Police said Crane entered the side room of a cafe yesterday and became enraged with jealousy when he saw Oren and Miss Lyter sitting together at one of the tables. He fired five shots, two of which hit Oren and two striking Miss Lyter, according to detectives. Oren died a few hours later. After the shooting Crane was said to have fled, but later surrendered at city hall, telling police, "I'm told I shot somebody." Detectives said Crane apparently had been drinking. Miss Lyter was said to be in a serious condition.

SNOOK CASE... LAWYERS IN HEATED TILT

Defense Endeavors to Prevent Snook's Alleged Confession
Being Introduced
In Trial.

COURT ROOM, COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 5.—The defense in the Snook-Hix murder trial this afternoon abandoned its attempt to exclude from the evidence the alleged confession of Dr. James Howard Snook, to the murder of Theora Hix. At the same time it was made clear that the defense would demand the right to show whether the confession, either written or verbal, was legally voluntary or whether it was obtained by "third degree" methods. The court agreed that evidence on the point could be offered to the jury.

By MORRIS DE HAVEN TRACY
United Press Staff Correspondent
COURTROOM, COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 5.—Charges of third degree methods used in obtaining the purported confession of Dr. James Howard Snook, to the murder of Theora Hix, touched off a battle of lawyers today. The climax came when Major W. C. Hoyells, reporter for the Cleveland Plain-Dealer, who interviewed Snook soon after the written confession was made, was called as a witness. E. O. Ricketts, chief of defense counsel, excitedly objected, arguing that the interview was "part and parcel of the confession," all obtained under duress and fear. The jury was excused while lawyers argued. Ricketts heatedly charged that before the confession was made, John F. Seidel, of Snook's defense, was allowed to "talk about three minutes" to Snook, "then was run out of the place."

"And after that the defendant was assaulted by the prosecutors," Ricketts went on. "When the interview was given me he was still under the duress applied when the confession was made." Ricketts demanded the right to produce evidence on the point of duress and adjournment to 1:15 p. m., was ordered to permit summoning of witnesses. The argument over the confession came after most of the morning session had been devoted to cross examination of C. S. Long, chemist, on technical points of the science of chemical analysis.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Aug. 5.—Engineers from the Oklahoma and Texas state highway departments will start today to draw plans for the three most important bridges over the Red river at once, Lew Wentz, chairman of the state highway department said today. Wentz, with S. C. Boswell, another commissioner, worked out a definite arrangement with the Texas commission last week whereby the two states would share fiftyfifty in the expense of building three bridges across the river at all important points. The three major bridges will cost approximately $700,000.

"I Made a Mistake." Husband
Said in Confessing He Placed Poison in Candy.

OTTAWA, Kas., Aug. 5.—Having signed a written confession yesterday that he put poison in candy intended for his wife, but which caused the death of her niece, Elva Irene Barns, 5, Ray Pennebaker, Diagonal, Ia., was to be arraigned here today. V. M. Kinnison, Ottawa clothier, a former friend of Pennebaker's family, obtained the confession after hours of grilling by police had failed. Pennebaker bought the poison at a drug store in Diagonal, Ia., last Tuesday. Plugging a candy bar with the poison, he gave it to his wife at the train the next day, according to his confession. He would give no reason for the attempted poisoning of his wife. "I made a mistake," was all he would say. James R. Locke, Bedford, Ia., lawyer, sent there by the alleged lawyer's father, arrived yesterday. He conferred with Pennebaker in the county jail this morning. The county attorney said today he understood a plea of insanity would be made. He was preparing to press a murder charge at a hearing set for this afternoon.

Fire Does $100,000 Damage at McGregor

MCGREGOR, Aug. 5.—A section of McGregor's business district lay in ruins today as the result of a disastrous fire which wiped out several establishments Sunday afternoon. Loss was estimated at $100,000. The fire originated in a mule barn where 25 head of stock were burned to death. From the mule barn it spread to the lumber yard of G. Amsler & Co., thence to the Amsler Hardware store. Sparks ignited buildings occupied by the Rubman Grain company, Roach & Co.'s grocery store and the Riddle Auto agency, but only slight damage was done. Fire Chief J. R. Meers of the Waco fire department answered a call for help, sending a pumper to the scene and sooth the blaze was under control. Authorities investigating the fire said they believed spontaneous combustion was the cause.

