GUNTER IS MODEL FOR NEW MEXICO ARTIST

Editors note: Ab Gunter is a product of Wheeler, Texas. He was born here. He lived here, save the time he spent in military service, until sometime in the late 1960's. He then, with his family, wife Bonita and four children, moved to Ruidoso, N.M. Ab, having many abilities has served his community in a number of ways. He has been involved in Law Enforcement, Race Track Security, Antique dealer, City Government and other things. We are proud to present this write-up taken from"The Best Bet," a guide, to entertainment, published by Gi Gi Enterprises of Ruidoso, N.M. The drawing, with Ab as a model, was on the cover of "Best Bet," July issue, was done by artist Gary Meyers. ABOUT THE COVER

Gary Myers, well known artist in Ruidoso, is always looking for models. His favorite is Ab Gunter. The brush and ink painting on canvas for this month's cover was done by Myers using Ab as his model. The painting belongs to Lamar Osborne, vice-president of Ruidoso State Bank, and hangs in his office there. Myers thinks that Ab is the greatest model that ever lived and has used him as the subject for many paintings. A watercolor by Myers using Ab as a model was shown at the Cowboy Hall of Fame at the Royal Western Watercolor Show in Oklahoma City in 1976. A lady in Hereford, Texas now owns the painting.

Ab has an uncanny likeness to the late Will Rogers but this is not why Myers chooses him so often for a subject. To Myers, Ab has the look of the genuine rustic cowboy. However, when people viewed the watercolor at the Cowboy Hall of Fame, he was asked many times why he chose Will Rogers for a subject!

Ab has lived in Ruidoso for many years and now serves on the Village Council. He also writes a column called "Aint it The Truth" and we welcome that column to this month's issue. It will be a regular in The Best Bet.

Editor and Publisher-Jerry Shaw.

"Gwendolen" was written by Clare Darcy. The moment she saw the tall, gallant figure of Captain Henry Belville, R. N., gagement. However, she is soon lovely, young Gwendolen Quarters fell madly in love with him. It was true that Gwendolen's had been brief and that their entirely by correspondence. But when Captain Bellville returns and reveals himself to be pompous and overbearing-anything but the romantic naval hero of her imagination — she realizes she could never be happy with him, and breaks off their enemboiled in the confusions of her sister's affairs.

"The Smile of the Stranger," acquaintance with the Captain by Joan Aiken, begins in Florence in a shop on the Ponte courtship had been conducted Vechio one early autumn day when a tall imperious, somewhat sinister English lady asked a question of a young girl. Juliana Paget was seventeen, the only daughter of the historian Charles Elphinstone. The rumblings of the French Revolution, the threat of invasion, and a suspeciously inquisitive stranger force the pair to flee the country and take their chances crossing France to England. When Juliana saves an innocent traveler from the gallows she does-more than she knows. She finds herself at the mercy of an inheritance she does not understand.
