Resolutions Congratulating People of Texas Who Voted for Hoover Offered In Texas House and Senate.

KEEP LAWN BEAUTIFUL, COURT ASKS

The following article has been presented to the court by County Judge Clyde L. Garrett with reference to the use of the court house lawn as a place for holding programs and concerts:

"In view of the fact that much time, effort and money have been spent to provide a beautiful court house lawn; that the grass is not yet thoroughly set and the shrubs and plants are all young and tender, the commissioners' court feels that the use of the lawn for programs and concerts, at this time, would not only retard the growth of the lawn but would seriously damage it. Therefore, it is the opinion of the court that the lawn should not be used for the above or any other purposes which might injure it. The court is desirous of cooperating with the public in every way possible and at the same time desires and invites the fullest cooperation of the public to the end that in a very short time Eastland county will have a very beautiful courthouse lawn."

The largest number of entrants ever promised for a Texas trap shooting tournament is promised for the state tournament at Sweetwater next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, June 17, 18 and 19, at which time the following Eastland citizens will compete in the contests: Mr. and Mrs. James Horton, Pete Parker, J. A. Gold, E. C. Satterwhite, L. A. (Len) Hightower, J. C. (Coley) Harrell, Curtis Kibrell, and perhaps a number more.

This will be the first state tournament for trap shooters to be staged in West Texas since 1921, when the state contests were held at Ranger.

Beautiful shooting grounds about two miles from the city of Sweetwater will be the scene of the tournament. At the grounds are available traps and a $5,000 club house. Shells of all makes will be obtainable at the grounds. Lunch also may be had there each day.

Trophies of sterling silver valued at $800 will be awarded to shooters in two classes: class A, those scoring 92 per cent and over; class B, those scoring less than 92 per cent. This division into classes is a new feature, giving shooters a chance to compete with those of their own skill.

Five state championships will be decided: man champion, lady champion, double champion, junior champion and handicap champion.

One of the attractive features will be night shooting, by the illumination of powerful floodlights.

Lake Eastland Sand Found In Newest Oil Well

Hoffer Oil and Texas Company Test On Gray Lease Making Oil and Gas.

A new oil territory has been opened up northeast of Eastland and about 6-12 miles northeast of Cisco with the bringing in of the Hoffer Oil company-Texas company No. 1 well on the Gray lease yesterday. The well was setting five-inch casing today preparatory to completing.

Production now is rated at about five barrels each four hours. About 30,000 feet of gas accompanies the oil which is flowing naturally.

The Lake Eastland sand was topped at 3446 feet and drilled to 3451. At that stage the hole rapidly filled with oil and later began making heads.

The well has been drilling about two months. It is located half a mile west of the Hoffer-Thomas Hittson No. 1 which was drilled several years ago and which produced after a shot, for about 30 days.

Storage is being built on the lease. The test is located on a tract of 160 acres, pooled.

Wichita Falls Entertaining Newspaper Men

WICHITA FALLS, Tex., June 14.—Business sessions of the Jubilee convention of the Texas Press association were interspersed with various forms of merry-making today. Delegates participated in yo-yo contests, the championship golf match, and many attended the barbecue excursion to Vernon sponsored by the Vernon Chamber of Commerce.

Jim Edwards, San Angelo, and Ralph Schuffler, Olney, played today for the golf championship of the Texas Editorial association. Their match was over the 18-hole route of Wichita country club. They tied in elimination matches yesterday with 94 each.

Three cities have unfurled their flags for their respective cities in banners inviting the press convention, 1930. These are Corpus Christi, San Angelo and McAllen.

Sidney Krine, manager of the Corpus Christi chamber of commerce, Eli T. Merriman of The Caller, and Grady Kinsolving of The Times are boosting Corpus Christi's claims for the meeting.

Claude C. Wild, manager of the San Angelo chamber of commerce, Houston Harte, editor of the Standard-Times, and Ed Blanton, editor of the Sheep and Goat Raiser's magazine, presented San Angelo's invitation to the convention.

Another feature of the convention was the showing of the United Press moving picture, "Reporting the World," showing how news is collected and transmitted to the farthest corners of the earth.

CHIEF PILOT UNEASY

Forced To Change Original Course Because of Head Winds; Gas Supply dwindles.

PARIS, June 14.—The Bernard monoplane Yellow Bird has sufficient fuel to continue flying until 5 a. m., tomorrow, which is 28 hours from the time it left Old Orchard, Me., but not enough to reach Paris without refueling, the builders of the plane estimated today.

They based their figures on the plane's known speed as far as the Azores.

Coastal radio stations, using 300, 600, and 900 meters, sought unsuccessfully to communicate with the plane this afternoon.

