Sterling said here it is too much work to be done here, and that he will not be his successor on the highway commission in case of his election. Rotary Club Enjoys Good Program Today

Members of the Eastland Rotary Club enjoyed a splendid program today. John Mouser of the Prairie Oil & Gas Company, was chairman of the program committee and presented Miss Russell, teacher of expression in the Eastland schools, who gave some readings that were greatly enjoyed by the Rotarians and visitors.

Dr. T. J. Wilson, president of Warner Memorial University, which has just opened its second year in Eastland, gave a brief talk in which he told of the progress the school is making and extended an invitation to the Rotarians and others to visit the school. Dr. Wilson said that the school would have a football team and a basketball team this year and as soon as possible would have a full athletic program. About 75 pupils are expected to enroll this year before registration for the term is completed.

Ralph Crouch, Commander of the local American Legion post, told the Rotarians that plans and specifications for grading the American Legion airport in Eastland had been posted by the government at the local postoffice and asked that contractors who desired to bid on the work get in their bids at once. The government engineers, he stated, would be in Eastland again next Wednesday for the purpose of opening bids on the work.

Among the visitors at today's meeting of the club were: W. D. Guiley, of Brownwood; M. H. Hester, of Ranger; John Thurman, of Ranger; B. H. Peacock, of Ranger; Roy Speed, of Ranger; Ray Newman, of Ranger; Claude Renie, of Fort Worth; W. D. Conway, of Ranger; Geo. Pee, of Cisco, and Miss Clara Simer of Eastland High school.

CHICAGO, Sept. 15.—Interest in the Alfred Lingle slaying June 9 was revived today with reports that a man suspected of having been his actual slayer had escaped after being wounded in a battle with police of London, Ky.

The man, Ted Geisking, known to police as a hired killer, was reported to have led a band of gangsters who hijacked an alcohol truck near London and to have eluded later police who attempted to capture him.

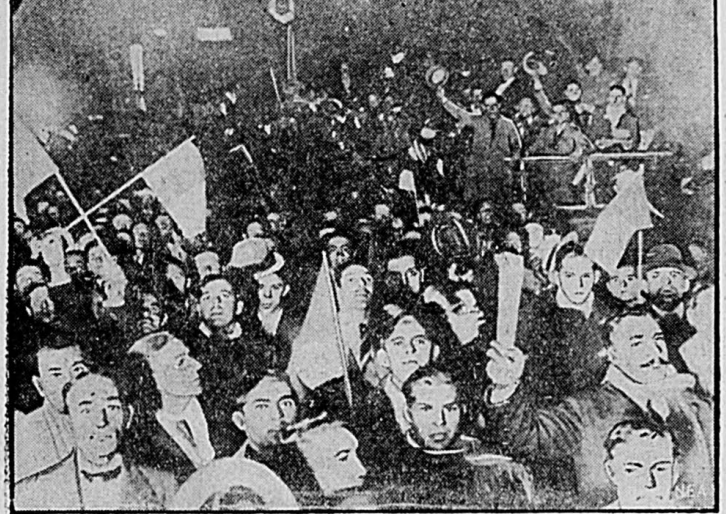

Representatives of the State's attorney's office here and of the State police of Indiana, where Geisking is notorious, were in Kentucky, investigating the reports and seeking to establish whether Geisking was in that state.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 15.—A fit of insanity was ascribed by police today as the reason Mrs. Ruth Weimer, 40, shot and killed her sister, Mrs. Mabel A. Steele, 30, and attempted to end her own life. "She continually shouted 'I wish I were dead,'" Mrs. Weimer told officers. "Finally I couldn't stand the harassment any longer and I shot her."

Police learned that Mrs. Steele, who was taken to the Norwalk State insane hospital for observation a year ago after she attempted suicide, had been depressed because her husband had taken two of their three small children and left.

W. Hamilton, at the same time.

Fritts was assessed the 99-year sentence last spring at Eastland after he had previously been given the death penalty by a jury at Austin and the case reversed on appeal due to omission of "with malice aforethought" in the formal indictment.

Hamilton and his son were shot down at their home after an argument with Fritts over testimony the boy planned to place before a grand jury in a liquor case investigation. Evidence at former trials brought out.

Complaint Filed Against Farmer Charging Arson

A complaint charging arson has been filed in Justice of the Peace Jim Steele's court against C. E. Spruill, a farmer living about five miles northwest of Eastland. The offense is alleged to have been committed on Jan. 14, 1928. Arch Spruill, a son of C. E. Spruill, signed the complaint. According to Justice of the Peace Steele the Spruill home was destroyed by fire in 1926.

