

FDR Gives No Hint About New Justice

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 (AP)—Picking a successor for Associate Justice James Clark McReynolds on the supreme court bench became a major occupation in the capital today, and the name most frequently mentioned in the unofficial speculation was that of Attorney General Jackson.

President Roosevelt kept his own counsel and the White House was barren of hints as to who would receive the sixth supreme court appointment Mr. Roosevelt has had since taking office.

As far as conjecture went, the field was wide open and the number of potential contenders grew with the passing hours. Suggestions were made that the new justice be a westerner, a southerner, a midwesterner, an easterner, a republican.

Even those with other ideas conceded, for the moment, that Jackson had the edge, as the most probable choice. Some, however, thought the coveted post might go to Senator Byrnes (D-S.C.), whose nomination would satisfy those who believe a southerner should be picked. It was reported that three democratic colleagues of great influence—senate majority leader Barkley (Ky.) and Senators Harrison (Miss.) and Glass (Va.)—urged Byrnes' choice in a late conference with Mr. Roosevelt yesterday.

Besides Jackson and Byrnes, others discussed included:

Francis Biddle, solicitor general; Thurman Arnold, assistant attorney general; Senator Barkley; Charles Fahy, assistant solicitor general; Senator Wagner (D-N.Y.); Samuel O. Bratton, circuit court judge in the tenth federal district and former democratic senator from New Mexico; Robert F. Patterson, undersecretary of war, a republican; Lloyd K. Garrison, dean of University of Wisconsin law school; James M. Landis, dean of Harvard law school and former chairman of the securities commission; Robert M. Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago; Samuel Roseman and Ferdinand Pecora, judges of the New York supreme court; Donald R. Richberg, former NRA administrator.

Balanced Rock Falls After 1,000 Years' Threat

FARMINGTON, N. M., Jan. 28 (AP)—Threatening rock finally has fallen—1,000 years or more after it first frightened the people of prehistoric Pueblo Bonito, and possibly scared them away from their "town beautiful."

The rock's teetering 30,000 tons crashed from a northwestern New Mexico cliff yesterday onto the north wall of the ruins and smashed a section of four-story terraced houses.

Ranger L. T. McKinney noticed a heavy tremor about noon and the crash came at 3:24 p. m. with a tremendous roar.

Debris and pieces of the sandstone slab, 100 feet on a side and 50 feet thick, were showered over a section of the ruins, but with little damage.

McKinney reported that heavy rains and snows of the last six weeks probably had loosened the underpinnings.

Dr. Donald Brand of New Mexico university, who has supervised much of the archaeological excavation in the section, said damage probably would be only to a relatively small segment of the ruins.

The movement of threatening rock has been increasing in recent years, park service engineers found, but several years ago decided against tying the rock to the cliff with cables because it would "last another 1,000 years anyway."

Bonitans moved out of their "town beautiful," one of the largest of southwestern ruins, almost a mass in about 1200 A. D., 300 years after they bulwarked threatening rock with masonry and timber to steady its creaking.

Power Offered Capital To Build New Power Plant

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 28 (AP)—Reliable sources said today the government had been offered $2,000,000 in United States capital for the construction of a new hydroelectric plant to overcome the federal district's serious power shortage.

These sources said the offer had been made to the ministry of national economy by an unidentified group of U. S. financiers.

Call For Faith In Democracy

One of the troubles with our democracy is that we have been taking it too much for granted. While it was being kicked around by the dictators and denounced as an inefficient and slap-happy form of government, the American democracy was passing through a revolution as complete as any that had gone before.

It was a call to sinners to repent and turn once more to full faith and confidence in their form of government—because "democracy is not dying." For "we know it cannot die—because it is built on the unhindered initiative of individual men and women joined together in a common enterprise—an enterprise undertaken and carried through by the free expression of a free majority."

Senator Reynolds New 'Mayor'

WASHINGTON—Meet the new "mayor" of Washington. He's Sen. Robert Rice Reynolds of North Carolina and he gets his title of mayor because he has just been elevated to chairmanship of the senate district of Columbia committee which handles all affairs of the district in the upper house.

He jumped from comparative obscurity into the senate in 1932. He made the leap by way of an old jalopy and a dinner menu from one of Washington's most fashionable hotels. The jalopy gave him the down-to-earth, man-from-the-dirt-roads background and the dinner menu from the hotel where his opponent was living gave him ammunition.

Wodehouse Hits Jackpot Again

NEW YORK—If P. G. Wodehouse is ever up against it for a title for one of his books I will recommend one to him. It is a line that appeared on page six of the Sunday book section of the New York Times, and it said, simply, "Wodehouse As Usual."

For over forty years I have a notion that I know a good deal more about it than most people. In that long period I have seen a number of bright stars creep shyly over the horizon, travel across the sky to burn for a while in midheaven with dazzling brilliance, and then dwindle into an obscurity from which there is little likelihood that they will ever emerge again.