Truce Between Hip Sing and On Leong Tong Members

Boston, Chicago, New York and Other Cities Scenes of Murders Accredited to Tong Members.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—The United States government invoked the threat of deportation today to end a new tong war between the On Leongs and Hip Sings. After shootings in Chicago, Boston, Newark and New York, U. S. Attorney Charles Tuttle called a conference of national leaders of the two rival tongs for this afternoon to issue the federal warning. The present warfare started over the week-end killing of Yee Sun, member of the Hip Sings, and the probable mortal wounding of Kar Leon Wong, a fellow Tong member, in Chicago. Soon thereafter police in all cities that have large Chinese populations were on the alert to prevent outbreaks of violence resulting from renewal of the tong rivalry. Official vigilance was not enough however, to prevent an attempt to shoot down Chin Do, rich Chinese merchant in Boston, the probable mortal wounding of Louis Gah Fong, On Leong member in Newark, N. J., and the wounding of a Chinese man and a negro woman in the former's restaurant here.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—War between Hip Sing and On Leong Tong, which broke out over the week end with shootings in Chicago, Boston and Newark was believed to have reached here today. Despite extra police precautions in Chinatown and other Chinese quarters in this city, an assassin entered the restaurant of Sing On Jun and fired several shots. Sing On Jun received a bullet in the head and another in the thigh, and Rose France, a negro, was shot in the abdomen. Both victims were taken to Knickerbocker hospital where the woman's condition was reported critical. Police looked for Lee Hop, supposed to be a tong character.

CHICAGO, Aug. 5.—Nine squads of police patrolled Chicago's China town today guarding against further outbreaks in a new tong war which already has resulted in the murder of one Chinese and the probably fatal wounding of another. A truce of more than a year between the On Leong and Hip Sing tongs was shattered yesterday when guns blazed almost simultaneously in the Chinese quarters of Chicago, Newark and Boston. Two were wounded in the eastern cities. Yee Sun, a Chicago member of the Hip Sings, was slain when he ventured into On Leong territory.

BOSTON, Aug. 5.—An augmented police guard patrolled Boston's Chinatown today as a precaution against possible outbreak of a tong war. The precaution was taken after an apparent attempt had been made to assassinate Chin Do, wealthy Chinese merchant. Two shots were fired at him. NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—New York's Chinatown was being patrolled today by a double police guard in an attempt to prevent spread of tong warfare which flared in Chicago, Boston and Newark, N. J., over the week-end. The Newark victim was Louis Gah Fong, member of the On Leong Tong. Police arrested Lee Sing, of New York, said to be a member of the Hip Sing Tong. Tong leaders told New York police there is no tong war, and attribute the week-end flareup to "family troubles."

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 5.—With the old deadline between the warring On Leong and Hip Sing tongs laid down again here as the result of the slaying of a Hip Sing man in Boston, Philadelphia's Chinese today were hopeful that resumption of Tong warfare would be avoided. More than a dozen raids were made by the police in Chinatown yesterday. A dozen Chinese were arrested in one store when seven revolvers were confiscated by police.

Harry Leahy Passed On

Harry Leahy died in the electric chair. He paid the extreme penalty for his crime. He was convicted on the testimony of a Mexican, who became an informer after the commission of the deed. Circumstantial evidence was overwhelming. Jim Jeffers told the story of the life of Leahy from cradle to the grave and Jim Jeffers knows how to tell a story dealing with crime and the punishment of criminals.

His daily feature stories were thrillers of the highest type in the literature which deals with men who have violated the law fought to escape its meshes, failed ignominiously and then died gamely, perhaps without remorse and without regret.

Harry Leahy was a remarkable man. He had a brilliant mind and Jim Jeffers told his readers that Leahy never touched intoxicating liquor, he never used tobacco, his voice was musical, his English correct and he never made use of profane words. Leahy was only 43. He was well-born, his family was influential and he had many friends worth while.

He believed in a living God. He died at peace with the world, but he did not forget some of the men who did not admire him in that section of the state where he was born and grew to manhood, became a cattle and land trader and had won for himself a bizarre reputation.

Jim Jeffers penned many interesting tales in which Harry Leahy was the outstanding figure. Indeed Jim Jeffers' tales, without partisan bias and exaggerated colors, told it all—from accusation to condemnation and then from the death cell to the incineration chamber where finis was written to the mortal career of a man who should have been an ornament to society instead of an outlaw from justice for the slaying of an inoffensive and law abiding citizen.

