APE AND MAN.

You can take seriously or humorously, as you like, the suggestion of Dr. H. S. Harrison, a British anthropologist, that man is a mistake.

Accepting the evolutionary theory that man and ape branched off from the same anthropoid stem, Dr. Harrison holds that it is a pity man ever parted company with his hairy cousin. He seems to think we have lost a good deal and haven't much compensatory gain.

It's no harm doing a little thinking about that, anyway. Hamlet may be quoted against the scientist. "What a piece of work is a man!" He exclaims. "How noble in reason, how infinite in faculty! In form and moving how express and admirable! In action how like an angel! In apprehension how like a god!"

At our best, when we are feeling good and full of egotism, we may agree with that. But we don't live up to the description much of the time. And Hamlet himself, as we know, lived unhappily, struggled with problems too big for him and came to a bad end.

The ape is fine—as an ape. We couldn't take the place of that bull-necked, low-browed, big-jawed cousin. We couldn't compete with him on his own level. We've lost a good deal.

Yet we seem to have got something, too, in parting company with him. If we're not so good an ape as he is, he isn't so good a man as we are. If he can break us in two, we can shoot him to pieces. We can beat him at boxing, baseball, tennis and golf.

We live longer, though more painfully. We have more needs, and work harder to supply them. We can look up when we feel like it, which isn't very often. We can think about heaven, which he probably can't; also about hell. And we can have the satisfaction of feeling immensely superior.

BIG MEN AND BOOKS.

The Book Publishers' Research Institute conducted a survey to discover what the successful man of affairs reads. Opinion prior to this had been divided into three beliefs: that a successful man relaxed his mind with mystery stories; that he read nothing that did not have a direct bearing on his business, or that he read not at all.

Forty-three prominent men were willing to divulge their reading habits. It was found that all of them are book-minded, spending at least two hours a day on serious reading. Economics, foreign relations and the classics rank high in their lists, but biographies lead. These busy men read many of them, the current ones and older volumes. Nearly all of them say frankly that their own lives have been influenced in some way by great biographies.

An interesting sidelight on these readers is the fact that most of them buy and keep the books they read. Evidently the successful business man is not the cause of the hard luck of authors, publishers and booksellers.

THE PROSPERITY PUZZLE.

President William Green of the American Federation of Labor takes a firm stand against the unemployment "dole." A big majority of Americans will uphold him in that, especially with the sad experience of Great Britain in mind. The effect of unemployment pensions paid by the government on the British system seems to be to make the evil worse by corrupting the self-respect of workers and drying up the sources of wealth.

Mr. Green proposes, instead, unemployment insurance for short periods, provided jointly by capital and labor; a shorter working day, week; a guaranteed yearly wage; division of work among workers in dull times. Many American employers are thinking along the same lines. Such proposals are no longer frowned on as "radical," but are considered by intelligent people as worthy of serious discussion.

His general aim is to adapt production to consumption, and so stabilize employment. This is the aim of all our economists and capitalists today. And here is the supreme problem. But the solution is far off.

It wouldn't be so hopeless if demand were definite. Then it might be possible for either organized industry or government, through economic experts, to calculate the demand, distribute orders among all the industries and keep goods flowing evenly from factory and farm to consumers and money flowing evenly from consumers back to capitalists and workers.

But demand is not computable. Consumption changes with ability to buy. The more people are producing, the more money they are earning, the more they are able to consume. The less work they have, the less they can consume. Both factors are variable.

All in all, there is not yet enough wisdom in any man or group of men to control this big economic machine. Shall we ever be able to control it?

Seeing's Believing—A White Crow

NEA Los Angeles Bureau

Here is one of the rarest of all nature's freaks—a white crow. The bird is the property of Charles M. Skitt of Los Angeles, who rescued it in the desert near Barstow, Calif., as a flock of its darker brothers were about to peck it to death. Black crows always destroy their kindred infrequently.

