Ghost Chasers Are Given Thrill But Are Unable To Catch Ghosts

LONG BRANCH, N. J., July 12—Nearly 10,000 brave and not so brave ghost-chasers went home this morning after an all-night wait for the wraith of Greenlawn cemetery. They had a couple of thrills and some of them caught colds, but no ghosts. A group of young men and women, driving past the cemetery last Sunday, reported seeing a phantom hovering over the graves. They investigated, with caution. Then, they said, the ghost began chasing them and they fled. Since the story became known, crowds have appeared at the cemetery every night, and on each occasion several reported seeing an apparition. After tombstones had been knocked over in the rush to get out, police locked up the cemetery. The crowd appeared early last night, accompanied by a battalion of sturdy policemen and state troopers. Despite the police, several hundred of the braver ghosters

Moody Threatens To Take Stump

AUSTIN, Tex., July 12—Governor Dan Moody is sending word to Lynch Davidson to leave the governor out of his discussions of the campaign. In the event Davidson does not do so, Governor Moody will take the stump and make some remarks about Davidson. Visibly annoyed by Davidson's repeated references to him when he is not a candidate, Governor Moody early this week told friends that if Davidson persisted he would take this course. Yesterday at Groesbeck, Davidson again referred to Governor Moody saying that the Governor had been trying to get him over the telephone three times but that he did not know what the Governor wanted to talk to him about. The matter Governor Moody proposes to discuss, he said, deals with an incident of a former campaign for governor when Davidson was a candidate.

L. C. Turman Wins In Fight To Drill Darst Creek Well

AUSTIN, Tex., July 12—L. C. Turman of Fort Worth is winner over the state railroad commission in his fight to drill an additional well on lease he holds in the Darst creek oil field. The Third Court of Civil Appeals today dissolved a temporary staying order that the attorney general's department had secured, which prevented Turman drilling. Turman's attempt to drill on the strip which is 1,000 by 60 feet resulted in a hard fought lawsuit here. He was opposed by the oil and gas division of the state and by the Humble and Empire companies which have wells in the same territory. Turman's second well will be spaced in this afternoon, he said before leaving Austin for the field after the court decision.

"Tree Sitting" Epidemic Spreads Rapidly Throughout The Nation

CHICAGO, July 12—Front lawns and back yards, parks and other wooded areas of the north central states all boasted today their full share of "tree sitters." A tree sitter, according to Jimmy Clemens, Racine, Wis., who started the fad, is a boy or girl who climbs into a tree and tries to stay there longer than any other boy or girl ever has or can. Upwards of 50 (nobody ever will know the exact number) "tree sitters" perched today among the branches while admiring spectators shouted encouragement and "ground crews" tended to the "tree sitters' detours." The tree sitting idea is a lot of fun in the daytime, according to an official statement by 14 year old Jack Richards, Kansas City, who claims to be the champion of all the tree sitters. "But the nights," said Jack, "are kinda lonesome and scary."

Burglars Enter Eastland Laundry

Attempts were made to burglarize Nemir's dry goods store and the Eastland Steam Laundry Friday night. A Mexican woman told Chief of Police Lee Reid that burglars were in the laundry. Chief Reid was immediately to the laundry plant, and finding a window broken out, though the robbers were inside the building. He watched the window for a few minutes until Constable Marion Seaborn, who had also heard that the laundry was being burglarized, arrived. Together the two officers went inside the building and searched it but the burglars had escaped. The safe, which is never locked and in which no money is kept at night, had been ransacked. A large flashlight and the drawer of the safe was missing. It was also discovered by the officers that an attempt to enter Nemir's store had been made. A hole had been broken in a window pane, but no further damage was done. The burglars doubtless were frightened away before they had time to gain an entrance to the building.

Pair Is Robbed Of Small Amount By Three Men

Charlie Cameron and Roscoe Whitehead, who were held up, were able to give officers fair description of the trio, who were unmasked.

