B. W. Howell is getting quite a kick out of his work with the Odd Fellows in promoting softball play for the grownups particularly among the lodges. He was in the office Friday afternoon and gave us an outline of their plans. (You'll read it elsewhere in today's issue). Well, there's a lot of fun to be had at it, as all who've tried it know.

Marene Johnson was in Cisco the other night when the town was "covered" with hailstones and saw an extremely unusual sight. "It was several inches deep on the ground," she recalls. "The earth was warm from recent high temperatures and the hail coming into contact with it brought about a vapor which made a sort of eerie veil. It was worth a journey to see.'

There was a casualty at Norris Wilson's the evening of the storm. His guage was blown over before he could check the rainfall.

All of us admire brave people Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Gibson exhibit ed a lot of fortitude the other night when the twister snatched the roof off their home and rain and of the heavily damaged residence. Instead of getting panicky about it, they took it all with a lot of good humor and resignation.

a regular ant hill next to the concrete one. Ants would perish without castles to build.

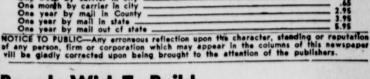

Socialism is much like the hypothetical concrete ant hill. It shouts Utopia and its sponsors promise a life of security. But it has in the past torn down the people's accumulated savings. What if socialism could give cradle to the grave security? That alone would leave man as lost as the ant in a concrete hill.

A republic of free men is based on the premise that the individual can build his own castle at his own risk instead of living in a cubicle provided by the state. With incentive as an urge to produce, man pushes himself to the highest standard of living.

The energy of man must find an outlet in building, as much as the ant. The creative spirit cannot be static.

People Wish To Build How would people get along in an aimless, socialistic life? It's interesting to ponder. And we recall this story: If ants were provided with a concrete ant hill, what would they do? In all probability they would start building

A Tribute To Our Dentists!

Wittily it has been said that dentists are the men who put teeth in our longer-life expectancy. How true that is, every man and woman in this community knows. Your dentist is a sincere specialist. Oral hygiene is his life's work. He knows the bone structure and diseases of your teeth as scientifically as your physician knows the most sensitive tissues of your body. Equipped with years of schooling and practice, not to mention his considerable investment in most-modern instruments for dental surgery, your dentist is a contributor to your health and happiness. See him at least twice a year!

Safety Head Urges Periodical Auto Checks

"Is your car accident prone?" E. C. McFadden of Dallas, Vice-President, Employers' Casualty company and President, Texas Safety Association, Inc. asked that question of Texas drivers today, and he warned them that they could not answer it accurately if they had not had their cars safety checked recently.

McFadden spoke in behalf of the vehicle safety check program which is recommended by the Texas Safety Association, Department of Public Safety and the National Safety Council.

"It is the civic duty of every driver to see that his car gets a complete mechanical check-up,' McFadden said, "beause a car in unsafe mechanical condition is a menace to the community.

He added that only a check of the 10 major safety points by a qualified mechanic can give a car clean bill of health. He listed the 10 points as follows: brakes, headlights, rear and stop lights, tires, wheel alignment, exhaust system F. C. Davison v. J. B. Moore, and muffler, windshield wipers, glass, horn, and rear-view mirror. In addition to periodic professional checks, McFadden advised Moore, defendant, garnish- drivers to check constantly for obvious danger signs such as loss of C. V. Fox v. George Valos, et al, brake efficiency, excessive tire wear, unsatisfactory windshield

"At the first sign of trouble," he said, "the conscientous driver will have the necessary repairs made. Such foresight can save his In the Matter of Zelda Sandler own life and the lives of others."

She looks to you for a real answer. She knows what she must do when the sirens sound at school. But what happens if they sound when she's at home? Will you be ready, like teacher is? Ready to protect her from harm? Ready to help her if she is hurt?

An atomic blast is something like a tornado, a fire and an explosion all rolled into one. Any of these may happen any day. They do happen every day, somewhere. But when they happen all at once, lots of people get hurt. Everybody needs help at the same time—and it may be hours before it comes to your home.

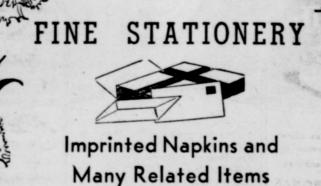

<sup>1</sup> U. S. Civil Defense, working with doctors and atomic scien-tists, has developed a list of "must" disaster first-aid supplies. These few simple items may already be in your home or, if not, you can get them at any drug counter. For the sake of your children, your neighbors and yourself, these supplies should be in your home—and you should know how to use them.