The complaint against Spruill, officials stated, followed some trouble Spruill had with his family a few days ago. Spruill, officials said members of his family told them, was abusing his wife when two of his sons interfered. Spruill and the boys engaged in a fist fight which resulted in Spruill being severely beaten.

Justice of the Peace Steele stated that the boys said that Spruill made them drive the family automobile up to the side of the house in 1926, poured oil on it and set fire to it, the flames destroying the house, its contents and the car. The house was insured, it is stated.

Spruill, considered one of the leading citizens of the county, has reared a large family, every member of which is highly respected. He was a hard worker and considered strictly honest.

Spruill is said to have gone to the home of his brother in Erath county.

Enterprise Is Easy Winner In Yacht Race

ABOARD U. S. S. KANE, off Newport, Sept. 15.—Enterprise, defender of the America's Cup, won the second race of the series for the historic trophy today, leaving Shamrock, the challenger, far behind. It was the second straight victory for Harold S. Vanderbilt's yacht and was more one-sided than the first.

The defender crossed the finish line a din of whistles and cheers at 2:41:31, four hours and one minute and 31 seconds after the start.

Unlike Saturday, there was no delay at the start. The warning signal at 10:30 a. m. EST, found both boats shaking out their canvas and ready for the race. Ten minutes later, exactly at 10:40 a. m. EST, the gun boomed from the Nourmahal's deck and the race was on.

Enterprise moved out in front at the start, just as she had in the first race, footing faster than the challenger, although Captain "Ted" Heard, veteran professional skipper, had Shamrock in the weather berth.

Enterprise was two miles ahead of Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock at the end of the first 20 miles of their race today.

Drawing rapidly away from the green-hulled challenger on the second leg of the triangular course of Enterprise's reef, the defender rounded the 20-mile mark at 1:22:35 p. m.

NEW PORT, R. I., Sept. 15.—

Facts about today's race between Enterprise and Shamrock follow: Course—An equilateral triangle beginning nine miles off Brenton's reef, ten nautical miles to a side, total distance, 30 nautical miles. Time of Start—11:40 a. m. Eastern daylight saving time.

Enterprise, by winning Saturday has one race to its credit. To keep the cup from going to England, Enterprise must win three more races.

Officers could ascribe no motive for the crime.

Detectives shot and killed another suspect known to his landlady as "John Williams of Sioux City, Ia.," the victim, about 35, was shot down when he attempted to run. He died on the sidewalk in front of the house.

THE FLYING GASCON.

Dieudonne Coste, "Gift-of-God," whom the admiring French call "Doudou," is from Gascony, where grows a strange, rare breed of heroes.

And thinking of Cyrano, one thinks of his ballades, especially the one introducing his fellow-adventurers, which in the version used by Richard Mansfield used to run something like this:

The bold Cadets of Gascony, Of Carbon of Castel-Jaloux, Brawling and swaggering boastfully, The bold Cadets of Gascony, Bragging of armory, heraldry, Their veins a-brimming with blood so blue— The bold Cadets of Gascony, Of Carbon of Castel-Jaloux,

And so on, with its "eagle-eye and spindle-shanks, cats' mustache and wolves' teeth," etc., all suggestive of this daring air-man, except that he doesn't brawl or boast.

More in Coste's self-controlled style is that other ballade, chanted by Cyrano extemporaneously as he accepts a challenge from an enemy:

I calmly doff my beaver low And, freeing hand and heel, My heavy mantel off I throw And I draw my polished steel. Gaily as Phoebus round I wheel, Alert as Screamouch.

At the close of the last refrain, true to his word, Cyrano runs his antagonist through. In short, he does what he sets out to do. He "touches." He gets there as per program. That is Coste. "Gift of God" to modern France and America, to prove that high courage, imagination and adventure still live.

THIS EARTHLY HEART.

Dr. Benjamin Ross, director of the Dudley Observatory at Albany, N. Y., says the earth pulsates like a human heart. When the poets sing of "this heart of earth" or "the earth's sad heart," we call it fanciful. Dr. Ross is not poetizing.

The earth, he explains, actually expands and contracts like heart. This, he suggests, is caused by bombardment of the sun in the form of electrons. These electronic showers, while causing expansion and contraction, also produce winds, storms and northern lights.

More and more, scientists are interesting themselves in the fascinating study of the sun. It is generally agreed that all the life on this earth is supported by the sun's energy. It has given out power at a tremendous rate, astronomers say, for billions of years, yet continues to pour fresh energy in a space without apparent diminution.

Dr. Ross goes farther than this. The whole universe, he believes, is "an electro-magnetic field in which each rotating body creates its own magnetic field." He adds that "in all probability the universe we know is but an aggregation of atoms in another, far greater, universe."