Three unmasked men held up and robbed Roscoe Whitehead and Charlie Campbell, living in the country near Eastland, as the couple were going home from Eastland Friday night according to information given the Eastland officers immediately after the hijacking. The holdup occurred on the Eastland-Staff highway just at the turn of the hill near Lake Tullie. Whitehead and Cameron rushed to Eastland and gave information of the holdup to the officers. They were also able to give the officers a good description of the three men.

Only a small amount of change was taken from Cameron and only a few dollars from Whitehead, it was stated. According to the information gained by the officers Whitehead and Cameron were enroute home from Eastland about 10:00 o'clock Friday night. As they made the turn in the road near Lake Tullie they noticed a car stopped at the side of the highway. As they approached it in their own car, a man stepped out into the road and signaled them to stop, which they did.

"Have you a pump," the man said. "Yes," was the reply. As Whitehead was lifting the top to the turtleback of his car to get the pump, the man who had stopped them suddenly drew a pistol and placing it against Whitehead's body, ordered him to hold up his hands. At the same instance the other two men, who until this time had not revealed themselves, both drew guns on Cameron and demanded money.

Whitehead's purse and some letters when they went to view the ground where the holdup occurred.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Judith Grant, artist's model, loves Alan Steyne, painter, who is also loved by Chummy Morley. Judith's roommate and best friend, Chummy had loved Steyne years ago, and had suffered a loss of memory when he went away; so, although Steyne loves Judith, Judith insists that it is duty to marry Chummy, whose memory is restored when she sees him again. Steyne and Chummy, therefore, are engaged. Judith is studying dancing, and rich Bruce Gideon, financier, plans to star her in a musical show, although Steyne are not honorable. Judith's dancing teacher, Guarvenius, is killed in a motor accident. Steyne comes to the girls' apartment, finds Judith alone, and holds her in his arms and kisses her. Chummy sees them, but does not let them know she has seen.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXVII
 Two mornings later Steyne received a little note from Clarissa, asking him to come to see her at her home. She did not come at a time, and Steyne waited until noon, thinking she might want him to take her out to lunch.

He found her dressed for the street, her fair hair escaping precariously from under a soft black hat. Her eyes, her sensitive face was very pale, but her eyes lit up her features with the amazing vitality that she had acquired since her recovery.

"Alan," she began at once. "I asked you here because I want to talk to you alone. I'm afraid I shall sound very silly and as if I didn't know my own mind, but I've—well, I've come to the conclusion that I don't want to be married."

The young man caught at the suggestion, and drowning wits catches at a straw.

"You mean you want to postpone it again, Clarissa? I suppose it's on account of Judy. You're not quite happy about her, are you?"

"No, Alan," she answered slowly. "I don't mean that. I mean that I don't want to be married at all."

"You don't want—?" He broke off in sheer amazement.

"Yes, I know it sounds perfectly ridiculous. I quite expect you to think I'm mad."
 "But, Clarissa, is there any reason?" he asked.

"Not any reason that sounds good enough," she said, forcing herself to smile. "The fact is, Alan, I'm awfully afraid I'm still a little queer at times. It's been unreal to me for a long time, the thought that I was going to be your wife."

That was true enough. It had seemed too good, too wonderful, too blessed, even to imagine. "I ought to have told you this before," she added.

"Clarissa, I don't understand. Is it anything lacking in me? Have I done anything to hurt you?"

She smiled again, with all that wonderful fidelity of devotion in her eyes.

"No, Alan, no. I am as fond of you as ever—in a way. You have been everything that is dear and good—simply everything; and I should hate to think that I was hurting you—"

"But, of course, you are hurting me!" he interrupted.

The words were purely mechanical. He was playing a part, just as she was, only he did not know that she knew the truth.

"Please, Alan, don't be angry with me," she went on gently. "I'm awfully sick with myself, but I really want to settle down to work more than I want everything else in the world."

"You care for your career more than you do for me?"

Her lips trembled a little. He believed that she had changed her mind. He was glad, oh, but she knew how glad he was! He loved Judy. He must have learned to love Judy while she was out of her senses; and when she recovered, he felt himself in honor bound to her.