NEW YORK, June 14.—The French monoplane Yellow Bird, her gasoline supply rapidly dwindling, was nearing the coast of Portugal this afternoon.

At 12:10 P. M. eastern standard time, the Yellow Bird had been gone 27 hours from Old Orchard, Me., where it started on a flight to Paris at 9:10 a. m. eastern standard time yesterday.

At 11:30 a. m. eastern standard time the French wireless station at Bordeaux intercepted a message from a steamer which relayed a message from the Yellow Bird then half-way between the Azores and Portugal.

NEW YORK, June 14.—The Commercial Cable Co. received advice at 2:40 p. m. today (2:40 p. m. eastern standard time) that the Yellow Bird was approximately 200 miles off the coast of Portugal. It expected to land in Portugal, refuel and proceed to Paris tomorrow.

HORTA, Azores, June 14.—No direct word from the Yellow Bird had been reported here at noon today.

If the plane should come this way, it would find landing difficult. There is no proper landing field, the port of Fayal being available to seaplanes only.

OLD ORCHARD, Me., June 14.—The parents of 22-year-old Arthur Schreiber of Portland were convinced today that their son was a stowaway aboard the French monoplane Yellow Bird, attempting a flight to Paris.

Scarcely had the giant craft soared off the sands here yesterday when rumor spread that a youth had concealed himself in the cabin.

Persons connected with the flight at first scouted the report, point to the fact that Armeno Lotti, Jr., radio operator, sat in the cabin and would be in a position to see anyone attempting to hide there.

But later a friend of the supposed stowaway delivered to Mr. and Mrs. Schreiber a letter marked "Not to be opened until three hours after the departure of the Great Flash for Rome."

The letter, which the parents said was in their son's handwriting, read: "Dear Parents: I am attempting to go across on the airship Green Flash. If I succeed in getting on do not worry for me. I am doing this thing of my own accord, and was not influenced by anyone and wish no one to be held responsible for the consequences."

"I am doing it because I know that if I succeed, I can do much for your happiness."

"Please do not think bad of me. I will cable you if I arrive in Rome."

"I am constantly thinking of you. Love, (Signed) 'Arthur.'"

When young Schreiber did not return home last night, his parents said they were convinced he was aboard the Yellow Bird. His mother appeared nervous and worried, but she exclaimed, "God will save my boy!"

HOKUS AND SLIDES

Henry L. Farrell

The Mick Is a Stranger

APPOINTMENT of Adam Walsh as assistant football coach at Yale in charge of the line is slightly out of line with the athletic policy of that rather distinguished university.

Walsh is a Notre Dame man and since his college days he has been the varsity coach at Santa Clara (Calif.) College. And it has been the policy of the Yale Athletic Board to hire only graduate coaches.

It is probable that the Yale officials, when they offered a position to Walsh, remembered a day several years ago when Adam Walsh, captain of a Notre Dame football team, performed an epic of heroism on the green turf of the Polo Grounds in New York.

Heart First in These Games
 NOTRE DAME was playing the Army and a Notre Dame-Army game has become celebrated for the opportunity it presents to the athletes to show what the coaches call guts.

The Four Horsemen were the most advertised members of that Notre Dame team but it was Walsh who put even the Cadets into a rapture of admiration. The Cadets are trained to know what courage means.

Early in the game, Captain Walsh, playing center, broke his right hand. The fractured member was placed in an emergency splint in mid-field. Walsh wouldn't go to the sidelines because he knew that Knute Rockne, the N. D. coach, would pull him out of the game. And Rockne, because of the rules, could not step on the playing field.

Both Hands Gone
 LATER in the game Walsh came out of a pile of players with his left hand hanging loose. It was broken and the relief squad from the sidelines put the left hand into a splint.

The doctor told Walsh that he had to get out of the game. But Walsh was the captain of the team and he refused to leave his squad. He wouldn't look toward the sidelines where Rockne was waving frantically at him to accept a substitute.

Rockne sent out five substitutes in a row with instructions to command Walsh to come to the side-

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

WHEN Charley Borah as a freshman at Southern California reported to Coach Cromwell the coach asked him what he could do. . . . And the bashful Borah said—"I can beat any runner on your squad." . . . And he did. . . . Weems Baskin, who did a lot of swell hurdling for Alabama Poly, has been signed as an assistant track coach at Yale.

He is the first fellow from the south to crash an eastern track coaching staff. . . . The University of Oregon football team is going to travel clear to Gainesville, Fla., to play the University of Florida. . . . And they claim it is the long distance traveling record for one game. . . . In the first 25 games of the season Earl Averill, the wovish Cleveland rookie, hit more home runs than any Cleveland player hit all last year. . . . And Bill Evans says he is worth $250,000. . . . And the Indians paid less than 50 grand for him.

