LAST OF FLEAGLE GANG IS CAPTURED HOOVER ACCUSED OF "RELIGIOUS INTOLERANCE"

Letter Called Insult To The American People

Mr. Burke Says He Violated Spirit of His Oath of Office in Recent Message.

By PAUL R. MALLON, United Press Staff Correspondent. WASHINGTON, Oct. 14.—The White House is aroused at suggestions that President Hoover's recent utterances could be interpreted as opposed to religious tolerance. A further statement was promised from the executive officers to answer to the allegation of Rev. John J. Burke, general secretary of the National Catholic Fore Conference, that Mr. Hoover violated "the spirit if not the letter of his oath of office" in a recent letter to Lutherans. Mr. Hoover's friends are moved by the implication that the chief executive had deviated from the principle of religious tolerance. The telegram to Cardinal Mundelein which was read to the Executive Conference at Omaha was public by friends of the president to prove that he had not sided with the Lutherans. The message to Cardinal Mundelein will be obliged if you will express my cordial greetings to the coming of the National Eucharistic Congress at which I am informed you will preside, and my appreciation of the role of spiritual ideas and of religious observance in the life of a nation which are indispensable foundations of the social order of enduring political institutions. Neither the message to the Lutherans nor to Cardinal Mundelein was made public at the White House. With the publication of the Mundelein telegram, the White House now intends to let the matter rest. Mr. Hoover personally has no comment to make, it was

"Young Jake" Is Caught After a Short Gun Fight

Officers Received Tip He Was In Branson and Found Him Boarding Train.

BY UNITED PRESS. BRANSON, Mo., Oct. 14.—A man identified by officers as "Young Jake" Fleagle, surviving fugitive of the notorious Fleagle family implicated in sensational western bank robberies, was shot and seriously wounded today when he refused to submit to arrest by county officers and secret service men. The man said to be Fleagle, sought throughout this country and Mexico since he and his brother were implicated in the Lamar, Colo., bank raid and murders, was felled by a bullet from an officer's gun when the bandit sought to board a Missouri Pacific train here today. His captors said he reached for his pocket "to shoot it out" when they ordered him to throw up his hands. Eight officers, including detectives from Colorado Springs, Kansas City and Los Angeles and federal postoffice inspectors, met the man on a top that he was hiding overnight in Branson. The officers arrived here by train and as they alighted the bandit suspect stepped up to board the train. He was recognized by the group. "Come on, Jake, you might as well give up," he was warned. Instead, according to the officers, the man reached for a gun. A volley of shots from the officers group answered the move and the desperado fell with a bullet in his stomach. The wounded man was taken to a hospital where his condition was reported critical.

Learned, Kas., Oct. 14—Fred Fleagle went to trial here today on charges of participating in the robbery of the First National Bank of Larned more than two years ago. Selection of a jury began after the court over-ruled a defense motion to quash the information on grounds that it had not been filed within two years after the crime.

Potpourri BY GAD

Being naturally of a sweet disposition and having a very great dislike for "grouches," especially those of the "chronic" type, we had hoped that we could leave this "gripe" column off, but no, we are having too many demands for it to further ignore them. So here 'tis.

If you don't know the meaning of Potpourri better consult Mr. Webster. You may land right in the middle of this column some day and won't know where you are.

A neat little sign on the corner just east of the City Hall advises the public that a certain evangelist is to conduct a series of services at a certain church in the city on Sept. 14 to 24. It was meant for last Sept., the sign is out of date, if it is for next September it is perhaps a little premature.

If you have been indulging in the thought that there are no "suckers" in this town you perhaps were relieved of that idea when you saw the gang around a certain "catron" take a "hawk" his wares on the streets this morning. He "socked it to 'em."

Now since the rains each of those living on un-paved streets should insist on the city putting a grader and crew on the street first. Of course this could not be done, but it would give the city officials something to worry about.