It was such a simple story. They were both loyal to her—he and Judy. They would have remained loyal to the end.

She read Steyne aright. He thought she was speaking the simple truth. He was too much overjoyed to question what she said.

He was free—that was his paramount thought. He was not to be asked to enter into an unnatural union that would have destroyed his soul. He would not have to persecute himself every day to a woman who loved him.

"I suppose I do put my career first," Clarissa said.

Then Alan Steyne made a very masculine remark.

"You're making me look very foolish, Clarissa!"

At that she laughed. She wondered that her laughter did not sound wild to him.

"I'm sorry, Alan; but I hope we shall still stay friends."

Something in her voice and glance seemed to pierce his densest.

"Are you perfectly sure?" he asked with a feverish earnestness. "I can't help thinking that I've done something."

"You've done nothing, Alan, nothing—believe me."

He looked into her clear eyes, which were smiling in order to hide her broken heart; and he believed her because he wanted to believe.

MOM'N POP

Two days later to have been Chummy's wedding day. On the afternoon of the day before, she met Judy as she was going out of her door, on her way to seek another lodging. The time had come when she must get some kind of a studio, where she could work.

When she had found it, she was going to move her few belongings into it and then go away for two or three weeks. She had written to a tiny fishing hamlet on the seacoast. She wanted to be near the ocean. Then she was coming back to work—to work harder than any woman had ever worked before.

Her work must justify what she had said to Alan. Her work was her sheet anchor now. It was all she had.

Judy held out a great bunch of flowers wrapped in tissue paper. "I was just bringing these to you," she said. "I want to kiss you and say goodbye! Tomorrow's the great day—and you're off into the big world! And little Judy will be all alone."

"Oh, Chummy, how ridiculous you are! I suppose it means that you and Alan have had a tiff?"

"No, Judy—no," Chummy was desperate. "I don't care for Alan enough to marry him. I find I care more for my work. We're going to be great friends, of course, all the same. He's quite understands. He doesn't want a wife who puts her painting first. He's gone to Paris, and I'm going to the sea, and when we come back we'll all be jolly again—together, just as we used to be."

Judy stared at Clarissa very hard.

"Well, I'm blowed!" she said. Chummy must have been a wonderful actress. For the moment she quite deceived her friend. Judy was thunderstruck. She lost the power of speech. She left her flowers in Chummy's hands and went away.

But Judy was not really convinced. "There's something in this!" she said to herself an hour or so later. "What can it be? If Chummy didn't worship the ground he trod on, then I ought to be in bedlam!"

But for the time being, she could do nothing but wonder. A few days later she received a note from Chummy, saying that she had found a convenient studio and another room near Bastien's. She had moved her things, and she was off to the seacoast the next day.

From Steyne Judy heard nothing at all.

A week later she received a letter that excited her very much, although she little guessed what bearing it was destined to have on the next few months of her life.

The letter was from a stranger to Judy. It was typewritten on plain, thick note paper, with the address, "17 Linden Lane," stamped on it. She could not make out the signature. She could read "Richard S. Wyon," but of the last name she could only decipher the first letter, a W. The letter read thus:

Dear Madam: Having known the late Vladimir Guarvenius, and being aware of his interest in your career, I venture to ask whether you would be good enough to call on me here any afternoon between four and six o'clock, as I have a proposition to place before you.

Yours respectfully,

Then came the signature that Judy could not read.

She determined to go to Linden Lane on the very same day. The name of her head master was an immediate passport to her implicit confidence. It entirely overcame the instinctive suspicion that town-bred people harbor of all strangers.

She dressed herself in deep black, the outward sign of her loyalty to the man who had failed her only in his death, and who had taught her everything she knew.

She made the journey in a taxi, and found Linden Lane a broad and busy thoroughfare which entirely belied its name. The number she sought proved to be in a handsome arcade.