And He Knows Football
 THERE certainly is no intent to infer that the Yale football squad can profit from the name and the instructions of a man who was so noted for his courage. Yale football players never have been accused of lacking heart.

But it is quite possible that some of those young Yale fellows will have a very deep respect for the instructions of Adam Walsh.

His name has been a legend in eastern football since that day when he was crashing into the line and making passes to his four horsemen with two broken hands and with tears from the pain streaming down his cheeks.

Coaches in the east since that day have told their men—"There was a great center and God, what guts he had!"

By means of it the association is able to mark the hogs in such a way that they may be identified after having been killed and their ownership traced.

One hundred and sixty-two head of hogs were sent. Cattle are not tattooed.

This tattooing was the first to be done by the association. The instrument was ordered a short while ago and arrived in time to be used this week.

The primary purpose of his visit was to examine the results of the tattooing done for purposes of identification when the animals were sent Tuesday.

PARIS, June 13.- The quality of the chorus is picking up and the famous Folies Bergere is being stormed by battalions of girls who step out of classrooms and society salons. Pierre Frejol, ambitious girls who have ruled picked choruses for the Folies for the 10 past years, contends that if he had 10 daughters he would turn them into 10 chorus girls.

Frejol must be the most envied
"tired business man" in the world.
He has seen a parade of 20,000 ambitious girls who have halted before his desk long enough to disrobe their charms and get a job with the Folies.

He has seen a great change in 10 years. In the old days the chorus was recruited from the boulevard cafes, but nowadays the chorus pays better than the dressmaker and milliner dreams of growing pretty enough to make the Folies.

He has seen another change, for he contends that women are getting more beautiful and figures becoming more perfect every year.
A critic of pulchritude has his hands full now. M. Frejol contends, and to select the 200 girls necessary for the Folies choruses, he has a hard time eliminating beauties from the last five hundred.

The present Folies chorus con-

PARIS FOLLIES IS BECOMING MORE HIGH HAT

Some of them suffer a stroke of timidity when they reach my office, grow red with shame instead of undressing and finally stammer out that they have changed their minds. Others have convincing themselves that they might as well get it over with now as later, and tear at their clothes like savages as they disrobe.

Five Points of Beauty
The professional chorus girls dress and undress so many times in their lives that it is all in the day's work for them. The students often take it as a lark, and many never come back even after they have been accepted. They may simply want to prove themselves that they could make the chorus if they wanted to.

Since the quality picks up and the quantity increases, the pickers of beauty for the Folies, the Casino de Paris, the Moulin Rouge, the Palace and the many concert-halls of Paris, can be more particular. They now exact not only pretty figures, judged coldly from a standard based on five points:

straight knees, fine lines, slim lower limbs, full sets of teeth and plenty of chest expansion, but also intelligence.

Folies girls are paid on a graduated scale in accordance with their five-point merits and intelligence, ranging from 600 francs a month for the attractive youngsters with a predominately fine point or other among the five to 1,500 francs a month for a pure intelligence.

But oh, what if it WAS Iris? Could she possibly make herself rejoice, if Iris was coming home?

CHAPTER XXII
It was John Curtis Morgan's deep, pleasant voice that came over the wire to Nan, startlingly clear, as if the man himself stood beside her.

"I want to speak with Miss Carroll, please," were his first words. "Nan speaking, Mr. Morgan," she answered, joy surging into her heart.

"Good! Everything all right, Nan? How's the boy?"

"Clamoring to be allowed to speak to you, Mr. Morgan," was just taking him up to bed. He's a charming host. Will you talk to him a minute?"

"In just a moment," Morgan answered. "The governor seems very favorably disposed to commut- ing Brownlee's sentence from death to life imprisonment, but he wants to have a talk with Dr. Ashley—the alienist, you know. I've called Ashley's house, but he's out of town and won't be back until noon tomorrow. I wish you'd get in touch with him then personally and persuade him to make the trip to the capital. His expenses add time will be paid for, of course. Put it to him strong that it may be within his power to save the life of poor Brownlee. But I can depend upon you to get him here, I'm sure."

"I'll get him there," Nan prom- ised blithely. "Meanwhile, I have your permission to make any change of any kind here in your home that seem best to me, have I not?"

"Go as far as you like, just as long as you don't adopt that boy of mine in my absence," Morgan laughed, and the sound was the purest music in Nan's ears. "I'd like to speak to the brat now, if he's still clamoring."

Curtis scrambled into the chair in which Nan sat.

"Hello, Father!" Curtis piped shrilly in the voice he reserved for telephone conversations. "Betcha life! . . . Oh, Little Pat! He says it all the time. . . . Sure! I'm going to sleep with Nana in one of the man-and-wife twin beds. . . . I didn't tease either!" indignantly.