All this reminds the writer that Pete McKenzie slew without provocation two gallant officers of the law.

For the killing of Capt. Sam Street, for 30 years a peace officer second to none in Texas, McKenzie was given the death penalty. He was saved from the chair by a jury returning a verdict that the man killer was of unsound mind. This happened in Bexar county.

Harry Leahy's lawyers made the same plea in Williamson county. They lost. A jury of Williamson county citizens declared Leahy to be of sound mind.

The moral of the tale is that it is unwise to go to Williamson county to stand a murder trial and after conviction to stage an insanity effort to escape the electric chair or the gallows.

Ring down the curtain for a day. Death cells are crowded at Huntsville and every week for months to come convicted slayers will go to their doom.

Is capital punishment a crime deterrent?

Mystery Surrounds Poisoning of Family

KILBOURNE, La., Aug. 5.—As M. L. Wallace, wealthy Bayou Macon farmer, and two of his sons fought for their lives today, police sought to clear up the mystery surrounding poisoning that resulted in the death of three persons. Wallace and his sons, Basil, 14, and Russell, 12, are ill of the same poison that resulted in the death of Mrs. Wallace, another son, Bruce, 2, and W. Brakefield, 69, a member of the household. Two tenants on the Wallace plantation were questioned today by police who said C. T. Townsend, 35, tenant, claimed to have overheard a conversation implicating them in a poison plot. Officers said Wallace and his tenants quarreled over money mat-

NEW YORK Exchange NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—Desperate bear operators using the old fashioned rumor tactics that included a story that Andrew Mellon would resign as secretary of the treasury succeeded in dislodging a considerable amount of selling today on the stock exchange. Stock after stock was singled out for a decline, and some of the best on the board were forced under Saturday closing levels. The losers included such issues as American Telephone & Telegraph, United States Steel, New York Central, Atchison American Can, Radio Corporation and Bethlehem Steel. General Electric dropped nine points. On the curb market terrific pressure was exerted against Middle West Utilities which lost 38 points and Insull Utilities were off about 20 points from the previous close. Utilities on the big board moved forward for a time and then turned irregular. Several made new highs, notably the Pacific Coast group where rumors of a merger helped the stocks. Consolidate Gas led the eastern issues with a rise to new high ground.

Cotton NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—After opening moderately higher, cotton futures sold off to losses of about 10 points on active months on professional liquidation ascribed to evening up for the bureau report. With trading mostly of a professional character, business consequently was dull and the market responded readily to small selling or buying operations. Locals afforded some support by buying the distant months. Weather reports were generally unfavorable.

State Briefs DALLAS, Aug. 5.—Investigation of the fee system as operated in Texas for county and district offices, to be conducted by a joint committee of the house and senate, probably will start in Fort Worth Aug. 19, according to word received here today by Representative George C. Purl from Senator Pink Parrish of Lubbock, chairman.

SAN ANTONIO, Aug. 5.—A swarm of ants that invaded the crib of the 2-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andy Fink here early today probably saved the lives of the entire Fink family as the cries of the baby awakened the mother in time to discover flames that were quickly enveloping the home. When Mrs. Fink rushed to her daughter's bedside she discovered the ants stinging the child and at the same time discovered the smoke and flames. She awoke the family in time for all to escape.

GALVESTON, Aug. 5.—The bodies of a negro man and woman were found in a parked sedan on the water front today. The man evidently had shot his companion and then turned the gun on himself. A letter found in the rear seat of the car said on the envelope: "This girl's name is Bessie Mavis; my name is Albert Boulton." The letter, which was addressed to the Mavis woman's sister and signed by Boulton, gave the cause of the shooting as jealousy.

AUSTIN, Aug. 5.—Governor Moody today issued a requisition for the return to Houston from Madison county, Idaho, of John Huffman charged with removing a mortgaged automobile from the state.

AUSTIN, Aug. 5.—An echo of a Hunt county jail delivery was heard here today when an appeal was filed from the two year sentence given Allen Steinbaugh there on a charge of aiding a prisoner to escape by furnishing him saws.

AUSTIN, Aug. 5.—More than $8,000,000 will be spent to keep up the state roads in Texas for the year beginning Sept. 1. A budget of proposed expenditures by divisions is now being prepared. The $8,000,000 does not include new construction but is for maintenance only.

AUSTIN, Aug. 5.—Confederate pensioners received bad news today when a ruling was made that a deficiency may not be created by the state to pay the full pension amount provided by a recent law.

