No Place for a Texan
There are two empire states—New York on the eastern seaboard and Texas on the Rio Grande—Gulf order lines. President Hoover has named a New Yorker as member of the farm relief board. Charles S. Wilson of that state, "spokesman for the miscellaneous agricultural enterprise of the northeast" is the lucky or unlucky individual.

The accident occurred at a new sub-station at Kolmar crossings, in the city's outskirts, as Stroves was walking the upper wall of the station. When he fell, he was caught in the big electric switch, throwing it on and sending the huge voltage through his body.

The Boneheads, who have made a name for themselves by their funny antics and their seemingly natural ability to provide laugh-provoking entertainment, had declared that at Mineral Wells they will hold their second international convention today.

The confession was made by the pair shortly after police discovered Mrs. Fairchild's battered and weighted body in a cistern in the rear of the Burgess home. In their claim the two said Mrs. Fairchild claimed she had killed more than 100 persons a year for 25 years through a strange power of will which enabled her to kill any person she desired.

Tom Connally In the Lookout Chair

Texas is the mohair producing state of the union. A majority of the Americans who produce mohair are citizens of this commonwealth. They appealed to Sen. Tom Connally to give them a fair deal in the making of the wool and mohair tariff.

He asked for a truth in fabric decision.

It is said that American manufacturers of mohair cloth are endeavoring to induce the department of commerce to establish certain standards for mohair cloth. These standards would relate to the percentage of mohair in a given cloth or material.

Now low grade luster wool is much cheaper than mohair and it is said it is substituted for mohair in large amounts, "to the manifest detriment of the producers of mohair" as the Texan sees it.

Why not apply the provisions of the truth-in-fabric act?

Barry Miller to Enter Campaign

AUSTIN, Tex., July 19. - Lieut. Gov. Barry Miller, who has been reported for some weeks as a probable gubernatorial candidate next year, today issued his first formal statement of future political intentions.

Lieut. Gov. Miller announced definitely that he would be a candidate for the governorship at the next election, but added that he would not start his active campaign until next spring as he feels that "Texas has had enough political controversy in the past year to entitle it to a rest."

The statement follows in part: "Many of my friends from various sections of the state have been calling upon me to make some announcement as to my future political intentions. I, therefore, feel it due them at this time to say that I intend to be a candidate for governor next year. At this time I am Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows, and I do not propose to involve that great order in the turmoil of a political conflict. My term of office as Grand Master will end at Abilene about the middle of March, next year, when I shall turn the office over to my successor. I will then make formal announcement for governor giving my views on public questions then."

DEADLY PRUSSIC ACID IN WILD CHERRY LEAVES

Prussic acid as it is commonly called, or hydrocyanic acid, is one of the deadly poisons. It is used as a fumigant. In nature it occurs in small quantities in many plants, bitter almonds, and arrow equipped, it was said, while China has undoubtedly need of several years of peace, in which to stabilize her regime.

C. Dwight Marsh, of the United States department of agriculture, a specialist on poisonous plants on the livestock ranges, tells of a mysterious series of poisonings along a sheep trail much used, in driving the animals to a corral. Some bands would pass through safely. Other owners would lose many sheep. Investigation showed the trail was bordered with wild cherry leaves. When the grass had been short, the sheep would eat cherry leaves and die. When the trees had been stripped as high as sheep can reach the poisoning would cease.

Deadly as the poison is if the quantity is sufficient, there seems to be no injury from small amounts. Sheep may eat small quantities of cherry leaves every day without injury, and if other forage is ample the sheep will rarely eat too much of the cherry foliage. The danger comes when the sheep are close herded in the vicinity of wild cherries or chokeberries, and eat their fill. Wild cherry leaves are especially dangerous when partly wilted.

HASTINGS, Neb., July 19. - The Hastings museum has received the skin of a snake, a python, which measures 20 feet in length and 14 inches across the middle. The python was killed this spring near Grahamstown, South Africa. It will be mounted and placed on exhibition at the museum.

GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER VIII

Molly found an attractive apartment on Peterboro street, situated on an artist, who had done painting things with packing boxes a paint brush. There was really a piece of real furniture in the place. But the walls were dingy with gray, moth-eaten dandruff, and there were great gay looking chairs.

Molly's bed was a feather mattress on a box spring, with a piece of velvet thrown over it. And under the tables there were several tea trays that stood a six inches from the floor. There were hardly two pieces of a that matched. Peasant crockery from southern Europe, amusing and colorful. A samovar from Asia, and tall brass candle sticks. Molly bought her own kitchen in buttercup yellow enamel, made a gingham curtain of light blue checks for the kitchen window. She painted the woodwork ivory. And bribed the janitor to put down a piece of linoleum.

It was all quite charming. But Molly began to feel like a widow. She wanted Jack fearfully. Bob and Rita lived down the street. Bob and Rita lived down the street. Bob and Rita lived down the street. Bob and Rita lived down the street. Bob and Rita lived down the street.

