Keeping Tab On The State Candidates

CORPUS CHRISTI, Tex., July 17.—Ross Sterling's statement that he proposed to remove from counties the burden of highway costs was branded as "misleading" by Jim Young, candidate for governor, here last night. Young declared that it would be impossible to sell Texas road bonds without a property tax, which at this time would be unfair to the people of Texas. Young said he had been unable to get Sterling to answer his queries regarding the bond issue.

Tom Love was exonerated as one who was preaching prohibition and religion when he "had no religion and never was a prohibitionist."

DALLAS, Tex., July 17.—"What I want to do for the people of Texas is to unbind them, not bind them," Ross Sterling declared in a campaign speech here last night. "My opponents are saying that Ross Sterling wants to place a $2,000,000 bond issue on the people's shoulders, on their homes and farms. Not so. He wants to preserve them and make the traffic pay for them and the state's highway program. Thirty-one states in the union have done so—it can be done in Texas." Sterling scorped the attacks of other candidates, declaring that when the people of Texas understood his proposal, their cries would be silenced. "Fergusonism" came in for a rapping from Sterling and Dexter Milton who introduced the speaker.

MARSHALL, Tex., July 17.—Lighter tax burdens was the theme of Earl B. Mayfield's address in three East Texas counties yesterday. Barry Miller in his address here Wednesday night. Rather than allowing private interests to exploit the undergrowth wealth, Miller promised that if elected governor the taxpayers should profit. "If we don't find oil these rich farms are still there," Miller continued. "I'm in favor of putting red dirt farmers in charge of them and making them pay."

"Texas is in no financial condition to relocate its prisons or to support a highway bond issue, in Miller's opinion."

Prove Assertion Or Apologise Moody Is Told

DALLAS, Tex., July 17.—A demand that Gov. Dan Moody either apologize "for his meddling" or prove his assertion that Cecil Storey was put in the race for attorney general by Jim Ferguson was issued by Storey through his headquarters here today. "His latest statement," Storey said, "in which he is still trying to stem the tide of votes away from his appointee, R. L. Bobbitt, by aligning Anti-Ferguson voters against me charges me with being the Ferguson candidate simply because I voted for the Ferguson amnesty bill. If Governor Moody so extravagantly condemn me for supporting the amnesty bill then what explanation has he to take for his leader in the Senate, the Hon. Walter Woodward, for being author of the bill and for his leader in the house, the Hon. Alfred Patsch, for supporting it? I am still waiting for his proof that Jim Ferguson put me in the race or for his apology for his unwarranted misstatements of facts."

Maury Graham's Body Is Found

CEDAR CITY, Utah, July 17.—A tiny funeral cortege winding through the mountain fastness surrounding Cedar City wrote the last sad chapter to a saga of the air unparalleled for its courage and bravery. Maury Graham, who gave his life that airman later, so through, was on his way home. The pilot's body, still encased in the heavy flying suit he wore on his last flight, was discovered in a secluded little dell late yesterday by a party of faithful friends and relatives who persevered in their quest after a widespread search had been abandoned. The discovery was made by Major Richard McDonald, who has been leading the search since Graham crashed in a blizzard last January 10, and Sheriff Leigh of Cedar City, McDonald, a brother-in-law of Graham's wife, made the identification. The spot in Zion Canyon where the body was located was 22 miles from here and 20 miles from Fort Worth. Graham's packed mail plane and its $300,000 cargo of valuable mail was found by sheepherders three weeks ago. Although the plane was destroyed the mail was found intact and returned to addresses. Battling against the storm after a forced landing, Graham apparently headed on foot in the opposite direction from civilization he sought. He was unhurt by the landing; it was believed, but the fury of the storm proved too great a handicap—twenty anguished miles all he could accomplish before he sank in exhaustion to an icy death.

Oscar fell 15 feet shortly after midnight when he was turning off a light that had been placed near his perch in the tree.

