CONSTITUTIONAL LIBERTIES.

Chicago, in its celebration of Constitutional Week, has made use of the opportunity to start, in its schools and clubs, a study of "the freedom granted American citizens under the constitution."

It is a good thing to emphasize this side of the great document. The constitution is regarded by the many people as merely imposing a lot of unpleasant restraints and responsibilities. As a matter of fact, it is a great human document which guarantees, in legal form, the freedom claimed in the Declaration of Independence and fought for in the revolution.

These amendments guarantee all of us freedom of religion, freedom of speech, freedom of press, freedom of assembly, freedom from unreasonable search and seizure, freedom from unwarranted arrest and imprisonment, freedom from confiscation, assurance of fair court trials when arrested, and freedom from all authority not expressly delegated to the government.

It would be a good thing for every American citizen, especially every public official, to read that Bill of Rights once a year. The rest of the constitution, generally speaking, we can take for granted. These vital things we have to keep fighting for.

POLITENESS.

Henry L. Mencken, surplus versenkt in matrimony for some weeks, has been heard from again. A reporter caught Mr. and Mrs. Mencken in a New York hotel and interviewed both, with the following result.

They made a good conversational team. Mrs. Mencken set the stage for her celebrated husband, and he performed. Crediting him with being polite, she asked: "Henry, what is politeness?" And Henry replied:

"Politeness is the absence of the reformer complex, of any desire to improve other people. It's polite to let them alone. They're doing the best they can, poor fishes."

Judged by this standard, we Americans are not so polite as we might be. Most of us spend a tremendous lot of time and energy trying to make other people do what we think they ought to. And the worst thing about it is, they do the same with us.

JERSEY GRADE CROSSINGS.

A fine program of railroad grade crossing elimination has been started in New Jersey through co-operation of the state utility board and the railroad companies. It will extend over a period of several years and will affect 373 crossings which have been designated as dangerous. The whole project will cost many millions of dollars.

This is a good way to go about an important public work. Elimination of grade crossings is one of the most important features of traffic accident prevention. Along with eliminating existing grade crossings in any community, however, should go prevention of the construction of new ones. It would be less expensive to avoid them in the first place than to eliminate them later after they have proved their danger.

OPERATIC SLIMNESS.

The movement for less bulky opera singers is spreading. Prof. John Forssell, chief of the Swedish Royal Opera, has warned his singers that they must not grow fat. If they have already done so, they must take serious measures to reduce. He explains:

"Our audiences do not alone pay to hear the singing, but expect an esthetic picture of those who execute the music."

Ability to act is another gift increasingly demanded of opera singers. A few opera stars with dramatic skill—Challapin, for example—have sharpened the public taste. It is all rather revolutionary. Next thing anybody knows they'll be requiring operas with dramatic ability and literary worth as well as musical, and then grand opera will be as popular as the movies

Characters Studied During the Quarter

Characters studied during the quarter were: O Lord; for I have loved the habit of my house, and the place where I have dwelt. I will walk in integrity; redeem me, and merciful unto me. I will stand in the congregations with the Lord.

International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for Sept. 28. Estimate of the Characters Studied During the Quarter. Devotional reading: Psalm 26:1-5, 8, 11, 12.

outward expressions in the great tasks which the characters that have been studying accomplished.

First we have Abraham, the great pioneer, manifesting virtues that have not always been characteristic of the pioneer. The pioneer with all his courage and endurance and determination has often been a fighting man, grasping, and eager in his ambition. But Abraham with all the virtues of the pioneer had a largeness of spirit and magnanimity that had made him very truly the father of the faithful.

The greatness of Jacob. Jacob comes before us as a man deprived of the foremost place, who was bound to achieve it and to get it by hook or by crook. As a matter of fact he used both hook and crook, and his life appears in many respects as unlovely. But he had in him, with all his trickery, elements upon which something could really be built, and in this respect he differed from his more likeable brother, Esau. The essence of the lesson concerning Jacob was that even a character like Jacob could be transformed and could have brought into his life some real holiness and integrity of purpose.

Moses stands before us as a commanding figure, great in his moral strength, courageous in his leadership, one of the world's great masterful characters, a rebel against injustice and wrong, but an upholder of the foundations of a true society in law and righteousness.

