"Mother Steele" (Continued from page 1) The vocation of the Susan B. Steele Bible Class and following this Mrs. C. C. Robey read a letter from Judge J. R. Stubblefield who was prevented by illness from being present.

Mr. R. P. Jones paid a tribute in verse which was as unique in its cleverness as it was in the sweet sentiment which it was not generally conceded to exist between a man and his mother-in-law.

Rev. G. W. Shearer then spoke, giving a brief resume of Mrs. Steele's life since she came to Eastland fifty two years ago.

When Mrs. J. E. Hickman had gracefully closed the program with a prayer the guests rose from their places.

My Mother-In-Law Mrs. S. E. Steel, On Her Birthday, 1841-1931. Besides my own dear sprightly mother, She's dearer to me than any other.

With whom I took one Holy vow, My Steele was ever kind to me—I know that she will always be. Her heart is pure as shining gold, And will be when she's a hundred.

Methodist church is her first big love, Each chicken of hers is a turtle dove, But Finch is her passion—and every night, She'll have a game or have a fight.

And hope each will bring her a happy birthday, May she live long and prosper, A Son-in-law.

Rev. Shearer said that the Christian religion does not rest on faith alone, but that there comes a time in the life of every Christian when he borrows a part of his faith and demands an understanding of certainty, just as the child has faith in his parents without being able to explain, but the time comes when an explanation and understanding takes place of faith, and here is lost in the actualities and realizations of life.

vice shows the onion crop to be late but in good shape. The fall acreage of Irish potatoes was five times that of last year. The 53 cars which were shipped were only a fraction of the total but were greatly in excess of the 4 cars shipped last season.

Carrots began moving in December with 9 cars being shipped. This compares with 26 cars during the corresponding month of 1929. Final production is expected to be about 1,771,000 bushels; this is one-third larger than last season, although the estimated acreage is only 3 per cent greater. The yields per acre were exceptionally low last season.

A marked increase in fall tomato acreage did not result in a similar increase in shipments, which totaled 192 cars during the last four months of 1929, compared to 335 cars during the corresponding period of 1929. Shipments of fruit and vegetables during December, 1929, as compared with the corresponding month of 1929, were as follows: Mixed vegetables, 580 cars in 1929 and 655 in 1929; spinach, 1,275 bags in 1929 and 815 in 1929; cabbage, 227 cars in 1929 and 129 in 1929; grapefruit, 398 cars in 1929 and 859 in 1929; sweet potatoes, 77 cars in 1929 and 169 in 1929; cauliflower, 1 car in 1929 and 34 in 1929; tomatoes, 118 cars in 1929 and 51 in 1929; oranges, 6 cars in 1929 and 22 in 1929; potatoes, 52 cars in 1929 and 10 in 1929; string beans, 10 cars in 1929 and 12 in 1929; mixed citrus fruit, 46 cars in 1929 and 159 in 1929; eggplant, 2 cars in 1929 and 13 in 1929; and carrots, 9 cars in 1929 and 26 in 1929.

The total shipments for December are expected to total 2,817 cars, compared to 3,008 cars in December 1929.

Meals are served three times a day and you can eat all you can eat with it.

Rev. Stuber has conducted his mission for the past 16 years and serves between 200 and 250 meals a day.

GINGER'S SAKE

by ETHEL HUESTON
©1930 THE BOBBIS-MERRILL CO.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
Ginger Ella Tolliver was bored. Her father was a minister, and her stepmother a very wealthy woman, but life in the little town of Red Thrush, Iowa, ran too slowly to suit her and her set. So she announced to her friends, Eddy Jackson, Patty Sears and Wesley Meeker, that she was going to start a Home for the Bored.

To Jenky Brooks, wife of old Benny Brooks, an ally in whom she could trust implicitly, she confided her intention of organizing a Junior Country Club. She asked Jenky to act as her agent in the purchase of the Mill Rush farm, a 10-acre tract with an old farm house, from Joplin Westbury. The rest of her plans were still in her head, unformulated.

"And," she told Jenky, "be sure and bring him down to the store. About half of what he asks will be right."

To Jenky, who, with her husband, was to be chairman, the venture promised a great many dollars saved, as a summer on the farm would mean a trimming of living expenses. The house on Mill Rush held interesting possibilities for an investment as fertile as Ginger's. On the other hand, it was doing its present owner no good, and he was anxious to sell. Westbury finally got down to $2000, whereupon Jenky said she would have to ask Ginger's advice.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER IV
But Joplin Westbury did not want to sell to Ginger Ella. He knew Ginger from of old and was well aware that she was not above turning a neat financial trick herself when she had a good chance. And he had no intention of letting this sale slip through his fingers.

