The Telegram Speaks

Congressman Can't Talk Just As Citizen Once He Takes An Oath

Just as it is impossible for an employer to talk to his employees merely as a friend and not as their boss, it is impossible for a U. S. congressman to talk to the Texas Highway Commission as a private citizen and not a member of the United States House of Representatives.

Rep. W. R. Poage of Waco knows this as well as anyone. And Rep. Poage knew full well the meaning behind his official protest of the routing of Highway 6 through Eastland. A few years ago Bob Poage could have made his protest to the Commission and it would have gained little if any attention. Today, however, the Commission must take into consideration Federal highway appropriations so a United States congressman's protest gains a powerful

Rep. Poage would prefer to see Highway 6 rerouted around Eastland. Now this is interesting, to say the least. We wonder why Bob Poage didn't object to the same highway going through the city of Waco. It is interesting to us to note that the highway follows Valley Mills Drive in Waco until it hits La Salle Street. The highway, by the way, crosses over Lake Waco. Surely a more economic route could be found. Cong. Poage has no right to step in and kill a valuable mprovement for the city of Eastland simply because his mother-in-law doesn't like a highway in front of her home. His mother-in-law has every right to protest as a private citizen, but when Poage took office as U. S. congressman he should have realized it is not an office to be used for personal gain. We appreciate the fact that Poage seems to think he knows more about highway construction than all the engineers in the Highway Department. However, we are inclined to think that he is slightly overrating himself.

By the way, if you're interested, the following highways go through Waco, where Poage is suppose to concern himself: 6, 31, 77, 81, 299, 340, 434 and 1637.

BRUCE PIPKIN'S

Since 1951.

There has been no increase in Texas Electric Service Company's prices for electric service since 1951. In the meantime prices of almost everything else you buy have gone up.

We are proud of our record of holding the price line in the face of nine years of continued inflation, during which the costs of nearly everything we use in our business, as well as wages, have increased. Since most folks are using more electricity today, many of them don't realize that the average price paid for a kilowatt-hour of electric service by our residential customers is lower now than it was in 1950.

Skilled employees and bigger, more efficient power generating units and application of new processes—along with increased sales of electricity-have helped us keep the price of electric service low.

But these efficiencies and savings are not offsetting today's higher costs of doing business, and Texas Electric is asking for a nominal adjustment in rates for electric service. The maximum increase of any residential customer's monthly bill in Eastland as a result of this adjustment will be 32 cents, or 1.1 cents per day.

The new residential rate schedule, which does not include the old demand feature, provides a special low rate for electric hot water heating. Another attractive feature is a low rate for electric household heating in the winter months.

Electric service will continue to be the biggest bargain in your family budget,
