He contended that there was more vision in Hollywood now than in New York, and that it might be well for those who controlled the destiny of the New York stage to drop their patronizing attitude toward the "talkies" and take a leaf or two from the infant industry's book of experience.

"I know that," Anne said. "He told me later what he had done. I'm grateful to him, and to you for listening to him—and to Mr. Sloan, of course. Everybody has been very wonderful to me. I'll try very hard to deserve your kindness."

Yellowstone Names Explained By U. S. Geographic Officials

By WALTER K. WALKER
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—Thousands of Yellowstone Park tourists who have pondered whence and by what authority came such names as "Old Faithful" geyser and "Broken Egg" spring will find their curiosity gratified by explanations accompanying recent decisions of the United States Geographic Board.
Settling permanently all place names in the park from Abiathar Peak to Young Hopeful Geyser, and chronologically from the earliest French trappers to the latest Guide tourists, the Board's collected decisions tell a strange story of explorers' adventures and tourists' imagination.
The park itself derives its name from the Yellowstone river, known to the Minetaree Indians as "Mist a da zi," meaning "rock yellow river," and adopted by early French explorers as "Roche Jaune" or "Yellow Rock."
"Old Faithful" was applied to the most reliable geyser of the Upper Basin by the Washburn Party in 1870, and was the first geyser in the park to receive a name.
The Washburn Party also named the "Beehive," because of the symmetry of its cone, the "Castle," because its cone resembled a partially ruined old feudal castle, and the "Grand."
The Gardiner river, from whence the official northern entrance to the Park takes its name, was "probably named for a trapper."
Tourists' whimsically is shown in the naming of "Factory Hill," 5,500 feet, supposed to resemble on a frosty morning a factory in an active factory town; and "Chocolate Pots," thermal springs having small cones coated with algae and iron, said to look like chocolate.
An Englishman, the Earl of Dunraven, is formally recognized in "Dunraven Peak," 9,700 feet high, named by the United States Geological Survey in 1878 for the Earl, beer running and illegal resorts back on a paying basis. At the same time Capone hopes to eliminate many of the gang murders which have concentrated unwanted attention on gang operations.

Police activity resulting from the murder of Alfred J. Lingle, Chicago Tribune reporter, and the expose of the slain Jack Zuta's connections with public men, has caused an alarming depression in gang revenue. Returning from summer resort communities where they usually operate during hot weather, gang leaders found Chicago all but closed. New police captains were on duty. Peace officers had become difficult to deal with.
Capone's answer was to complete an "all for Al and Al for all" organization which he has had in mind ever since his release from jail in Philadelphia last spring.

Capone himself will remain far enough in the background to be safe. Most of the actual work will be done by a "cabinet" of department heads made up in the main by Capone's former enemies.
HARLINGEN, Tex., Sept. 9.—Edwin Clover, 19, fell from a truck while scuffling with a man and received injuries which proved fatal. The accident occurred yesterday while the were en route to Harlingen.

Agreement On Proration Is Reached Here

A proration agreement for the west central Texas district to be applied under the terms of the Texas state pipe line law, was reached at a meeting of the district committee and the county chairman at Eastland recently. Under this agreement oil above the maximum allowed as marginal production will be restricted 25 per cent.

Under the general proration order issued by the Texas Railroad Commission following hearings at Austin last month marginal wells are defined upon the basis of depth, three classes being fixed. Marginal production will not be prorated. Under these regulations wells 2,000 feet or less in depth are allowed six barrels daily marginal production; wells from 2,000 to 3,300 feet are allowed 12 barrels, and wells above 3,300 are allowed 20 barrels. Production above these margins is known as prorable production and will bear the entire oil cut.

A complete proration schedule was made out at the meeting last week and furnished the district squire, W. H. Dyer, of Graham, for transmission to the various purchasing companies. It is understood that these purchasing concerns arrange their purchases of oil so as to conform with the schedules in each instance.

The success of the proration scheme is the district dependent ultimately upon the cooperation of the producers and the pipe line companies, said J. T. Anderson, of Cisco, a member of the district committee. If both abide by the agreement reached last week he said he believes and the committee believes that the proration plan will be a success. If they fail to do so he is certain that it will not succeed.

Indications before the committee at its meeting last week were that this cooperation will be forthcoming and that little difficulty will be encountered in applying the regulations. Wires from the Humble Oil and Refining Company and the Prairie Oil and Gas Company were to the effect that these companies would carry out proration plans already in effect on their properties in the district, indicating that they would then change their proration schedules to conform with those adopted by the operators committee.