Before Jenky was down the stairs he had Ginger on the telephone. "Say, little bond-holder," he began cheerfully, "for he and Ginger were great friends. "I guess you're not so over-nourished on banknotes but what you'll turn an honest dollar if you see your way clear, eh?"

"I hope to tell you," declared Ginger illuminatingly. "Well, now you know that school teacher that used to live with you at the parsonage—whe married that blind man—Yeh, Brooks, Mrs. Brooks. Well, she wants to buy a little piece of land from me, and she's going to ask your advice about it."

"Now, you know me, Ginger. I make a sale when I can. You give her the right advice, and the day she signs up for it, I'll send you my check for $100. That's what I think of your opinion. Guess that's a fair enough proposition."

"It certainly is," agreed Ginger. "And I think I can advise her to your satisfaction if the price is right."

"Well, I'm going to make it right. Now, I'm asking $2000, but I won't stick at 1800. Listen, Ginger, just between us, I'd let it go for 1500, 250 down and 25 a month. Now, tell you what I'll do. Anything we get out of her over 1500, I'll give you 10 per cent, and in addition to your hundred. The land's good enough, but I can't rightly use it myself, and the farmers don't seem to fancy it."

Ginger laughed delightedly. "That's just corking," she said. "I'll see what I can do. You're a great old sport, Joppy, and I think we can do business."

Her confidence was not ill-advised. They did do business, and within 24 hours Ben and Jenky Brooks had bought Mill Rush for $1500, paying $250 down. And Ginger had a check for $100, which she generously divided with Jenky, to that woman's boundless delight.

The news that Ben and Jenky Brooks had taken over the Mill Rush place to operate as a sort of summer home for themselves and a general club for the youth of Red Thrush created a sensation in the community but on the whole met with a surprisingly favorable reaction.

Ben and Jenky were well liked, and had the respect and the goodwill of every one in town. The hope that they would do well and make money out of the enterprise upon which they had so boldly embarked was unanimous. That Ginger should sweep into immediate dominance of all arrangements caused no surprise at all, for she had always been known as Jenky's general boss, taking entire credit even for the marriage of the strangely assorted pair, and considering them in a unique way to be her personal proteges.

Naturally in a move of such magnitude, Ginger instead of either of them should play the leading role.

The more ardent and active members of the regular Country Club frankly admitted that they would be glad to be rid of what they impatiently called "those youngsters." It is not easy for middle-aged parents to indulge in foolish frivolity before the amazed and disapproving eyes of growing-up sons and daughters.

Even in the forties, former village belles (take no real pleasure in being relegated to the comfortable chairs along the wall during the best dances, and the daughters were now come of an age to be greatly sought as partners even by men old enough to have better judgment.

The younger generation of both sexes had grown so startlingly good at sports as to keep their most agile elders on the constant defensive to retain their laurels, a state of affairs entirely too vigorous for warm Iowa summers.

An even more practical objection to the free use of the Country Club by the juniors was the fact that it was almost impossible to stock provisions enough to satisfy their never-ending thirsts and hungers for they seemed to be entirely lacking in the modern calory-consciousness.

The consensus was, give them a club of their own by all means, and if we have to help support it, we will.

The more conservative members of the social set felt that the safest and sanest thing to be done for the children was to get them away from their elders in the social life. Certainly their prudence was less likely to suffer early defilement if kept in complete segregation from the daring unconventionalism that had overtaken so many parents at middle age.

The robust middle class was particularly pleased, reckoning that the hours of gay, exhausting bodily labor that confronted their children in the renovation of Mill Rush could not fail to contribute the red blood, sturdy muscles and becoming tan quite incompatible with the tea-drinking, incense-burning, cocktail-shaking amusements to which the upper classes had become addicted. So many hard-working people try to comfort themselves with the notion that a healthy body is father of a healthy mind.

But among them all not one was more genuinely delighted than Phil herself, who had observed the signs of mental depression in her pretty stepdaughter with increasing concern. In the beginning of their life together she had tried—as the rich are prone to do—to insure her contentment with love-ly, costly gifts, with pretty clothes and with expensive tours.