Mitchell Tunnel, Property of San Francisco Water System, Scene of Tragedy.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 17.—Twelve miners were killed today in Mitchell Tunnel, 40 miles from here, as the second subterranean blast within thirty days rocked the property of the municipal water system. The explosion, believed to have been caused by the chance ignition of accumulated gas, occurred at a depth of 300 feet as the men were working near the center of a mile long tunnel. From first reports, it was believed the blast identical with the blast that took the lives of seven miners last month in the Alameda tunnel, a few miles away. The blast occurred without warning a few minutes after the early morning shift had gone to work. Those who were not killed outright by the force of the explosion, it was feared, succumbed to the poisonous fumes that came in its wake. The known dead: John McNichols, Los Angeles, J. C. THE SUCKERS WILL BITE AGAIN

A two per cent decline in farm wages is reported by the federal agriculture department for April 1 to July 1 as against the usual seasonal farm wage advance of six per cent for the period. The report attributed the recession to a decline in business activity with a resulting increase in industrial unemployment. For a period of five years Col. Arthur Brisbane daily told the readers of his newspapers that prosperity would be continuous through all the coming years, as the secret had been discovered at last, and his daily warning to the aforesaid readers, "Don't sell America short," was taken by thousands in the American provinces, far from Wall street and the wildest era of gambling in the history of the world continued until crash followed crash in the fall and winter of 1929-1930.

During these marvelous prosperity years Pres. Coolidge backed up the advice given by the news column and when Coolidge went out and Hoover came in the famous financial expert of the American world joined the Brisbane chorus and blamed the federal reserve bank when the rumblings began for high price call money when cheap money was the demand of those who were playing the royal game of getting rich quick in this famous financial center of the western world. This was the injunction of a famous American gambler of the 90's, "Never place your money on another man's game."

In the great university of Experience men and women are educated. They never take the advice of those who had their fingers scorched and their wallets flattened in that game called "get rich quick." Now the wise ones are telling how it happened. They will be telling it until the return of prosperity—Prosperity is spelled with a capital P. And then a majority of the suckers will bite again.

Speaking of the Grundy Tariff Act

Yes, speaking of the Grundy tariff act, now effective, May exports of the United States are restricted in a number of commodities to North American countries than to any other part of the globe. Drop in import trade for May was most serious in shipments from Asia, which amounted to $50,000,000 less than imports from there in May, 1925. Argentina is a great wheat producing nation. Europe is buying wheat from Argentina. The American wheat grower is protected by high tariff on wheat. Where is the benefit to him? He has a surplus to sell. This surplus must be sold to nations abroad.

Now the peoples of these foreign nations are adopting a new policy; they are buying wheat and other foodstuffs from the nations where they sell their manufactured wares.

Organized labor is facing a real predicament. Whenever there is an adjustment, so-called, there is a lot of talk of Red intrigue and propaganda. It comes largely from individuals who have lost their heads. A Red is easily handled. He can be snuffed out as a law violator. In Texas the venerable document known as the constitution provides that taxation shall be equal and uniform. There is a primary campaign nearing its close. Candidates for office avoid discussion of this mandatory provision as timid people avoid a smallpox infected house or locality. Why not investigate the records and the platforms of individuals who are seeking place under the Big Dome next winter as the makers of the taxation laws of this commonwealth?

Workers Injured

HOUSTON, Tex., July 11.—Three oil field workers were injured early today when a Cullen and West company oil well at Humble caught fire.

A. West, 22, of Tom Ball, one of the workers was in a hospital. He received painful and serious burns about his legs, face, arms and chest.

Colton Harvey, derrick worker, was burned slightly on the face, legs and neck and Alvin Carpenter received slight burns about the arms.

The fire started when workers were pulling tubing from the well and the exhaust ignited the timbers.

By The Political Analyst

AUSTIN, Tex., July 17.—Comment at Austin: Cecil Storey, Verner candidate for attorney general, is getting his public notice later, but is getting it in full measure now.

The effect of naming him forward as the opponent of Attorney General Robert Lee Bobbitt, has been declared to split up the vote that Bobbitt will not get between Allred, who had been campaigning with his accustomed vigor, and Storey.

Oil companies decidedly are not getting excited about the prospect of drilling prison farms, Chairman W. A. Paddock of the penitentiary commission said here.

A few inquiries have come in, but there is so little demand at present for the right to bid on oil leases on prison lands that the date for opening bids has been deferred, Mr. Paddock said.

Hopes for discovery of oil in the farms, and the building up of a royalty fund similar to the $15,000,000 all stake of Texas university, have been made the basis of a plan to overcome the money worries of the system.

"This isn't politics," declared Roy J. Tennant, appointee of Mrs. Ferguson on the state board of control, in arguing $50,000,000 state for eleemosynary institutions.