Livestock permitted on the highways in this county in violation of the law is a menace to the life and property of people driving on the roads. How long will it be permitted?

get your guests."
Mitchell, looked at his watch. "No, no! Time to be on our way. We'd better start at once."
They went out to the car where Thompson was waiting, and a moment later they were driving uptown.
Celia leaned back happily. She felt this was the most exciting evening of her life. She had never visited a roof dining room. Visions of extravagant splendor presented themselves. The party was being given especially for her, and she was going to see Tod!
She had talked to him that day over the telephone. Apparently he was miserable. It had been a week since they had met, and he accused her of treating him badly.
Celia, wrapped in her dreams, paid no attention to the conversation between her father and Mrs. Parsons. She was surprised when they reached the hotel.
An elevator whisked them upward and they stepped out on what was not a roof at all, but a handsomely furnished foyer. Celia and Mrs. Mitchell left their wraps in a black and gold dressing room, then returned to welcome the guests.
The party was to include 18 couples. It had not been easy assembling a suitable guest list in early August with almost everyone away at resorts. Mrs. Parsons had called her country club set of all the younger members. She was eager to show Mitchell how clever she was as a hostess.
Indeed she was succeeding. As soon as Lisi Duncan and one or two others had arrived to join Celia, her father stepped back and devoted himself to Mrs. Parsons.
Celia caught sight of Tod Jordan. He was making his way directly toward her. She managed to turn from the group so that his first greeting would be for her alone.
"Why—she had almost forgotten how handsome he was!"
"Tod!" She whispered his name softly.
"At last!"
There was only time for a quick, devastating exchange of glances, and Celia was surrounded by newcomers. Her cheeks and eyes were glowing. She smiled, shook hands, knew that she would never be able to remember all the names that were jumbled in her ears. All of the girls looked pretty in their bright-colored frocks. Kate Duncan passed by, a picture in deep rose tulle. Celia saw the youth called "Red," with whom she had danced at the club. Jimmie Webster was at her elbow demanding to know how it felt to be drowning.
A bowing head waiter, whose half French, half English sentences were unintelligible to Celia, led the way to their tables.
Other diners turned to look at the young people. To Celia's surprise the "roof garden" was just like other dining rooms. The walls and ceiling were painted with modernistic splashes of color. There were wide open windows from ceiling to floor all about the room, revealing patches of dark sky, here and there studded with electric meteors. Palms, ferns and other growing green things were the only suggestion of out of doors.
An orchestra, famous throughout the nation wherever radio is known, was playing a melodious fox trot.
Celia shot a quick, pleased glance toward Mrs. Parsons. She saw that Jordan was to be her right-hand neighbor. The widow smiled back.
Jimmie Webster was on Celia's left. She was extremely curious about the swimming accident and demanded all the girl's attention for several minutes. At last she was able to turn to Jordan.
"Why haven't you let me come to see you?" he asked.
"Oh, Tod, I can't very well explain here. I do want you to come to see me. You see, it isn't the same as when I was at Mrs. Parsons'—"
"No? What isn't the same?"
"I mean I can't do the things I want to here in town. My grandmother has such old-fashioned ideas. You see I'm still sort of 'on approval'—"
"Well, what are we to do?"
"I don't know!"
What they were to do that evening was plain. Lisi Duncan was beside Webster, and she kept the entire end of the table laughing at her account of her first flying lesson. Celia and Jordan were obliged to postpone their conversation and join the group.
Later Celia had the first dance with Tod, but other partners claimed her immediately. She danced one waltz with her father, finding him a stiff but light-footed dancer. They circled the floor sedately and then he returned her to her seat and rejoined Mrs. Parsons.
She saw Jordan dancing with Kate Duncan, and the fearful thought arose that if Kate intentionally "vamped" Lisi's admirer she might try to attract Tod. Kate looked so beautiful almost any man would fall ready victim to her charms. The thought was unbearable. Celia knew she could never hope to compete with Kate.
Feminine instinct sent her to the dressing room to dab powder on her nose and add a touch of lipstick to her lips. Celia had no need for rouge. Her cheeks had the glow of youth.
Then she caught sight of herself in a full-length mirror. The white dress was lovely! It made the most of her slimmness, possessed a sophistication Celia lacked. She had never looked better. Reassured, she went back to the dancers.
She met Jordan at the door. "I've been looking for you," he told the girl. "Want to dance?"
She slipped into his arms. They moved away in perfect rhythm. Dancing with Jordan, even on this crowded floor, was a breathless sensation. This was the moment she had been waiting for!
A tenor soloist, megaphone in hand, was crooning the words of the syncopated ballad. The tempo of the song was stirring, insistent. They had half-circled the room and were in front of one of the French windows looking out on the night sky. The window opened out on a small balcony.
"Let's go out here," Jordan whispered. He took Celia's arm and led her out on the enclosure.
The balcony was only a few feet wide. It ran back at either side of the window, and Jordan and the girl stepped into the shadowed space. They were far up over the street. Celia uttered a little cry at the spectacle before her.
The sky world was aglow with myriads of twinkling, dazzling lights. On a black velvet background—as a jeweler displays his wares—the crimson, gold and blue-white electric displays beckoned. Some of them came from Broadway. Others were gleaming coronets of sky-crashing towers. At intervals a gigantic beacon flashed its fiery radius across the