"Sure! Me and Nana and Cop's having a swell time. Listen, Fa- ther—make Nana stay here all the time. She works for you and she's gotta do what you tell her to, hasn't she? . . . Aw-w! . . . Say, Father, I wanna collar and a leash and a muzzle for Cop. . . . A red collar with brass studs all around it, like Jimmy Powell's police dog's got. Oh, Hello, Benny! I gotta police dog puppy named Cop! You can play with him when you come to see me. . . . Good-by!"

He slipped the receiver upon the hook and faced Nan, his liquid black eyes shining with excitement. "Father's going to bring me a collar and a muzzle and a leash for Cop. . . . Say, Nana, what's your face so red for?"

"I ought to shake you, Curtis Morgan, but I'm going to kiss you instead," Nan told him, laughing shakily.

"Benny Hogarth's coming to see me," he chattered, as they again ascended the stairs. "His grandpa's the governor of this state. . . . That means he's the boss, don't it, Nana? . . . What's a state?" Then, without giving Nan time to instruct him in civics, he clattered on: "Benny's mother's dead. He lives with his grandpa and his grandpa in the 'executive mansion.' . . . What's a 'executive mansion'? It looks just like a house. Oh, look! Estelle's brought up my blue silk pajamas that father gave me for Christmas. Your pajamas are pink silk. Mother wears silk night gowns with lots of lace. She says they're more fem-i-nun. What fem-i-nun, Nana?"

"Listen, brat," Nan laughed, as the boy began, with proud independence, to snuck off his day clothes. "Wouldn't you like to go to school and find out the answers to all your innumerable ques- tions?"

"Sure, I want to go to school! Public school, where the kids play football and baseball. . . . I can read a lot already. And I know two times four and two times eight. . . . Say, Nana, CAN I go to public school?"

"That's the big new idea," Nan assured him, turning her head away for a moment from the heart- breaking sight of his thin little body. It was up to her to see that there should be eventually—and not too eventually—a little padding upon that pitifully exposed little skeleton.

"I'm going to take you to pub- lic school tomorrow morning. Lit- tle Pat's going to live here, over the garage, with Big Pat and Maude. You and Little Pat will go to and from school together and have all afternoon to play in the yard with Cop!"

"Gee!" Curtis breathed, his black eyes enormous with delight and satisfaction. "Then I ain't going to have a nurse—any more, Nana?"

"Not if you'll prove to your fa- ther and me that you can take care of yourself," Nana said, choosing her words very carefully, so that no hint of unpleasant threat might reach the child.

"You see, Curtis, a nurse is sup- posed to see that you eat the kinds of food that will make you big and strong, so that you can play football and baseball when you're bigger, and see that you bathe and wash your teeth, and things like that."

"Little Pat says they have a Health Chart in public schools, and you write down on it when you've had a bath and washed your teeth and eat cereal and spinach, and everything," Curtis explained, with the lordly air of a child who finds a grown-up strangely ignorant of vital mat- ters. "And Little Pat's on the Health Chart Honor Roll, and Lit- tle Pat never did have a silly old nurse."

"You like Little Pat, don't you, honey?" Nan asked.

"Oh, sure, he's all right. He's just kind of bossy because I'm lit- tler than he is," Curtis conceded cheerfully, as he climbed into bed.

The next morning was crammed with activities. Curtis insisted on wearing his plainest and sturdiest suit and overcoat to school—so I can play with the kids," he explained to Nan, but the girl sus- pected that the child was actu- ated by instinct—if he were better dressed than the other children, or at all picturesque, as his mother had delighted to make him, his prospective playmates would shun him and deride him.

The brisk, middle-aged woman principal was not at all flurried by the application of John Curtis Morgan's son for enrollment in the first grade. The child was six years old, the second term of the school year had just opened, that week—so of course here he was. It was as simple as that. By half- past nine Curtis Morgan had been assigned a desk among 40-odd other pupils, and was sitting in it, looking solemnly pleased with himself and his new world, and Nan had a list of the books and supplies he would need.

"He looks like a bright little chap, Mrs. Morgan," the first grade teacher, Miss Anderson, commented as Nan was about to leave Curtis to the kindness and the cruelties of the public school system.

"I'm Miss Carroll, a friend of the family. Mrs. Morgan is abroad," Nan explained. "In fact, Miss Anderson, I'm Mr. Morgan's private secretary, and I wish you'd communicate with me, in care of Mr. Morgan's office, the Sanderson Building, if you have any special problems or difficulties with Curtis. He's an only child, you know, and . . ."

"Of course, I understand," Miss Anderson agreed.

"The maid will call for him to- day, but after this one of the boys will see that he gets to and from school safely," Nan added. She waved to Curtis, but apparently he was afraid to appear demon- strative and therefore a sissy, for he acknowledged her farewell with a stiff little nod of his head.