Now Mr. Ferguson is claiming that if highway bonds are issued to take the tax burden off farms and homes and put it on the highways, then bonds for everything else, entering a man's army of spending, would get helplessly in debt.

It isn't politics, but it comes from a staunch Ferguson man that bonds ought to be issued for the hospitals and institutions.

There would be no way to meet them except direct property taxes. Mr. Tennant will say "do you want to issue bonds for roads but not for orphan children?"

Why not have put it on the basis of the Confederate pension tax, and let a direct constitutional mill tax for the support of the institutions?

As one person's opinion: Why not issue both kinds of bonds? The only answer is that the bonds Mr. Tennant advocates are utterly unnecessary, and the people more readily will vote a mill tax, to be spread over the resources and industries as well as land and houses.

Mr. Tennant's point that the state acutely needs money to improve and expand its institutions, to engage in preventative work in dealing with tuberculosis and insanity is well taken.

The only thing wrong with his plan is that he projected it into a political issue, rather than laying it out upon a plane and in a direction where it might have a prospect of achievement.

Two pieces of legislation, seeking some uniformity in Texas with other states, are to be proposed at the next legislature.

One is a general safety code to cut down the tremendous toll of traffic deaths and injuries. This to include a drivers' license law, which ought to have been on the books long ago, and to have a to be included in it.

The other is a proposal for a constitutional amendment to permit an old-age pension, under the sociological policy that has swept 11 states into this form of endeavor in the past few years.

James Young, oldish but lithe and vigorous, is a peculiar admixture of the old-fashioned Southern democrat and the modern political scrapper. He is a man whose campaign has peculiarly-interwoven elements of strength and weakness, man who makes and holds friends, even among those who consider his political program practically negative, and fear the lack of constructive leadership would lose him in the shuffle of dealing with a many-minded legislature.

Of Mr. Young another candidate said "he was isolated in congress 10 years, and has been isolated in Kaufman another 10 years until he is out of touch with the progress a id the needs of Texas.

In fairness to Young, it should be noted that the candidate who made this speech stressed his own advantage from having been isolated beyond the range of the past political controversies of the state.

Senator Nat Patton of Crockett, candidate for state railroad commissioner, has made a swing through Central Texas, reminding his friends at Austin that he always has been a staunch friend of the state institutions.

He claimed the credit for the defeat of the Central Texas prison relocation plan.

He also reminded his friends that he will carry on in the senate, should he be defeated for railroad commissioner, and that regardless of the office he holds, he is going to continue to be a friend of the state institutions.

LONGVIEW, Tex., July 17.—A little girl, wearing a dress that had seen years of service, visited a Longview home yesterday and asked for food and clothing.

She said her father was dead and her mother sick "and we are in a hard fix."

Moved by the child's plea, the woman went into the house and returned with some food and garments. Handing them to the girl, she asked where the child and her mother lived.

"Way out in the country," replied the little one.

"In the country?" mused the benefactress. "How did you get to town?"

Two Die In The Electric Chair

By UNITED PRESS

STATE PENITENTIARY, McAlester, Okla., July 17.—A negro who faced eternity saying "God will take care of his chillun," and a white man who embraced religion an hour before his execution, died in the electric chair early today.

The negro, James Forrest, 23, walked into the brightly lighted death chamber at midnight. He was smiling when the Rev. W. B. Ailscock said a last benediction. At 12:07 a. m. physicians pronounced him dead. Forrest was convicted of attacking a white woman.

Tom Guest, convicted of murder during a holdup, was dead at 12:14 a. m. He appeared in the door leading from solitary cells almost as soon as Forrest's inert body was carried away. Guest was erect. There was no show of emotion.

The doomed man, his head bound in a helmet of leather and steel, turned toward Warden John Newell and witnesses.

"How 'you, gentlemen," he said. "Before I go I want to say I've been treated nicely here. Reverend Ailscock has been considerate and I want to say I am facing some men who are not as good as I am."

There was a rush of activity and Guest was bound in the chair. A few moments later doctors removed stethoscopes from his breast and nodded. His body was taken to the prison morgue.

Both of the men maintained innocence to the last. Forrest was convicted in Stephens county when he pleaded guilty to a criminal attack committed in 1928. He was an escaped convict from Texas.

