flyer. Bring her in, and leave the door open as you go out."

Chaperoned thus by a freckled office boy, Ulysses X. Forgan first saw May Seymour.

She did not, he admitted to himself, look like a "high flyer." Her eyes, under her black hat, was shadowy and soft. There was no rouge on her cheeks. And he couldn't tell whether her lips were painted, or were naturally that geranium-red.

May used the most expensive lipstick on the market.

"Mr. Forgan?" she said, in a gentle voice that Gloria Gregory would never have recognized as belonging to May.

She laid one of her bare, ringed hands in Ulysses' hard, brown palm, and then drew it away, very softly and lingeringly.

"I've heard my husband speak of you so often," she said. "My husband—Dr. John Seymour."

"Oh, yes," Ulysses said harshly, looking down at the whole hand she had touched. "You mean you'd heard him speak of me in his lifetime, don't you? He's been dead for quite a while, hasn't he?"

May didn't answer. She sank into a chair, and bent her graceful head. When she spoke again, she did not meet Ulysses Forgan's eyes, that were like brown agate.

"I came to see you about selling my house," she said. "There are some people living in it who have leased it for five years. But they like it, and would like to buy it."

"Huh!" Ulysses' voice was deep and rough. "Huh! You don't want to sell that house! You want to hang on to it! Values around that part of town are going up all the time. You can sell the lot alone for three times what the whole place is worth, five years from now."

May raised her eyes for a short but telling encounter with those of Ulysses X. Forgan. One hand went to her breast.

"You don't understand," she faltered in a voice of piercing sweetness. "Mr. Forgan, I want to get rid of that house—now! It was in that house that my husband killed himself, and this whole town is so full of—of dreadful memories to me that I want to go away from it, for good!"

Her voice broke, and to the immense horror of Ulysses X., his beautiful caller burst into tears.

BOOTLEGGERS WAILS WHEN HIS POISON HITS THE GUTTER

Dallas, Oct. 1.—When a bootlegger was arrested last week by Sheriff Schuyler Marshall, he didn't protest being locked up nor did he consider the seriousness of his offense, but he howled long and loud when they poured the contraband into the sewer.

That's some of the best stuff in town. That Scotch is worth $12 a quart. It's a shame to pour it out, he wailed, indicating that his nationality might be the same as that of the liquor. Despite the fact that the bootlegger named five prominent Dallas attorneys as his best friends, and asked that the booze be distributed among his friends, it was poured out and he was put in.