"So that's that!" Nan breathed a deep sigh of relief. "I believe he's just where he belongs. And now to get to the office, clean up the maid, and then get hold of Dr. Ashley."

Dr. Ashley not only agreed to take the two o'clock train to the state capital, but insisted on Nan's remaining to lunch with himself and his wife. During the meal she became suddenly and unusu- ally confidential, telling the great doctor just what she had done that morning with John Curtis Mor- gan's son.

"Mrs. Morgan had planned a private school education for Cur- tis, doctor," she explained. "But since Mrs. Morgan is going to be abroad for several months, Mr. Morgan asked me to do what I thought best for Curtis. He has a very bad reputation with nurses, I'm afraid—spoiled and dictato- rial."

"A public school is just the place for him," the doctor nodded. "The boy's bad temper has no doubt been the result of subcon- scious anger against being 'differ- ent.' He has wanted to be 'regu- lar'—all children do."

Almost for the first time since she had come to work for John Curtis Morgan more than three years before, Nan Carroll worked with her eyes on the clock that afternoon. She could hardly wait to have Curtis hurtle his small, excited body against hers, while he began to pour out the absorbing tale of the day's adventures.

When she did arrive at the Mor- gan home it took quite a bit of hunting to discover Curtis. And when she did find him, in the apartment above the garage, he was so enthralled by the drama of the O'Brien family taking posses- sion of their new home that he scarcely gave Nan a thought.

"Hey, Curt, gangway! What d'ye think this is—a free show? Pitch in and help take up furniture if you're going to stand around here," Little Pat was shouting to the pampered son of Iris Morgan as Nan climbed the stairs.

With deep amusement and ten- derness Nan saw that Curtis obeyed the 10-year-old son of the cook unquestioningly, eagerly.

She went back into the house. Estelle, the maid, stopped her in the hall. "I was just wondering, Miss Carroll, what to do with Mrs. Morgan's clothes and things. If she's going to be gone several months, oughtn't they to be . . . well, packed up, or something?" She floundered to an embarrassed stop, but her meaning lay plainly between the two girls: If Iris Morgan was not coming back, should a hundred reminders of her beau- tiful body continue to stab John Curtis Morgan's heart every time he entered his home? Nan ascended the stairs slowly, sick with distaste for the job that lay ahead of her.

RECORD IS ACHIEVED BY RANGER

RANGER, Texas, June 14.—From wheat in the field to brown hot biscuits—All in 17 minutes and 38 sec- onds.

Ranger gave the Southwest and perhaps the world a new record to shoot at today.

Wheat was reaped, threshed, sacked, rushed from the field to the mill, ground into flour, car- ried to a restaurant and baked into biscuit in a breath-taking epi- sode this morning.

The wheat was obtained from the M. H. Hagaman farm, north- east of Ranger where a new com- bine is harvesting the grain. At 10:21 1-2, the big machine—op- erated by Leslie and Fred Haga- man—started, with K. C. Jones, flour mill owner, aboard with two sacks which were filled at 10:23.

Newspapermen tossed the sacks into the car of Ben Whitehouse, agricultural agent, and with Whitehouse at the wheel, the car dashed through the field, out into the country road and soon was on the highway.

At 10:29, the three and two- tenth miles from the field to the flour mill had been covered. J. L. Beatty, the miller, started the machinery in motion, hurried up the stairs and poured the grain into the hopper and at 10:33, the flour had been made.

Whitehouse, Jones and news- papermen then sprang into a car and dashed up town, stopping in the alley midway between Ranger and Neptune cafes and the kitchen- utes were reached practically simultaneously at 10:34:50 at the Ranger Cafe and at exactly 10:45 at the Neptune. At 10:39:08, Henry Nottingham, proprietor of the Ranger Cafe, who was in charge of the baking, brought the brown biscuits out of the oven and at 10:40, E. B. Hill, chef at the Neptune, complete the baking of his biscuits.

Last year, when a similar race against time was conducted, 41 minutes was required. Today's record cut this considerably more than half in two.

MRS. SAMPLE HOSTESS TO TREFFOIL CLUB.

Mrs. Harry Sample entertained the Treffoil club very charmingly in her delightful, hospitable home yesterday afternoon when the little coterie gathered about two tables for the game of bridge, regretted the fact that this would be the last meeting until September as the club recesses for the summer months. The rooms were artistically decorated with wild flowers and red arbutus, gorgeous red roses and nasturtiums. The kitchen idea was further carried out in the bridge table appointments of old fashioned girl tallies. Club members attending: Misses Donald Kinnard, F. W. Curtis, Chas. E. Overly, E. T. Murray, W. H. McDonald, J. S. Grisham and hostess.