AUSTIN, Aug. 5.—A. H. King of Throckmorton wants another occupation besides being a "house husband." He sent notices from Throckmorton to Austin today that he will be a candidate for state commissioner of agriculture. King, a member of the state legislature, himself designated his occupation as "house husband" in his biographical data furnished for the legislative manual.

The audience goes wild. The most hardboiled critics are enthusiastic.
Everybody is happy, except the people Molly loves best.
Her mother is furious. She is an old-fashioned woman, and scandalized at the topics with which Molly's play deals. And her father, a bit old-fashioned, too, is rather bewildered. Even her sweetheart, JACK WELLS, does not seem particularly enthusiastic. Her mother makes a disagreeable scene, and Molly is heart-broken. But she must go on to the party which the Durbins are giving.
NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XXII

It was a gay and festive little party. But perhaps it is as well that Mrs. Burnham did not go.
Everybody was in evening clothes. Francesca Glasgow, who played Delphine Darrows, wore black satin, with a petal skirt.
The petals were faced with pink chiffon, and they swirled and fluttered when she moved.

Madge Arthur, the girl reporter of the play, was dazzling in white, embroidered with sequins. She wore a necklace of square cut crystals. But instead of wearing it against the front of her gown, she wore it down her back. And her back was cut to the waist.

There was another girl in starched soufflé chiffon of Me-phisto red. Her tight bodice was gathered into an astonishingly high neck, stiffened and boned to the tips of her ears. But under her arms there were scimitar slashes that bared half her chest.

Molly thought of her mother's decent black, and her honorable hat. And she decided that a theatrical party, after all, was no place for an old-fashioned lady from Snodgrass.

There was only one gown that Mrs. Burnham would have considered really modest. And that, strangely enough, was the one Molly liked best of all. Mrs. Durbin, wife of the producer, wore it. The bodice was of white moire, and the tiered skirt of black Chantilly lace. Mrs. Durbin's hair was snow white, and she wore a close fitting cap of shining jet.

Molly told everybody that her mother was ill.
"But my father may come later," she said, "with Mr. Wells." She hoped devoutly that he would not. What could he say to all these smart, sophisticated people, with their swift, jangling chatter? How would he feel among these men in dinner coats, with their easy speech and polished manners? These women, with painted mouths and eyes, and jewels gleaming against their

Molly heard Francesca Glasgow remark that Berthe Starr had a new Rolls.
"With silver trimmings," she said.

That reminds me," remarked Mr. Durbin. "You know Berthe's sister Rao married young Sinclair, and they had a Paris divorce. Well, now they're getting married again. I had an invitation yesterday. Regular engraved invitation."

"From Cartier's," murmured his wife.
"And it went something like this," continued Durbin. "You are cordially invited to attend the premiere of THE MARRIED LIFE OF THE SINCLAIRS. Original all-star cast."

"How clever!" applauded Miss Glasgow. "There's an idea for you to work into a story some time, Miss Burnham."
"I think it was extremely bad taste," demurred Mrs. Durbin.
"And you know, Miss Burnham, I wish that playwrights and novelists would stop joking about marriage. There's such lamentable emphasis on divorce, and crime, and all sorts of unpleasant things.
Why don't you do a sweet little romance?"

"Why, that's exactly what my mother just asked me," exclaimed Molly. "Mother was shocked to death tonight, Mrs. Durbin. To tell the truth, it was the play that made her ill. I thought it was awfully old-fashioned of her to feel that way. But if you feel that way too—"

Molly's voice trailed off.
"Oh, my dear," the producer's wife laughed a little bubbling laugh. "Sex butters our bread.
I don't know what George and I would do if everyone should take to writing romantic comedies. But I know exactly how your mother felt."

"My people are from Illinois and I ran away from home when I was 18 to go on the stage. Mother and dad raised a mortgage, and came all the way from Peoria to New York, to rescue me. I

A DOZEN different things may just one thing you need ever do to absolute antidote for such pain.

Keep it at the office. Have it handy no idea how Bayer Aspirin can help.

It means quick, complete relief to millions of men and women who use it every year. And it does not was dancing in a show then on 14th street. I wore a modest little rag. Like a ballet dancer.

Layer on layer of white stuff. And I thought I looked rather like a cotton batting angel.