Guest, a gray haired man, spurned religion until near the end. He frequently had said, "Why the hell don't they hurry." He spent more than 1,000 days in death row. There were several grievers. He told of the murder of Bailey Browder, gruggist of Asher, Okla., in 1927, and said it was committed by his companion on a robbery. He was tight-lipped when asked to name the companions.

"I am no squealer," he said. "I'd rather die than squeal."

After Guest's conversion he drew $2.50 from his pocket and asked that it be given to Claude "Blackie" Hager, another convict, who was to have part of the rest of his life. Hager, convicted of murdering Walter Harp, during a fishing trip which he described as a "drunken party," was granted a reprieve a few hours before he was to have died.

Nation's Youth Marathon Crazy

By UNITED PRESS

The nation's youth has gone marathon crazy today as they sat in trees atop flag-poles and light standards, teeter-tottered toward doubtful fame, pedaled bicycles in seemingly endless circles, danced far past the exhaustion point and to cap the climax the javeline population of Huntington, West Virginia, planned an endurance water-wing contest. The craze started a week ago today in Racine, Wis., when the "Pioneer" tree-sitter, Jimmie Gleimmons, mounted a lough and announced he would sit there indefinitely. He lasted 36 hours but his example has spread the length and breadth of the land until almost every city has its quota of "air minded" youth.

Not to be outdone by the tree sitters, the bicycle riders pedaled into action, four youths announced a backward automobile trip across the continent. Chicago dance marathons passed the 2,000-hour mark, flag-pole sitters, their fame enlarged, continued their hour and two girls sea-walked in Evanston, Ill., to a world record if there is any such thing.

The title of "world's premier tree sitter" rested today with 15-year-old Billy Kearney of Kansas City. Billy's fame was threatened in a dozen cities. Only last night the "pioneer tree siter," Jack Richards of Kansas City, decided his record was unbeatable and made a "three point landing." His honor was fleeting, however, for his fame remained aloft and soon passed the 156 hours Jack had set.

SWETWATER, Tex., July 17.

Feminine challenge today fired Buck Sawyer, 14-year-old newsboy, with new determination to inhabit the bough of his mesquite tree until this sittin' aloft business is settled by his unapproachable record. He had been up 48 hours at 8 a. m.

That Dorothy Nell Shiny, 10, made arrangements to shinn up a tree and not come down until "long after I have made a record."

Scuffling Buck retorted to news of the threat with: "No girl is going to beat me if I have to stay up the rest of my life. I am going to top Jack Richard's record, whatever he sets, and then make one that nobody will try to beat. All these other kids might as well give up now."

That Buck will get along in the world is evinced by the watchful eye he is keeping on rewards. If he breaks the record, he will get a free trip to California. Already he has received a $1,000 life insurance policy and a free trip to San Diego. When the time of a "bun line" comes and it—he passes the 50-hour mark today he will receive half a dozen more awards.

FAMILY MENU

BY SISTER MARY
NEA Service Writer

Eggs are always available, and are excellent for sum mer meals. They may be prepared in a variety of ways to take the place of meat for luncheon or dinner. Following are three recipes that are rather unusual and very good.

Eggs, Chilean Style

Two cups tomato pulp or canned tomatoes, 1-2 cup grated cheese, 1 cup chopped dried beef, 1 tablespoon grated onion, 2 tablespoons shredded sweet pepper, 1 teaspoon paprika, 1 tablespoon butter, 3 eggs, 4 squares hot buttered toast, fresh cream.

Press tomatoes through a coarse sieve to remove seeds. Add cheese, finely chopped onion, sweet pepper and paprika. Cook over a slow fire until cheese is melted. Add butter and eggs slightly beaten. Stir until the eggs are barely set. Serve on toast and surround with watercress. The tang of the cream is perfect with the cheese and egg combination.

The second egg dish uses a cheese sauce and hard cooked eggs in an unusual way.

Masked Eggs

Four hard-cooked eggs, 8 slices of tomato, 8 small rounds of bread, 3 tablespoons butter, 1 1/2 tablespoons flour, 1 1/2 cups milk, 1-2 cup finely chopped cheese, 1-2 teaspoon salt, paprika, parsley.

