CRACKS IN THE DOME

What a joker, officials are saying, as they discover what happened to the 55-cent sulphur tax, now less than a year old. The joker is that, after next July 1, all the sulphur tax revenues will go to the school fund. At present one fourth goes there by constitutional requirement.

As a result of this provision which seems to surprise practically every official now, the state is not so well off as it was before passing the new sulphur tax law, so far as general revenues and the chance to reduce property taxes are concerned. Then the state will lose three-fourths of the tax of about 18 cents per ton.

If this law is enacted, the present hanging up of practically every death-sentence execution by an interpleaded insanity trial will be abolished.

Rep. George Coltrin of Mathis has drawn a bill for attention of the January session to require an affidavit signed by a sheriff, county physician, or warden or chaplain of the penitentiary, before an insanity plea can be given recognition by the courts. At present, anybody other than the man's attorney can swear to belief a condemned man is insane. Recently, in the Maple case at Houston, it was found such an affidavit signed by a man who had admitted in court he had never seen Maple.

Touching taxes and tax reforms which promise to occupy much of the four-months session along with the appropriations, $48,000,000 to run the state for two years. Rep. Coltrin of Mathis has proposed his support of the proposal for a state income tax. Such an income tax was recommended to the legislature by Gov. Dan Moody last year. It may be included in his party's hot recommendations in January.

Some of the most skilled barbers in Texas forgot they must renew their state licenses Nov. 3, and hadn't thought of it before 30 days of grace expired a week ago. As a result, they must apply anew, must pay $10 license fees, and must stand the same examination as the newcomer.

Just because he had grown another tooth, Abraham Lincoln Greer of Beaumont must go to prison for 99 years on a murder charge, as a result of an unusual application of science to a criminal trial. A dentist said because Greer had grown a third molar it was convincing evidence that he was over 18 years old, thus above the limit for punishment merely as a juvenile.

If its penalties will suspend the right of a person to drive a car, Sen. W. A. Williamson, San Antonio, author of the highway patrol and much other traffic legislation, will favor the uniform code, universal driver's license law, he said here.

That penalty is better than a fine, he believes, just as the penalty of forced unloading of an overloaded truck is better than a fine.

Evidence Shows Millionaire Is Wife's Slayer

PORTLAND, Ore., Dec. 9.—The skin of circumstantial evidence drew closer about Nelson C. Bowles millionaire son of a wartime ship-builder, today when police announced 28 days after the crime they found his fingerprint on the knife which killed his wife. The impression, so blurred that prints of at least two dozen persons, closely and remotely connected with the crime, have been taken, was identified definitely today by Sydney Payne, Bertillon, expert of the police bureau, as the little finger of Bowles right hand. This was considered as one of the most significant bits of evidence disclosed since the body of Mrs. Leofie C. Bowles, beautiful society matron, and mother of two girls, was found by police in a private mortuary after she had died in the apartment of Irma Loucks, Bowles' former stenographer. Bowles and Miss Loucks are in the county jail awaiting grand jury action on charges of first degree murder of the woman who went to Miss Loucks' apartment on the morning of November 12 to make one last request that they drop their clandestine love affair.

DALLAS, Dec. 9.—America must cease to sack its farms in order to build its cities, and must turn back to the soil if its civilization is to remain alive. This spoke a small, gray-haired Irish patriot and poet known as George Russell, but loved as simple A. E.

Definition Of Life Is To Be Sought Soon

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—The age old search for a definition of life will be renewed at Cleveland later this month by the American Association for the Advancement of Science, with the study of artificially generated things that creep and reproduce their kind. Bions, or artificially developed bits of matter that seem to be living, are reported to have been produced in the test tubes of Dr. George W. Crile of Cleveland. In three particular—ability to move, breed and reproduce—they answer the requirements of living things. But the line at the lower edge of the living world is so indistinct that there is bound to be lively discussion of whether or not Dr. Crile's creatures can be said really to be alive.

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON—The organized dries, who have watched the Republican and Democratic parties form by disagreement about prohibition, also find themselves in a state of dissension and discord. Angry at a lack of leadership in their movement and the failure to combat the recent wet trend with vigor, prominent dries are coming to the big dry conventions here early in December.

There will be a strong, organized attempt to produce a dry generalissimo comparable in stature to the late Wayne B. Wheeler. The dissatisfied lieutenants in the dry army also hope for a federated agency of their various organizations which will carry on a constant, centralized warfare in defense of the Volstead act and the eighteenth amendment.