THE RED MODE.

We think women kill men rather freely in this country, and get away with it too easily. But our conjugal slaughter is nothing to that in France, nor is the feminine immunity so scandalous.

In the last couple of months there have been about 40 feminine murderers tried in Paris courts. In few cases was there any real question of guilt—that is, if unlawful killing implies guilt. But in every case but one the fair defendant was acquitted. The only prisoner found guilty was sentenced to two years in prison.

"The red mode" they call it over there. Gallantry has much to do with it. From the masculine viewpoint it is carrying gallantry pretty far. And yet they are male juries that acquit these female killers. What do you make of it?

OUTDOORS FOR THE KIDS.

During the next few months, a physician points out, we may expect far more colds among children than there have been during the summer. This will not come from the cold weather. It will come from spending so much more time indoors. People living an outdoor life seldom catch colds and the ailments that follow colds.

The boys and girls catch cold in over-heated homes or in stuffy school rooms. However caught, the colds are passed on to other children, who carry them home and pass them around the neighborhood.

Keep the children outdoors as much as possible through the fall, winter and spring. Keep house temperatures down to a healthy level, 70 degrees or less.

STUDYING RELIGION.

The colleges of Columbia University, one reads, will offer more than 150 courses in religion during the coming year. In addition there are to be courses for home study in religious history and literature, as well as several religious conferences and a series of public lectures on religious subjects.

These courses and lectures may not be so well patronized as other branches of study, but when one of the nation's educational centers prepares such an extensive religious program for its school year, a genuine demand must be assumed.

The problems of the churches in regard to finance, membership and attendance are balanced by the intellectual interest in religion shown in school courses of study and in the demand for books on various phases of the subject. Religion does not die, though its expression may change from generation to generation.

"Why make such a holler for a world language?" says a returned tourist. "We have one now. It's the Dollar."

ROCKMAN ROMANCE INC. © 1930 THE NEA SERVICE INC.

TODAY reading one month ago, she sat at her desk, looking at the letter which she had just received from the man who had helped her rise and collect her scattered books. He was grinning and sympathetic and Celia liked him instantly. It wasn't just the thing to stand and talk, to be sure, but the stranger helped her knock the snow off and who can be strictly proper after a dive into a snow bank?

A week later there were pictures to be made of senior activities at West High school. Celia was surprised to meet her neighbor of the snow storm incident, introduced as "Mr. Shields of The Post."

Shields gave her the most prominent position in the photograph—and rightly too, according to city desk comment later.

After that Celia said a shy "Hello" when the two met. Before long Barney Shields had met and won the approval of Mrs. Rogers. It was almost impossible to approve of Barney. He had such brilliant stories to tell about celebrities and exciting events "covered" in his day's work. He knew everyone, went everywhere—yet kept his engaging boyishness. That, no doubt, was the quality that convinced Mrs. Rogers the youth was a suitable companion for her daughter.

So Celia had gone to motion picture theaters with the young photographer and for many days in the little car which was Barney's pride and joy. Barney always explained that the car was a business necessity but the constant care he lavished on its shining green surface and his eager attention to every murmur of its mechanism spoke of the deepest pride.

Celia liked him because she never became tongue-tied or ill at ease, wondering what to say next when she was with Barney. She had other boy friends, met through school acquaintances, but most of them talked only of sports she had never played, and places she had never been so that she felt stupid and shy. Barney was different. He was, furthermore, 23 years old, tall, well set up and endowed with a grin which, though often impertinent, was always friendly. Barney Shields' features were by no means classic. His hair was dark brown and worn slicked back but there were unruly locks which no amount of brushing could keep from flopping over his temple. He had gray eyes which looked out from dark lashes and won your confidence.

Chiefly Shields was a young man who gave the impression of knowing exactly what he was out to get and how to go about it. That, aside from technical knowledge, was his great asset as a photographer.

He knew and sympathized with Celia's efforts to find a job. He had tried to help in that venture, suggesting possible employers. Though nothing had come of these suggestions his encouragement had meant much.

They had passed the park and were driving northward through a suburban district. Both the youth and the girl were bare-headed. Shields drove with one hand on the wheel, the other arm resting casually on the back of the seat.

Overhead the dark sky was studded with star light. The throbbing hum of the motor was the only sound to cut the stillness. It would be peaceful, Celia thought, and oh, so heavenly restful, to ride on and on like this.

She turned toward Barney and an unruly tendril of her hair that was down-soft touched his cheek. Instantly the girl smiled, pushed the curl back into place.