Saute bread in butter. Cut tomatoes in slices about one-half inch thick, dip in butter and broil. Slice a slice of tomato on each round of bread, and on the tomato put half an egg, cut side down. Put into a shallow baking dish and pour over it the cheese sauce made by melting butter, stirring in flour and slowly adding milk, stirring constantly. Add cheese, salt and paprika and stir and cook until cheese is melted. Put baking dish in oven long enough to make very hot, and serve garnished with parsley.

Egg and ham timbales are elaborate enough for party affairs but are not expensive, since scraps of ham can be used.

Egg and Ham Timbales

Four eggs, 1-8 teaspoon salt, few grains pepper, 1-4 teaspoon onion juice, 1 cup finely chopped ham, 1 cup milk, 6 rounds of toast.

Beat eggs until light, add remaining ingredients and mix thoroughly. Turn into individual, well-buttered timbale molds and place on many thicknesses of paper in a pan of hot water. Bake in moderate oven for 45 minutes, or until firm to the touch. Turn each timbale onto a round of toast and serve surrounded with creamed peas. Garnish with parsley and serve at once.

gorgeous!"
He looked at her with the hunger that he could not keep out of his eyes.
"Yes, lovely," Judy said.
"I ought to congratulate you," Steyne went on. "You are wonderful!"
"How do you know?"
"I was there on the first night."
"What do you think of it?"
Judy's voice was a mere thread.
"I adored it, Judy, and—I hated it!"
She laughed at his vehemence, though her heart stood still. Steyne came a step or two nearer.
"Judy, you know that Clarissa and I—"
He broke off. Judy nodded.
"Judy," he went on, "it may seem low and caddish, but I can't help it—"
She backed away from him.
"You're not going to say anything—please!"
"Judy, I must. Clarissa doesn't want to marry me."
"That isn't true. Clarissa loves you just as much as ever. She couldn't change. She's not that kind."
"Then what does it mean?"
"She's found out."
"What?"
"About—about you and me."
"How? It's impossible!"
"I don't know how, but she has. I've seen it. I know her inside out. She's found out, and so she's told you that she won't marry you; but she's utterly miserable — she's breaking her heart. You must make her think it isn't true. You must marry her."
Thus Judy, in her uncompromising way, showed the denser male mind what her feminine intuition had divined from her friend's conduct. Alan still struggled against the truth.
"I think you're wrong. Clarissa is the soul of truth. She couldn't carry out such a deception."
"She deceived you," said Judy accusingly; "but she didn't deceive me."
"Do you mean you won't admit that she knows her own mind? You won't marry me, Judy?"
Judy stamped her foot on the springy turf.
"I won't have Chummy's heart broken," she said. "I wouldn't marry you if you were the last man on the earth!"
Steyne gazed at Judy with incredulity in his eyes. Any one who was much with him of late must have noticed how seldom his eyes were filled with laughter now.
"You cannot mean it," he said.
"I do mean it," she answered.
His direct, masculine intelligence would not take it in. To him the fact that Clarissa did not wish to marry him was sufficient. It seemed nothing short of madness to probe into her motives. And—this was a more cogent argument still—if Clarissa really did know that he and Judy loved each other, then she must realize that he and she could never be happy together if they were to marry.
Judy assented to Steyne's suggestion that they should walk a little way together. Then they returned to the town, and he asked her to have tea with him.
They sat in a corner of the lounge of his hotel, which was a very quiet one. He asked Judy to tell him about her new life. He showed evident satisfaction when she told him that, outside of her work, she was living just as she had lived before.
She told him about her new contract. She was to leave in February for Paris. All summer she would be in Scandinavia, where the public was very fond of her kind of dancing. At least, Mr. Tannary had told her so.
"Judy," said Alan, as she was putting on her gloves, "if at the end of the year Clarissa is still of the same mind, will you change yours?"
She shook her head, meeting his desperate eyes with every appearance of calm determination.
"No, no—nothing will make me change. I know Chummy. I dare say she will be what you call 'of the same mind,' next year and in 10 years' time."
"Then what could I do, anyhow?"
"You can persuade her that she's wrong, and that you do care for her."