He looked at his watch as he stepped out of the room, noting his visitor was just five minutes late. Mitchell was frowning a few seconds later when he emerged from the elevator into the hotel lobby. He also was making a tremendous effort not to appear self-conscious.

Slowly he surveyed the big room. His frown deepened. He was turning when a low voice spoke at his elbow.

"You're—John Mitchell, aren't you?"

"Yes. My name's Mitchell."

The pair stared at each other. Mitchell's eyes were stony, unbelieving. Margaret answered his gaze unflinchingly.

"I'm Margaret," she said simply.

She wore a black crepe frock (her best one) with touches of white lace at the neck. It had been remade more than once by her clever fingers, but it was becoming. Her close-fitting turtleneck emphasized the lustrous of those really beautiful brown eyes. When her eyes spoke no one thought much about Margaret Rogers' other features, which were not particularly good though neither were they particularly irregular.

She was pale and there was a fervor about her manner in contrast to the man's cool aloofness.

"Margaret!" he exclaimed. Then the high color in his cheeks darkened. "Yes—yes, of course. You've changed," he added.

"I shall we find somewhere to talk?" the woman asked.

He led the way into a lounge adjoining the lobby. It was deserted except for a young woman reading a newspaper. Mitchell pointed out two chairs in the distant corner. They moved over to them and sat down.

"This will do," Margaret agreed. "Yes, I've changed. You have changed too, John."

"No doubt! Well, it's been a long time—"

"Think so?" John Mitchell eyed his companion closely. "I wouldn't have known you, Margaret."

"I'm not surprised. I didn't expect you to."

"Wouldn't have known you!" Mitchell repeated as though trying to convince himself of a surprising truth.

"Huh! We better get at what you came to talk about?"

The man nodded. The mask-like expression settled over his face again.

"I want Celia," he said abruptly.

ly. He said it as a man accustomed to taking the things he desired.

Margaret Rogers' lips quivered but with an effort she kept them firm. "I don't know—" she began.

Mitchell broke in ruthlessly. "It's the only thing for the child," he insisted. "You ought to see that. What can you give her? What future have you planned for her here? She's finished high school. Seventeen—almost a young woman. What's she going to do now?"

Margaret was swift in her own defense.

"Celia's been happy," she defended him.

He scoffed.

"She's a child. Now she needs to learn the world. Is she talented? I'll give her training in the finest schools in this country or in Europe. If she wants society I'll take care of that, too. I can do it. I can give her everything in the world she needs! Margaret, don't you see—?"

"Schools and money aren't everything," the woman countered. "I want her to have a chance for happiness. I want her to be safe."

She put her hand to her face but John Mitchell did not notice the quick motion. He did not notice that when Margaret's hand dropped the fingers were wet with tears.

"I can all be arranged very easily," Mitchell was saying. "I'm in New York now. Moved there two months ago." He mentioned the name of an immensely respected legal firm with which he was affiliated. "Of course I still have interests in Chicago, but this new connection means I'll spend most of my time in New York."

"But what about Celia?"

"I've arranged everything," Mitchell insisted. "She'll stay with my mother in the old Grammercy Square place. I'm there too. Mother may be getting old but no one could launch a girl socially better than she can. Mother knows everyone. She'll introduce her to the right people. In the fall I'll send Celia to Europe."

The whirlwind of plans was too much for Margaret Rogers.

"But I don't know—" she faltered. "I haven't said—"

"You haven't said you'll let her come but you'll do it. Great heavens! What can you offer to compare with this?"

"I can't offer anything," said Margaret through firm lips, "except what I've given her all her life. I'm willing to work for her. I'm willing to do anything to make her happy."

"Then that's the answer!" the man said, elated.

"If it?" the woman asked gravely. "Are you so sure?"

John Mitchell's cheeks darkened. "Celia is mine," Margaret Rogers reminded him firmly. "I don't have to give her up!"

"No!" The man's voice rose sharply. "You don't have to give her up. My God, Margaret, you've robbed me of every happiness! You took her away. Do you want to ruin my whole life?"