Barney did not smile. His eyes were set on the road ahead and neither he nor the girl spoke. Just to ride on and on like this!

Suddenly Celia was aware of a quickening pulse beat. There was something magical about tonight. It was in the air. She could not understand it but could sense the difference. Never, never had there been a night like this before! Celia was radiant with happiness. She drew a deep breath and thought that the very breeze against her cheek was like a caress.

The girl's heart was pounding now. She leaned far back in her seat and felt Barney's arm slip about her shoulders. She let it rest there.

The car plunged on, cutting through the darkness.

They passed a great, bulking limousine and then two smaller cars. After that for a long stretch they had the road to themselves. The whole night had acquired misted loveliness in Celia's eyes. Abruptly her reverie was shattered. The roadster swerved sharply to the roadside, brakes screaming, and halted.

The next instant Celia was caught in Barney Shields' embrace. His lips were pressed to hers. Barney was kissing her over and over again.

"Celia!" he murmured huskily. "Oh, Celia!"

Pacific Fliers Return To Japan Because Of Fog

TOKIO, Sept. 15.—Harold Bromley, American aviator, and his co-pilot, Harold Catty, returned to Japan today after being reported lost on the Pacific Ocean for more than 12 hours in an attempted night flight from Aomori Prefecture to Tacoma, Wash.
The fliers landed at dawn at Cape Hatteras, near where they had taken off.
Departing yesterday morning, they kept in contact with flying officials here until 5:10 p.m. (11:10 a. m. Sunday P.S.T.) when their radio suddenly went silent and great fear, was felt as to their safety.
Heavy fogs, encountered 800 miles at sea, were believed to have caused Bromley to make a change in his direction that eventually forced him to put back to Japan.
A radio message, intercepted by the Dollar liner President Taft, was the first indication given that the orange mesma monoplane was diving from its course.
This was later confirmed when reports reached here from the Jurule Islands saying that the plane had been sighted twice.
Aviation experts declared it was little short of miraculous that Bromley had been able to steer his plane back through the rain, mist and fog that he had unexpectedly encountered.

Stuart Clarke, a pitcher, followed with a home run, tying the score. The Spuders came back in their half of the ninth however, and scored the winning tally that threw the Texas series into a tie, with each team having two victories to its credit.

The Hollywood Story

COPYRIGHT 1930 BY NEA SERVICE, INC. BY ERNEST LYNN

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Anne Winter, who began as an extra, is now under contract to Grand United, one of the largest of the Hollywood Studios.

Dan Rommer, former New York newspaper man, now a scenario writer, is in love with Anne, but he is not meeting with much success and he regards his feeling for her as a rather hopeless one. Anne has been living with two extra girls, Eva Harley and Mona Morrison. The former, embittered by her failure, has left Hollywood, but Mona, being made of more cheerful stuff, still hopes to "get a break."

Paul Collier, who writes a daily movie column for a string of newspapers, shares Dan's apartment. He has great faith in Rommer's ability. A play that he had written for the stage while in New York, is returned to Dan, unaccepted.

ed, and Anne and Collier read it and are enthusiastic. They urge him to revise it for the movies.

This he does. Eventually it is accepted by Grand United, and Dan, knowing that Anne would like a dramatic role, suggests to studio executives that she be given a test for the leading feminine part. Gary Sloan is to direct the picture. He gives her a test and she wins the role. Sloan is the biggest director in Hollywood and he begins to show some interest in her and takes her out.

Rommer proposes to Anne, but she tells him she is not at all sure that she loves him. He thinks it will be better for Anne if he does not show her too much attention; he does not want to arouse Sloan's jealousy. On the eve of her biggest scene in the picture, Sloan suggests that she have dinner with him. At dinner he asks if she has ever been in love.

W. K. Henderson Denies Being A Candidate For Office

SHREVEPORT, La., Sept. 15.—W. K. Henderson, of "hello world, doggone fame and owner of radio station KWKH today brandad as false rumors that he intends to run for governor of Louisiana to succeed Huey P. Long.

"I would rather be Will Henderson fighting for the interest of the independent merchant than to be president of the United States," he said.

Henderson was a strong supporter of Governor Long's in the gubernatorial contest as well as in the recent successful senate race by the governor. Henderson has been strong following in Louisiana.

He declined to commit himself as to who he believes will succeed Governor Long. It is reliably reported that O. K. Allen, chairman of the Louisiana highway commission, will follow the example Ross Sterling set in Texas.

then if he was going to add something trite—something after the manner of fiction writers, about bringing out the woman in her in order to bring out the actress.