Guests of the afternoon, non-members, were Mrs. W. E. Chaney, Mrs. E. R. Townsend.
Delicious home-made peach ice cream with that dainty confection Lady Baltimore cake, and mints were served, and delicately tinted fruit punch was passed during the afternoon.

YOUNG PEOPLE HAVE DELIGHTFUL PICNIC.

The Epworth League of the Methodist church enjoyed a very delightful picnic and swim at Magnolia Dam, four big cars meeting at the church to carry the young folks and all important picnic supplies, not to speak of a portable victrola. Music during the evening and the wonderful spread was enjoyed by Misses Fyell Steele, Ruby Tendall, Francis Cunningham, Jane Rotrammel, Evelyn Hearn, Adreas Steel, Maurine Dav- nport, Virginia Neal Little, Opal Farrell, Pearl Browner, and Miss Maurine Jennings of T. W. C. the guest of her cousin, Mrs. F. O. Hunter.

The young president of the league, Pettitt Castleberry, made the occasion very successful, assisted by Jack Kimbell, Oswood Hunter, Tilman Stubbfield, Joe King and Winston Castleberry.
Grown-ups chaperoning were Rev. and Mrs. Geo. W. Shearer and Mrs. June Kimble.

MRS. JAMES CHEATHAM HOSTESS TO THURSDAY AFTERNOON BRIDGE CLUB.

The Thursday Afternoon Bridge club was entertained in a most delightfully informal fashion by Mrs. James Cheatham at her home at outh Seaman, yesterday afternoon. The flowers used in decoration carried a suggestion of coolness in the delicate colorings of snap dragons and large zinnias. The four card tables were covered with handsome white linens and card table appointments were carried out in white. Club members present were Miss Haas, Mmes. Harry Brelsford, O. D. Caldwell, Geo. A. Davison, E. E. Preschlag, C. Her- tie, Scott Key, Jack Williamson, W. B. Smith, J. Brelsford Jr., guests were Mmes. Earl Conner, Curtis Corzelius, W. K. Hyer, I. E. Edwards, S. S. Poe and Aubrey Cheatham.

The hostess served a daintily composed salad and sandwich plate and delicious home baked cake and lead tea at close of game. The club will meet in two weeks with Mrs. Frank Corzelius.

DAILY VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL PRESENTS CLOSING PROGRAM TONIGHT.

Every thing is ready, the stage is set, the children on tip-toe, the walls of the classroom hung with embroidered and hand made articles, with paintings, with furniture, with hats and many other ornaments and extravaganzas in colorful array, all the handwork of the boys and girls who have been attending the Daily Vacation Bible school of the Presbyterian church, and which is closing this evening with this big program honoring the public given at the church and followed by the exhibition of the children's work on view in the class room.
A very lovely pantomime has been arranged and the old hymn, "Rock of Ages" will be illustrated in a beautiful way with a big lighted cross and picturesque surround- ings. Other features of the pro- gram include something symbolic from each department of the Bible school with memory verse, motion songs and reports, the "curtain raiser" in the way of the pretty play by the little kindergarten pupils under Mrs. B. M. Hayes.
A number of the women have been actively engaged all week in focusing the thoughts and work of the children on the grand climax of the school and it is certain the program and exhibition will more than repay one for taking a trip to the church.
Remember, the Presbyterian church, 8 p. m. tonight, Friday. The public is invited.

NOTES AND PERSONALS ABOUT HOME COMERS.