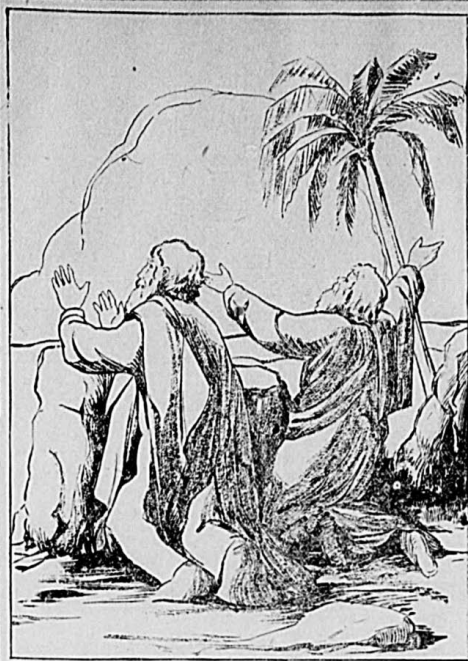

Three women appear in our lesson studies; in fact, one should say four, for one cannot consider the character and career of Samuel without thinking of his mother, Hannah. Deborah, the judge of Israel, stands as a sort of female Moses, a married woman with a call to tasks that went beyond her own home and household, yet a woman who appears in the leadership of the nation with her real strength in her womanly courage and virtues.

In Ruth with her devotion to her mother-in-law, Naomi, we have a picture of persistency and devotion that can attach to love and gentleness. The story of this Moabitess is interesting in itself, but it comes to have great significance when we realize that she was an ancestress of David, and therefore of Jesus himself, giving to the man of Nazareth an interracial origin and significance that is not always recognized.

The study of Samuel is against a background of evil conditions in Israel—drunkenness, licentiousness, and corruption. Samuel displays the qualities that one would expect from one who had been devoted in his mother's prayers to the service of religion.

The story of the first king of Israel is one of the world's great tragedies—a man with a marvelous natural endowment and with great opportunity, throwing all away through lack of self-control and dying a hopeless suicide after he had lost a battle. In contrast to Saul was his son Jonathan, of whose friendship with David one lesson has taken account.

That the outward prosperity of a nation does not always mean real strength or greatness is a lesson that we could find in the life of many peoples. Amos, the herdsman, a farmer with uncorrupted nature and clear vision, came from the fields to denounce the sins of the city and to remind people that no nation could be great that sought to build upon unrighteousness and injustice.

In the record of failure and corruption we have one lesson that marks righteous purpose in high places. The story of Josiah, an eight-year old boy, is an inspiring story of reform.

From this we passed to one of the supreme prophets of Israel, a man who felt keenly his own personal responsibility and whose message centered around the conviction of duty that he himself experienced. Like Amos, Jeremiah rebuked formalism and called upon the people to manifest their religion by right living.

The lessons of the quarter have attained a climax in the study of the story of Jonah—a story that represents also the very climax of the teaching of the Old Testament concerning God. Jonah comes before us as a narrow nationalist believing in God but unwilling that God's grace should be manifested to other peoples.

Jonah's Prejudice

When he is sent to Nineveh he rebels against his mission, and when, ultimately, he actually goes and his mission succeeds and the people turn in repentance, he is angry with the God who spares them. He manifests the sort of prejudice that has always been more or less prevalent in our limited experience of religion and in our sectional and narrow organizations. The real teaching is the teaching of the writer of the book of Jonah who lifts up to higher levels of magnanimity and truth, and reveals to us the glorious conception of a God whose mercy and grace are not limited to those of

Family Menu

BY SISTER MARY NEA Service Writer

It's an excellent idea to buy vegetables in quantity and a decided saving of time to go to market only three times a week, but unless you know how to care for vegetables to the best advantage there is danger of waste and extravagance.

With the exception of sweet corn, most of the fall vegetables are less prone to loss of flavor than the summer vegetables. The root vegetables retain their original freshness for several days if the tops are left on until the roots are to be used.

If lima beans are purchased in the pod, they can be kept several days. Limas are so apt to be bruised in the shelling that shell beans are extremely perishable.

The custom of buying vegetables with their coarse outer leaves left on is worth while. Head lettuce, cabbage, celery and cauliflower all can be trimmed at home to advantage.

The outside green leaves of head lettuce are richest in vitamins. These leaves can be washed and crisped and used shredded for salads or soups.

Large heads of cabbage usually are an economy and of better quality than small ones. Instead of cutting out wedge-shaped quarters or sections, trim out the tender top portion to use for salad. This leaves the coarse lower leaves attached to the core to keep fresh for cooking for some other meal.

Parsley will keep fresh many days if the stems are put into water, just as you would flowers. Never put parsley on ice or in the coldest part of the refrigerator.

Daily Menu
BREAKFAST — Concord grapes, cereal, cream, scrambled eggs, toast, milk, coffee.
LUNCHEON — Corn a la Creole, crisp broiled bacon, peach tapioca pudding, milk, tea.
DINNER — Smothered chicken, baked noodles, cauliflower in cream sauce, stuffed pear salad, vanilla junket ice cream, nut cookies, milk, coffee.