He had forgotten where they were and so had Margaret. They were in the past again. Scenes forgotten for years flashed crystal clear through her mind.

"Don't—don't say that, John!" Margaret gasped.

Mitchell was on his feet. "Where is she? When can I see her?" he asked.

Margaret Rogers was very pale. "You can see her," she said. "She's lovely, John. She's beautiful! Celia doesn't know anything about all this. She thinks she's going to be a stenographer and earn $20 a week. Oh, I'm so proud of her. I want her to have the very best!"

The man's gaze was far away. "Does she look like you?" he wanted to know.

Margaret shook her head negatively.

"Not very much. Around the eyes maybe. Her hair curls—it's light brown. And she has brown eyes. Big eyes and she's usually laughing. She's taller than I am. Slim but not skinny like so many young girls. Celia will be 13 next month.

"I know."

Both of them were silent for a time. Mitchell's eyes were downcast. It was a moment of crisis and Margaret Rogers was making a tremendous effort.

"John," her words came finally in tortured rushes, "I'm trying—trying so hard not to be selfish. You can take her if you'll agree to my terms. You'll have to promise—"

"What are the conditions?" Mitchell asked harshly.

Margaret leaned forward, her face close to his.

"Promise," she said tensely, "that Celia shall never—KNOW!"

Automobile Theft Ring Discovered

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—Activity of an automobile theft ring that dealt only in high priced automobiles and frequently stole machines "to order" has been exposed here.

William Stanley Hayes, 44, arrested as the "salesman" of the gang is said to have admitted the sale of more than a score of costly motor cars to residents in three states. Hayes claims to be a Yale graduate.

According to police, Hayes was sent to "prospects" to demonstrate the stolen automobiles, and if a model not in the gang's possession was desired, members would steal the machine.

Triple Slayer May Get Another Reprieve Today

AUSTIN, Tex., Sept. 18.—Luz C. Arcos, under sentence to die at Huntsville tonight in the electric chair for a triple slaying, likely will again be saved. He was granted a week's reprieve last Thursday a few hours before the time set for execution.

Arcos' case presents legal tangles. An affidavit of insanity has been presented and a sanity trial ordered for January. There had been no order staying the execution, however, until this morning. Then the situation was placed before the court of criminal appeals. Governor Moody was prepared to act in accordance with that court's ruling.

Texas Has Had 1134 Incendiary Fires Since 1925

AUSTIN, Tex., Sept. 18.—Texas has had 1134 known incendiary fires from 1925 to August, 1930 with a loss of $2,757,124, state fire insurance commissioner J. W. Dewese reported today in urging a concerted drive by fire chiefs, fire marshals, city officials, civic clubs and others against incendiarism. Many fires classed as "unknown" are really incendiary, De-

Students Larger Than 20 Years Ago

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 19.—Students entering the University of Pennsylvania are younger, taller and heavier than those of 20 years ago, according to Samuel F. Coleman, registrar. The average age of students now is 18 years and six months while in 1910 it was 19.9 years. The average height is 5 feet 8 inches while their fathers stood 5 feet 7.4 inches. The average weight of students has increased from 132 pounds to 140.

Word "Bloody" Costs Atheist

LONDON, Sept. 19.—A young and heistic orator's use of the word "bloody," which never fails to grate upon an Englishman's sensitive ears, in replying to a heckler in his audience, has brought a fine of 40 shillings (about $10.) and a statement from the judge that only his youth saved him from a jail sentence.

The youth, Alfred Bunting, is only 19. He was lecturing on atheism and anarchism. A questioner called out: "You are not going to be a bloody lot of fools to believe what he wrote?" retorted Bunting.

He was charged with using "abusive language and insulting behavior likely to cause a breach of peace."

Cucumbers Are Ousting Corn

BLOOMFIELD, Ia., Sept. 19.—Corn, Iowa's king of crops, has abdicated in favor of the lowly cucumber in Davis county, Ia.

