Hopefully, if things work out correctly, the clubs will also be having a program this month of Self-Protection for women, presented by an educational representative from the Texas Department of Public Safety.

Here are some housekeeping New Year's resolutions I read, made by a weary housewife. These are just a few to think about the third one sounds extra

1. Stage a sit-down strike. For example, don't stand up when you can sit down to do your cooking preparations like chopping up vegetables, rolling pie crusts, etc. Other household jobs also lend themselves to sit-down tactics.

2. Stop being a conveyor belt. Make up separate sets of cleaning equipment for bathrooms and kitchen (other areas, too if needed). That way the cleaning gear is where you're at.

3. Make use of the 25th hour of the day. This is the time for yourself to take an uninterrupted tub, a short rest or read that book.

Dozing Driver

Too little sleep, like too much liquor, can turn even the mildest motorist into a deadly menace. If a driver dozes off and has an accident, is he legally liable for the consequences?

The law starts with the proposi tion that no one should be blamed for what he does while unconscious. Blame rests on free will misused-and the sleeping person is not using free will at

But one court after another has nonetheless imposed liability on the dozing driver. They find him negligent not for what he does while asleep but for disregarding, while still awake, the telltale signs that sleep was coming. "It is true," said one court, "that (the driver) can not ordinarily fix the precise moment when he lapses into unconsciousness. But it is not true that ordinarily sleep comes unheralded.

It lies within his own control to keep awake or cease driving."

Background factors, contributing to the danger, are also taken into account. One driver had been at the wheel continuously for 18 hours; another was exhausted from overwork; a third had kept going after twice almost "fading out." In each case, when the driver dozed off, he was held liable for the results.

Suppose it is the passenger, not the driver, who falls asleep. Does the law frown on that too?

Occasionally the passenger does have a duty to stay awake when he has some special reason to think that the driver needs watching. But as a rule he may nap at will, putting his trust in the driver to take care.

In one case a woman in the back seat dozed off and slumped against the driver's seat, pushing forward and knocking his hands off the steering wheel. In the crash that followed, the driver was injured.

Could he collect damages from the woman on the theory that her falling asleep was an act of negligence? A court said no, because a passenger could scarcely be expected to anticipate such a freakish accident just from falling asleep.

"(She) was required to exercise foresight," said the court, "not clairvoyance."

He picked up soil test cartons and mailing cartons | Phosphorus and potash, up to a hundred pounds to the acre, were recommended by Jim Valentine at Lubbock last year. "It sure worked for me", said Boyds ton. "The alfalfa looked as good in one place as another." you're getting the results you want, perhaps a soil test would be a waste of time, but if you're not, come by and pick up some soil sample cartons.