Cold affects the oil that yields the flavor and your parsley will be tasteless if it has been chilled. Bruised and blemished vegetables will not keep as well as firm, fair ones. Potatoes which have been marred in the digging are less desirable than those with unbroken skins. Squash should be kept in a dry, cool but not cold, place.

First Christian Church Dr. J. H. Cator, Sunday School Supt. M. C. Franklin, Pastor. Sunday School 9:45 a. m. Church Services 11:00 a. m. and 8:00 p. m. Sermon Subjects: Sunday morning, The Devil's Envoy. Sunday evening: The Buying Power of Money. The Lord's Table is set each Lord's Day morning.

St. Francis Xavier Catholic Church September 25, 1930. Mass will be at 10 a. m. by Rev. P. Ruano. This is the Sixteenth Sunday after Pentecost and the Gospel for today is taken from the Gospel of St. Luke XIV. Christ is asked the question is it lawful to heal on the Sabbath Day. God himself instituted the Sabbath and repeatedly and expressly commanded the Israelites to observe it. "Remember that thou keep the Sabbath day. Six days shalt thou labor, and shalt do all thy works. But on the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God; thou shalt do no work on it, thou nor thy son, nor thy daughter, nor thy manservant nor thy maid-servant, nor thy beast." Ex. XX, 8, et seq. The Scribes and Pharisees went still further, and exceeded the limits of the divine law by maintaining that not servile works only, but even works of charity, such as the healing of the sick, were unlawful on the Sabbath day.

Christ showed them the folly of their opinion in the gospel of this day, when he proved to them that neither they nor others considered it unlawful or sinful to succor an animal that met with a mishap.

We Christians no longer celebrate the Sabbath as did the Jews, but the Sunday, because Jesus Christ on that day accomplished the work of our Redemption, our second creation, by rising from the dead and later sending the Holy Ghost. Hence we celebrate Sunday instead of the Sabbath day. Rev. M. Collins.

Major League

The St. Louis Cardinals needed but one victory today to clinch the National League pennant. If the Cards win over the Pirates or if the Chicago Cubs lose to their foes, the National League pennant race will have been decided.

The Cards won yesterday over the Pittsburgh Pirates, 9 to 0, while the Cubs scored a last-inning victory by 4 to 3 over the Cincinnati Reds.

In the American League, the Washington Senators, forced into second place, eked out a 3 to 2 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

The Philadelphia Athletics, already assured of first place in the league, won over the New York Yankees by 13 to 3 in a game halted at the end of the sixth inning by rain.

The Chicago White Sox-Detroit Tiger game was cancelled because of wet grounds.

Cisco Afraid of Maverick Game There Tonight

One thing is certain about the Cisco-Eastland game tonight and that is Cisco folks are more nervous about the game than any previous meeting in the history of Lobo-Maverick football clashes.

This writer talked to an ardent Cisco fan yesterday, one who has followed the Big Dam team for many seasons and he said: "Eastland is liable to beat us."

"But I thought Cisco had the best team it's had in many years," the writer objected in order to draw the Lobo adherent out.

"The strongest team in possibilities but it's not developed yet," was the answer. "The team is still green."

And that's what Cisco is afraid of—that a fast, fighting, furious cub of Mavericks—determined to win the first game Eastland ever captured from Cisco—will catch the Lobos tonight in this early game before they have reached their full strength and with Chambliss, the backfield ace, out from injuries—and that the Mavericks will put Cisco out of the race just as the race is starting.

Fans who saw Cisco and Brady play feel that Eastland has a chance to do that very thing. The Lobos did not work smoothly and they looked slow, according to those who attended the night game last week.

The big score that Cisco rolled up against Brady was no better than the score Eastland made against Strawn—and Eastland didn't have white jerseys and a white football for the first half of the game.

If Eastland wins tonight, the news will be flashed throughout Texas and the Mavericks will wake to find themselves famous tomorrow morning.

If the Red and Black is victorious, they will write the most glorious page in the history of the school or it will be the first grid-iron triumph over Cisco and every year hereafter as long as there is an Eastland High School the night game with the Lobos will be remembered.

Great interest is being shown throughout the Oil Belt in the game and hundreds of fans from Ranger, Breckenridge and other cities will attend. A crowd of 4,000 or more—the largest that ever saw Eastland play Cisco—is predicted.

Marshall—Joiner No. 1 well brought in six miles east of city on Miller farm, reported producing 1,500 barrels of oil per day.

Two Games Are Scheduled For Today In Oilbelt

Although the football season was officially opened in the Oilbelt District last week when Bill Sping defeated Mineral Wells and Ranger came out on the big end of a 32-0 score in their clash with Brownwood, today marks the opening for four of the teams in the district.

Eastland meets Cisco tonight in the first night conference game of the season while in the afternoon San Angelo will meet Sweetwater.