No one has succeeded to Wheeler's mantle. Instead, there is a divided command in the dry movement, with various factions paying allegiance to such leaders as General Superintendent P. Scott McBride of the Anti-Saloon League, Dr. Clarence True Wilson of the Methodist Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals, young Stanley High of the Christian Herald and Ernest H. Cherrington, head of the league's educational work and the World League Against Alcoholism.

Cannon Is Broken It seemed for a while as if Bishop James Cannon of Virginia was to become the recognized spokesman and leader of all dries. But now Cannon lies broken in health, prestige and influence. Few men have collapsed so quickly and completely after rising to what seemed to be heights of power.

The malcontents in the dry ranks who now demand genuine leadership and aggressive action include some of the ablest workers for the cause, among them certain state superintendents of the league. Unless dries really unite and fight, they declare, they can consider themselves badly licked.

Living things have the power of motion, ability to absorb food and oxygen, and the power of reproduction. But for every property of life there will be found non-living things that appear to answer the requirements.

It is stated that Dr. Crile's "bionas" show the simplest form of non-sexual reproduction. But division into two units, each of which takes up an independent entity, is something that bits of the more complicated colloids go through, even without being alive. Other non-living colloids have been given the semblance of motion by immersion in salt solutions.

Markets

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—The stock market advanced on short covering today and most leading issues regained all of their early losses. The close was irregular. Trading volume was more active than yesterday and crossed the 2,000,000 share mark for the first time in two weeks.

The afternoon recovery was impressive particularly in the rails. Atchison touched a new low since 1927 at 177, off 1, and then came back to 181, up 3 points above the previous close and New York Central rose above 121, after making a new low since 1926 at 118 1/2, off 1 1/2.

U. S. Steel was the industrial leader, rallying more than three points from its low. Other industrials followed it up. Utilities came back with other groups. International Telephone made a new low for the present stock at 22 1/2, but rallied above 23 last.

Copper shares held well in anticipation of a favorable report on stocks on hand, due later this week. Oils were unaffected by the action of Richardson directors in passing the quarterly dividend of 43 1/2 on 82 1/2 par 7 per cent preferred stock, due for payment Feb. 1.

Commodity markets also presented a steadier tone today. Bonds reflected in early trading with rails under pressure, but prices firmed up from lows before the close.

Scientists Seek Extinct Race Of Eight Foot Men

HERMOSILLO, Sonora, Mex., Dec. 9.—A tiny engine toiled through a desert valley in the Southern Sonora today, carrying a band of American scientists on an expedition that may reveal the existence of a prehistoric race of giants. The expedition, led by Dean Byron H. Henshaw, state geologist of Arizona, is part of a series of expeditions of the University of California, Berkeley, to the southern part of the state, on the journey to where the excavations will start. The party left Hermosillo, capital of Sonora, for a conference with Governor Francisco Elias at which the importance of the expedition was outlined by Dr. Cummings. Three giant skeletons already have been discovered in a wild section of Sonora, south of Soyopa, the government, was told, and there are prospects that many more will be found. J. L. Coker, Sonora mining man and guide of the expedition, told how he came across the skeletons, all more than eight feet tall and with skulls a foot long, while excavating for a mine. The skeletons were those of a man and two women, the latter placed crosswise above the form of the man. The bones, fossilized after countless centuries, still bore the scars of human tracks, and around them were examples of highly developed pottery. The spot where Coker found the skeletons, presumably an ancient burial ground, lies 10 miles south of Tomiche, the village of Soyopa, the only remnant of civilization intervening. The expedition will travel there by automobile, but from that point only a burro train can proceed into the wilderness.

Bust Of Houston To Be Presented To San Antonio

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Dec. 9.—The 95th anniversary of the death of General Cos, with a view to evacuate this city and turn his troops to Mexico. Aho chapter, Daughters of the Republic of Texas, will present a bust of San Antonio on Thursday. Dec. 11, 1835, marked the centennial of the first period of the revolution, after which events rapidly to the climax of State's declaration of independence on March 2 and its ratification April 21. The Daughters designated this date as San Antonio day. Presentation ceremonies will be held in the Municipal auditorium Thursday afternoon. The bust, an unknown artist, will be placed in honor in the west part of the auditorium. The bust was presented to S. Smith by F. R. Lubbock, Mayor of Texas from 1861 to 1865, many years it stood on a desk in the old courthouse. It was at various times filed in the office of Mayor Alderman and city clerk. Since his death, it has been property of his daughter, Mrs. M. Olivari. She will present the city through the daughter Mayor C. M. Chambers will accept it.