Farmers cooled the drought in Iowa by raising cucumbers. Contracts with canning companies induced them to grow "potential pickles."

Lorin Lamb was given the use of six acres of land for clearing it. His returns in three weeks have been $281 an acre or $65 a day, which with seed and insecticide furnished, meant nearly all profit.

Another youth earned enough to finance a year at college for himself, though he had to borrow the Bloomfield water wagon one night and irrigate his cucumber plants when they were threatened by dry weather.

Milk Wagon Horse Is Quiet

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Found! An ideal milk wagon horse. No longer will the residents of certain streets in Washington be disturbed by clatter of hoofs and loud shouts of "whoa" and "giddyap."

"Bud," a diligent worker for one of the Capital City's milk companies, has carefully considered the feelings of a peaceful sleeper and has allowed his master to teach him the latest methods of keeping quiet. With rubber shoes on his feet, "Bud" comes into the residential section without detection. When the time comes for his driver to deliver the milk, "Bud" is halted with merely "shush" instead of the usual "whoa." When his master is down the street there is no need for a loud "giddyap" to bring "Bud" along. A wave of the hand starts the rubber-soled feet into motion and Washington's residents sleep on, unaware of the visit of the milk wagon until they find their milk in its usual place.

Cats Win From Chicks To Hold Lead In Series

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Sept. 19.—The Fort Worth Panthers headed back for their home lot today with two games of the Dixie Series tucked in their win column, while the plucky Memphis Chicks were unable to scratch in as many starts on their native diamond.

The Texas League and Southern Association champions will resume play at Fort Worth tomorrow after a day of rest to shift the scene of battle.

Should the Cats take two of the three scheduled games in the Texas stronghold, the Dixie Series will be history with the Teaneseans in the offing.

Yesterday's 4-1 win put the victors out ahead with heavy odds to annex their fifth Dixie pennant.

Again it was in the eighth inning when the Chicks went skyward. The enemy supplemented the Memphis errors with hits of their own, and the 1-all tie was changed to a 3-1 lead for the Cats, which was increased a tally in the ninth.

Cox, Fort Worth left fielder, doubled, Prothro threw Tavener's bunt high to first, Brazill dropped Meyers' liner and the bases were billed. Mallon doubled, scoring two runs, and the game was as good as over at the end of the eighth.

Should the series at Fort Worth fall to yield a champion, another game will be played here next week.

Cardinals Are Doped To Win In The National

By GEORGE KIRKSEY
United Press Staff Correspondent
NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—The St. Louis Cardinals just about had the National League pennant race decided today.

With only nine games left to play and a lead of a fraction over the Cardinals, the Cards started their series against Brooklyn by winning the final game yesterday at Ebbets Field, 4-3, the Cardinals in the Robins who went into the series in first place with an 11-game winning streak behind them.

From fourth place, 12 games from the top, on August 9 to first place today tells the story of the Cardinals' comeback—the greatest in baseball history since the Boston Braves rose from last place to win the National League pennant in 1914.

During the past drive the Cardinals won 2 out of 40 games. Oddly enough, the Cards started their winning spurt against Brooklyn, winning the league, by beating the Robins, 4-3, on August 9.

After losing the opening game of all but crushed the pennant hopes of the Robins who went into the series in first place with an 11-game winning streak behind them.

Since the Cardinals started their current eastern invasion, they have lost only two games out of 10, winning three out of four from the Giants, two out of three from the Braves and three straight from the Robins.

Of their nine remaining games, the Cards have five against the last-place Phillies at Philadelphia and four against Pittsburgh at St. Louis. The Cards have had little or no trouble with the Phillies, winning 12 out of 17 games against them, but Pittsburgh has been the toughest club in the league for them. In 18 games played, the Pirates have won 12 and the Cards 6.

As the Cards have two more games to play than the Robins and have lost three less than Brooklyn, Chicago moved into Boston today for a 4-game series after which the Cubs will return home to finish the season with four games against the Reds. Cincinnati has recorded a victory until it has been held a jinx over the Cubs all season, winning 11 out of 18 games less than the Cards, left to play.