In the hall she met a liveried attendant, and showed him the letter. He informed her that the writer's name was Wyon. He took her up to the third floor, and she saw all around her evidences of wealth and prosperity, such as pile carpets, much polished woodwork and plate glass, and gilded bronze fittings.

On a mahogany door she saw a small brass plate bearing the name "Richard S. Wyon." Going in, she found a large office tenanted by four clerks—two men and two very smart young women.

Her inquiry produced an older man from an inner room, who disappeared for a moment, and then ushered her through two smaller offices into a large, handsomely furnished apartment that might have been a library but for maps of South Africa and the United States that hung on one of the walls, and some letter-filing cabinets and a Stock Exchange ticker.

ONCE UPON A TIME—

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON. — Congressman Hamilton Fish of New York, chairman of the House committee investigating Communist activities in the United States, is satisfied that the Reds do not present enough of a menace to cause anyone to fear the overthrow of our government.

But Mr. Fish believes that this system which operates in Washington is the finest government ever devised by man and he consequently has no patience with those radicals who want to upset it. Even if they are not dangerous, he says, there is no reason why they should be permitted to organize and propagandize in the United States.

There Was a Red Flag
Mr. Fish was kind enough to telephone your correspondent and point out that the committee had discovered that the red flag had actually been flown over the University of Chicago, as Father Ed- ward Walsh had testified. There has been considerable confusion over that piece of testimony among the committee members, who proposed to keep it out of the record, and also in the mind of your correspondent, who reported that the committee had found there wasn't any red flag at all.

But the University of Chicago now admits it. The assistant to the university's president has written to Father Walsh, noting "un- fortunate misinterpretation" of the flag testimony. It appears that a university cop found a big red flag on the campus flag staff about 5 o'clock one morning and hauled it down, but was unable to place responsibility. Other reports indicate that some of the Socialist students were having a little fun. Mr. Fish admits that the flag incident wasn't an especially hot piece of evidence about Communist penetra- tion of the higher institutions of learning. He hasn't anything against Socialists, anyway.

"As I see it, the Socialists are trying to extend democracy," he says, "but the Communists want to set up a dictatorship by a minority. In Russia there are two or three million members of the Communist party ruling over 150,000,000 people. I don't want anyone to think that I'm trying to stir up a red scare, but we ought to know what these people are doing over here."

The committee has proved that the Communists here take their orders from Moscow to preach class hatred and revolution. They never made any bones about it, so that wasn't any secret, but many mem- bers of Congress didn't know it and I doubt whether there was a single member who realized that our gov- ernment departments had no funds and no authority to deal with the situation. Now that we have fo- cused attention on what is going on I am sure that Congress will want to pass appropriate legisla- tion. A few nights ago 12,000 Com- munist met in Madison Square Garden in New York and paid 59 cents apiece to get in. We can't let that kind of thing go on. Other countries have secret service men who join these Communist groups and attend their meetings so they can keep track of things."

Mr. Fish says he personally wouldn't curtail free speech except when people advocate overthrowing the government by force and vio- lence.

DRIVERS DUE FOR BRECKENRIDGE RACES

BRECKENRIDGE, July 12.—At least seven well-known dirt track automobile racers of Texas and Oklahoma will line up here Sunday for the first auto races to be staged in this city in two years, ac- cording to the entry list up to noon Thursday.

Eight or nine more drivers are expected to enter their cars before the races set under way Sunday afternoon, Stanley Duvall, one of those in charge of the event, said Thursday. Due to the fact that it was not decided until early in the week to hold these races several drivers have not had time to send in their entry blanks.

The program, as has been mapped out for the Sunday races, in- cludes six special events.

FEIPING, China, July 12.—The northern armies of Pei and Okiang Kai-Shek, head of the national government, could be expected soon, they reached an agreement to call a plenary ses- sion tomorrow of the Kuomintang to establish a national party gov- ernment here.

FAMILY MENU

BY SISTER MARY
NEA Service Writer

N EARLY every tea room or cof- fee shop specializes in some sort of interesting open or "dual-decker" sandwich. They al- ways are popular, for they are hearty enough to be used as the main dish for luncheon or supper after the theater.