Ultimately she thought it would be a good thing for Ginger to marry Eddy Jackson, in which case she planned for them a house and finely equipped laboratory for Eddy's agricultural experiments in the outer fringe of Doorndee, where they would have the freedom and privacy to which every young couple is entitled, but where she and Mr. Tolliver, when he had retired from active participation in church affairs, could joyously superintend the development of the future "little Gin and Ginger," as Ginger herself flippantly referred to her hypothetical progeny of later date.

Eddy, Phil told herself, was a nice boy and he understood Ginger. Best of all he had a sense of humor, was, in fact, what Ginger called a real human being and had fallen in love with Ginger in her days of bare-skinned knees.

It frequently happened that Ginger was tied up with engagements with different college boys home for vacation, or with the friends who came with them, in which case she usually managed to work Eddy into the party as an escort for her friend, Patty Sears. That was really where in lay Pat's greatest value—in taking Eddy off her hands and yet keeping him in the party.

For Eddy was a powerful ally, a valuable addition to any party. He was older than the others and he never lost his head. The townspeople liked and trusted him, regarding him as a sort of reliable balance for the heedlessness of the average youth, and more than once he had been efficacious in extricating his associates from the embarrassing difficulties their immature emotionalism had goaded them into.

Ginger's own emotions, as far as men were concerned, were in a state of safe but deadly somnolence. She was not at all sure that she believed in love; her personal opinion was that she probably did not. Love, she found, was apt to be either rough or messy, and neither manifestation appealed to her.

Also, as she cheerfully confided to Phil, "if occasionally one does let go for a minute and lapse into complete ecstacy—see Freud—one is so flushed and perspire the rest of the day it simply isn't worth it." Taken all together, she was against love. "Something to do," she said, "that's all people need."

England Learned Espionage Lesson During War. Military Secrets of John Bull Carefully Guarded Now

By RALPH HEINZEN
United Press Staff Correspondent
(Copyright, 1931, by United Press)

PARIS, Jan. 19.—England learned a lesson during the World War when she took the field for France to find an enemy which knew nearly as much about her army as her own war office.

John Bull's job in these post-war days is as much to keep his own information to himself, as it is to find out what is going on in a military, naval, industrial and commercial way across the Channel.

So much has England been able to hide of her movements that only a few months ago when a picked group of guests was invited to sit at the edge of a field and watch maneuvers by some new war instruments, the rest of Europe was taken completely by surprise.

Europe "Tipped Off"

Britain has not always been so fortunate, and although the utmost efforts were used to keep secret the first use of airplanes on submarines, a careless official in a government office "tipped off" the rest of Europe.

No other nation had conceived the idea of making a folding airplane which could be taken into the shell of a submarine, and then used to fly away from the ship on the wings of a wind or attack.

The idea was original in Europe at least. But one day the London Gazette printed a decree which appeared non-suspecting on the surface, but which caused the War Office chiefs to tear their hair and delighted military attaches in the Embassies and Legations of London.

Extra Pay

The "Gazette" decree merely settled the question of extra pay for flying officers serving on airplanes carried by submarines. That was all, but that blew up the bubble of secrecy. London newspapers, commenting on the fact, January 3, 1928 declared that the employe responsible had been punished.

The military and naval attaches give most governments their greatest trouble. Every government knows these attaches file regularly long reports on everything they see and hear concerning the offensive and defensive arms of other countries, but since their position in diplomatic circles is accepted nothing can be said.

As diplomats, they are immune from arrest, or bother by police for counter-espionage service. They must, out of politeness, be invited to army maneuvers, sham battles and great troop concentrations but they are never invited, and are, in fact, persona non grata around munition works, government arsenals and shipyards.

How It Works

Brigadier-General Stanley H. Ford, new military attaché at the American Embassy in Paris, recently publicly exposed the role of the army and navy attaches abroad. He is a former chief of U. S. military intelligence.

"The intelligence service of the armies and navies are an outgrowth of the necessity all governments feel of knowing what their neighbors are doing," General Ford said.

In the war department that agency is the military intelligence division commonly known as "G-2." But there is a distinction between information and intelligence. Information becomes intelligence when it has been evaluated and placed in usable form.

"There are many sources of information, but they can be classed under three heads: First, the printed word, magazines, publications, documents and newspapers.

Second: Other government departments, the State, Navy, Commerce and Justice departments with which we work very closely.