JIMMY BEATS THE RAP

JIMMY O'CONNELL bobbed up the other day in San Francisco. Maybe you don't remember the name. Jimmy O'Connell is the baseball player who confessed he offered Heinie Sand, Philly shortstop, $500 "not to beat down too hard" in the crucial series between the Phils and Giants.

That was in 1924, and the Giants were fighting for a pennant, which they finally won.

When Jimmy O'Connell confessed to Judge Landis that he had offered the bribe to Sand, with whom he formerly played in the coast league, he also implicated "Cozy" Dolan, Giants' coach, Frankie Frisch, George Kelly and Ross Younger.

The testimony against Frisch, Kelly and Younger was ruled "unacceptable" by Landis. O'Connell and Dolan were fired out of baseball.

"No Ill Will"

TOM LAIRD, the San Francisco coast writer, talked to Jimmy the other day when he visited San Francisco. Jimmy made his reputation at Recreation park in Frisco, going to the Giants with a $75,000 price tag on him. Here is what Laird says:

"Jimmy O'Connell has beaten the rap. A surprise visitor today in San Francisco, O'Connell says that his short and ill-fated baseball career has left him only with memories and no ill will."

Judge Landis is a fine man. John McGraw, O'Connell remembers as a friend, though he hasn't heard from McGraw since he left the Giants. . . . Heinie Sand (who told Art Fletcher, who told Heydler, who told Landis about the bribe attempt) he hears no ill will. . . . And perhaps Art Fletcher did what he thought best. . . .

Drives Truck Now

YES, O'Connell has beaten the rap. He's healthy and happy. Weighs 210 pounds and likes his job with the government at Fort Bayard, N. M. It isn't a white collar job. Jimmy drives a truck between Fort Bayard and the railroad station, six miles over mountain roads. He also delivers ice. . . .

"We're in a nice country," says Jimmy. "There is plenty of good hunting and fishing. A fellow lives right up there. . . . So far as baseball is concerned, O'Connell is reconciled to his fate. He wrote to Judge Landis about a year ago. Landis replied that there wasn't a chance

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

EDD ROUSH, the Indiana farmer, is one of the few holdouts who really went through with it. . . . Edd played in the Old-Timers' game in Boston recently, and on the way back to Indiana stopped to talk to McGraw. . . . McGraw, at the beginning of the season, wanted to pay Edd $15,000 a year. . . . Edd thought his services were worth $20,000. . . . Edd stoutly denies he wants to return to the game. . . . but he made that trip to Boston to play once more. . . . at his own expense. . . . and he didn't make $15,000 farming in Indiana this summer. . . . Roush says it's the principle of the thing. . . . He's 37 now. . . . and still looks like a few years of big league baseball. . . . Wonder what he would have done if he had been at bat in the ninth the other day in the game between the Giants and Cards when the Giants, one run behind, had the bases full? . . . Maybe he would have done just what Fred Leach did. . . . roll a grounder to second base for the third out. . . . and maybe not.

for him to get back into baseball. "Jimmy is 29 years old. He would be enjoying the best years of his career in baseball. . . . he didn't play baseball this year. . . . he follows it through the newspapers, however.

He Hasn't Slipped

"O'CONNELL hasn't slipped, mentally, morally or physically. He doesn't drink and hasn't smoked for four years. That's why he is different, and that's why every fan from California to Maine always will maintain that he should be reinstated. . . . "After visiting a few relatives and friends, he is going back to Fort Bayard. Just six years ago, almost to a day, he was getting ready to play in the world series with the Giants. Judge Landis banished him a day or two before the first game of the 1924 world series. . . . "Jimmy O'Connell has beaten the rap. I'm glad. I never knew a finer, cleaner boy than Jimmy. . . . In which I'll cast one vote right with Tom Laird.