There is no reason why the home-maker may not appropriate some suggestions from the sand- wich shops and make use of them in her home for family or guests.

If the materials are thoughtfully selected, this type of sandwich will provide an entire, well-bal- anced meal when served with cof- fee or some other beverage. Pro- tein is furnished in the filling, fat is supplied in the form of butter or mayonnaise. Fresh fruit pro- vides an ideal dessert to top off with.

Open sandwiches offer an op- portunity for many appetizing combinations that are decidedly summery. Toasted or untoasted bread can be used for the founda- tion and the "filling" may be al- most anything that one would put into a salad or a sandwich. Nut bread might be covered with a fruit salad. A fruit bread is par- ticularly good with a cheese and nut mixture. Spread the bread or toast with creamed butter and ar- range the filling on lettuce, water-

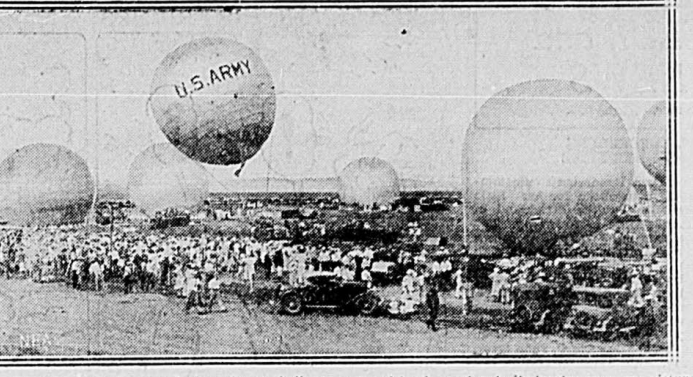

Cottage Cheese Sandwich
Trim crusts from whole wheat and white bread, allow- ing a slice of each for a sand- wich. Spread both slices with creamed butter. On one slice put a leaf of lettuce, spread with salad dressing and cover with slices of tomato. Spread tomato with salad dressing and sprinkle with a mixture of finely chopped celery and carrot. Cover with second slice of bread, buttered side down. A ball of cottage cheese rolled in minced parsley is placed on top of each sand- wich. Serve on individual plates.

Several kinds of breads often are combined in layer sandwiches. Whole wheat, white and raisin are delicious with a filling of cream cheese and salted nuts between each layer.

Sections of tomato, radish roses, pickles and parsley make attractive garnishes for many sand- wiches and add their bit of piquancy. All sorts of olives—stuffed, plain or ripe, sweet spiced pickles, car- rot sticks and celery hearts make pleasing garnishes for open fruit- toast with creamed butter and ar- range the filling on lettuce, water-

WILSON REALIZED MESSIAH ROLE, SECRETARY WRITES

By United Press
NEW YORK, July 12.—Wood- row Wilson realized that the peo- ple of Europe considered him a Messiah when he went to the Paris Peace conference and he virtual- ly accepted the role, according to Mrs. Edith Benham Helm, who at that time was social secretary to Mrs. Wilson.

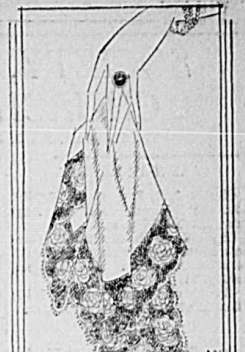

Many hitherto unpublished side- lights on the Peace Conference are contained in letters written by Mrs. Helm and published in the current issue of the Cosmopolitan magazine. Among them are Wil- son's opinion of various person- alities at the conference, expressed privately.

Marshal Foch, for instance, was considered by Wilson to be "able but narrow and given to prejudices."

Gen. Jan C. Smuts—"Wrote one of the best expositions of the League of Nations."

Clemenceau—"Has the peculiar trait of standing still mentally." Orlando—"A fine fellow and most reasonable." Lloyd George—"Always for temp- ering and making commissions."