Miss Ada Martin is at home for the summer vacation with her parents Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Martin, following a year of hard study at Austin U. Everybody is glad when this young girl comes home.
Miss Daphne Grisham has been resting ever since she returned from college, Austin, but one will hear from her pretty soon.
Miss Wilma Beard has at last ar- rived from T. C. U. having found so many things to interest her in Dallas and Fort Worth. Friends are glad she still had her main love for her home town. Miss Beard has been giving music intensive study and it is hoped she will ap- pear on some programs this sum- mer.
Miss Virginia Root has arrived and her breezy independent spirit is being made manifest. She is a good mixer and can hustle up a picnic crowd in a wink's notice.
Miss Virginia Weaver has been so surrounded with the younger and young sets, since her return from Principia College, St. Louis, that she has had no time for any amusements or contacts outside of the little crowd. Friends of her young sisters and herself have thronged the hospitable Weaver home. For wherever Mrs. Joe Weaver and Mr. Joe are staying, that is where the young folk will find hospitality, fun, music, lots to eat, flowers and happy time.
Miss Elizabeth Garrett is being warmly welcomed by her intimates following her long year at St. Principia, St. Louis. Miss Garrett is one of the most popular girls here, and as kind and unaffected as she is attractive.
Miss Geraldine Dabney has been handicapped since her return from T. C. U., as she walked into her home and one small twin bro- ther suffering from an attack of Scarlet fever, and though not near the patient, was conscientious about drifting around for fear someone might catch the fever "next year." The lad is all over his indisposition, the house is fumigated, everything is safe and serene and the good times are en- joyed again. Miss Dabney is dis- tinctly original, is musical, sings well, and has countless friends. She is taking a special course in public school music.
Marjorie Davison, flashing, merry-eyed, individualistic, dan- cing, bright life without a care, fills her parent's home with youth and gaiety and rarely a day passes that some little gathering doesn't take place, either cars, a motor drive, a swim and breakfast at Cisco lake, or some other nearby water; and yet, who says "Oh! these aren't parties." And that's the secret of the good times of all these young people, they just take things as they come, without plan- ning, and enjoy life to the full, for youth is youth and youth must be served.
Elizabeth Isbell, attractive, a wonderful pianist, but one who has taken a year's vacation in this line of work and who has had a suc- cessful year at Austin U., where she is preparing herself to teach. Though, to some, who know her art, it is surprising that she is not preparing to tour in concert.
Jane Angstedt, a clever golf player and a girl who wields a ten- nis racket with grace and judgment is again brightening the greens and gladdening the hearts of those who see her.
This list doesn't seem complete without Elizabeth Davenport who, though she hasn't been away to school this year, has had her own line of study and shown by her charming interest in her mother's gorgeous garden, that she has the power of creative beauty. She has also a very sweet and charming nature as she has frequently vis- ited homes of friends of her moth- er, where there was sickness or trouble and entered like a sunshine ray with her arms filled with sor- row, chrysanthemums in the fall, and roses later on, with prickly, toly and red berries at Christmas time; with crocus and other har- bingers of spring when the early days of balmy weather drew near and with gorgeous bouquets of sweet peas all through the sum- mer months and now even in evi- dence. Such a girl as this has ad- ventured all her own.
Marjorie Taggart, elusive, off- like, quiet and yet with a wealth of fun, a worthy daughter of an unusually intelligent and literary mother returned a few days ago from St. Mary's in Ft. Worth, as always, and is a decided credit to the sensible upbringing of her mother who has taught Marjorie human values and that to be pop- ular is most desirable but should never be allowed recognition by the possessor.
Lots of other popular girls who are in Eastland could be on our gallery, but they have been staying "right here" as the old crane said and this story is concerned only with those who have been away to college and are home for vacation.

IS HEADED FOR THE SKY.

By Mrs. W. K. Jackson
And we don't mean maybe, No.

Maurice P. Stallier, who has been busy some day, while putting Eastland on the sports map, and who has for two or three years filled his post as an instructor, a coach work, and as an instructor, a member of the college faculty, has devoted to his true field, a trim and entered the accounting de- partment of the Texas Air Trans- port company of Fort Worth. And Stallier has forsaken the halls of learning, and lost the urge to teach the physics. But he has vis- ited the physics—very much higher up. And the best way to get there (up) is not to be content to "stay put" too long. "Landy" you know, began his aircraft life work from the private office stool, the present moment, young Stallier may be looking only as high as his ledger book to p. But just give him time.

Maurice Stallier and wife will move to Fort Worth to make their home in that city sometime next week.

STUDENT DEATH LIKELY TO STAY UNSOLVED CASE.

BY CEDRIC W. FOSTER
United Press Staff Correspondent
HARTFORD, Conn., June 14.—Despite all efforts of County Detective Edward J. Hickey and his corps of assistants, the death of Walter Treadway Huntington, young Harvard student, appears now as though it will never be solved.

