from the desk of Uel D. Thompson, Beef Cattle Specialist, Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Beef cattle which have been on dry ranges for the past six months are faced with serious nutritional deficiencies. The first deficiency is a lack of sufficient range grass or forage. It is further complicated by the low quality or absence of sufficient total digestible nutrients. This kind of roughage contains little or no protein, energy, phosphorus or Vitamin A. Decisions are difficult to make during such stress periods. One management practice is to attempt to get animal units corrected to forage supply. Calves may be weaned earlier than usual or creep fed to help relieve grazing pressure and thus improve cow condition. Less replacement cattle should be kept and herd culling is always in order. Non-breeders, slow breeders, irregular breeders,

A good set of peaches or plums from the trees which are now in full bloom is not a certainty, Insects can damage the fruit or even 'wipe-out'' the crop if not controlled.

Insect control on fruit trees is largely a preventive program. Once the insects begin to cause damage, little can be done to red the fruit of the pests and prevent further damage. Most of the common fruit damaging insects begin their activity and reproduction during the first 30-45 days after the trees begin to bloom. Therefore, insecticides applied during this early period will control the insects which damage the fruit later in the season. Homeowners with a few trees are advised to follow a preventive spray program. Malathion or methoxychlor, either in the wettable powder or emulsiable concentrate forms; are effective. They are not hazardous when used as directed and will not leave a residue.

We recommend four spray applications, timed to coincide with bloom and fruit formation. The first or petal fall spray should be applied when about 3/4 of the blossom petals have fallen. The second or shuck split spray should be made in about 10 days. The third spray should follow the second in 10 to 14 days and the fourth spray should follow the third in 14 to 21 days.

Should later infestations become damaging, a spray containing carbaryl (Sevin) will give good control. It can be safely used on peach es and plums up to the day before harvest.