The letters reveal that Wilson's plan for the League of Nations had its origin in a project drawn up by an English society.

INTERESTING STORY OF THE LIFE OF DR. ANSON JONES

Reprint from the Berkshire Courier of Great Barrington, Massachusetts, Thursday, June 26, 1930.

The Courier receives the following story of the life of Anson Jones through the courtesy of Miss Dewey of Washington, D. C., who writes:

"The article entitled, 'Dr. Jones Lived On Dewey Corner,' which appeared in a February number of the Berkshire Courier, was naturally of interest to one whose home had been on that same corner. 'Calling the article to the attention of a Texas friend I was greatly pleased to learn that Dr. Jones had been an intimate friend of her grandfather and she was able to tell many interesting incidents connected with the Doctor's picturesque life. After an evening spent in the Congressional library verifying dates and statements she handed me the enclosed sketch. As it contains more biographical detail than any article which I have so far seen, I am forwarding it for your disposition thinking it may be of interest to other readers of the Courier.

The subject of this article, Anson Jones, the ninth child and third son of Solomon Jones and his wife, Sarah Strong Jones, was born in Great Barrington, Berkshire county, Massachusetts, January 20, 1798, of poor but honest parents. He received his education principally from Lenox Academy in that county where he finished his scholastic studies in 1815. He began the study of medicine in 1817 at Litchfield, Conn., which he afterwards pursued at Utica, N. Y., where he was licensed to practice in the year 1820. He settled first in Chenango county, but in 1823 he removed to Philadelphia, where he remained until 1832, with the exception of the two years he spent in Venezuela and other parts of South America. On his return from there he received the degree of M. D. from Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia.

Dr. Jones emigrated to Texas in 1833 and settled at Brazoria. He, in 1835, drew up, offered and procured to be adopted, at a mass meeting, the first resolutions in favor of independence and total separation from Mexico for calling a convention of all Texas for that purpose, and for framing a constitution.

In March, 1836, on the fall of the Alamo and the dreadful massacre of Fannin and his 400 men at Goliad, Dr. Jones joined the army on the Colorado river as a private soldier, but afterwards raised a company with which he was present at the battle of San Jacinto April 21, 1836, a battle which was fought and won in less than half an hour. He served the army more than one year, as private surgeon and judge-advocate general; held several other military commissions in 1836 and 37, and in the last year was a member of the Texas Congress. He was minister from Texas to the U. S. Government in 1837-39, president of the senate and ex-officio vice-president of the republic in 1840, secretary of the state in 1841-44. In 1844 elected fourth president of the republic.

His principal achievement as a statesman was placing before the Texans in 1845 of choice between annexation and independence. His valdictory address, delivered at the capitol in the city of Austin, February 19, 1846, was the final official act of Anson Jones, the last president of the republic. When his speech was ended, as the cannon proclaimed the admission of Texas, as a state, into the union, the flag of the United States was unfurled to the breeze and while the Lone Star flag of the republic was being lowered the staff broke into two pieces and fell to the ground.

Shortly after he pronounced the words, 'The Republic of Texas is no more,' from choice, he led the life of a private citizen—a farmer. He was a cripple, having lost the use of one arm and hand by the kick of a horse.

Dr. Jones, with four others, established Masonry in Texas in 1835 (two years after his arrival). He was the first Master of the first lodge for two years. Upon the formation of a grand lodge he was chosen "Grand Master of the State."

He was a Democrat, as were all of his four sons.

He married May 17, 1840, Mrs. Mary O'Crory at Austin, Texas, and had four sons and one daughter. He died in Houston, Texas, in 1850. In a fit of insanity, caused by ill health, he took his life.

His journal, was printed privately in 1850. Since the early age of 12 he had supported himself entirely. Nobly, fearlessly and faithfully throughout his life he undertook and carried through skillfully the various enterprises which has endeared his name to history. Texas claims him as one of her greatest men and heroes. The county of Jones, Texas and its court house, Anson, are named in his honor.