"You are utterly impossible, Judy! How can I do that? I can't believe you mean to be so cruel. I won't believe it!"
"You must," she said. "I'm not cruel. It's you. We've said goodbye once and for all, and you shouldn't try to make me unhappy."
"Judy, I want to make you happy!" he cried passionately.
"You can make me happy by marrying Chummy and making her happy."
A flush of anger mounted to the young man's forehead.
"You say that over and over again, like a parrot!"
Her temper rose, too.
"I say it because I mean it, and you don't seem to be able to understand it."
She got up. Steyne followed her, and at the hotel door she held out her hand.
"Goodby."
He did not offer to accompany her to the station. He was still weak from his illness. Her presence was a torture greater than he could bear.
"I shall go out to the East with Hylton," he said sullenly, like a sulky boy. "He asked me to go with him. I'm not going to stay in this country. At least I shall get some sport."
Judy was too wise to raise any objection or to offer further advice.
"I hope you'll have a good time," she said, with the straight, friendly kind of glance that she gave Dumont. It was a marvelous piece of acting. "But I dare say you'll want to come back before long."

"I'll come back when you call me," he said.
She was a little frightened by his eyes. They showed his whole manhood in revolt. She suddenly felt very small and helpless. The consciousness rose in her that she could not resist him, if he chose to assert his will.
She had no more time. She hailed a passing cab and took her seat in it. The last thing she saw was Alan's face, showing his recent illness in every line, with his gloomy eyes regarding her reproachfully.
"I must make him believe it," she said to herself. "I've got to do that for Chummy's sake!"
The month passed in a whirl for Judy. She suddenly changed all her habits. She bought clothes. She developed a taste for late hours and gaiety. She was always with Bruce Gideon.
It came to the last night of her appearance at the Monopole Theatre. It was a veritable triumph. Judy stood ankle-deep in flowers of every hue, bowing and kissing her hands, the tears streaming down her face while her lips laughed in the delirium of such a moment. Afterward there was a great supper party in Gideon's apartment, but none of Judy's old friends were asked to it.
In the second week in January, Dumont met Judy in the street. She even looked different, he thought savagely. She was still made up, but there was more art in it. She was ever so smart, a clever dressmaker having managed

Under the Sterling Plan Taxes will be reduced in Eastland County

The taxpayers of Eastland County, including the farmers, home-owners and business men are now assessed an average of approximately 70c on the $100.00 valuation to pay for construction of State Highways, a tax that should be reduced by the State.

Under The Sterling Tax Reduction Plan
The State will assume this obligation and pay for it out of the gasoline tax.

The Sterling Tax Reduction Plan will place the burden of paying for the state roads your county has built on the traffic where it belongs.

The Sterling Plan will provide the state with adequate funds to build a connected state system of hard surfaced, all-weather highways and for paving the gaps over the state without county aid and without increasing the gasoline tax a penny.

The Sterling Tax Reduction Plan provides that no property tax shall ever be levied to carry out its purposes.

Oklahoma Puts Plan In Motion To Save Game

OKLAHOMA CITY, July 17.—Combined national and state conservation programs promise to make Oklahoma one of the greatest refuges for small animals and migratory birds in the southwest.

Oklahoma, one of the newest states in the union, plans to profit by the mistakes of her neighbors. Officials are determined that all wild life will not be annihilated before conservation is considered.

Steps are being taken to protect birds and animals before they have disappeared from the prairies where buffalo herds and Indians once roamed.

Outstanding in the national-state conservation program is the Salt Plains wild life refuge in the northern section of the state. When President Hoover signed the bill creating the preserve, migratory birds were given one of the best breeding grounds obtainable.

A section that is unusual with its vast prairies of salt, the Great Salt plains will become a vast body of water where birds may stop while making their pilgrimages between the northern and southern boundaries of the United States.

When this project is completed approximately 25,000 acres of land will be placed under water, creating one of the southwest's largest lakes. It will be unlawful to harm or molest any bird or animal in the refuge.

As its part in the conservation program, the state has been successful in propagating quail, prairie chickens, pheasants and small game animals on more than 800 game refuges which the state game and fish department has leased for 10 year periods.

Oklahoma was the first state to adopt this plan of creating small game refuges.

These refuges range in size from 160 to 28,000 acres and are located in every county in the state. The refuges are listed under two classes main and secondary refuges.

The 70 main refuges have a total acreage of 496,791, while the 703 secondary refuges contain 272,000 acres. Approximately 10,000 quail were released on these refuges during the past year.