Text: Jonah 3:15, 10; 4:1-11

And the Lord came unto Jonah the second time, saying—

Arise, go unto Nineveh, that great city, and preach unto it the preaching that I bid thee.

So Jonah arose, and went unto Nineveh, according to the word of the Lord. Now Nineveh was an exceeding great city of three days' journey.

And Jonah began to enter into the city a day's journey, and he cried, and said, Yet 40 days, and Nineveh shall be overthrown.

So the people of Nineveh believed God, and proclaimed a fast, and put on sackcloth, from the greatest of them even to the least of them.

And God saw their works, that they turned from their evil; and God repented of the evil, that he had said he would do unto them; and he did it not.

But it displeased Jonah exceedingly, and he was very angry.

And he prayed unto the Lord, and said, I pray thee, O Lord, was not this my saying, when I was yet in my country? Therefore I fled before unto Tarshish; for I knew that thou art gracious God, and merciful, slow to anger, and of great kindness, and repentest thee of the evil.

Therefore now O Lord, take I beseech thee, my life from me; for it is better for me to die than to live.

Then said the Lord, Doest thou well to be angry?

So Jonah went out of the city, and sat on the east side of the city, and there made him a booth, and sat under it in the shadow, till he might see what would become of the city.

And the Lord God prepared a gourd, and made it come up over Jonah, that it might be a shadow over his head, to deliver him from his grief. So Jonah was exceeding glad of the gourd.

But God prepared a worm when the morning rose the next day, and it smote the gourd that it withered.

And it came to pass, when the sun did arise, that God prepared a vehement east wind; and the sun beat upon the head of Jonah, that he fainted, and wished in himself to die, and said, It is better for me to die than to live.

And God said to Jonah, Doest thou well to be angry for the gourd? And he said, I do well to be angry, even unto death.

Then said the Lord, Thou hast had pity on the gourd, for the which thou hast not laboured, neither madest it grow; which came up in a night, and perished in a night:

And should I not spare Nineveh, that great city, where are more than sixscore thousand persons that cannot discern between their right hand, and their left hand; and also much cattle?

Texas Boy Amazes Mother

"J. C., Jr.'s stomach was often upset and he had very little appetite," says Mrs. I. C. Bracy, of Dallas, Texas. "He was feverish and his breath was bad. I found he was constipated.

"My mother always used California Fig Syrup, so I decided to give my boy some. It surely surprised me to see how quickly it stopped his feverishness, cleared his breath and tongue, regulated his bowels; made him a strong and energetic boy again.

The quick, safe way to cleanse and regulate the bowels of bilious, head-achy, constipated children is with California Fig Syrup. Give it at the first sign of bad breath, coated tongue, listlessness or feverishness. Every child loves its rich, fruity flavor and it acts without griping or discomfort. Appetite is increased by its use; digestion is assisted; weak stomach and bowels are given tone and strength.

For fifty years, doctors have endorsed this pure vegetable product. The genuine is always marked by the word California. Look for that when buying or you may get an imitation.

church so that men and women of devout life have been refused admission to church fellowship or have been expelled from particular groups because their views did not happen to accord with the views of others?

The applications of the Book of Jonah are many, and they can be made in almost every community if not in almost every life.

Over against Jonah's narrowness is set the breadth and fullness of God's mercy. It was a profound discovery of the great soul who wrote this book. How did he come to that conception of God? What was it that had revealed to him such spiritual truth as those around him could hardly appreciate? What but the communion of truth and the quest of a pure and sincere soul?

To know God in that way is to become godly. Really to believe in His love and mercy is to become loving and merciful our selves. The profession of belief in a God of love is a mere profession unless that love has laid hold of our lives and transformed them.