Eastland county, the schedule shows, has about 1,000 barrels daily of prorable oil. Under the district schedule this will be cut 25 per cent or 250 barrels. None of the cut, as stated, will apply on wells producing only marginal oil. To explain, a well 2,000 feet or less in depth producing only 6 barrels will be allowed to produce that 6 barrels without restriction. The same applies to wells between 2,000 and 3,300 producing 12 barrels or less and wells above 3,300 producing 20 barrels or less. A well 2,000 feet deep or less, producing 20 barrels will have 25 per cent taken off its prorable production, which is that production over six barrels allowed as marginal. In this case 14 barrels would be designated prorable and 25 per cent of the 14 barrels cut. The same regulations apply to deeper wells allowed higher marginal limits. In each case the marginal production is first subtracted from the total production and the remainder prorated one-fourth.

Montana's Only Chinese Cowboy In Retirement

George Taylor, Adopted by Rancher, Once Fought Indian Rustlers.

CUT BANK, Mont., Sept. 9.—Only a fair bronc rider but a wizard at driving a four horse team was George Taylor, the only Chinese cowboy in the annals of Montana, who now has put away the black snake whip for a garden hoe on his little ranch here.

Taylor's Chinese name was forgotten when he was adopted in 1855 by Jesse F. Taylor, owner of a big cattle outfit known as the S. T. brand, located near Helena. The boy had been brought to Helena from China by his mother who died that year, leaving the five year old stranded.

The wealthy rancher sent the boy through school and then put him to work on the ranch as a cow hand. While still in his twenties, Taylor was entrusted with a drive of 1,000 cattle from Helena to Choteau, at that time the agency for the Blackfeet Indians.

The outfit was encamped for the night at the present site of Wolf Creek. A band of a dozen Blackfeet who had jumped the reservation to seal horses took every horse on the drive during the night.

Taylor and two of his cowboys, Louis Morgan and Jim Fisher, set out on the marauder's train afoot. The overtook the Indians shot and scalped two of them and recovered the horses.

Young Taylor then followed the roundup for ten years. He was known as a most dependable teamster in the days when the prairie was without charted routes and a driver picked his way by landmarks frequently crossing deep coulees and washouts.

All of the countless adventures of the early west were Taylor's until he settled down to stock ranching in 1878. He had been clawed by a grizzly on a hunting expedition, saved from the swollen waters of the Marias river and another time had the brim of his hat perforated in the shooting up of a saloon.

While spending the night in a small cabin in the Sun River country with a small hunting party, Taylor and his friends were awakened by a grinding of the logs in the cabin. The party found a herd of buffalo rubbing and jostling for an opportunity to scratch themselves on the rough logs. The cabin swung alarmingly until the buffalo were stampeded by shots in the air and the barking of the dogs.

Taylor took up stock ranching on a small scale not far from the present Custer highway. He once owned several hundred cattle and sheep. He married a young woman of Swedish ancestry and their ranch home became one of the show places of the locality. He has three sons living, two engaged in sheep ranching and a third a sailor in the United States Navy. Since his wife's death, Taylor has been living at Cut Bank. He is 80 years old.

BARBER PAYS FOR HAIRCUT

SHANGHAI, Sept. 9.—Mrs. Chen Ye-Wen decided to get a haircut in the new fashionably short style. So she went to Zao Ku-sing, Shanghai barber, and had the job done.

On returning home Mrs. Chen met her husband, who is a Chinese gentleman of the old school. Disliking new-fangled haircuts, he beat his wife.

Police intervened. Presently husband, wife and barber appeared in court.

The husband admitted beating his wife but blamed the barber for doing the deed which gave him provocation.

After due meditation, the judge of the Shanghai District Court fined the husband $1. for beating his wife, but fined the barber $2 for administering a hair cut without making sure that it would not stir domestic trouble.

"I HAVE never bought or sold a share of stock speculatively in my life, except one small lot that I bought early in life. I determined to sell all my interests in every outside concern and concentrate my attention upon one concern in Pittsburgh. Such a course should commend itself to every man. For a business man especially the rule would seem all-important. His mind must be kept calm and free if he is to decide wisely the problems which are continually coming before him. Nothing tells in the long run like good judgment, and no sound judgment can remain with the man whose mind is disturbed by the mercurial changes of speculation. It places him under an influence akin to intoxication. What is not, he sees, and what he sees, is not. He cannot judge of relative values or get the true perspective of things. Speculation is a parasite feeding upon values, creating none."—ANDREW CARNEGIE.

A DOG was crossing a brook with a bone in his mouth. Looking into the stream he saw, as he supposed, another dog with another bone. Desiring to possess that also he made a snap at it, when lo and behold! the bone he was carrying dropped into the water and straightway sunk to the bottom.—An Old Fable.

This dog "took a chance" (as some of us humans sometimes do) and lost all he had. Maybe you at some time have grasped at a shadow in the form of a get-rich-quick scheme that promised everything but became a total loss.