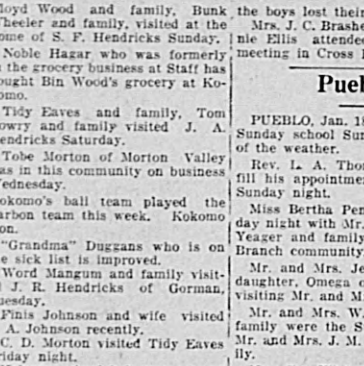

Third: The greatest arm of the information service, the military attaché system.

Attache Network

"Today the United States Government has a network of 93 military attaches in various parts of the world. Those attaches include what we call the 'special assistants,' officers selected from particular branches, such as the chemical and ordnance services. These attaches are stationed in 22 foreign capitals and in their reports they consider 48 countries.

"The procuring of military data is quite simple as to process. The securing of information is usually on the exchange basis—that is to say, the government desires its representative to obtain a certain

Athletics Bring $90,000 To The State University

AUSTIN, Tex., Jan. 18.—Profit on intercollegiate athletics at the University of Texas for the period September 1 to December 31, 1930, amounted to $90,022.28, according to compilations announced by the president's office. Of this profit, the bulk resulted from sale receipts of football games. Income for that period was $149,976.89, and expenditures totaled $59,954.61. Income for the remainder of the fiscal year, from December 31 to August 31, 1931, has been estimated at $12,500, while expenditures for the remainder of the year have been calculated at $69,543.31.

In addition to the $90,000 expenditures during the fall, a $10,000 pledge to the University Student Union fund was made, $28,500 was expended for the purchase of the Cavanaugh tract of land, and $10,724.88 was spent for bleachers, making a total of $49,229.38. This amount, coupled with the $48,284.69 deficit from September 1, makes a total of $97,513.97, which places the intercollegiate athletics account on a deficiency basis to the amount of $7,495.09. This deficit added to the estimated $55,751.21 deficit for the remainder of the fiscal year makes an estimated deficit on August 31, 1931, of $63,249.40. This figure is considerably higher than the deficits on the corresponding dates of preceding years. On August 31, 1928, the deficit was $28,711.62, on August 31, 1929, it was $37,829.29, and on August 31, 1930 it was $48,284.69.

The income from intercollegiate athletics during the football season exceeded the figure for the fiscal year of 1927-28 but fell quite a bit below the receipts for 1928-29 and 1929-30. In 1927-28, income amounted to $121,080.94, and expenditures totaled $57,697.33, with additional expenses of $47,712.94. In 1928-29, income amounted to $158,291.62, with expenditures amounting to $46,840.26 and additional expenses totaling $69,700. In 1929-30, income totaled $151,117.51, expenditures amounted to $112,796.44 and additional expenses required $33,576.60.

S. M. U. T. C. U. Lead Southwest Basketball Teams

By Bill Griffies
United Press Staff Correspondent
DALLAS, Jan. 19.—Southwest conference cagers swing into the third week of the season today with Texas Christian University and Southern Methodist University co-favorites for conference honors.

The week will see Baylor and Southern Methodist at Dallas Tuesday; Arkansas and T. C. U. at Fort Worth Friday; and Arkansas and T. C. U. at Fort Worth, Baylor and Texas at Austin, and Rice and Texas A. and M. at College Station Saturday.

Arkansas University, five-time champions, virtually relinquished all hopes of again acquiring the championship when the Texas Aggies displayed a re-vamped lineup, romped off with the heavy end of a 37 to 34 score at Fayetteville Saturday night after dropping the first of a 2-game series the night before to the lanky Arkansans, 28 to 19.

Texas University's North Texas invasion proved drastic for the Steers, but furnished conclusive evidence to forecasters that T. C. U. and S. M. U. goal pitchers will fight it out for the title. The Steers met their first downfall of the tour Friday night at Fort Worth when the Christian basketballers ran over them, 40 to 19. Then Saturday night the Methodists bowled them over, 51 to 32, at Dallas.

Adolph Dietzel, shifty center, led the T. C. U. rout with 18 points to his credit, running up a total of 39 points for the two games in which he has appeared since the conference competition began two weeks ago. Rhea Williams, Southern Methodist forward, went him better at Dallas the next night, marking up 21 points against the Steers at Dallas for a total of 41 points in the same number of games.

Rice came over from the losing side Saturday night after eking out a 37 to 33 victory over the Baylor Bears at Houston. It was the first game and placed them in the cellar position with Rice moving up next.