Loughlin Life Term Hard Labor Waterways For Mid West States Are Advocated

By JOSEPH H. BAIRD
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—A vast system of inland waterways to afford the middle west the same cheap transportation now enjoyed by coastal states was advocated by Secretary of War Hurley today as at least a partial solution of the farm problem.

Speaking before the annual national rivers and harbor congress, Hurley called Mississippi river navigation improvement our "most important undertaking." He did not slight other developments. He stressed the Mississippi work, however, as necessary to "development of the great interior of this country."

Citing figures to show that manufacturing plants in the middle west had decreased from 55,968 in 1918 to 37,147 in 1927 Hurley ascribed this loss to the inability of Mississippi valley products to compete with the western manufactured goods of other sections. "We have a farm problem in the great middle west and nothing could contribute more to the solution of that problem than the building of industry in the midst of agriculture," Hurley said. "To do so, we must have cheaper rates from that great interior to the seaboard. The only practical method of getting cheaper rates for our bulk commodities is by the development of the Mississippi river and its tributaries."

Emphasizing the advantages of water or water and rail rates, Hurley called the all-rail rate on agricultural implements from Moline, Ill., to the Pacific coast is $1.86 per hundred pounds, while the water and rail rate, by rail to the Atlantic coast, then through the Panama canal to the Pacific coast is $1.18 per hundred pounds. The all-water rate down the Mississippi and thence through the canal is 75 cents per hundred pounds he added.

"The manufacturer can move his plant to the seaboard, but we cannot move our farms, and it is my conviction that nothing would contribute more to solve the farm problem of the great middle west than the development of cheap transportation in that section which will enable industry to develop in the midst of agriculture," he said.

Outlining the magnitude of the government's present waterway development program, Hurley said the 1929 appropriation was the greatest in history until that of 1930, $146,000,000, which surpassed it. The waterway program of President Hoover, he added, envisages 9,000 miles of navigable rivers and canals.

Sketching work now under way or needing to be done, Hurley mentioned, in addition to improvements of a number of miscellaneous rivers, the Atlantic intracoastal canal, the Gulf canal, channels between the Great Lakes, the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterways and the Illinois waterway.

State Employees Number 13,000 With 900 On Part Time

AUSTIN, Tex. Dec. 2.—There are 13,000 state employees on the regular payroll and 900 part-time state employees, Governor Dan Moody's office reported today to Col. Arthur Woods, chairman of President Hoover's unemployment committee.

The census taken by the governor's office at the request of the Woods committee shows that the State Highway Department alone has 5,500 employees. Col. Woods had asked figures also on the number of persons employed by state contractors. The governor was unable to furnish these.

BEGIN HERE TODAY Juanita Selim is murdered at bridge.

Bonnie Dundee, detective, orders the replaying of the "death hand." Penny Crain, Karen Marshall and Carolyn Drake play the hand, Nita having been "dummy." Judge Marshall and John Drake, entering separately, saw no one outside. Dexter Sprague, coming from the bus, entered the dining room with Janet Raymond, who was on the front porch. Janet accuses Lydia, the maid, of the crime because Lois Dunlap, in the dining room with Tracey Miles, had to ring twice for her, but Lydia says she was asleep from the effects of an anesthetic, that she did not go into Nita's room, and that she saw no one. Sprague says he knew Nita in New York, and that she suggested he get the contract for a Hamilton movie, planned by the Chamber of Commerce.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPKX XVII
At Judge Marshall's suddenly blurted-out recollection: "IT WAS NITA HERSELF WHO PUT THE GUN AWAY" there was a collective gasp of relief. Eyes could meet eyes—now. But it was Flora Miles who voiced the thought or hope that seemed apparent on every face.

"That's why I didn't hear anyone talking when I was in the closet," she cried, her voice almost hysterical in its vehemence. "There wasn't anybody but Nita in the room! She committed suicide! She stole poor Hugo's gun and the silencer and committed suicide!"

"At a distance of from 10 to 15 feet?" Dundee asked with ill-concealed sarcasm. "And when she was powdering her face? And just after entering the room, blithely singing a Broadway hit?"