In order to assure a continuous and permanent state game refuge system, the commission is leasing additional tracts this year. In that way, when the first of the 10 year leases expire the number will not be decreased, but the protected area will only shift to another location. This also will assure Oklahoma sportsmen of good shooting for an indefinite period.

Attention is also being paid to fish propagation and the commission increased the number of its fish hatcheries this year from four to five. Approximately 2,000,000 bass fry were available for distribution to Oklahoma streams this season.

TRAMPLURES BLACK SWAN

WOLVERHAMPTON, Eng., July 17.—"Smoky" has followed her lover and there is sadness at Wrottesley Hall.

For 11 months this beautiful black swan lived happily with her black mate, Darky, one the secluded private lake of Lord Wrottesley's estate, ignoring such companions as ducks, drakes and other wood fowl.

Out of the heavens last month swooped a graceful white swan. Here the triangle was formed.

"What strange tales of the outside world the visitor told "Smoky" never will be known. But the day after it flew away "Smoky" was missing.

The entire estate was searched but the results were futile. "Darky" visibly saddened, flew away the next day in search of his mate.

Neither of the three has returned. "We are greatly concerned by the loss of these swans," said the Hon. Walter Wrottesley, brother of Lord Wrottesley. "My brother has offered a reward for them."

WASHINGTON, July 17.—New government figures issued today indicated the wheat farmer in most sections of the grain belt will receive for his crop only about one-half what it cost him to raise it.

Making public cost figures received from 2,358 representative farms, the Agriculture Department estimated it cost farmers an average of $1.24 to produce a bushel of wheat in 1929. This year's costs are believed virtually the same except possibly for a slight reduction in labor cost.

Wheat sold in Chicago this week at 88 cents for July delivery, but the average grain belt farmer receives 20 cents less than this figure after freight rates are deducted. On the farm, therefore, wheat is now worth 68 cents, or only slightly more than half its production cost.

With the foreign demand slack and the 1930 crop estimated by the department at 1,000,000 bushels more than a year ago, the drive for new action by the administration to help the wheat grower continued today. However, there were no indications of success, at least until the return here Monday of chairman Legge of the Federal Farm Board.

Senators Capper and Allen, Reps. Kays, after a conference with Secretary of Agriculture Hyde, arranged to meet with Legge Monday to urge that the farm board bolster the market by buying and holding from the market millions of bushels of the crop now being harvested.

Thus far this season, the farm board has confined its program to urging farmers to withhold their wheat from the market, and making substantial loans to co-operatives. The Farmers' National Grain Corporation also is understood to be receiving larger funds from private bankers.

Wheat prices are now the lowest since 1914 while the prices of things the farmer buys are about 50 per cent higher, other Agriculture Department figures showed. Grain farmers have been hit hardest by the price slump, but other agricultural commodities are also off sharply.

The new effort to obtain the debture or the equalization fee met renewed opposition today from administration sources. At the farm board, it was said the debture would afford little help, as to encourage export of wheat would do little good at a time when European countries are unable to buy. Legge is known also to be impressed with the view the debture would cause European countries to retaliate by raising their tariff barriers to American farm goods.

GUM in Gasolene sticks your Valves

is free from harmful GUM

CITIES SERVICE OILS
ONCE—ALWAYS

"YOUR valves were stuck," is a repairman's frequent reply when asked by a motorist—"What was wrong with the engine?"

A common cause of sticky valves is excessive gum in gasolene. Inferior, carelessly refined gasolenes have high gum content. This forms a sticky, gummy, clinging deposit on your valves. When you step on the gas for more power your valves have to fight to free—valuable power and compression is lost—your power is dissipated in a laboring engine.

Koolmotor Gasolene—the original, best, anti-knock green gasolene—is free from harmful gum; it is powerful, clean burning—a constant protection against the annoyance and expense of sticky valves because it is produced by the special Cities Service mini-refining process. This process, characterized by extra care and extra refining, reduces the gum content of this superior motor fuel to a harmless minimum.

For a clean, smooth, powerful engine insist on Koolmotor—the gasolene free from harmful gum.

A joint committee of the Texas oil and gas association, the Independent Petroleum Association and marketing and purchasing companies of the state filed such a plea yesterday.

The request grew out of a meeting of the Mid-Continent directors at Dallas this week in which a resolution was adopted calling for retortment of production from 86,000 to 738,000 barrels.