Leading Players Of International League Named

By United Press
NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—James Collins, Rochester first baseman, was the outstanding batsman in the International baseball league during the 1930 season, according to the official league figures released today.

Collins, in addition to leading the league with a percentage of .376, made the most number of hits, 234, most triples, 19, and batted in the most runs, 180. The latter figure broke the old record of 167 established by Del Bissonette of Buffalo, in 1927.

Joe Houser, Baltimore first baseman, was not far behind Collins in effectiveness at the plate. Houser scored the most runs, 173, hit for the most total of bases, 443, and led in home runs with 68. All of Houser's marks set new league records, and his home run total broke all records, major or minor.

George Torporcher, Rochester, made the most two-base hits, 49, and drew the greatest number of passes on balls, 125. Walter Gaudreau, Montreal, led in sacrifice hits with 48. Henry Haines, Montreal, led the base-stealers with 45, while Vincent Barton, Baltimore, qualified for a position as a first-class target by getting hit by pitched balls no less than 15 times.

Herb Thomas, Buffalo-Newark, led in times at bat with 667, and Albert Moore, Buffalo in singles with 155.

Collins and Torporcher of Rochester, and McGowan and Hauser of Baltimore, participated in all their club games.

Buffalo led in club batting with an average of .314, made the most hits, 1787, most singles, 1261 most doubles, 335, and drew most bases on balls, 646.

Baltimore went to bat the most times, 6732, scored most runs 1115, made the highest total of bases on hits, 2915 most home runs, 231, batted in most runs, 1052, and led in strikeouts with 838. The figures for total bases, home runs, runs batted in, and strike outs established new league records.

Rochester made the most three base hits, 112, and Montreal led in sacrifice hits with 229. Newark stole the most bases, 147, and took part in the most games, 169.

Extraordinary Cast Plays In War Nurse

What the old-time circus ads would undoubtedly have described as a "Glittering Galaxy of Scintillating and Superb Artists" is claimed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for the cast of "War Nurse," M-G-M's much-advanced, frank and realistic picture of woman's part in the war, which will open Tuesday at the Lyric Theatre for 2 days.

"War Nurse" was adapted by Becky Gardiner from the sensational novel which created such furor while it was running in a national magazine. Covering an unusually large number of characters, divided between war nurses and soldiers, the casting of the piece was a job of great importance of an effective woman's war story, said the director, Edgar Selwyn, carte blanche in the selection of one of the very few casts which really deserve the appellation, "all-star."

The plot of the picture concerns the actual life of a group of nurses in all the various kinds of hospitals, in the most advanced and modern to the bases. A double love action encompasses June Walker, the stage star of "Bachelor Fathers," (in her first screen part as Babe); Robert Montgomery, of "The Divorcee," and "The Big House," as "Wally"; Robert Ames, of "The Trespasser" and "Holiday," as Robin; and Anita Page, of "Our Blushing Brides," as Joy. The boys are aviators of the Lafayette Escadrille. The story starts in 1915. The nurses belong to one of the American nursing units, such as the "Red Cross" and "Volunteer" units, and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney and Mrs. J. Borden Harriman units, which worked with the French before the U. S. A. entered the war.

Zasu Pitts, recently seen in "Monte Carlo," has a strong role as the nurse Cushie; Marie Prehoss, long a star in her own right, has the top-comedy characterization as the smart-cracking Rosalie; Heien Jerome Eddy, remembered for "The Divine Lady" and "Midstream," serves as Kansas; Hedda Hopper comes to the role of the unit nurse; and "The Girl in the Red Coat," Edward Nugent, last seen in "Remote Control," plays one of the aviators; Martha Sleeper's success in "Madam Satan" won her the dramatic role of Helen; and Michael Vavitch of "The Gaucho" and "The Woman Disputed," plays the role of the army surgeon.

Way to Get At a Cold Is Through the Bowels

As soon as you catch cold, the pores close; perspiration is checked. Gases and waste can't escape through the skin. That's why your doctor's first advice in case of colds is a mild laxative like cascara. Medical authorities agree it actually strengthens bowel muscles. You get cascara in its most pleasant form in candy cascara.

Remember this when you catch cold; whenever breath is bad; tongue coated; or you're headachy, bilious, constipated.

Why resort to harsher things when Cascara activate the bowels so quickly, so harmlessly and pleasantly—and cost only a dime?