Sometimes she saw Ruth Woods, who had lost her baby in July. Ruth was as pale and thin as Rita and usually looked as though she had been crying. She and Zip had rented the lower half of a two-part house in Merrymount. But Ruth seemed to have lost all interest in life.

Rita declared that she believed Zip made his poor little wife feel like a stone about his neck. Ruth had been ill for several months, and her doctor's bills were terrifyingly large.

There were times when Molly wondered if she wanted to be married after all. Consider her two best friends. Rita might fool most people, with her hysterical gaiety and her strident laughter. But Molly knew.

The trouble, Molly decided, was Rita and Ruth both loved their husbands more than their husbands loved them. It was ever so much more comfortable for a woman when the man loved her most.

Molly was doing an occasional theatrical interview now. Once she met a celebrated French actress who was married to an American producer. The actress told Molly that her husband sent her a telegram every morning, wrote every day, and telephoned every night.

She was a very happy woman. And, from continued observation, Molly concluded that there was a sort of aura about greatly beloved women. An ineffable radiance that distinguished them from their less fortunate sisters.

On the other hand, there was something piteous, she thought, about those unfortunate wives give infinitely more than they receive.

Before long Molly was keeping a notebook, and penciling her observations of love and life. She had some rather hazy notion of writing a book. Something about a Woman's Soul. She thought of Love as a Flaming Passion that suffused humdrum lives. And she envisaged women as creatures made for either pain or love.

Unrequited affection was the curse, she decided, of the unloved sisterhood. And the blessedness of being beloved was, of all things, the sweetest and most satisfying.

Molly thought she was learning a great deal about life. She had studied, in college, Pope's "Essay on Man," and she remembered the quotation, proclaimed by the professor of English literature: "The proper study of mankind is man." It was a pleasant study, and Molly was an earnest student.

The Inquiring Reporter column had not lasted very long, and for that Molly was devoutly thankful. The first question she propounded was this: "Should an aviator, when he is married, give up hazardous flying?"

The first person she approached was a portly gentleman, who happened to be very deaf. Curious passersby stopped to listen, and presently Molly and the deaf gentleman were the center of an amused group.

After that Molly tried a young girl, who declared her mother would have a fit if she posed for the newspapers. Then a youth who apparently had never heard of the Inquiring Reporter. He seemed not particularly interested in aviators and their wives, but tried to make a date with Molly.

Finally, utterly discouraged, she called the photographer, who loitered across the street while she maneuvered for victims.

"I never felt so silly in my life," she lamented. "Someone's going to call a policeman, and have me sent to the psychopathic. They all think I'm crazy."

The photographer grinned unfeelingly. "Sure they do. Why shouldn't they?" Then, seeing her evident distress, he relented. "You were so cocksure of yourself, Sister. I let you strut your stuff. Now I'll show you the ropes."

He hailed a taxi, explaining as he helped her in, "Taxi don't go so hot on the old swindle sheet, but if we want to grab a factory crowd during the noon hour, we haven't any time to lose. Get a gang together, that's the idea. Then they think it's a big lark. Here's a tip for you. Phone a bunch of places, and get the foreman to line up some smooth-looking janes for us, and a couple slick Johns. We can shoot the works in 10 minutes. Give you a chance to kill a little time on the job."

It was, after all, the simplest thing to do. But Molly felt very uncomfortable about it. To protect the photographer, who had a weakness for shooting craps and liked to steal an hour or so, she was obliged to waste that amount of time every day. To ease her conscience, she devoted her time to observant little strolls about the water front, or through the Public Gardens, and along the Common. And she wrote pithy paragraphs about people and circumstances that seemed unusual or interesting to her. At the end of the week, she submitted several sheets of copy to the city editor.

"Good stuff," he approved. "I like your bit about the old man and the little lame girl. And this dog story's good. People like animal-stories. Keep it up."

On the following Monday Molly was relieved of her Inquiring Reporter assignment, and given the joyous privilege of compiling a column of her own. "About Town" they called it, and it proved a popular feature.

And, before long, she was doing news stories. Stories with a human interest slant. A boxing match, from the woman's point of view. And then a wrestling match. She talked with ball players and their wives. And finally she interviewed theatrical stars.

It was great fun, sitting down front, on a press ticket, and meeting the press agent in the lobby, between acts, to be taken to the star's dressing room. It was always the nicest dressing room, and it usually had a star painted on the door. Usually the glamorous lady had a maid, and sometimes she had a secretary. Her maid frequently helped her dress while she chatted to Molly.