"Well, mother and dad found out where I was playing. They reached New York late at night, and took a taxi directly to 14th street. And the minute mother saw me, she began to cry. And she cried and cried. It was perfectly terrible. She absolutely broke up the show, and next day there were stories in all the papers about the awful scene she made."

"I remember somebody, to conselate mother, told her she thought I looked quite spiritual. And mother, sobbing her heart out, dried her eyes, and made a classic retort.

"There certainly isn't much material about her!" declared mother."
"Your mother was a real character," declared Mr. Durbin.
"There aren't many like her these days."

Mrs. Durbin smiled, but she said nothing.
"A real character," repeated the little producer. "Wasn't she, Mona?"

Mrs. Durbin nodded.
"Yes," she said. "I suppose she was—a real character."

Then the conversation switched to "characters." There are so many of them in the theatrical profession, and they talked of this one, and that. Of the celebrated producer who wears a Roman collar. And the great actress who carries white mice wherever she goes. And the dancer who never breaks a two-dollar bill, but keeps them in a trunk, for luck.

"It's all very well for outsiders to enjoy characters," declared Mo-ly. "But it's different, I imagine, if you have one in your own family. Their little whimsies may delight the world, but I'll bet they're an irritation and an embarassment to the folks at home."

She was thinking, of course, of her mother, with her sharp tongue and her stern conscience. Her high-button shoes, and her 16-button black kid gloves.

"I've known quaint grandmothers," she said, "and arty fathers. And aesthetic sisters. And I'll bet they're a curse and an abomination to their families."

Mrs. Durbin had crossed the room, to sit beside Molly.
"What you said about characters touched a tender spot," she confided. "You know, my dear, I've a feeling that your mother is rather like my mother. Tell me, truly—was she furious about the play?"

"Absolutely furious, confessed Molly. "She's simply frothing at the mouth."
Mrs. Durbin sighed sympathetically.
"Antagonism in the family has thwarted many talents," she observed. "I suppose she had rather you were an exemplary housewife than a Broadway favorite?"

"Mother's awfully old-fashioned," admitted Molly, and added loyally. "But she means well. And she'd do anything in the world for me."
"Of course she would," agreed
Mrs. Durbin.

"Where's that young man of yours?" someone demanded.
Molly was embarrassed.
"Really, I don't know. He took my father and mother to their hotel. Mother was ill. I thought he would be here long ago. But we needn't wait any longer. I'm awfully sorry."

The butler entered with a note for Molly. She knew before she took it open that Jack was not coming to her party.
"Dear Molly," he had written.
"I know you won't mind. I shan't be around this evening after all. Your mother made speeches all the way back to the hotel, and even threw a few hysterics. Nothing serious. Your father had a doctor up, and he's given her a sedative. They're going back to Snodgrass tomorrow, and your father wants me to show him the sights. He's a great old boy, Molly. He wanted to go to your party, but when he learned that everybody would be wearing dinner coats, he thought he'd better not. It isn't his kind of a crowd anyhow. I didn't try to persuade him. I didn't think he'd enjoy it. He got a great kick out of the play, whatever your mother says. Your mother won't be able to get him away until he has seen you again. I know that. So don't worry. Have a good time. And know that everybody who loves you is rejoicing in your good fortune.

"It's just what I thought," Mo-ly told them. "Mother is feeling miserably, and Father and Mr.
Wells are staying to keep her company. They want me to tell you all how awfully sorry they are."

When they went in to dinner, Mrs. Durbin patted Molly's shoulder, and whispered understandingly.
"These temperamental parents!"
"Oh, it's not Dad!" murmured Molly. "It's just Mother."

The dinner, as such dinners go, was a success. But Molly, who never drank cocktails or champagne, felt uncomfortably, that they were not her sort of people.
They were so very wise. And hard Hard as nails, she thought. There was something sharp and brittle about their humor. And the women's laughs were strident, and pitched to a false gaiety.

She was anxious to be with Jack.
Surely he would want to see her now. To talk over her triumphs.
What was the use of triumphs if you couldn't share them with someone you loved?

"We'll send for the morning papers," proposed Mr. Durbin, as they left the table. "See what the critics had to say about you girls."
Francesca Glasgow and Madge Arthur smiled complacently. They had given a good performance, and they knew it. Besides, the play was a wow. And critics seldom pan a performer in a successful production.

Only Molly was frightened. Perhaps there were reviewers who like her mother, would think she had written something indecent.