Breckenridge is to play a non-conference game with Anson at Breckenridge today while Brownwood will play the game of the week at Fort Worth for a contest with Central High.

Of all the games played so far in the Oilbelt District the Maverick-Lobo contest is the most outstanding from a point of interest throughout the district not only because it is the only night game that has been played in the district up to this time, but because the dope indicated that the teams are more evenly matched than any of the others that have participated in conference schedule games.

Practically the entire Oilbelt is "pulling" for the Mavericks because they would like to see the team that has been defeated by the Cisco eleven so many times come out victorious in their encounter under the floodlights.

Crozier Aids Chinese Art

PEIPING, Sept. 26—Major-General William Crozier, retired officer in the United States army, has shown once more his keen interest in the monuments of this ancient capital by providing the money to restore the two corner-towers on the south wall of the Forbidden City.

These towers were falling into ruin, but will now be repaired with General Crozier's gift.

General Crozier first came to old Peiping in 1900, as chief ordnance officer with the allied expedition which relieved the legations from the Boxer siege.

He took an immediate interest in Chinese art, Chinese monuments, and has been an eager student of Chinese affairs ever since.

Time and again General Crozier and his wife have visited Peiping, and have made a notable collection of old Chinese jades, bronzes, lacquers and paintings, which they intend to present to some museum. They have spent most of the past year in this city.

Two years ago, when General Chiang Kai-shek came to Peiping, he was impressed with the dilapidated condition of the Forbidden City, and gave $50,000 for repairs.

The old palaces are now in better condition than they have been for years.

With General Chiang's money, the two north wall towers of the Forbidden City were repaired, but there was not enough for the south wall towers. General Crozier has now made it possible to restore the

The Thursday Afternoon Club opened the club season in Eastland Thursday with a luncheon for its members at the community club house at one o'clock. Texas has been chosen as the topic for study during the coming year and this first program was devoted to pioneer life in our state.

Each new arrival was greeted at the door of the club house by Mrs. W. A. Martin and Mrs. H. O. Tatum, hostesses of the day. Near the door was a table holding an old style oak water bucket and a gourd dipper. The guests registered at a table made interesting by a collection of relics from the pioneer life of Texas. Noteworthy items among these were a book published in 1655. Some linens were exhibited that were more than a hundred years old. These were hand spun and hand woven. The flower motif was large baskets of zinnias and patch-work

Then she asked that they be imagined to have amber colored lenses and that through them should be viewed the center piece of the table,

Storms Sweep Northern States, One Is Killed

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 25—Decidedly cooler weather was forecast for the southwest today following a night of rain and windstorms which killed one person and inflicted much property and crop damage.

Mrs. W. M. Webster was killed when a storm of almost cyclonic force struck Metz, Mo., demolishing her home. Several other persons were injured slightly in windstorms.

Strong northwestern gales, which struck suddenly to the accompaniment of driving rain and hail, were general over Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska and Oklahoma.

At Lawrence, Kas., the dome over the University of Kansas observatory was displaced, and books of the school library were damaged when rain seeped through the walls of the new library.

Strong wind striking Richmond, Mo., lifted a square of box cars from the railroad tracks and demolished several hundred feet of rails. The roof was demolished on the Kansas City Southern roundhouse at Watts, Okla., by the same storm which forced Bennett Griffin and Roy Hunt, endurance fliers, to descend from an unfortified 50 degrees in Kansas City during the night.

Letters From the People

Sept. 26, 1930

Editor Eastland Telegram:

We read with interest and appreciation the letter of the brakeman of the T. & P. Ry. Company in yesterday's paper pertaining to the tragedy resulting in the death of several of our citizens at the Lake Eastland crossing of the railroad last week. We heartily agree with the brakeman in his warning to the people to STOP, LOOK and LISTEN before passing over the tracks.

It occurred to us that it would be appropriate to add to what the brakeman said the further warning to the Railroads that when they reach the city limits that they should slow the speed of their train, ring the bell, blow the whistle and so arrange their empty box cars that are standing on the switch tracks as to cause as little obstruction as possible to the citizen of an approaching train.

The brakeman, of course, did not mean to insinuate that laly was entirely at fault, we do we attempt to place the blame upon any individual but in these matters and that the way employees should like exercise caution in these matters.

Respectfully,

Appreciation

A most successful fashion show was the results and it was accomplished only through the cooperation of the P.T.A's.

We wish to express our sincere appreciation for the generous response from the people of Eastland and our neighbor cities.

Also to the three presidents and entire membership of the P.T.A's.

The models and musicians rendered a great service and to them much credit must be given—the music was wonderful. Eastland is proud as the home of such talented artists.

This store was glad of the opportunity to do its bit in bringing to the P.T.A's, a most worthy organization, any financial gain they may have received from such a show.

Again we extend our sincere thanks to all that aided in the success of this show.