Public Shows More Interest In Astronomy

By GENE GILLETTE United Press Staff Correspondent DEN MOINES, Oct. 14.—If you are one of the many Americans whose ideas of astronomy are nearly as vague as far-off Venus on a misty night then prepare for knowledge—it is headed your way.

Dr. W. Morehouse, whose name is a by-word wherever men gather round the base of a long telescope to gaze at the heavens, told the United Press today he believed recent publicity given developments in the world of astronomy together with establishment of planetariums in the United States has had a tendency to popularize the science.

"This, in the opinion of the educator, is a good sign. "Too many people," he said, "still believe that stars fall; that many are lost to the heavens every night and that new ones sprout in the blue like blossoms on a cherry tree."

The writer hesitatingly admitted he had been deceived for years by falling "stars" and had sent many a shout of "money, money, money" after the flash of light from the heavens at the furtherance of a childish superstition.

Dr. Morehouse is president of Drake University and professor of astronomy at the school, where he considers his unusually large class this year a possible indication of the science's increasing popularity.

Approximately 150 negroes left yesterday after being warned by a group of white men to leave town by 5 o'clock. Racial feeling was running high Sunday and Monday after three negroes, one a woman, confessed the slaying of Harry Pancher, St. Genevieve, and the serious wounding of his companion Paul Ricev Caultfield ordered detachments of national guardsmen from De Soto and Festus. Feeling had quieted before their arrival.

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—Congress has been asked to give its blessing to a 42 per cent rate of interest on loans to poor people through passage of a bill establishing 3 1/2 per cent a month as the maximum legal rate on loans of $300 or less in the District of Columbia.

This uniform small loan law, which seems to be of especial interest at a time when many persons are broke and borrowing, is sponsored by the American Association of Personal Finance Companies.

In 25 states, it was explained, small loan companies were doing business under the law, which provides for state licensing and control. The law has the support of the Russell Sage Foundation.

Eighty per cent of the population has to employ "with regularity" some form of small loan credit," Dr. Julius Klein of the Commerce Department told the convention.

Nothing was said about 42 per cent until the People's Legislative Service here basted out with an exhortation of "commercial cannibalism," by which it meant the interest rate permitted by the uniform law and the Bowman bill establishing it for the District of Columbia.

Paris, Oct. 14.—The soothing ministrations of his favorite barber recently caused Marshal "Papa" Joffre to break his rule of ten years standing and talk about the World War.

Every Tuesday and Friday the aged Marshal comes into Paris from his estate at Louveciennes, near Saint-Germain-en-Laye, a Parisian suburb to his barber.

On this particular day a United Press correspondent was in the shop when the famous war hero arrived.

subcommittee after hearings last May. Then was revealed a wide difference of opinion about the benefits of the law.