Ships Collide; Many Killed

Wasn't Free From Suffering a Single Day In 10 Years

Cisco Woman Says She Is Now Well and Happy After Taking Orgatone—Statement Remarkable.

"For the first time in ten long years I'm free from suffering and I'll never forget to praise Orgatone for what it has done for me," said Mrs. E. L. Wisdom, residing at 209 West Third St., Cisco, Texas, a few days ago.

"My stomach was dreadfully out of order," she continued, "and I suffered from indigestion, I reckon, as bad as anyone could. I had no appetite and I actually dreaded to eat because everything hurt me so. The gas that formed on my stomach after eating would gather around my heart and give me pain. I had a feeling of such awful smothering spells that I could hardly breathe. On top of this I was very nervous and at times couldn't do any of my house work at all. I kept getting weaker and more nervous and many a night I couldn't sleep at all. There was hardly a day for more than ten years that I was free from suffering. I could get no kind of medicine to help me and just felt miserable.

"But the relief I had hoped for so long, has come at last and I can now understand why so many people are praising Orgatone, for I'm raising it too. I had tried so many things without getting any relief that I was despondent and often found myself weeping. If there was nothing made that would help me. Then I read in the papers about Orgatone and the good it was doing people right here and I somehow felt that it would get me over my troubles too. Well, I just want to tell you and everybody else I haven't been disappointed. My heart fills with gratitude for my wonderful recovery and I feel like spreading the good news every where so every body can know what Orgatone is doing for suffering humanity. The pleasure of being able to eat what I want without suffering is alone worth many times what two bottles of Orgatone costs me, but when I tell you all my troubles are gone and I feel strong and well, you can see that I have every reason to rejoice. I sleep like a child, I'm not the least bit nervous and have gained in weight and strength besides. In fact, I simply feel like a new person and I can do all my housework without the slightest trouble. Orgatone is nothing short of wonderful and I only hope my statement will be the cause of others finding relief as I did."

"Genuine Orgatone is not a so-called secret remedy but a new scientific bile treatment containing no alcohol or other false stimulating drugs manufactured by one of the world's greatest laboratories and sold in Eastland exclusively by the Toombs & Richardson Drug Co.—Adv.

Song service, including "Make the Way Brighter," and "Love Lifted Me."

Iola Simmons, their little president, was in the chair. The mission work among the American Indians was described by the director, who had a number of colored pictures depicting this phase which were displayed.

The first missionary to the Indians, from the Southern Baptist church, Rev. A. J. Holt, was told about. He is a Texas pioneer and still alive at the age of 96.

Many costumes, Indian trophies, and relics were brought by the children, several of whom were dressed in genuine Indian attire.

The same program will be continued next Saturday morning.

Visitors attending were Mrs. J. C. Allison, and Mrs. Simmons, and children, Lela Kimbrough, Ella Mae Wood, Eleanor Simmons, Billie Hackett, Lillian Armstrong, Dorothy Hackett, Berta Mae Kimbrough, Juanita Rose Wood, Betty Grace Pugh, Iola Simmons, Carolyn Cox, Jean Kitley, Marylin Morgan, Joyce Lancaster, Laverne Hackett, Katherine Garrett, Doris Lawrence, Virginia Garrett, Ruth Reed, Elva Lee Jones, Gloria Reed, Edith Allison, Vernella Allison, Ansel Owen, Jr., Winston Allison, Charles Paul Williams, Grady Ned Allison, John Allison, Harry Brelsford, Jr., John Frank Williams, J. TEXAS LEAGUE

Breaking a string of three consecutive losses, the Dallas Steers yesterday defeated the Beaumont Exporters at Dallas. The Steers began a hitting streak early in the game and maintained a safe lead from the start. The final score was 8 to 1.

The Houston Buffs won out in a ten inning game at Shreveport atter the Sports had tied a two run lead by scoring in the eighth and ninth. Two singles, a walk, and three stolen bases netted the winning tally.

Lil Stoner, newly acquired from the Detroit Tigers, gave another demonstration of big league pitching yesterday when he enabled the Ft. Worth Cats to make a clean sweep of their three-game series with the San Antonio Indians. The score, 3 to 2.

After twice being beaten by Waco in a three-game series at Wichita Falls, the Spudders Sunday managed to salvage the last encounter when they scored six runs over their opponents' five.

WATCHING THE SCOREBOARD

Yesterday's hero: Big Ed Morris, of the Boston Red Sox, who turned in one of the best pitching performances of the season, a two-hit game against the Chicago White Sox. Score, 8-0.