"Maybe she had the right boy," Captain Strawn interposed mildly. "I've heard of people rigging up contrivances—"

"And of causing the gun and the silencer to disappear by magic?" Dundee demanded. "No, folks, I'm afraid the suicide theory is no good. . . . Now, Judge Marshall," and he turned again to the creator of the biggest sensation since the investigation into Nita Selim's death and got under way. "You say that Mrs. Selim herself put the gun away. Will you explain the circumstances?"

The elderly man's face had gone yellowish again. "Certainly," Nita Selim and I were the last to leave the back garden. She was—was particularly poor at the sport—never made a bull's-eye during the four or five Sunday mornings after Lois—Mrs. Dunlap—drew her into our set. She begged for a few more shots, and I stayed with her, after the others had gone into the house for—er—refreshment.

"She fired the last bullet in the chamber, and together we walked to the house, entering the little room at the rear where all sorts of sports equipment is kept—fishing rods and tackle, golf clubs, bows and arrows, skis, etc. She was carrying the gun, unscrewing the silencer as we walked. It is my habit to keep the pistol and the silencer in a drawer in a little corner cupboard—"

"Locked up?" Dundee asked

One-Pound Baby Thriving Now

A marvel to doctors who said she could never live, little Barbara Jean Rowley, Utah's tiniest baby, who at birth weighed only one pound and could wear a wedding ring for a bracelet, is now 23 months old—healthy, dainty creature with big brown eyes and light hair. Above, Barbara Jean is shown as she appears today; below, as a tiny baby in the arms of L. D. Rowley of Springville, Utah, who, with his wife, adopted her in the days when she was being fed with a medicine dropper.

house now, Judge, whom you can ask to look for it?"

"Certainly. The butler. . . . Shall I telephone him?" Accompanied by Captain Strawn, the ex-judge went to the telephone in the little foyer between Nita Selim's bedroom and the main hall. And within five minutes he was back, nodding his head gravely.

"Hinson tells me that the volt's and the silencer are both missing, sir. . . . May I express my profound regret that my possession of—"

"Some other time, Judge Marshall!" Dundee interrupted curtly, and hurried from the room, followed by Strawn, who nodded to Sergeant Turner, still lounging wearily in a far corner of the living room, to stand guard vigilantly.

"Well, Bonnie, here's the devil to pay," Strawn gloomed, but Dundee made for the telephone without answering.

He called a number, then curtly demanded: "Dr. Price, please! . . . Yes, I know he's busy on an autopsy. Just tell him that Dundee of the district attorney's office wants to speak to him."

There was a long pause, then: "Hello, Dr. Price! . . . Dundee. . . . What are the caliber and type of bullet that killed Nita Selim? . . . Thanks much, doctor. . . . Anything new? . . . Fine! Thanks again!"

He hung up the receiver and faced Strawn. "Bullet from a Colt's .32," he said grimly. "I suggest you send one of your men around to the Darshall home to pick up one of the bullets that was shot in their damned target practice. If you find the two bullets tonight, registered mail, to Wright, the ballistics expert in Chicago, he can probably wire you tomorrow morning as to whether the same gun was used to fire both."

"Sure, Bonnie," Strawn agreed lugubriously. "I was going to do just that. . . . Say, this town is getting to be worse than Chicago!"

When he re-entered the living room Dundee began upon the judge again, regardless of the fact that the elderly husband was murmuring consolatory endearments to his young wife.

"Judge Marshall, how many keys are there to the cupboard drawer in which your gun and silencer were kept?"

"Just one. I have it with me," the old man answered wearily. "Then when Hinson, your butler, looked for them, he found the drawer unlocked?"

"He did! I confess to an almost criminal negligence."

"Then so far as you know, the gun and silencer could have been removed at any time by any guest of yours between noon last Sunday and—today?" Dundee went on relentlessly.

"I—suppose so. But these people have been my close friends for years," the judge answered. "No! one of them, sir—"

"After Mrs. Selim's departure last Sunday, did you or other guests remain for any length of time?"

"For an hour or more, I think. Lois and Peter Dunlap remained for our two o'clock Sunday dinner, but the others drifted away to various engagements."

Did any of you return to the room where the gun was kept?"