The Book of Jonah has been called the first great book of foreign missions. Certainly, the essence of a missionary religion and a missionary gospel is found within its pages. One cannot think of his religious mission attained, but what happened in Jonah's case has been by no means an isolated thing. How often in the community a church has closed its doors against the very persons whom its Gospel was designed to reach? How often the narrow spirit of sectarianism has created divisions and hostilities in the

Technicolor Is A Feature Of "Follow Thru"

Straight down the fairways, "Follow Thru" went onto Broadway's stage and made a sensational hit, lasting more than a year, before Paramount decided to give it to the world in an all-Technicolor moving picture production with Charles Rogers and Nancy Carroll in the romantic leading roles.

With these two stars and Laurence Schwab, of the stage-famous partnership of Schwab and Mandel, directing, Paramount has made an exuberant romantic comedy filled with love, excitement, fun and foolishness, and a group of songs hits that are said to be as popular as were those of the original production.

In Paramount's all-Technicolor production, which will open Sunday for 2 days at the Lyric theatre, Nancy Carroll in the leading feminine role, has ambitions to become a champion woman soffer and also to make Charles Rogers, the club professional, her husband. Her rival in the love ways, and an entrancing exhilarating golf-love match ensues to prove who's who. Zelma O'Neal and Jack Haley have the comely love roles, with Eugene Pallette as the heavy club member in a characterization much like his Sgt. Heath of the Van Dine murder stories.

Of the stage production of "Follow Thru," Heywood Brown in the New York Telegram said: "Follow Thru" is the best show I've seen in years. "Follow Thru" was a sensation on the stage. It's a grand and glorious entertainment riot on the all-talking, all-Technicolor screen.

To what great heights man can rise, and what higher planes are ever before him, when the measure which he applies to his thoughts and aspirations is the measure of the love of God. For the love of God broadens. Than the measure of man's mind and the soul of the eternal is most wonderfully kind.

The preponderance of the fish story in many minds has prevented their seeing the real meaning and teaching of the book. The question in relation to that story is not that as to whether a miracle could or could not happen. That has really nothing to do with the profound and deep teaching of the book. It is only when we spiritualize the book and read it with a spiritual eye that we are in the way of discovering its truth.

A High Point of Vision

And a man who has once perceived its depth and its height can never again think of this Book of Jonah without reverence and thankfulness. As it marked in Israel the high point of religious vision and magnanimity, so it marks still a plane to which many Mass at 8 a. m.

This is the Fifteenth Sunday after Pentecost. The gospel is from St. Luke VIII-16. Christ raises to life the son of the widow of Naim. "A dead man was carried out." This is repeated every day and everywhere. Where is the city, village or house from which no dead are carried out? Man comes into the world to die. The moment he is born he begins to die; and he ceases to die only when he ceases to live. Life is but a lingering death. The day will come when we shall die and be carried out. "All things go to one place; of earth they were made and into earth they return together." Ecclts. III-20. But what an important thing is death. It is decisive for all eternity; if we die a good death, we shall be saved for ever; if we die a bad death, we shall be lost forever. Ought we not seriously to consider this? And yet there are many Christians who take more trouble about everything else than about dying. Their anxiety early and late is how they can make money, attain honor and dignities, or gratify their passions; these things occupy them early and late, but they never, or hardly ever, think of what they must do in order to die well. What blindness: Oh, that we would often meditate on the words of Christ: "What doth it profit a man if he gain the whole world, and suffer the loss of his own soul?" Matt. XVI. 26. Let us look to our own soul.

Fred H. Minor Is Slated For Speaker Of Texas House

AUSTIN, Tex., Sept. 19.—Eighty for members of the incoming house of representatives are pledged to support Fred H. Minor of Denton for speaker, Rep. Ray Holder of Dallas county, announced here today.

This is more than half the membership and apparently assures Minor's selection on the first ballot. Former speaker Lee Satterwhite, who is returning to the legislature after an absence of several years, will not be a candidate for speaker. Holder has been advised. Holder manager the successful campaign for election of W. S. Barron as speaker of the next legislature. Dewey Young of Wellington has been mentioned as a possible candidate for speaker. Mrs. Louise Snow Phinney will again be a candidate for chief clerk of the house.