The lineage of the last and fourth president of Texas is as romantic and sturdy as was his life.

Dr. Anson Jones' ancestry on the paternal side was from Colonel Sir John Jones, who was born in Anglesea, North Wales, in 1580. In 1623 he married Catherine Henrietta, daughter of the Hon. Robert Cromwell, who was second sister of Oliver Cromwell, Lord-Protector of England and was one of the judges of Charles I. in 1648, a member of Oliver Cromwell's House of Lords in 1653, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, etc. On the restoration of Charles II he was put to death October 17, 1660, aged 80 years. His son, William Jones, was born in 1624. He came to America and settled at New Haven the same year in which his old father was executed. He married Anna, youngest daughter of Governor Theophilus Eaton, and was governor of the Colonies of Connecticut and New Haven from 1683-1698.

Solomon Jones, the father of Anson Jones, was the fourth in direct descent from Governor William Jones. He was born in Hartford County, Connecticut, in 1755. He married in 1779, Sarah Strong, daughter of Timothy Strong of East Windsor in the same county. They shortly removed to Berkshire county, Massachusetts, and both died there, she in 1816 and he in 1822. He with his four brothers served in the army during the greater part of the Revolutionary war. He was in the battles of Bunker Hill and Saratoga. He volunteered in 1812 in the Silver Greys.

The ancestor on the maternal side was Jacob Strong. The family emigrated from England nearly contemporaneously with the settlement of Plymouth, and were among the early Pilgrims of Massachusetts. They settled at Cambridge, near Newton, the old name of our now Boston. From thence they removed in 1635-36 to Windsor, Conn., where their descendant, Sarah, was born.

R. S. Sterling's Opponents Fight His Bond Issue

Attacks of Most All Of Other Candidates For Governor Are Centered On Him.

By RAYMOND BROOKS
AUSTIN, July 12.—Gains of R. S. Sterling, chief advocate of tax reduction by shifting highway costs to traffic through a state bond issue, and Clint C. Small, who has a substitute for half the plan and opposes the rest, pushed other candidate for governor to feverish defense and vigorous counter-attack during the past week.

Even more obvious than the advance of these candidates was the desperate defensive efforts of James Young forces which mingled the bringing of able men into their campaign with a lashing and slashing about that dissipated some of the effort.

Observers saw the beginning of the Young drive to weaken from too early climax, though Young has been joined by Rep. Harry N. Graves, C. C. McDonald, Claude Miller and other speakers.

Earle B. Mayfield revealed that his fight also is on the defensive against the growing strength of Small and Sterling by the vigor of his attack on the plan of state assumption of county bonds, which is the most favored of the state issue of highway bonds, the major plank of Sterling.

Open bosting of Mayfield, and covert attacks upon Sterling, Young, Small, Miller and Love were reflected when Silliman Evans, vice president of A. P. Barrett's Fort Worth radio and air transport companies, formerly staff writer of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, took to the air over the Barrett station and a hook-up, as the first "radio analyst" to discuss politics. This was seen as a defensive step. Sterling was charged with huge expenditures of money and with "holding," as chairman of the highway commission "more power than any candidate for governor ever before had held.

Thomas B. Love's friends now are claiming the "silent" vote; and his opponents are saying it is so silent that no evidence of any material strength can be found. Love favors the highway bond plan, but with the author and leader of the fight for this plan in the race, he has made no headway on this issue. Love alone has the claim that he was one of the bolters of 1928, and that he wants the support of those who were in the same movement.

Sterling has profited during the week by the trend of all opponents to concentrate their fire upon him. One of the two purposes of the highway bond plan is to pay off counties for what they have spent in building state highways. Small has advanced a plan for the state to assume these unpaid bonds without the issuance of state highway bonds.

Small's strength is getting to be more than sectional, as he carried his campaign away from West Texas.

For Austin, the capital city, it now appears that Sterling, Mayfield, Small, Love and Young will share heavily in this vote. It is Mayfield's home. It also is the home of the Fergusons, but they