But he didn't. He said instead, "You've a great talent, Anne, but you don't use it. You haven't learned yet to let yourself go; there's something that I don't know—there's something inside of you that you're keeping locked up. I said that when you fall in love you're going to be a better actress, and I mean it. I know it doesn't sound original, because there's an awful lot of guff printed about actresses having to live their parts in order to act them, and all that sort of thing. And of course any sensible person knows it isn't true."

Anne said humbly, "I'm sorry." She said, "I don't understand, though, what you mean about locking something up inside of me."

Sloan pressed his foot on the brake pedal, and when the car stopped he turned to face her. "Look at me," he said.

Anne wondered why he had told her, because she had become accustomed to obeying that authoritative ring in his voice. So she looked at him, and Sloan gazed into her eyes without a word, and then he deliberately kissed her.

Anne drew back from him, and Sloan, with a little smile playing on his lips, continued to sit there and look at her.

"Well?"

Anne said quietly, coldly: "That was a cheap trick."

"Are you angry?"

She made no answer, and Sloan laughed softly. "There you are," he said. "You're angry, of course, but instead of being nice and primitive about it and slapping my face, you give me the high-hat treatment. Anne," he declared, "you're too ladylike—you're too cold. God gave you emotion. Use it."

And then he apologized for kissing her. "Not that I didn't want to, though," he added with a grin. "It was a clinical experiment, but it was something more, too. If you showed me any encouragement at all, I'd fall for you pretty hard, Anne."

He drove her home then and advised her to get a good night's rest, and Anne obediently went straight to bed. She lay awake for a long time, though, thinking that Gary Sloan was a very strange person, wondering if what he had said about her could be true. "Too ladylike—too cold—god gave you emotion—use it!"

She was troubled.

But on the set the next morning he greeted her as though nothing at all had happened. He said "Good morning, Anne. Feeling fit?"

"I had nine hours' sleep," she answered, smiling. "I should be."

"Good." There was something else to be done, he said, before he would be ready for her. So Anne waited, talked for a while with Dan Rommer, who did not linger near her long, however, but found things to keep him busy. Anne thought he was a little abrupt, but she quickly excused it. She thought, on the way to her dressing room: "I'm nothing but nerves."

It was nearly noon when her turn finally came and she stepped beneath the blinding lights. Rommer watched her, and he watched Gary Sloan, and he saw almost at once that Sloan was not satisfied with her. But the director said nothing for perhaps two minutes; merely sat and frowned. Then he commanded:

"Cut!"

Anne looked at him questioning-ly and Sloan shook his head. They would listen for a playback, he said; perhaps Anne would discover what was wrong when she heard it. He rose from his chair and went over to her, and Dan saw him say things to her in a low tone

South Bend Has Second Tragedy In Three Weeks

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Sept. 15.—Residents of South Bend were in feverish excitement today, fearful that other lives might be taken by slayers of two girls within the last three weeks.

While police still were seeking the man who attacked and strangled to death 8-year old Marvinne Appel less than three weeks ago, a fiend entered the home of Henry Wiltman just before daybreak Sunday, crept noiselessly between the beds of the sleeping Wiltman children and slashed the throat of 17-year old Alice, and escaped.

Alice, unable to speak, stumbled to the floor, staggered against the bed of her sleeping brothers and sisters and out into a hallway, where she fell and died a few minutes later in the arms of her horror-stricken mother.

Police believed at first that Alice had fallen from a window, but had been slain by some jealous, jittered sweetheart. Several youths were arrested, but the investigation led nowhere and today the murder remained a mystery.

Franklin, Principal In Melodrama Of Ozarks, Is Back

ATKINS, Ark., Sept. 15.—Connie Franklin, principal in a Ozark melodrama and mystery last spring, has returned to the scene of the famous trial—to start picking cotton.

Franklin, who was believed to have been murdered but arrived at the trial of his alleged murderers, has returned from a hitch hiking trip into Mexico, where he went after a vaudeville tour failed.

His return again has thrown the community into consternation as many persons who knew Franklin before he was alleged to have been murdered, continue to deny he is the real Connie "in the flesh."

Last Tree Sitter Is Grounded After 1,400 Hours Aloft

HOUSTON, Tex., Sept. 15.—Johnnie Fry, 12-year-old boy who traded the comforts of his home for a treetop July 15, descended from his perch this morning to answer the call of the school room. Johnnie, claimant of the world championship tree sitting crown, spent 1478 1/2 hours aloft, braving several windstorms and one fire that scorched his tree.

He originally started his endurance contest in a tree over his grandmother's home, but the crowds annoyed the neighbors, so Johnnie's pals and partners sawed off the limb on which he rested and carried it to his own backyard.

Houston's schools opened today, and Johnnie stretched his legs.