Although having difficulty in locating the plate, Jackie May of the Cincinnati Reds found a way to tame the heavy-hitting Phillies Sunday, holding them to five scattered hits and beating them 7 to 1.

The New York Yankees pursuing the Athletics, who were idle, won the first game of a double header from the Cleveland Indians 12 to 0, and had the second game apparently sewed up going into the ninth. Then the Indians hammered home nine runs after two were out, and won the night cap, 14 to 6.

The Chicago Cubs maintained a winning pace, coming from behind once more to beat the Brooklyn Robins, 6 to 4. Grimm's single with the bases filled proving the decisive punch.

Twice on Sunday the Detroit Tigers came from behind to snatch both ends of a double bill from the Washington Senators. A seven run rally in the fourth enabled Bucky Harris' new team to beat his old one, 10 to 5. Twenty-two bases on balls featured the second contest, which the Tigers took, 13 to 11, in seven innings.

Sylvester Johnson pitched the Cardinals to a 5 to 0 victory over the Braves, making nine wins in two weeks for St. Louis.

Germany to Punish Zeppelin Stowaway

By United Press
 GLOUCESTER, N. J., Aug. 5.—Albert Buschka, 17-year old apprentice of Duesseeldorf, Germany, found the end of the rainbow today, but there was no pot of gold there. Instead, the young German lad was sentenced to immediate deportation as an "undesirable alien" by an immigration board of inquiry here.

Buschka was brought here today under guard from Lakehurst, where he arrived last night as a stowaway on the Graf Zeppelin.

LAKELHURST, N. J., Aug. 5.—Seventeen year old Albert Buschka would have been kneading dough today in a German bakery but for his trusty coil of rope which enabled him to stow away on the Trans-Atlantic dirigible Graf Zeppelin.

Albert has been ordered to Gloucester immigration station, Philadelphia, to be sent home but before summary sentence was passed on him here he told assistant immigration commissioner James L. Hughes all about it.

In the words of Dr. Hugo Eckener, Graf Zeppelin commander, Albert "had an ingenious idea."

Eckener explained: "This stowaway of ours was a foolish youth with romantic ideas who wanted to ride in an airship. The benighted young man got his bad ideas from your famous American stowaway, (Arthur Schreiber, who secreted himself aboard the French Yellow Bird before its recent trans-Atlantic flight.)"

"But our stowaway had an ingenious idea. He hid in the roof and leaped to the top of the Graf Zeppelin as we started. We locked him in a special room so he would not commit further nonsense. He will be punished in Germany to discourage the stow-away habit."

Throughout the hangar operation Captain Ernst Lehmann, Eckener's second in command, remained silent in the Graf's control cabinet. By his presence there he accepted responsibility for whatever might happen to his ship while being housed by his American hosts.

Captains Hans Von Schiller, of the Zeppelin watch staff, was the German landing officer.

Finally the Graf was shoved home, dwarfing the Los Angeles by the immensity of her 776 feet of swelling bulk. Plans to begin immediate refueling were abandoned, largely because of the lack of man-power. The ground crew had been on duty just 18 hours when relieved shortly after midnight.

Eckener was assigned quarters on the station, but most of his crew slept aboard ship. The 19 passengers, including seven Americans, hurried away to New York in a special train after passing customs and immigration inspections. Of the tens of thousands of automobile passing through the station yesterday, only one was in sight when the Zeppelin was made fast under cover early today.

Estimates of the welcoming crowd varied from 20,000 to more than 100,000. Not more than 10,000 automobiles are believed to have been parked here at any one time but an endless procession through the station at one time or another. It was a patient crowd that did just what marine guards told it to do.

HEAT BLAMED FOR DIVORCES

Hot Weather Increases Domestic Rows, Says Texas Judge
By United Press
 EL PASO, Tex., Aug. 5.—Warm weather and proximity to judges are given by Judge W. D. Howe as the cause for so many divorces.

"In hot weather it is easy for husbands and wives to get irritated and peevish at one another," Judge Howe said.

"They have a fuss and thing it is much worse than it is. One runs to a lawyer and brings suit for divorce."

"The parties get into court while the quarrel is still fresh in their minds and they say unkind things. Their grievances become fixed in their minds through telling about it and it is impossible to get them together again."

"If no judges were available during hot weather, many of the quarrels would be patched up and forgotten.