Leon Henderson, director of the Russell Sage Foundation's department of remedial loans, is the most conspicuous individual advocate of the proposed legislation.

"At different times they have attempted in this country to put the legal rate all the way from 6 per cent to 60 per cent," he says.

LaGuardia Leads Attack Congressman LaGuardia of New York, Hull of Wisconsin and the late Lampert of Wisconsin have been the most vigorous critics of the Bowman bill.

"You will never get through an inhuman, thieving proposition of this kind, 42 per cent interest, and then pretend that it is a bill to wipe out loan sharks, an exhortation of 'commercial cannibalism' by which it meant the interest rate permitted by the uniform law and the Bowman bill establishing it for the District of Columbia.

Officers Seek Kidnapers Of Wealthy Woman GREENFIELD, Mo., Oct. 14.—Officers, aided by a steadily increasing corps of volunteers, searched vainly today for Mrs. Alma Wilson McKinley, 24, daughter of Dade county's wealthiest citizen, who was kidnapped from her home near here last night.

"They haven't found a trace of Alvin or of her car," Mrs. Wilson told the United Press. "We don't know which way to turn. Thus far there has been no word at all from my daughter."

Report Shows Match Production Is On Decline WASHINGTON, Oct. 14.—Match production in the United States is on the decrease, according to a preliminary tabulation of Officers believed the kidnapers was familiar with the family's affairs since he went to the Wilson house when the men were absent.

The search today widened to adjoining counties where officers had been notified. Kansas City police guarded surrounding roads. Greenfield is about 100 miles southeast of Kansas City.

An anxious group was gathered at the Wilson home early today, showing the need of rest after a night long wait in which no encouraging word came from officers.

From that time he has been Charley, until the real truth leaked out the other day. Henceforth, "Maggie" may appear frequently in connection with the young Cardinal hero. The fans who have gibbered excitedly over the sensational young infelder had no way of knowing that Charley played through the series with a badly pulled tendon in his right leg. Charley's play didn't show it; the A's probably don't believe it. But Trainer Doc Weaver wrapped, strapped and taped that leg from the hip to the knee every afternoon of the series. One reason advanced for Charley's brilliant performance in the series was that he expects to be married soon. If such is the case, the youth probably figured the $1700 difference between the winner's and loser's share could be put to good usage by Mr. and Mrs. Magnus Ott Gelbert.

Both the model and the full-sized ship, which Poirier plans to build soon, will be powered by the fireworks spouting from the tubes in the tail, but the big plane will have a small gasoline motor for taking off and landing. The inventor and his assistant, Franklin Wallace, are shown here charging the model for an experimental flight.

River Tunnel Nearly Ready

DETROIT, Oct. 14.—Residents of Windsor, Ont., and Detroit, accustomed to travelling from one city to the other either by ferry or bridge, soon will have a third method at their disposal.

The Detroit-Windsor international tunnel—the first vehicular tube ever built which connects two nations—will be thrown open to traffic shortly.

Work, started three years ago, virtually is completed. The cost has been $25,000,000. Constructed of concrete and steel, the tube extends from the Detroit waterfront a mile southward to the heart of Windsor.

Approximately a half-mile of the tunnel is under the bed of the Detroit River. The termini are virtually in the business districts of the two cities. It is estimated motorists will be able to drive from one city to the other in three minutes.

There are three traffic lanes in the tube, and cars will be moved at the rate of 1,600 each way per hour. The third lane will be kept open for moving out cars which may break down.

The gigantic lighting system has been installed and 24 fans will force 1,500,000 cubic feet of fresh air through it each minute.

The group which financed the tunnel includes business men of Detroit, Canada and New York. Jason Bradley, Detroit inventor and realtor, is president of the company.

Completion of the tunnel marks the second big engineering job of this nature finished here in a year. In 1929 the Ambassador Bridge another link between Detroit and Windsor, was opened.