Huntington's body was found May 8 on a lonely road between Windsor and Tarrillville, 10 miles north of this city. A bullet had pierced the boy's brain and his blood and back were saturated with shot, as were several handker- chiefs found in the hip pockets of his trousers. No weapon was dis- covered, though magnets and metal detectors were used, and the bullet which killed him could not be located.
A colt .32 caliber automatic shell was found near his body.
Medical Examiner Henry N. Costello of Hartford county re- ceived a verdict of homicide to Coroner J. Gilbert Calhoun. The latter has not yet announced his finding as the law sets no limit to the length of his investigation. But even if Calhoun declares the death of homicide his decision will add but further mystery to the already intricate case.
Hickey's Suicide Theory
Detective Hickey, the man who successfully trailed and brought to justice Gerald Chapman, declares the youth committed suicide. He adheres to this opinion despite Costello's repeated statements Huntington could not possibly have taken his own life. Costello bases his finding on first, the absence of any powder marks on the youth's head; second, the absence of any weapon and third, the blood-stained handkerchiefs which he says Huntington could never have placed in his pockets after the shot was fired. Costello says Huntington became unconscious im- mediately following the shot and that he would have been physical- ly unable to dispose of the gun in any manner.
Hickey explains the fact that there were no powder marks as due to the age of the bullet which killed the boy. Shell identical with that found by Huntington's head were found in a box in the dead boy's home. Fired by Hickey of seven inches that a distance of seven inches failed to re- veal powder marks, he said. They were 20 years old his investigation showed.
The detective has two theories regarding the missing gun. He believes it was either picked up by someone now afraid to come for- ward for fear of implication in the boy's death, or that it was hurled into a swamp a few yards distant by Huntington in his death agony.
Hickey disagrees flatly with Costello regarding the handker- chiefs. He insists the youth was conscious after the shot was fired and that he replaced them in his pockets after wiping his wound. He bears out this theory in two ways.
He discovered on the boy's right cheek evidences that he had become ill. Nothing was found on the left cheek. On the ground, to the youth's right, were further evi- dences of his illness, Hickey said. This indicated to the detective that Huntington had struggled to a sit- ting posture after he shot and ac- counts for the blood on his shirt and back which would not have been there had the boy remained prone after the bullet entered his brain.
Course of Bullet
The right hand of the boy was clenched, the detective says in a manner indicating a "conscious act." His thumb was tightly pressed between his first and second fingers. Reflex action, the de- tective believes, could account for the closed fist but could not ac- count for the position of the thumb. This, he says, was caused by agony.
The course of the bullet also indicates suicide, Hickey said. It entered the left side of the head, back of the temple, two inches above the hair line. It came out through the top of the skull through the brain. He says it was fired from a point below the boy's head, by Huntington himself and that the youth used his left hand. Huntington was last seen at about 11 p. m., May 7. At that time he told his mother he was going to a near-by drug store for some cigarettes. He never reached the store. At 5:50 a. m. a labor- er going to work found his body a mile and a half from his luxur- ous Windsor residence.
Every available clue has been run down by Hickey says. The de- tective states he has found no pos- sible motive for murder. Indis- cretions on the youth's part at Har- vard provide ample motive for Huntington to kill himself, he says.
Efforts to link up romance with the dead have also failed. Hickey has investigated several "women angles" but all have been fruit- less. Unless further evidence is discovered the case will go down into the records with the police calling it suicide and the medical testimony declaring homicide the only possible explanation. In the meanwhile the search for the miss- ing gun continues.

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER CATHOLIC CHURCH

June 16, 1929. Mass at 8 a. m. This is the fourth Sunday after Pentecost and the gospel is taken from the Gospel of St. Luke VJ- II.
The gospel says that the multi- tudes pressed upon him, to hear the word of God. The conduct of these people puts many modern Christians to shame. The same word of God which Christ preach- ed, is preached today, but not many care to hear it even those who profess some form of Christian- ity. Sunday—the one day dedica- ted to the service of God—is often spent in the service of the devil instead of the service of God. Peo- ple find time, money and conven- ience for all kinds of amusements but they have neither time, money nor convenience for church. Many excuses are given for not attend- ing church: the weather, time, dis- tance, the church, the services, the people attending, health, etc. But amusements always draw the crowds. However, the all-seeing eye of God that searches the minds and hearts of people cannot be de- ceived. God knows whether we can attend church or not and He knows whether we have a really good excuse for not coming to church. We may deceive our friends and neighbors but we can- not deceive God. "As a man lives so shall he die." Let each one ex- amine himself honestly and find out whether he is complying with Christ's teaching. After death comes the judgment.
—Rev. M. Collins.

STUDENT RECITAL A BEAUTIFUL SUCCESS.

An immense crowd attend the student recital last night, sponsor- ed by Wilma Drazoo Caton, and in which this fine artist presented her classes both in junior and juvenile groups and other fashions. The big assembly room of the Methodist church was very cleverly massed with flowers and ferns, artistically banked about the piano. Over all played the low of several voices silk shaded piano lamps in- to this segment of beauty were scattered the students in their res- pective groups, in feminine con- tinent resembling the flowers, so colorful were they, pretty evening frocks.
The director announced that there would be six awards given in scholarship this evening and the honorable mention. The ac- companyist for the evening, the tal- ented Mrs. Wanda Drazoo Beall of San Angelo, will again take this joint part on tonight's program.

Here's How Confederate Veterans Keep in Step

There were no maneuvers like this—no suh!—bac! in '61. And it's a far cry from the square dances popular in Civil War times to the rapid ball room gyrations of today, but these members of the United Confederate Veterans—in annual reunion at Charlotte, N. C.—proved apt pupils under the inspiration of a modern jazz band and the expert tutelage of Charlotte's comeliest bells, as shown above.