Molly loved theatrical interviews. But the biggest thrill of her life came on the day she was assigned to cover a murder trial. (To Be Continued)

INTERESTING DEMONSTRATION OF BIBLE HISTORY BY CHURCH OF CHRIST

The colorful history of the rebuilding of the temple in Jerusalem was prefaced by the formal opening of demonstration lesson, held in the Church of Christ, by singing "Standing on the Promises," led by Ethel Carlisle, followed with prayer by Mrs. J. Shelby Smith. Memory work, including recitations of the Lord's prayer, the 23rd Psalm, the Beatitudes, and the ten commandments, before the teachers present, Mrs. C. F. Felt, Mrs. Harry Woods and Mrs. Smith. Other adults present were Meses, H. H. Thomson, Miss Virginia Sweet, and Mrs. Tom Harrell, the latter presenting the description lesson with the object table. This was built up to represent the terrain of Babylon, the Jordan river valley, the land of Palestine, and showed Jerusalem in ruins. The speaker discussed the return of the Children of Israel from their captivity by Cyrus the Great. The struggle of the returned Israelites to rebuild their temple and the walls, work on account of their enemies, the Samaritans, who were partly Jewish, and who spied, and carried false tales to the king. Finally after 10 years of this persecution, Zerubbable, a leader; Ezra and Nehemiah came and with their help they wrote the king their story, and that they were not trying to evade taxation; and the building was resumed. The thickness of the walls, and of temple walls was described and the laying of three layers of stone to build the temple to the top, which was of lumber. The bringing back to the temple of the sacred vessels from Babylon, all excepting the Ark of the Covenant, which has never been found to this day. But even whilst building with the king's permission, the enemy still tormented them. So they had to work with a sword in one hand and a sword in the other.

This, the speaker likened to present conflicts, with the sword of the Spirit, balancing the scales for the Master. The demonstration was carried on in connection with the graphic description. The temple was shown and the method of making the stone walls. The desolation of the country of Jerusalem was modeled, and was a sharp contrast to the rich Babylonian domain. Those present: Ethel Carlisle, Elizabeth Ann Arnold, Melba Beth Woods, Jannette Smith, Dorothy Sparr, Mildred

Was the Happiest Woman in Eastland

"This Orgatone is just the finest medicine I ever saw in my life, and it's built me up and brought my strength back until I'm like a different woman altogether," said Mrs. M. C. Neighbors, residing at 611 South Walnut street, Eastland, Texas, when talking to the Orgatone representative, a few days ago.

"I've been sick with indigestion for more than five years," she continued, "about as sick as anybody could be with such a trouble, too I guess. I was all worn-out and my appetite was so poor I never wanted anything to eat and I only ate to keep alive. Why, I got so I actually had to see a meal-time to come, for soon after eating my food soured and gas formed and got up around my heart so I could hardly breathe, and sometimes it seemed like I would smother. I was nervous as I could be, too, and would start at every little sound and most of the time I'd lie awake all night long, rolling and tossing and counting every stroke of the clock and wishing and at the same time dreading for day to break. I began to fall off in weight and if I tried to do the least thing I'd give right out and have to lie down and I tell you, I just felt miserable all the time.

"I saw so much about what Orgatone was doing here in Eastland that I decided to try it and I believe that I was the happiest woman in town when I found that it was relieving me of that terrible suffering and I almost shouted for joy. I have a hearty appetite now and can eat anything I want without the least bit of trouble and I'm so strong I can do all my own housework and it don't tire me at all. My nervousness is a thing of the past and I sleep as sound as a dollar all night long. I am taking on flesh, too, and although I haven't weighed I can tell by the way my clothes fit that I've gained a lot. I am sure glad to tell you what Orgatone has done for me and I hope it'll be the means of causing some other sufferer to take this medicine and get relief like I did."

Genuine Orgatone is manufactured by one of the world's greatest laboratories and is not a so-called patent or secret remedy but a new scientific bile treatment and is sold in Eastland exclusively by Toombs & Richardson—Adv.

Thompson, Wanda Fehl, Nettie Sweet, Anita Hearn, Alma Sweet, Virginia Bell White, Georgina Thompson, Lilly Dale Chambers, Nelda Woods, Lorene Chambers, Bert Hackett, and Ellis Hastings. The next demonstration will present the story of Esther.

Elk's Convention Tremendous Event

RANGER, Texas, July 19.—One hundred and ten thousand Elks attended the national B. P. O. E. convention in Los Angeles, said Wade Swift, who has returned. Of this number, 50,000 were out-of-State Elks, the remainder being California Elks.

There were almost innumerable forms of entertainment, all free, for the visitors, said Mr. Swift. He saw 12,000 people dancing in the world's largest ballroom. He attended a magnificent electrical parade which was held at the coliseum—a huge bowl that is the scene of many football games. The stadium has a seating capacity of 100,000 and it was filled to capacity for the parade, which lasted two hours. The display consisted of large floats, glowing with gorgeous electric lights that sparkled and flickered continuously.

A tremendous throng lined the streets when the Elks held their great parade, said the Ranger representative.

Mrs. M. A. Frost and daughter, Miss Beulah Frost, who have spent several weeks in Eastland will return to San Antonio, their home, next week.