"I can speak only for myself and Pete—Mr. Dunlap," Judge Marshall answered, flushing with indignation. "The two of us went down just before the dinner was served. I wanted to show him some new flies for trout fishing."

"Your home is a popular rendezvous for your intimates, is it not, Judge Marshall?"

"And guests run in and out, having the freedom of the place?"

"Certainly sir! . . . And since I am not so stupid as you may imagine, I can tell you now that I understand the drift of your questions, and can forestall them: Yes, all of these people—my friends!—have had opportunity to take the gun and the silencer from the cupboard since it was placed there last Sunday, if it WAS placed there by Mrs. Selim. But may I remind you, sir, that opportunity alone is not sufficient; that motive—"

"Since Mrs. Selim is dead, murdered by the weapon which was stolen, we can assume, Judge Marshall, that someone had motive. Dundee reminded him implacably, for in his mind there was no doubt that the ballistics expert would bear him out. . . .

There was a heavy throbbing silence. The group that, with the exception of Dexter Sprague, had been so united, so cemented with long-sustained friendship, again dissolved visibly before Dundee's eyes into 11 individuals, each shrinking into himself, mentally drawing away from any possible contamination with a murderer. . . .

"You have said, Judge Marshall," Dundee went on at last, "that Miss Crain and Mr. Sprague were not at your home for target practice Sunday. Has either of them been in your home during this past week?"

"Penny—Miss Crain—spent an evening with my wife when I was —er—away from home on business. That was last Tuesday, I believe."

"Yes, it was Tuesday, Huro," Penny Crain interrupted firmly. "And Karen can vouch for the fact that I did not go into the gun room."

"Don't be silly, Penny!" Carolyn Drake scolded, as if she had long been bursting to speak. "Giving an alibi! As if ANY of us who were playing bridge while that woman was being shot NEEDS any alibi!"

"But I'll tell you what I think, Mr. Detective! I think Nita herself stole the gun and the silencer, to kill Dexter Sprague with, and that HE stole it from her and murdered HER! Nobody else has the slightest scrap of a motive, and that note he wrote her ought to be enough to hang him on!"

Dexter Sprague had struggled to his feet during the woman's hysterical attack, his face like chalk, his eyes blazing. But Dundee waved him aside peremptorily.

"One more question, Judge Marshall," he said suavely, as if he had not heard a word that Carolyn Drake had said. "You knew Mrs. Selim before her arrival in Hamilton with Mrs. Dunlap, I believe. . . . Just when and where did you meet her?"

One Of The Last Of Longhorns Is To Go To Museum

HOUSTON — Old Broad, giant Longhorn steer who once ruled a herd of 73 animals in Wichita National park, is nearing the end of the trail. Plans are being made by the Chamber of Commerce here and Fred Dew, Houston killerman to have the animal killed and mounted in the Hermann park museum.

Old Broad's magnificent horns measure eight feet two inches from tip to tip, and curve to the ground to prevent his feeding anywhere except in tall grass. The steer is one of 30 that were shipped to the Wichita National forest in 1927 by the federal government in an effort to preserve the breed. The herd includes practically all the remaining purebred Longhorns in the United States.

After having been down with muscular rheumatism for some weeks, I was taken to Mineral Wells in an S. B. Neer & Co. ambulance of this city on August 1st, 1927. I did not have physical strength to participate in or benefit from the bathing facilities at that time, although I left off practically all medicines, none of which seemed to benefit me and drank Crazy Water regularly and systematically for some six weeks, came back home relieved almost entirely of my suffering and returned there later to take advantage of the baths. My life is a pleasure to me now. My friends are yet congratulating me on my health, appearance and frequently mention the fact that they never expected to see me out and going as I am again.

When Wool Gathering Do Not Forget Gray

By FRANCES PAGET

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—The continuance of the ensemble, as promised by costumes introduced at the mid-season openings in Paris and New York is the subject of much comment among apparel factors especially those arriving in this country from attending fashion events in Paris. These ensembles have coats of various lengths and are considered a predominant tendency for Southern resort and spring wear. Woolens are especially concerned with the sports ensembles, where monotone woolen coats are frequently combined with printed dresses, and three or four-piece knitted costumes are completed either with blouses or sweaters.

Will Woods and was followed by a delightful talk by Mrs. W. Z. Outward. Several solos, duets, and quartets furnished special music. Several numbers were represented by costumes. At the close of the program Rev. M. C. Franklin delivered his sermon.