Body Of Girl Found In Room With Drunk Man

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 13.—Twenty-year-old Hazel Cole was discovered dead today in the same apartment in which Bobby La Salle, local fighter, was lying in a drunken stupor, deputy sheriffs reported.

La Salle, known in ring circles as "Bad Boy Bobby" was so drunk the officials were not able to question him, it was said. The girl's body was found by Neil Murphy, whose apartment was the scene of a party at which Miss Cole, La Salle, Miss May Lavine, 17, and Murphy were present. Murphy said he left the apartment to take Miss Lavine to her home. When he returned he found Miss Cole dead and La Salle unconscious. Officers said Miss Cole's body was nude.

Murphy told authorities that eight quarts of gin were consumed by the group while they were dancing at the beach last night and when they returned to his apartment early this morning. La Salle was not held. Officers took him to his home and said he would be questioned when he became sober.

Brewers Prepare To Manufacture Beer During 1931

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Oct. 13.—Milwaukee brewers, hopeful that beer soon will be legalized in the United States, are prepared to meet any manufacturing demands, and at least one company has installed new equipment. Reports were current today that many of the city's millionaire brewers were increasing their manufacturing facilities and were prepared to resume pre-prohibition activities during 1931. "Brewers never have given up hope for the return of beer," said Frederick Gettelman, secretary of the brewing corporation which bears his name. "I think most of the companies will be ready to manufacture beer if the time comes." Fred Fabst, president, admitted that the Pabst corporation has imported new machinery from Germany, but he said it could be used for making either malt syrup or beer.

Mob Methods Differ In Two Communities

By FOSTER FATON
United Press Staff Correspondent
ATLANTA, Oct. 14.—In the neighboring states of Alabama and Georgia two separate instances of mob action, involving two separate methods of handling the situation, resulted recently in diametrically opposite terminations of the affairs within two days.

The Alabama mob—at Huntsville—included upwards of 1,500 men bent on lynching G. E. Henderson, negro, arrested on suspicion of murdering H. E. Ross, Huntsville business man, and seriously wounding Mrs. Ross during an attempted robbery. Authorities insisted the negro was not the guilty man.

Determined Mob
The Georgia mob—at Cartersville—included less than a tenth as many men as the Huntsville mob, and was determined to lynch John Willie Clark, negro, who had confessed to the murder of Joe Ben Jenkins, veteran chief of police of Cartersville during a scuffle over the chief's revolver.

When threat of trouble arose at Huntsville, Governor Bibb Graves of Alabama sent two machine-gun companies of state militia to the scene. The vicinity of the county jail was placed under martial law. A mob of 1,000 or more advanced on the jail at night, and was repelled by tear-gas, bayonets menacingly held ready, and by streams of water from a fire hose. The crowd dispersed in the face of such a display of force.

Feeling Bitter
At Cartersville, however, feeling was especially bitter because of Chief Jenkins' long service and popularity. Clark, the negro, had confessed, but insisted the shooting was "an accident." At the sign of mob action, Clark was hurried to the Fulton County Tower at Atlanta.

When it came time for Clark's trial, he was brought back to Cartersville. His attorneys moved for a change of venue. That brought delay, and he was placed in the county jail at Cartersville. The judge delivered a stern lecture to a crowded court-room, against mob violence. Several hours later a band of masked men rode to the jail, overpowered the turnkey, got Clark, and hanged him to a telephone pole a mile away.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 14.—Out in the Mission district of San Francisco, there still exists a blacksmith of the old type a smithy who beats iron into desired shapes with a hand hammer and who is equipped to shoe horses.

The reddish glow of the forge makes the place one of interest to children, even as in the old days, but gone is the familiar smell of a scorched hoof and perspiring draft horses.

I. O. Gibeau, 84, is the smithy. He fits perfectly in the role of the village smithy, described by Longfellow.

In 1878 Gibeau built his present blacksmith shop. He has been at the forge every day since. He does a lot of minor repair work but not a horse has been shoed
